(1) Dated February 17, 1898, Contract between Gartsides, Limited, and John Edmund Gartside and Henry Gartside and the Conversion Company; (2) dated February 15, 1898, Contract between Henry Gartside, Roger Arthure Gartside, and Susan Brierley and Frederick Harrison on behalf of this Company, which has, by another Coutract, dated February 21, 1898, and made between the parties to the last-mentioned Contract and this Company, been since adopted by this Company; (3) dated February 21, 1898, Contract between the Conversion Company and this Company; (4 to 7) four Contracts, all dated February 16, 1898, and respectively made between the Conversion Company and the above-named solicitors for the Trustees for the Debenture Stockholders, the solicitor for the old Company (Roger A. Gartside), the North of England Trustee Debenture and Assets Corporation, Limited, who are guaranteeing the subscription of part of the Debenture Stock, and John Doig, who guarantees the subscription of part of the Preference and Ordinary shares, respectively.

In addition to the above, there are various trade and other Contracts and arrangements in connection with the formation of the present Company, all of which applicants for the Debenture Stock and Shares shall be held to have notice of, as well as of the terms of the other agreement and Contracts, specifically referred to above, and shall be deemed to have waived any right to further particulars of contracts, whether under Section 38 of the Companies Act, 1867, or otherwise, and to have agreed with the Company as Trustees for the Directors, and all persons authorising or taking part in the issue of this Prospectus, not to make any claim upon them, or any of them, under the said Section, and allotment will only be made on this condition.

Applications must be made on the Forms accompanying the Prospectus, and sent with the deposit to the Bankers, or any of their Branches.

Special consideration will be given to applications from the trade.

If no allotment is made the deposit will be returned in full, but in cases where the amount applied for exceeds the allotment, the surplus paid on application will be appropriated in payment of the amount due on allotment.

Prospectuses and forms of application may be obtained at the office of the Company, or from the Bankers, Solicitors, or Brokers.

The valuation of Messrs. William Wilson & Son, the Accountants' Certificate, the above specifically mentioned Agreement and Contracts, the Memorandum and Articles of Association of the Company, and the above-mentioned draft of the Trust Deed securing the Debenture Stock, may be seen at the offices of the Solicitors to the Company.

Dated February 23, 1898.

SOUTHALL'S PATENT BOOTS.

Are you tired of Laced & Button Boots?

Then send Postcard for our Catalogue at once.

ALL THE OLD IDEAS DISPENSED WITH.

Splendid Value.

SOUTHALL & CO.

Dept. O, Kirkstall Road, LEEDS.

Please name this Magazine.

ALL PRICES.

BEST & SAFEST DENTIFRICE

SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS AND PERFUMERS IN ELEGANT CRYSTAL TOILET CASKET

PRICE 2/6.

ALSO IN PATENT METALLIC BOX

PRICE 1/-

PRESERVE YOUR TEETH

BY USING THE

OS TOOTH BLOCK

Established 20 years

OVER 3000 TESTIMONIALS

SPIERS & POND'S STORES

QUEEN VICTORIA STREET, E.C.

Opposite St. Paul's Station, L. C. & D. Railway.

HOSIERY DEPARTMENT

Nut Colour Cowhide HUNTING KIT BAGS.

Wide and Deep-cut Frames, 2-1½ inch width Straps, Brass Furniture, Lever Lock, and 2 keys.

22 in. 24 in. 26 in.
63/6 69/6 75/6

HUNTING BOOT CASE, 10/- extra.

Price Book No. 50, (1,000 pages), Illustrated, Free on Application.

SPIERS & POND'S STORES

QUEEN VICTORIA STREET, E.C.

Opposite St. Paul's Station, L. C. & D. Railway.

PHILLIPS'S

Her Majesty's Potters and Glass Manufacturers.

17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22,

MOUNT STREET,

Grosvenor Square

Wedding Presents

Tea Sets.
Breakfast Sets.
Dinner Sets.
Toilet Sets.
Dessert Sets.
Luncheon Sets.
Glass Sets.

THE LEEDS DINNER SERVICE.

For Twelve Persons, £4. 4s.

CRESTS OR MONOGRAMS, ANY COLOUR, EXTRA.

LIQUEURS OF THE GRANDE CHARTREUSE.

These delicious Liqueurs, which have come so much into public favour on account of their wonderful properties of aiding Digestion and preventing Dyspepsia, can now be had of all the principal Wine and Spirit Merchants, and all good Hotels and Restaurants throughout the Kingdom.

Sole Consigned: W. DOYLE, 35, Crutched Friars, London, E.C.

£20 TOBACCONISTS COMMENCING. Illd. guide (259 pgs.), 3d., "How to open respectably £20 to £2,000." Tobacconists' Outfitting Co., Enston-rd., Ldn. Hairdressers fitted.—H. MYERS.

West End Agency: 86, NEW BOND ST. W.

HUMBER CYCLES

Occupy the Unique Position as

THE RECOGNISED BEST

and serve as the Model to the World.

Depots: 66-8, Preston St. BRIGHTON. 32, Holborn Viaduct, LONDON, E.C.

THE ALUMINIUM HUMBER

Lighter than any other of equal strength.
Stronger than any of equal weight.

Works: Beeston, Notts., Wolverhampton, and Coventry.

FLORILINE

FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH

Is the BEST LIQUID DENTIFRICE in the WORLD.

PREVENTS THE DECAY OF THE TEETH.

Renders the Teeth Pearly White.

IS PERFECTLY HARMLESS AND DELICIOUS TO THE TASTE.

Is Partly Composed of Honey, and Extracts from Sweet Herbs and Plants.

Of all Chemists and Perfumers throughout the World.

2s. 6d. per Bottle.

FLORILINE TOOTH POWDER,

Only put in Glass Jars, Price 1s.

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER

Prevents the Hair from Falling off.

Restores Grey or White Hair to its ORIGINAL COLOUR.

Being delicately perfumed, it leaves no Unpleasant Odour.

IS NOT A DYE.

Should be in every House where a HAIR RENEWER is needed.

ASK YOUR CHEMIST OR HAIRDRESSER FOR

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Price 3s. 6d. per bottle.

CARTER 6A NEW CAVENDISH ST. PORTLAND PLACE, LONDON.

ONLY ADDRESS OF ORIGINAL CARTER

LITERARY MACHINE.

For holding book, lamp, meals, &c., in any position over an easychair, bed, or sofa. Deliciously luxurious. A most useful gift. Prices from 17/6

Carrying Chairs from £1.

Breakfast in Bed Tables from 30/-

INVALID FURNITURE.

ADJUSTABLE COUCHES and BEDS from £1. 10/-

Bed Lift £3. 10/-
Reclining Boards, 25/-
Walking Machines
Portable W.C.'s.
Electric Bells,
Urinals, &c.
Air & Water Beds.

Bed Rests 7/6
Leg Rests 10/-
Crutches 10/6
Bed Baths 12/6
Commodes, £1. 5/-

Self-Propelling Chairs from £2

BATH CHAIRS FROM £1. 5/-

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES POST FREE.

JOHN CARTER, 6a, NEW CAVENDISH ST. Portland-pl. London, W.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

Candles always remain same height, no waste, no dirt, no smell.

Candles cannot gutter, shades cannot take fire.

They fit in any candlestick, and exactly resemble wax candles when in use.

The saving in candles, &c., more than pays for the cost of lamps in a few weeks.

PRICE, from 4/- each, COMPLETE.

Illustrated Price List and Catalogue of Latest Novelties of Table Decoration and Lighting FREE.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

Or can be seen in great variety at the Show Rooms of THE

ARCTIC LIGHT CO.,

179, RECENT ST., LONDON, W.

(Nearly opposite Liberty's).

Wholesale Offices: 49, HATTON-GARDEN, E.C

FOR ACCURACY

H. SAMUEL'S KEYLESS WATCHES.

Prices show a considerable reduction as compared with the heavy London charges

Free by post to any address.

Illustrated Book of 168 Pages, comprising Watches, Diamonds, Jewellery, Clocks, Cutlery, Electro-Plate, &c., forwarded free on application.

LADY'S KEYLESS WATCH, fine jewelled movement, carefully adjusted. Handsome art-tinted dials or plain, as preferred. Also supplied two sizes smaller than drawn is desired. Gold, £3 Silver, 27/6

GENTLEMAN'S KEYLESS WATCH, fine jewelled movement carefully adjusted, hard enamel dial. Gold or steel hands, crystal glass front. Gold, £5 5s. Silver, 32/6

NEW GOLD INITIAL BROOCH. Any letter supplied. H. Samuel's price, 5/-

When writing please mark the envelope "accurate"

H. SAMUEL, LEVER WATCH FACTORY, MARKET ST., MANCHESTER.

USE ONLY

BLAISDELL PENCILS

SELF-POINTING.

ALL COLOURS. ALL GRADES.

NO WASTE. BEST LEADS.

Black Lead 1d. & 2d. Coloured Crayons 2d. & 3d.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

Sample Box of 5 Pencils 1s., Free by Post in the U.K.

BLAISDELL PENCILS, Ltd., 46, Holborn Viaduct, London, E.C.

POST 6/- FREE.

In Elegant Case Satin-lined complete.

A PERFECT PEN.

Simple in construction. Lasts a life-time. Cannot get out of order. Quite equal to the Pens usually sold at Half-a-Guinea.

PRICE LISTS FREE.

FINE, MEDIUM, OR BROAD NIB CAN BE SUPPLIED.

ANY INK CAN BE USED.

A. M. BONNER MANUFACTURING CO.

(Dept. 19), 8, Long Lane, London, E.C.

Cadbury's cocoa

"The Standard of Highest Purity."—The Lancet.

"The favourite Cocoa of the day. For Nourishment there is nothing superior to be found."—MEDICAL MAGAZINE.

A MASTER KEY

of this SIZE

Can be made to open any number of Locks. Many Ladies and Gentlemen have the whole of their locks so arranged that a MASTER KEY, so small as to be worn in a finger-ring or locket, will open every lock they possess—from their Dressing Bags, Trunks, Jewel Cases, Despatch Boxes, &c., to the Front Door, Wine Cellar, Park Gates, &c. Just think of the Convenience! The locks are made in suites, each suite with its own key, so that the ladies' maid or valet can open the luggage, the butler the wine cellar, and so on, but the suite keys are of no use for any but their own series.

BRAMAH JEWEL SAFES,

BURGLAR AND FIRE RESISTING, SPECIALLY ADAPTED FOR BED AND DRESSING ROOMS.

Specialities in fitted Suite Cases and Dressing Bags, Jewel Cases, Despatch and Deed Boxes, Bramah Street Door Latches, with small keys, Bramah Padlocks for Bicycles, with Leather-covered Chains, &c. &c.

New Illustrated Catalogues Post Free.

For Prices and Particulars apply to

NEEDS & CO. Late

Bramah & Co.

Sole Manufacturers of the real Bramah Locks.

100, NEW BOND STREET,
LONDON, W.

A Master Key Signet Ring (Open).

BARNARD, BISHOP, & BARNARDS

(Late of Queen Victoria-street, E.C.) LIMITED.

ORIGINAL MANUFACTURERS OF

THE CELEBRATED SLOW-COMBUSTION STOVES, or COUNTRY PARSONS' FIRE-GRATES.

REGISTERED DESIGN.

Invite a Visit to their New West-End Showrooms at 23, PRINCES-STREET, CAVENDISH SQUARE, W.

(A FEW DOORS FROM OXFORD CIRCUS).

Where a most recherche selection of their newest designs in Stoves, Carved Wood and other Mantles, Tile Slabs, and Hearths, &c., &c., will be seen. Catalogues free. Competent representatives sent to any part of London or Suburbs to take instructions and particulars.

Manufactory: NORFOLK IRON WORKS, NORWICH.

SINGER

MODÈLE DE LUXE

(Registered Trade Mark)

CYCLES

IMPORTANT NOVELTIES FOR 1898. 1898 Lists Free.

SINGER CYCLE CO. LTD. COVENTRY
LONDON: 17, HOLBORN VIADUCT.

IF YOU COUGH USE . .

GERAUDEL'S PASTILLES.

Let your lungs be filled with the vapour of Norwegian Pine Tar, which they give off whilst dissolving in the mouth. The efficacy of Pine Tar in all affections of the Throat and Lungs is well known; the best mode of applying it is by inhalation, and the mouth makes the best inhaler.

ALL CHEMISTS SELL THEM.

OUR PUZZLES.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE NO. 990.—QUOTATIONS FROM ENGLISH POETS.

COMMA (real name and address will be published in due course) £2 2 0

"TRUTH" PUZZLE NO. 992.—PARODIES OF "THE HEATHEN CHINEE."

OOM PAUL (real name and address will be published in due course) £1 1 0
ETAK (,, ,, ,, ,, ,,) 1 1 0

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 997.

The letters printed below, if properly rearranged, will be found to constitute a stanza from one of Browning's shorter poems. The usual Prize of Two Guineas is offered to the competitor who best succeeds

IN GIVING THE STANZA IN QUESTION, AND IN ADDING A SECOND STANZA OF HIS OR HER OWN COMPOSITION, IN THE METRE AND MANNER OF BROWNING'S LINES.

The following are the letters which are contained in the Browning stanza:— a a a a a a; b; c c c e; d d; e e e e e e e e e e e e; f f f f; g; h h h h h h h h; i i i i i i; k k; l l l l; m m m m m m m m; n n n n n; o o o o o o o o o; p p; r r r r r r r r r r; s s s s s; t t t t t t t t t t t t; u u; w w w w w w; y y y.

All answers must reach me by the morning of Monday, March 14, at the latest.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 993.

As a further selection of the "Trilby" verses is to be published, the name of the Prize-winner in this competition will not be announced this week.

CONDENSED RULES.

All answers to the current Puzzle must be sent in on or before the morning of the Monday week following the date of that Puzzle's publication, to the PUZZLE EDITOR, TRUTH Buildings, Carteret-street, Queen Anne's-gate, London, S.W. The answers must be signed by a nom de plume of not more than twelve letters, and must not be sent on post-cards, nor by telegraph, nor by hand; whilst in the case of new competitors the real name and address must be forwarded with the first reply sent.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

 The real name, with the address, of LUDWIG B, winner of Prize No. 988, is the Rev. L. C. Biggs, The Manor House, Langton Herring, Weymouth.
S. S. T.—Very many thanks for your suggestion.
TOMBOY.—Certainly.
MOLLY.—The competition failed to arouse general interest.

THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE NO. 994.—ASSORTED SPECIMENS—GOOD AND OTHERWISE.

STANZAS CONTAINING THE WORD "CHINAMAN" IN ACCORDANCE WITH CERTAIN GIVEN DIRECTIONS.

CHoIce chiNA, sMAshed aNd CHipped IN fAMe,
ANd scratCHed!
HIts, sNAtchings—MeAN and CHiselIINg—AiMed
ANd hatCHed
IN nAMe ANd speeCH of kINgs—AMaze ANd CHaIn,
NAy, MAddeN muCH—mINds shAMed ANd elenCHed IN pain.
A Mailed hANd's CHafINg pAIM, ANd CHippING Aim,
MeANs CHeapenINg All! coMmANd thy CHiefs fINd shAMe
ANd CHastenINg. ArMs ANd CHafferINg flAunt aMAin,
Now CHarterINg clAiMs, ANd CHangINg reAlMs to gAiN.

Robert Martin.

Come HIther, NAtions! coMe ye, ANd rejoiCe!
Here's chINa breAking—MAke aN early CHoice!
INfAMous hANds stretCH forth IN rAMpAnt
greed;
No CHaINs of shAMe need ANy CHafINg breed.
All MeANs whiCH wIN are fAir MeANs. CHristIaN fAme
MAy sNatCH fINe bAys MAde iN this CHrIstiaN gAMe;
ANd eaCH vaIN, rAMpANt CHampIoN's ArMed hAnd—
Nay, CHrIsteN it mAiled fist—MAy do the graNd.

Vox.

THE CHINAMAN'S NIGHT-MARE.

CHopped IN hAlf My lANd. CHaINed And MoANing, siCk, HIt, No ArMs ANd CHode. INfAMy, ANd—CHucked
INto cAMp. JapANned. ScrunCHed. IN dAMs.
Aye, ducked.
NotCHed. IN quAlMs, ANd clutCHed INto flAMe like brick.
ANgry FrenCH, kIdNApped, MAkiNg CHoIce
HaiNAn
MAigre aNd CHétIf. NAgged. MAd, "eN niCHe."
INflAMed,
ANd I CHrIsteNed AM. HANdCuffed. HeartsIck.
Shamed.
NAiled by MAiled PriNce. "CHau IN WilliAM's pAN.

Peter.

ASIA IRREDENTA! CHINA'S CHALLENGE.

CHoose, INdiA, choose! Must AsiaNs CHafe
INert,
HAil MAndariN truCe, and HImalayaN peAce?
Ill were't to MAsk stauNCh Hope's INdignAnt
MoAN:
Nay, while eaCH carrIoN swArM teArs boNe from bone,
A CHafferINg After Western MArts iNCrease,
MarcH, INdiA! MAke us oNe! UnCHaINed,
Alert,
All Asia, MArshalliNg CHiefs IN leAgue subliMe,
New lifts the stANdard of a lordlier time!

Tortoise.

 Malay figures in line 2; Afghanistan, 1 to 5; Beloochistan, 4 to 8; Tartary, 1-2; Siberia, 4-5 and 7-8; Turkey, alas, 3-4; Japan, 2 and 3; Thibet, 4 and 6, 7, 8; Persia, 2 and 3, 3 and 4; Birmah, 4, 5, 6; Siam, 1-2 and 7. The key-word, Chinaman, effaces itself towards the end, and throughout the challenge the letters of India predominate, showing a spirit of Pan-Asiatic modesty.

"THE LEGEND OF TÁLIENWÁN."

Come, Hearken I eNtreAt—MAn, womaN, Child!
Hear IN amAze My tAle! The oNe I CHoose
Is Newly nAMed, ANd Called "tHe Legend wIld" (NAy, MAny meN Count tHIs tale truth, aNd loose
A preMier's wrAth oN SuCH!) "of TálIeNwÁn."
My ANeCdote witH foreIgN ArMaments,
ANd sCHemINg stAtesMen deAls, loans urging on Needy CHina's kINg—th' CzAr comMAnds eveNts!

Volpe.

ON CHINA'S CONDITION.

Can Heav'n IN wrAth Make nAtioNs break their peaCe?
Has IgnoraNce abroAd MAde eN'mies CHarge
IN bAttle? May All laNds aCHieve Increase?
NAy, this were MAdNess—eaCH wIll Not enlarge.
AMid A Noisy CHangINg wrAngling crowd,
'Mid wArs aNd anarCHies, IN eAIM disdain
ANd speeCHless, stIll she staNds, unArMed And proud,
Not CHoosINg Action if she but reMAiN.

Maldon.

Coal sHort, theIr wiNgs Are clipped. SteaMers eAN't raCe,
HoldINg the fAMe of nAtioN first in CHase;
If No ArMs cAN be CHartered—that Is, fuel,
No steAM to fight AgaiNst riCH BritaIN's rule.
A Most gigANtiC scHeme IN lAter strife,
Millions Are speNt, CHeap If iNsteAd Men's lIfe!
A Noble poliCy. THIs NAtion MAy
Now CHarm IN dAys coMe with mAideN lay.

Invicta.

CHin-chIN chinAMan, mANy seek to ClaIm
HIgh haNd, And faMe, ANd CHange; to aim
IN port And MAiN at sCHemINg AMbuseAde;
Nay more, by CoHibItioN, ArMs, ANd CHaIN
AMend, ANnex, and take by CHurchINg, trAde
MontANic . . . . CHrIstiaNs needs A Mission sue,
ANd CHangINg All a MeANs, CoHesIve woo,
Not A MeANs CHaotIc No "A Money plANe."

Manchurian.

CHrIstiaNs ArMed ANd CHatterINg frAMe ANd s-Cheme,
HatINg eAch other More thAN CHeating me,
IN envious feAr MeAs'riNg whiCH wIll best seem
Not A Mere AgeNt CHum IN £ s. d.
Advancing Me a loAN, muCH wIshed, IN fAct,
Most RussiANs CHeered me wIth a graNd progrAM,
AskiNg me then to CHoose mINe AiM And pact,
Not riCH Great BritaIN's AIMs, but RussiAN jam.

Esperanza.

CHristians IN nAMe ANd suCH IN nAMe AloNe,
Here eaCH In turN At last Must show his hANd
(InCH deep IN dirt Are all these palMs As showN).
Nice preaCHers these, IN truth, this ArMed bAND!
Ah! CHeats and swINdlers All, Mock pArsoNs, too,
MuCH mINd hAve ye of Missions, stAle aNd dull,
A CHousing, grabbINg And MAn huNting crew.
Now Kaiser clutCH, cIING TsAr, MArk time
JohN Bull.

Baritone.

Come, EnglisHee, I waNt A MAgic NiCHe,
HIgh piled aNd spArkling, MArk, aN ample
CHest;
In BrItaiN, Aye, My hope, ANd she is riCH,
Nor IN affAirs of Money wANts she zest.
And CHarged I Now to rAise a Mighty loAN.
MarCH Is NeAr by, My empty hANd is CHilled;
AvaIls Not Art? nor stratageM? nor moAN?
No CHance I've seeN, I AM with ANger filled.

Stephanotis.

Come HIther Now A Moment, ANd I'll tell
How CHrIstiaNs After China MAke aNd yell,
In whiCH thIs NAtion MeANs to see fair play;
No Craft! THIs NAtion—Britain—MeANs to stay,
And see whiCH trIes with NAughty MeANs to snare
MuCH as they thINk AMong themselves cAN share;
Ah! Let these CHrIstiaNs wAtch, or MAy be
ChaNg,
Next CHance, wIth ENglAnd's aid MAy show his faNg.

One Hand.

CHina Is Now A ManiA aNd the Craze.
HImself—the ChiNamAn—MAy Not muCH care,
IN thAt he Might AH ENgland CHeatIng daze,
Nor AiMs! demANds! alike CrusH IN despair.
AMong the nAtioNs CHallenge IN a loAn
MAny by Nature CHums, IN ArMs to fight
ANd CHildren stIll uNborn to mAke their MoAn.
N'er could a CHampIoN mAke of hiM A kNight!

Nurse.

THE CHINAMAN'S LAMENT.

Care Has INvAded My lANd, for the Czar
Has laId oN All My rich mAudariNs' CHips
ImportuNate clAiMs. GermAN oCean sIIps
NavigAte My bAys—No CHangINg trips.
All MArkiNg my defeCts Have drIveN fAr
More hArd a bargaiN, CHoIce Nor AiM have I
ANd Cannot Have. IN vAin My pAngs I fly,
No CasH IN AlMost ANy hand I try.

Cochran Field.

Can tHe CelestIal kNow A MeANs by whiCH
HINdrAnces MAy, iNCH after INch, give wAy
In a Most pleAsiNg fashion, and seCure Her sway?
NatIoNs Are MAkiNg rival offers, itCH
An orIeNt supremAcy to MAiNtain.
Money's the word; caCH has hIs price, so gaiN,
Albion Mine, A New, seCurer Hold,
Nor shrINk from Any eneMy! Thy hANd's the gold!

Sissie.

Can HaughtY RussIaN ArMAmeNts Crave flglIt?
Hold, saId BritaiN. Free trAde shall be MAiNtained.
I CHarge IN EnglAnd's naMe and nAtioN's might,
No CHange IN my trAde, and My rights retAiNed.
Aye, CHurlIsh kNAves, My ANswer soon would teaCH
My evIl NAgging eneMies AtoNe.
ACeursed. THe dIN And huM that cANnons preaCH,
NIce NAval guns to MAke them take my loaN.

Klondike.

 The other competitors have failed to carry out the conditions laid down.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE NO. 993.—ASSORTED SPECIMENS—GOOD AND OTHERWISE.

ENGLISH RENDERINGS OF THREE FRENCH STANZAS FROM "TRILBY."

 Space has been found for the publication of a further selection of "Trilby" verses.—The Puzzle Editor.

Poor Trilby! Fair and pure was she, and dear,
I am her foot. Think what a friend was he
Who, cherishing her memory, traced me here,
His fingers taught and thrilled by love sincere,
One swift, wild wish, inspired him, and created me;
One touch—I cease to be.

I am a twin; my fellow is not near.
Alas! Alas! Love stole my liberty!
But one day on a still and snowy bier
We two shall meet, no weariness to fear
Again for evermore—and Trilby, tired and free,
Who will sleep soft as she?

Oh, tender friend, who filled this place with cheer,
Now empty—where art thou? We yearn for thee.
The heavens are far, and on this mortal sphere
Whose dust will kiss thee (oh, sweet earth, once dear!)
Whene'er joy's starry eyes and shining feet we see,
They turn from us and flee!

Mrs. Buchanan.

I'm Trilby's foot! Let him divine who may
Who framed this souvenir of Trilby fair;
Brief inspiration, caprice of a day,
Vanishing to-morrow like a passing air.
What tender-hearted friend moved by a love sincere
In pious memory of him and her?

How fares my brother? for twin feet we were.
Alas! alas! blind love has made us stray,
Still hope trusts on eternity is there
Where we again a pair shall meet one day
Couched in the narrow bed where worldly troubles cease—
And Trilby sleeps in peace.

O, tender friend! bereft of us what say
Of hope have you now Trilby's door is closed?
Far off is Paradise—far off the day
When others like to us, who joyous posed.
On earth by search you'll find—dear earth to us so bright,
On her fair breast lie light!

Ardebil.

Poor Trilby! fair, and good, and dear,
I am her foot; let him divine who will,
The tender friend, who fondly cherished still
This charming souvenir, of a love sincere,
And thus he framed, what once caprice inspired,
Lest time should ruin what we all admired.

A twin was I! my brother where is he?
Alas! alas! this love he strayed from me,
Eternity, I hope, will us unite,
And make us both, as heretofore, a pair
On couch so chaste, where none can trouble there
Poor Trilby's slumbers, ever pure and bright.

Without us, tender friend, what wilt thou do?
The door is closed where dwelt that maiden true,
And Paradise is far; this earth so bright,
So sweet to us, on her may it be light.
To find our equals, seek the world around,
Seek as you may, they never will be found!

Lady B.

Poor Trilby—beautiful, so good and dear,
I am her foot. Let those who like inquire
Why gentle friend, holding her very near,
Had framed of her (and of a love sincere)
This charming token, which, fraught with artistic fire,
Love's magic did inspire.

I was a twin! my brother, where is he?
Alas! alas! by love we were opprest,
Eternity will join us (him and me)
Once more together from life's thraldom free,
In that cool sheltered spot where no foe can molest
Trilby—in her last rest.

O, gentle friend, without us, where are you?
Shut is the door where Trilby lived below,
Heaven's nectar is afar, and earth's sweet dew
(For ever fresh to us, for ever new!)
To find our match on earth you may seek high and low
Without success I trow.

Kashan.

Poor Trilby! good and well belov'd and fair,
I am her foot. New, let divine who may,
What loving friend, who lately held her dear,
Framed this reminder (true love's souvenir),
Capricious inspiration, which, one day
A breath might waft away!

Ah! we were twins. My brother is not here—
Alas! alas! love led us both astray—
Re-union and eternity are near,
And we, as formerly, shall be a pair,
Where, in her lovely bed, without dismay,
Trilby sleeps calm till day.

What will you do without us, friend sincere?
The door is closed where Trilby used to stay.
Heaven is far, and upon this earth here
(To us so sweet, to her so bright, so dear)
Our equals are not found where'er you stray,
Search as you may.

Precautia.

Poor Trilby—good and beautiful, and dear!
I am her foot. Guess who of all her friends,
Touched by a tender thought of her once near,
Wrapped up in her (and moved by love sincere),
Will not desire this souvenir, which caprice sends,
Which softest zephyr ends!

A twin was I; my brother's lost to sight!
Alas! Alas! By Love bewildered we.
Eternity, I hope, will us unite;
And we shall then once more be perfect quite,
At foot of virgin couch, whereon most fair will be
Trilby—from trouble free.

Without us, friend, how lost must be thy mind!
The door is shut where Trilby once did reign.
Afar is Paradise. Our peers to find
On earth (lie lightly on her, Earth! so kind
To us), how well soe'er they seek, how great their pain,
Their search will be in vain.

Bellinda.

Poor Trilby—beautiful and good and dear!
I am her foot. Guess all who gaze on me
What tender friend, but lately cherished—here
Enshrined of her (and with a love sincere)
This souvenir, inspired by fond caprice to be
A transient memory.

I was a twin; where is my brother, where?
Alas! alas! Love us asunder tore;
Eternity will make us one, and there
We'll be as we were once, a perfect pair
Within a pure, chaste bed, where, all her troubles o'er,
Trilby shall sleep once more.

Oh, tender friend, with you went all our mirth,
Closed is the portal Trilby once made fair,
And Paradise is far away—and Earth
(Tho' it to her and so to us gave birth),
Does not contain, search where you will, two feet so rare,
That can with us compare.

Spahe.

Unlucky Trilby, lovely, good, and dear;
I am her foot. Let him who wishes say
What tender friend has, with a love sincere,
Enclosed in glass this charming souvenir,
Lest the capricious fancy of an idle day
Should e'er be swept away.

I was a twin, where is my fellow, where?
Though parted by a lover's playful jest
Heaven will unite us once more I declare,
And we will lie, as formerly a pair,
Together on the virgin couch of her whose rest
Shall be the last and best.

Oh, tender friend, what wilt thou do? Where go?
The gate is shut where Trilby used to dwell,
And Paradise is far. The grass will grow
Green o'er her grave. We, too, will lie below
And where our equals are no mortal man can tell,
Although he search full well.

Kappa.

Poor Trilby—so good and fair, so dear!
Her foot am I. Let him who will surmise
What loving friend, whose heart she still is near,
Has framed of her (and of a love sincere)
This charming souvenir, which through a whim took rise,
To which a breath is bane.

Where is my brother gone? A twin was I;
Ah me! Ah me! Love led us far apart.
Eternity I trust will bring us nigh
Each other; once again a pair to lie
At foot of a chaste bed, where, with untroubled heart,
Trilby will rest from pain.

O loving friend, do you not miss us now?
The door is closed where Trilby used to dwell.
Heaven is afar! and on the Earth below
(To us 'twas soft; on her 'twill lie as snow)
To find our equal, e'en though you search full well,
You yet will search in vain.

Woodlands.

Poor Trilby, good, and beautiful and dear—
I am her foot—so guess whoever may
What friend, the lover of some bygone year,
Framed this memorial (and with love sincere);
This inspiration of a moment's fancy play
One breath will sweep away.

I was a 'twin'—my brother, where is he?
Alas! twas love that bade our union cease,
But my hope is that in Eternity
We shall be two, just as we used to be,
Down in that most chaste bed where Trilby finds release
From toil—and sleeps in peace.

Friend, what of you, with us beyond your sight?
The door is shut where Trilby made her home,
'Tis far to Heaven, and on this earth, once bright
To us, which on her ashes shall rest light—
Let men with hardest search to find our equals come—
On a vain quest they roam.

Outis.

"TRUTH"
CAN BE OBTAINED AT
THE GALIGNANI LIBRARY,
224, RUE DE RIVOLI, PARIS.

JUNO CYCLES ARE THE VERY BEST
Any JUNO Twelve Monthly Payments.
JUNO Lady's or Gent's Safety, £12.12s., 21/- monthly. JUNOS from £10, 16/8 monthly.
Write for New Season's JUNO Illustd List sent post free.
METROPOLITAN MACHINISTS CO., LTD., 75, 76, Bishopsgate Without, E.C.; & at Piccadilly Circus, (opposite the Criterion, London, W.).
Juno Cycle Riding School now open.

PATENT FAST DYED KHAKI MATERIALS.

Absolutely Fast to Washing.
Stand any amount of wear.

Most useful for all kinds of wear
by Ladies, Gentlemen, and Children.

Contractors to
H.M. WAR OFFICE and INDIA OFFICE.

WOOL.
SERGES.
FLANNELS.
CORDS.
LEG BANDAGES.

COTTON.
DRILLS.
SERGE.
CORDS.

Price List and Patterns Free on application to
E. SPINNER & CO., MANCHESTER AND BOMBAY, Sole Agents.

Genuine Old Welch Dressers

(Inlaid and Carved Oak), from £6. 10s.

ILLUSTRATED PRICED CATALOGUES POST FREE.
ALL GOODS CARRIAGE PAID TO ANY STATION IN GREAT BRITAIN.

HEWETSONS,

TOTTENHAM COURT ROAD, London, W.

FARADAY & SON's

Electric Light Fittings

New Designs

(in Classic and Renaissance) for Season '98

2 & 3 BERNERS ST. LONDON W

A Great Public Boon!

LIPTON

Has commenced making EXTRACT of BEEF and FLUID BEEF, and is now offering to the Public, at his Branches and Agencies, the

Finest Quality

EXTRACT OF BEEF

EXTRACT OF BEEF & FLUID BEEF At prices which will place these most valuable articles of food

WITHIN THE REACH OF ALL.

LIPTON'S EXTRACT OF BEEF and FLUID BEEF

Are made from the finest quality of Fresh Ox Beef, under the most skilful, scientific, and practical supervision, by a process entirely his own, unquestionably making his

EXTRACT OF BEEF and FLUID BEEF

FLUID BEEF

The Finest Quality ever offered to the Public, and SAVING PURCHASERS from 25 to 35 PER CENT.

THE DAYS OF HUGE PROFITS ARE OVER!

It is admitted by everyone that LIPTON caused a revolution in the Tea Trade, and forced Tea Dealers and Merchants to REDUCE THEIR PRICES. Before LIPTON introduced his celebrated Teas, THE PUBLIC HAD TO PAY nearly double the price they are now charged by LIPTON for the Finest Teas the World can produce.

WHAT LIPTON HAS DONE IN THE TEA TRADE, LIPTON WILL DO IN THE EXTRACT OF BEEF TRADE.

LIPTON'S FLUID BEEF contains the three principal properties of meat, viz., ALBUMEN, FIBRINE, and ESSENCE OF BEEF, in equal proportions, thus making A PERFECT BEEF FOOD, and as there are no condiments nor preservatives of a foreign nature used, it will be found that THE NATURAL FLAVOUR OF THE BEEF IS RETAINED.

LIPTON'S EXTRACT OF BEEF or FLUID BEEF makes the richest Beef Tea.

They are also invaluable in the domestic economy, and will be found by all good cooks the most economical and the best for flavouring Soups, Gravies, Sauces, Entrées, &c.

UPON THE PUBLIC VERDICT Lipton will rely. One trial of his Extract of Beef and Fluid Beef, he is confident, will ensure their being used in future IN EVERY HOME.

Lipton's Extract of Beef and Fluid Beef can be obtained from Lipton's Markets and Agencies throughout the World.

CHIEF OFFICES: CITY ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

HAMPTON & SONS beg to announce that their Galleries are now exclusively stocked with all the latest and most tasteful productions in Decorations, Furniture, Carpets, Upholstery, Fabrics, China and Glass, Ironmongery, &c.

Hampton & Sons Ltd

Sanitation. Electric Lighting.

See Hampton & Sons' Special Sanitation Circular sent free. Hampton & Sons make a speciality of Decorative Electric Lighting.

Decoration.

Hampton & Sons invite inspection of the numerous Decorative Schemes specially provided in their fitted Show Rooms. Suggestive Sketches and Estimates for every description of Interior and Exterior Decoration prepared free of charge.

Furniture.

Hampton & Sons have always on view one of the most tasteful, varied, and extensive selections to be seen in London of High-class Artistic Furniture at competitive prices.

Antiques.

The important additions to their Galleries for Antiques having been completed, Hampton & Sons beg to announce that throughout this series of specially constructed Galleries they are now showing the MOST EXTENSIVE RANGE of GENUINE ANTIQUE FURNITURE to be seen in London.

Upholstery.

Easy Chairs are a Specialty of Hampton & Sons.

Bedsteads, Bedding.

See Hampton & Sons' New Catalogue now ready.

Carpets.

Hampton & Sons have many exclusive designs in Brussels and other British Carpets, also Specialties in Mattings, etc. For Fine Oriental Carpets and Rugs, Hampton & Sons' is the cheapest market in London.

Fabrics.

Hampton & Sons have numerous exclusive Specialties in Furnishing Fabrics, specially designed to provide high-class decorative effects at least outlay.

Linens.

See Hampton & Sons' New Catalogue now ready.

Ironmongery.

Hampton & Sons make a specialty of Decorative Electric Fittings.

China and Glass.

All the latest productions of the best Potteries may always be seen in Hampton & Sons' Galleries.

Fine Arts.

Large and varied selection of Works in Oils and Water Colours, and of Etchings, Engravings, etc., may always be seen in Hampton & Sons' Fine Art Department.

Pianos.

By special arrangement, Hampton & Sons are in a position to offer 25% off the List Prices of Best Makers.

Removals and Warehousing.

Lowest competitive prices. Estimates free.

For the best means of Furnishing throughout in most tasteful manner at lowest cost, see Hampton & Sons' extensive and unrivalled Stocks of Decorations, Furniture, Carpets, Fabrics, &c. Suggestive schemes and competitive estimates free.

See Illustrated Catalogue, sent free.

Pall Mall East. S.W.

Works: Belvedere Road, S.E.

Original schemes for the Decorating and Furnishing of Entire Houses or Single Rooms in any of the traditional styles or in the best modern manner, Designed by Artists and executed by master craftsmen at competitive estimate prices.

Carriage paid to . . . any Railway Station . in the United Kingdom on purchases over 20s.

Printed for the Proprietor by Love & Wyman, Limited, Great Queen-st. W.C. and published at 10, Bolt-ct. Fleet-st. E.C. in the Parish of St. Dunstan's-in-the-West, in [illegible] Orders should be made payable to Reginald R. Rogers, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-st. Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

· TRUTH ·

"Cultores Veritatis Fraudis Inimici."—Cicero.

No. 1106. Vol. XLIII. Thursday, March 10, 1898. Price Sixpence.

NOTICE.

The terms of Subscription to Truth, which are payable in advance, are as follows:—To any address in the United Kingdom, for 3 months, 7s.; 6 months, 14s.; and for 12 months, 28s. The Thin Paper Edition is forwarded to countries within the Postal Union for 3 months for 7s. 8d.; 6 months, 15s. 4d.; and 12 months, 30s. 8d. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to the Manager, Truth, "Truth Building," Carteret-street, S.W.

ENTRE NOUS.

THE Queen is to return to Windsor from the Riviera during the last week in April, and her Majesty will then reside at the Castle for three weeks before going to Balmoral. The Queen intends to spend two or three days at Buckingham Palace early in May, which will be her only other visit to London during the present year.

There has been a great fuss lately about an "irregular" presentation which was made at one of last season's Drawing Rooms, and the case was the more difficult to deal with, inasmuch as an exalted personage had kindly interested himself on behalf of the female in question. In the old days "irregular" presentations were of very rare occurrence, but when there was such an oversight on the part of the Court officials the individual was gazetted out. Now, however, there are some such cases every year, and, unless the circumstances are peculiarly flagrant, the practice is merely to cancel the presentation privately, all blame falling upon the person who introduced the objectionable individual at Court. The penalty for making an irregular presentation has been hitherto exclusion from Court for a certain time, but the Queen proposes to deal in a more drastic fashion with any future cases, and the culprit will be forbidden ever again to attend a Drawing Room or a Levee, as the case may be. Formerly only a limited section of Society went to Court, and everybody there knew everything about everybody else. Now, however, it is absolutely impossible for the Lord Chamberlain and his officials to attempt to investigate the antecedents of the vast herds of people whose names are sent in; and, therefore, "irregular" presentations constantly occur. But they are invariably detected, for no sooner has the name appeared in the papers, than a shoal of letters arrives at St. James's Palace denouncing the unfortunate person, and furnishing the most ample details of the jeunesse orageuse, or whatever the flaw may be.

Early next week the Princess of Wales and Princess Victoria are to leave Marlborough House for Copenhagen, where they will stay until the end of April. The Empress-Dowager of Russia is expected at Copenhagen towards the end of next week, and she will pass through Berlin on her journey from St. Petersburg.

The Prince of Wales has promised to open the new buildings of the University Extension College at Reading on June 11, being the Saturday before Ascot, and after the function H.R.H. will proceed to Lockinge Park, where he is to be the guest of Lord and Lady Wantage until the following Monday. The Prince's last visit to Lockinge took place in 1877.

H.R.H. has also promised to take the chair at a dinner to be held in the course of the summer, in aid of the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

The Pall Mall Gazette announced last Wednesday that the Prince of Wales had left London "for Homburg." H.R.H. having really no more intention of visiting that place than of proceeding to Pekin; and did ever any one think of going to a German bath at this period of the year? The Prince has gone to the Riviera; and during his stay at Cannes he will take a cruise on a French yacht, which he has hired at Marseilles. H.R.H. will return to England about April 5, and he intends to spend Easter at Sandringham, proceeding afterwards to Newmarket for the Craven Meeting, and coming up to town for the season on Monday, April 18. The Pall Mall is also egregiously wrong in stating that the Prince will go to Copenhagen on his way home, no such détour being contemplated, and the Princess of Wales and Princess Victoria will not return to London until April 28 or 29.

The Duchess of York is staying at the Grand Hotel du Louvre, Mentone, with her aunt, the Grand Duchess Augusta of Mecklenburg-Strelitz. The Duke has gone to Scotland for some salmon fishing on the Queen's Balmoral water on the Dee, and he is staying at Abergeldie Mains, but returns to London on Friday. The Duke and Duchess are going to Copenhagen at Easter for a fortnight.

It has become the regular practice to convey German Royalties about the Mediterranean in the Admiralty yacht Surprise, and it is an arrangement which ought to be discontinued, as it involves considerable expense to the public, while it is often very inconvenient that this vessel should be thus diverted from her proper duties. Within quite a short time the Surprise has been placed at the disposal of the Empress Frederick, the Duke of Coburg, Prince and Princess Henry of Prussia, and Princess Louis of Battenberg. I hear that the Admiralty yacht will shortly convey the Grand Duke of Hesse (who is at Naples) on a trip to Malta and back.

A sum of £11,000 is to be expended in furnishing Buckingham Palace with the electric light, but by the time the work is fully completed it is probable that quite £15,000 will have disappeared. It is all very well to light the hall, staircases, corridors, ball-room, and supper-rooms by electricity, but it does seem a ridiculous waste of money to make any such costly alteration in the other portions of the Palace, considering that the Queen seldom resides in it for more than five nights in the year. The vote for the Royal palaces is scandalously large, being upwards of £58,400, or an increase of £24,000 over last year's expenditure, which was then regarded as much too heavy.

It was announced last week by the papers that Lieut.-General Clerk had kissed hands at Windsor Castle on his appointment as Groom-in-Waiting to the Queen. This is incorrect. There is no vacancy for a Groom-in-Waiting. Lieut.-General Clerk kissed hands on his appointment to be Keeper of the Regalia at the Tower, a place in the Household under the Lord Chamberlain, to which he was nominated by the Queen. The salary is £300 a year, with a furnished residence in the Tower and certain allowances.

The domestic tracasseries of the Grand Duke and Grand Duchess of Hesse appear to have culminated in a separation. The Grand Duke Ernest has left Darmstadt to spend the spring in Italy, intending afterwards to proceed to Russia. The Grand Duchess has joined her mother, the Duchess of Coburg, at Gotha, and she is going to Nice on a long visit to her eldest sister, the Crown Princess of Roumania, whom, it is said, she will accompany back to Bucharest at the end of April. The question of the succession to the Grand Duchy of Hesse is exciting much interest both at our own Court and in Germany The Grand Duke Ernest is in delicate health, and both his uncles are excluded from the succession in consequence of their having contracted morganatic marriages, while he has no cousins who are eligible for the throne. A strong attempt will be made to get the succession for the Grand Duke's eldest sister, Princess Louis of Battenberg, and this arrangement is warmly favoured at our Court and at St. Petersburg, while it is not likely to be much opposed at Berlin.

A "she-writer" on a weekly paper gives a long account of the daily life of the Empress of Austria at Cap Martin. It happens, unluckily, that the Empress Elizabeth gave up her intended visit to Cap Martin after every arrangement had been made at the hotel for her reception, and she has been spending the winter at San Remo. The minute details, therefore, of the "daily life" of the Empress at Cap Martin are purely imaginative.

A friend at Athens writes to me that the attempt on the life of King George is, to say the least, accompanied by remarkable incidents, and he forwards me, in confirmation of this, a number of extracts from the Greek papers. The Saturday on which the attempt occurred was the day preceding the end of the Carnival, when the drive where the attempt took place, which is usually frequented by carriages, was absolutely deserted. The horses that were usually used by the King were not taken, but two of the oldest in the Royal stables, which would not have bolted if cannon had been fired all round them. The coachman, too, was not the usual one, but an old man who, it is said, was a friend of Karditza, the elder of the two criminals. The carriage was an open landau, with the head towards the coachman put up.

The coachman's narrative to one of the reporters of the Acropolis is to the effect that, as soon as he heard the two first shots, and was informed by the footman that he was wounded in the leg, he whipped up the horses, on which the King asked him what was the matter. He replied that the shots had not come from sportsmen, but had been directed against the carriage. On this the King told him not to be afraid, and stood up to see what was happening. The coachman says that there were at least fifteen shots fired, but according to the King there were only six. A public fiacre was only some twenty-eight yards behind the landau at the moment of the attack, but it has not come out who were its occupants, or what it was doing there. Three mounted gendarmes followed the landau at a distance of about 200 paces, but they failed to come up before the criminals had fled, or to seize a third person who, from an eminence close by, was directing their operations. This latter person has not been found, and it is not yet known who he was.

The wounded footman was sent to a hospital, and strict orders were given that no one should be allowed to question him. The two criminals towards the night returned to the city. Karditza, during the whole of Sunday, was about the town, and actually present at the Te Deum at the Cathedral; but on the following morning, he voluntarily presented himself at the police station, stating that he understood that he was "wanted." The explanations that he gave in regard to his motives for the crime were of the flimsiest kind, but he graciously stated that the King had behaved with great courage. It had been noticed days before that this man, who was usually penniless, was flush of money. The idea, however, that the pair were being subsidised by some secret society seems to have been abandoned.

For the Truth Hotel List, see page 620 in the present issue.
For Hospitals and Appeals, see page 619.
For Amusements, see page 621.
For Our Puzzles, see page 629.

Neither of the two rifles used has been found. But in Karditza's lodging cartridges have been discovered which he had himself manufactured, but which contained no balls. His accomplice fired at the horses and the footman, whilst he—the cooler hand—was supposed to be firing at the King. He now explains that their object was to kill the horses, and then murder the King with pistols; but, unfortunately for this explanation, neither carried pistols, nor have any been found near the scene of their operations. At a distance of one hundred yards, however, a tin box was discovered in some bushes containing dynamite, but without cap or fusee.

All this leads to the inference that the attempt was one got up by the police, and that precautions had been taken to make it as dramatic as ineffectual. The position of the King had become almost impossible after the recent revelations of the Kokkoris court-martial, when 123 naval officers—many of them staunch Royalists—on being called as witnesses, deposed that the operations of the fleet were rendered useless owing to direct orders from the Palace. Court-martials on the aides-de-camp of the King, who had been placed at the head of the Army, are impending. Under these circumstances, it would seem as though some over-zealous friends of the Danish dynasty had engineered this coup de théâtre.

No one has been, or is, a stronger advocate of the Greek cause than I am. The Greeks had my heartiest sympathy during their recent struggle. Neither the Army nor the Navy played the part that was expected of them, because the King had entered into a private arrangement with Russia, which involved the Army retreating from Thessaly, and the Navy doing nothing against the Turks. I am no believer in foreign Royalties who are forced upon a country by Europe as its rulers. It is as absurd for Greece to be dependent on the Greek patriotism of a Dane as it would for Denmark to be dependent on the Danish patriotism of a Greek. The King may possibly have thought, when war became inevitable, that he was doing his best for Greece by making a bargain with Russia. But the effects of this bargain have been more disastrous.

Lord and Lady Cadogan returned to Ireland after a week spent in London, and resumed the social duties of Viceroyalty. On the day after their arrival, a large party of visitors arrived at Dublin Castle to stay for the week, amongst them being Lord Arran, Ladies Annesley, Kilmorey, and Duncannon, and many more of the elect. Dinner parties, a concert, and two dances were given at the Castle during the week. On Wednesday, Lord and Lady Cadogan, with most of the Viceregal visitors and suite, attended the Army point-to-point races at Kill, in Kildare. There was a large and smart attendance. Though the glacial weather had some tempering of sunshine, pleasure seeking in the open air was a seasonably penitential undertaking. The Lord Lieutenant's Cup was won by Mr. E. Peel, R.H.A. Lord Downe, who is now in command at the Curragh, was the judge on the occasion, and Mr. Percy La Touche, starter.

The Lord Chief Justice of Ireland is laid up at his residence, Castletown, county of Kildare, from an accident in the hunting field, which has given him a serious shaking. He was unable to go on circuit, Lord Justice Holmes taking his place. Captain Wyndham's accident when hunting in Cork was much severer. His mother, Lady Leconfield, arrived last week in Ireland, and is staying in the private hospital where Captain Wyndham is laid up, his condition being still critical. He is a nephew of Lord Rosebery.

Lord and Lady Salisbury are to leave Hatfield next week for Beaulieu, near Nice, where they will stay until after the Easter holidays at their villa. Lord Salisbury is to return to England then, but if the air of the Riviera suits Lady Salisbury, she will stop on at Beaulieu unti the end of May. During the latter part of Lord Salisbury's stay on the Riviera he will act as Minister-in-Attendance on the Queen, as he did last year.

Major Gaisford, of Offington, who died the other day, was the eldest son of the celebrated Dean of Christ Church, but himself a devoted Roman Catholic. Major Gaisford was an enthusiastic supporter of the Volunteer movement, He was for several years Master of the Worthing Harriers, and a remarkably fine rider. Major Gaisford was a most learned classical scholar and an accomplished linguist. He inherited the Dean's immense library, and was himself a zealous collector of rare books. A few years ago he disposed of some two thousand duplicate copies, which realised nearly £10,000.

I said last week that I never had been able to discover by whom, or when, the Jewel Tower had been built. A gentleman in Warrington supplies me with the following particulars. It is, as I said last week, curious that this tower can only be seen from the back windows of one or two houses, for it is one of the most ancient buildings in London:—

From "Widmore's Enquiry," &c., 4to., 1473.

In the last year of King Edward III., an exchange was made between that Prince and the convent; the King had from them a part, either of a tower, which was afterward the King's Jewel-house, and is at present the Parliament Office, or else the ground on which this building stands. I have given the authority for this because there may be some doubt as to the meaning of the writer; but the place is so particularly described, and I think there can be no question concerning that. The church had no lands in return for this, but only which yet might possibly be as agreeable to them, a licence to purchase in mortmain £40 a year.

From "Niger Quaternus," Folio 79.

Anno regni regis Edwardi tertii quinquagesimo primo, septimo die Junii, idem dominus rex licentiam dedit abbati et conventui Westmonasterii perquisendi terras, tenementa et redditus ad valorem quadrigenta librarum per annum, Statuto, &c., ad manum mortnam, &c., non obstanto. . . . . Et haec licentia concessa est pro magna parte cujusdam Turris in angulo Palatii privati versus austrum una cun. quadam clausura juxta Turrim praedictam ex parte occidentali infra clausum abbatiae et solum sancti Petri domino regi concessum. . . . . Erat autem inter Turrim praedictam et murum Infirmarii, ubi nunc est clausura praedicta, via pedestris et carectaria usque ad angulum Turris, &c.

"Hôtel Burlington," at Sunny Boscombe. (200 rooms). Every luxury. Delightful grounds. Magnificent golf links. Sea-water baths. Moderate charges.—Bournemouth East Station.

A meeting of the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland was held at Edinburgh last Wednesday, when Sir James Gibson Craig announced that the Prince of Wales had accepted the Presidency for next year, when the annual show is to be held at Edinburgh. H.R.H. is going to stay at Dalkeith Palace as the guest of the Duke and Duchess of Buccleuch during the show week. The Duke of York was elected an honorary member of the society.

THE SECRET OF BALDNESS.

[According to an article in this month's Contemporary Review, by Mr. Nuttall, a certain M. Sebouraud has discovered the secret of baldness. It is all on account of a microbe, to fight against which is apparently hopeless.—Evening Paper.

Since the announcement of M. Sebouraud's discovery a German savant has demonstrated the existence of a microbe which preys upon the former's "bacillus of baldness."—Weekly Paper.]

Oh, mischievous Microbe of Baldness!
  Too tiny to cope with or catch;
'Tis to you, then, we have to attribute
  The premature loss of our thatch!
It is you, in your limitless legions,
  That lurk at the roots of our hair;
It is you that lay waste hirsute regions,
    Once fertile as fair!

It is said you have far from nice habits
  As well as a colourless hue;
It is said that Australian rabbits
  Are not so prolific as you;
And that when you have once got our locks in—
  Thus the reader of Sebouraud gleans—
You proceed to "develop a toxin"—
    Whatever that means.

Then, as your encampment grows bigger,
  (Of this there is no kind of doubt),
Our locks lose their colour and vigour,
  And slowly but surely drop out.
We may blister our hair, we may cut all
  We've left, but we're still in the wood,
For all this, so asserts Mr. Nuttall,
    Is not the least good.

Small wonder, then, potent Bacillus,
  You cause such a widely-spread scare;
Small wonder reports of you fill us
  With deep and increasing despair;
For if it is not all a joke, O!
  This tale of your pestilent whims,
What becomes of the once trusted "Koko,"
    And the "Tatcho" of Sims?

* * * * *

But stay! hope illumes our horizon,
  For another great savant, Herr L.,
Has this Sebouraud spring a surprise on,
  And all, even yet, may go well;
For he's found—his announcement must thrill us—
  A microbe we cannot but love—
A microbe that eats the Bacillus
    Referred to above!

So all this research microscopic
  Which has tracked these new germs to their lair;
All these pars on a hair-splitting topic,
  Leave things very much as they were;
And, whichever bacillus proves winner,
  We shall probably have to deplore
That our hair still goes on getting thinner,
    The same as before.

Some hopeful people are looking forward to an improved condition of affairs in that very close borough the South Kensington Museum, consequent upon the approaching retirement of the Art Director. I am afraid they will be disappointed. Almost from its inception South Kensington seems to have been recognised as a place to be conducted on the "take care of Dowb" principle, with the result that the heads and the staff have never pulled well together, and the influence that it might have exercised over Art in this country has been heavily discounted. Moreover, recent doings in connection with the administration of the Museum have certainly not warranted any expectation of improvement.

Two or three weeks ago the Science and Art Department came in for unfavourable comment in TRUTH by reason of a very ill-advised change in the conditions for earning its grants. Now a complaint reaches me from a well-known technical college about an alteration in the syllabus for the Science Examinations which the Department holds annually. It seems that formerly students could enter for either the Elementary, the Advanced, or the Honours stage in each subject. Under the regulations for the present year, however, the Honours stage is divided into two parts, which must be passed in two years before an "Honours" certificate is granted. So far as this is concerned, no fault can be found with the change; but the hardship lies in the fact that men who are in their third and last year at technical colleges will next May sit for Part I. Honours, and get no certificate. The difficulty only extends to this year, since afterwards the easier Honours paper can be taken by second-year men instead of the Advanced, leaving them another year for tackling the harder Part II. paper. The proper course would be to let the old arrangement continue for the present year concurrently with the new one.

From another source I hear that the same change operates unfavourably this year upon the chances of candidates for the Whitworth Scholarships, many of whom are precluded from taking the higher-marked Part II., because they have not previously passed the old Honours stage. It would have been a great deal better if the Science and Art Department had had the sense to give a longer notice of the proposed change, and thus have afforded the science schools and technical colleges throughout the country time to alter their arrangements accordingly. Other examining bodies do so, and it is a pity that a public Department cannot see the desirability of such common fairness to its candidates.

It was only natural to expect that any effort to modify the preposterous Sabbatarian legislation of our ancestors would rouse the opposition of the dissentient minority who delight in that species of sanctity derived from Act of Parliament. Accordingly the committee of the Working Men's Lord's Day Rest Association has announced its intention of using every means in its power to maintain the Act which prohibits the opening of places of amusement and entertainment, for money payment, on Sunday. These egregious busybodies introduce a red-herring by suggesting that the repeal of the Act in question would mean the throwing open of the theatres and music halls on Sunday, and by declaring that the Lord's Day Act of 1781 "is an incalculable benefit to upwards of 500,000 persons employed in the amusement industry, to whom it secures the Sunday as a day of rest."

It is scarcely necessary to say that those who are agitating for the repeal of the Act of 1781 have never contemplated any such result. Every one who reads a paper—and who doesn't?—will remember cases, now and again, in which use has been made of the Act of George III. to hamper and annoy people who have devised Sunday entertainments (such as lectures, illustrated by the magic lantern) to counteract the influence of the public-house. The partial repeal of the Act would put an end to this means of annoyance; and "the 500,000 persons employed in the amusement industry" may be as safely left to take care of their own interests as those employed in any other field of labour.

A new mid-weekly paper has just been started in the Barnet and Finchley district, and for some weeks past it has been extensively advertised in advance under the title of the Barnet and Finchley Chronicle. Last week, however, the new-comer made its appearance under the title of the Barnet and Finchley Herald. The reason given for the change of name at the last moment is peculiar. It appears that at the moment when the paper was going to press the following telegram was received:—

> Have produced and circulated newspaper under registered title Barnet and Finchley Chronicle, and legal notice of this fact will be served upon you to-day.—Trueman Press, Essex House, Friern Barnet.

The legal notice here referred to was duly served. Subsequent inquiry showed that Trueman Press had only registered the title on the same morning on which he dispatched his telegram. The name of this individual will be familiar to readers of TRUTH. He is the proprietor of another local paper, and the proceeding above described is, of course, a mere trick to defeat an opposition enterprise. For the credit of journalism I am glad to say that there are not many Trueman Presses about; at the same time the case points the moral that when you are advertising a new paper it may be as well to take the precaution of registering the title beforehand.

The Dean of Winchester is engaged in writing a biography of the late Bishop of Chichester. I do not fancy that Dr. Durnford would have expressed delight if he could have known that Dean Stephens would be his biographer, for this dignitary's Life of Dean Hook was a singularly poor production, nor are his other works of much interest. The fact is that Bishop Durnford's career scarcely justifies an elaborate biography. It seems now to be considered as indispensable that every deceased prelate should have his life written as that a monument should be erected to his memory. There are really very few Church dignitaries (or laymen either!) who require a biography of four or five hundred pages, and of those who have died during the last twenty years I should say that Archbishops Tait and Magee are the only ones of whom forty or fifty pages would not contain everything that was required to be written for the information of the public. The Life of Dr. Pusey is a preposterously prolix production, and terribly tiresome besides.

Archdeacon Wilson, of Manchester, has been elected Hulsean Lecturer at Cambridge for next year. The Archdeacon has to deliver four discourses, and his remuneration will be £70. Archdeacon Wilson was formerly Fellow of St. John's College.

A Country Vicar writes:—

> When you say, in last week's TRUTH, that if the revenues of the Church were redistributed there would be ample means to maintain the clergy in comfort and suitable dignity, are you aware that, supposing the revenues of the Church were pooled and divided, the average income of all, including bishops and all dignitaries, would be barely £200 per annum? And do you consider £200 per annum an income sufficient to keep a clergyman and his family in a manner suitable to his work and calling?

These questions raise several others. In the first place, are the facts correct? A correspondent at Cambridge gives the total net income of the parochial clergy, exclusive of Bishops, curates, and Cathedral establishments, as £3,363,531 odd, and the total number of incumbents as 13,638. These figures are given on the authority of "Crockford"—about the best that can be produced. If they are correct, the parochial revenues alone, if "pooled," and divided among the parochial clergy, would give an annual income of £246 per annum. If the episcopal and capitular revenues were added in, the average for the whole clergy would of course be very much higher.

If I am asked whether an average income of £246 would be sufficient to maintain the parochial clergyman and his family "in a manner suitable to his work and calling," my answer would be Yes. I would go further, and say that large numbers of them are already living in such a manner on an even smaller income. But I am not proposing, and have not proposed, that all the incomes of the parochial clergy should be equalised. If the whole income were distributed on a reasonable basis, I would suggest that the income should be progressive, say beginning at about £200 a year and increasing up to about £300. Some regard should also be paid to the amount of work attached to the living. The incumbent whose flock numbers thousands should be better paid than the man with a parish of a few score inhabitants.

At the same time I admit that my ideas of what is "a manner suitable to his work and calling" are probably directly at variance with those of the clergyman who puts the above question. My idea—derived from sundry passages in the New Testament—is that a clergyman ought to be a poor man, and that the poorer he is the greater his dignity. The late Cardinal Manning lived and died in something little better than a garret, and left behind him, in worldly goods, less than £100 all told. To my thinking, his dignity and status were more in accordance with his calling than those of an Archbishop of Canterbury, with his palaces and horses, his men-servants and his maid-servants, and his income of £15,000 a year.

MAJOR HOWE & CO.—Fashionable BOOTS and SHOES.—16, Coventry-st., W. (also 60, Strand), and City, London. "Note Addresses." (Repairs)

On one point there can be no question. Whether by a redistribution of the Church revenues, or by some other means, a stop should be put to the clerical mendicancy with which we are now afflicted. A friend of mine, whose name had become known in connection with a liberal offer of a scholastic endowment, received the other day the following letter. It is difficult to say which is more conspicuous, its impudence or its foolishness; for it is hardly likely that any one approached in such a tone as this would at once take out his cheque book and forward the suggested donation:—

The Rectory, Kirkandrews-on-Eden, Carlisle.
March 1, 1898.

Dear Sir,—I have read an account of your quite recent munificence in a certain direction, but if I asked you to send me a donation towards paying off a debt of £10 a year on this poor living, which has yet sixteen years to run before it is clear, I suppose you would say you could not afford it!—Yours faithfully,
J. Chapelhow.

The Archbishop of York, who has been suffering severely from rheumatism all the winter, is going abroad for ten weeks for the benefit of his health. Archbishop Maclagan, who held an Ordination in York Minster on Sunday, is to arrive in town from Bishopthorpe next Monday, and he will leave for the Continent next day. The Queen has excused the Archbishop from the duty of preaching at the Chapel Royal, St. James' Palace, on Palm Sunday.

Canon W. W. Douglas, who died a few days ago, was one of the most popular, most influential, and most highly-esteemed clergymen in the diocese of Worcester. He possessed a considerable estate in the county of Worcester, and was the owner of a large fortune besides. Canon Douglas, who had held the family living of Salwarpe since 1849, was an excellent parish clergyman, and indefatigable in rendering valuable services to all the diocesan societies and organisations, and to many local charities. He was a man of very fine character, and the secular side of his position as a squire-parson was entirely subordinate to the spiritual. Exercising great influence in many directions, he always kept himself entirely in the background. Canon Douglas was the son of the Rev. Henry Douglas, who held for many years a "golden stall" in Durham Cathedral, the average stipend being upwards of £5,000, in return for which payment one annual month of close residence was required. Canon Douglas was a brother-in-law of the late Bishop of Wakefield.

Ernest, Ltd., 185, Regent-street.—The handsome new Salons, where fancy Tailor-made Gowns and Coats are always on view. Send for the new Spring Illustrated Price List.

The Rev. Edgar Sheppard withdrew his acceptance of the vacant stall at Gloucester in deference to the request of the Prince and Princess of Wales, who did not wish him to leave the Chapel Royal. It is understood that two other clergymen have since declined the canonry, which can be held only by an ecclesiastic possessed of adequate private means, as the income is under £300 a year (supposed to be £600), and there is a large prebendal house in the College Green to be kept up. Mr. Sheppard could perfectly well have held the stall in conjunction with his office of Sub-Dean of the Chapel Royal. Why the Lord Chancellor should insist that this canonry is not to be held with any other preferment it is impossible to understand, considering that only a few months ago the Rev. F. A. J. Hervey was nominated by Lord Halsbury to a stall at Norwich (£650 a year, with house) without any stipulation that he was to resign the living of Sandringham, which, accordingly, he continues to hold. There ought to be one weight and one measure for all nominees; but Lord Halsbury is not only not guided by fixed principles, but he does not appear to be guided in such affairs by any principle whatever.

It seems to be almost as difficult to get out of the Norton Fitzwarren Village Club as it is to get into the Carlton or Reform, the Athenæum or the Marlborough. Recently a gentleman, who holds the office of churchwarden in this village, desired to sever his connection with the club, and returned his card of membership and copy of the rules to the President, a local squire. The latter replied that, in his capacity as churchwarden, the gentleman in question was a member of the club and of the managing committee, "notwithstanding his objection to acknowledge the position." And in this club the President's word is law, for the rules practically give him power to govern it as he pleases.

An advertisement has frequently appeared in the daily Press asking the public to "kindly send something for the sick in south-east London." The advertiser is the Rev. A. S. Hewlett, St. John's Clergy House, Tooley-street. It is somewhat strange that an advertisement of this kind should proceed from this particular parish, for, attached to St. John's, Horsleydown, and St. Olave's, there used to be several unusually well-endowed local charities. It would seem, therefore, that the public has some right to know, before contributing specially for relief in that quarter, what has become of these endowments.

I ought to have mentioned last week that subscriptions to the fund for the defence of the action which Lord Hillingdon is bringing, in connection the Charleville-lane right-of-way dispute, may be sent to Mr. Basil Martineau, the Commons Preservation Society, 1, Great College-street, Westminster, S.W.

The sums of £1 1s. from Captain Hubert Earle, and £5 from T., have reached me towards the deficit of last year's Truth Toy Fund.

It has been decided to abandon the Army Rifle Meeting at Aldershot, which has perished from lack of funds to keep it going, nor has it been favoured with much general support from the Army. There have been flagrant mistakes in the management of the institution, and few people en connaissance de cause will be surprised at its collapse.

I take the following from a long letter written by an officer of extensive Indian experience :—

DEAR SIR,—You have touched the fons et origo mali of frontier fiascoes when pointing out the danger of the theory that the Viceroy is the proper Foreign Minister of India. He may be so, but how can a nobleman, fresh from his clubs, his Parish Councils, or his pheasants, know the difference between a Baboo and an Afridi? He must lean on some one. Naturally he ought to lean on the Foreign Secretary, who is half a Minister and half a Secretary. Supposing him not to do this, there is no saying who leads him. Perhaps his private secretary, perhaps the Commander-in-Chief. . . . . Of course the Bengal Civil Service will "take you to task" for letting in the light on the present evil system, whereby any civil servant in India, who can effect his entrance into the Simla Foreign Office as an assistant précis-writer, may rise, as in two recent cases men actually have risen, through the mere favour of his superiors, to be Foreign Secretary, and virtually, though not in name, Foreign Minister. But you are doing a great service in bringing the question forward, for all that. . . . . .

It is high time that some stringent regulations were formulated with respect to the running of shops by N.C.O.s in garrison towns. Many cases of this kind have been at different times noted in TRUTH, the shops being sometimes kept in the names of the men's wives, but occasionally by N.C.O.s themselves. A further development of the practice is to be seen at present at Aldershot. The wife of a pay-sergeant in the Royal Engineers keeps a hosiery shop, and through this shop men in the battalion are supplied, the bills being passed through their accounts. The matter creates a grievance among the men, who complain that they are thus placed under an inducement to buy things that they do not want. It is obvious that abuses of one kind and another easily may arise, and the War Office should take steps to suppress all such trading.

The arrangement by which retired Quartermasters are temporarily employed on duty with the Army Service Corps appears to be on the increase, a recent Gazette giving the names of no less than five officers who have just rejoined in this way at different stations. As I understand it, these officers do not fill vacancies on the establishment, but are in the position of supernumeraries, being remunerated with an allowance of £120 a year in addition to their pension. Although this does not interfere with promotion from the lower ranks to fill vacancies on the establishment, it naturally creates a feeling of soreness among those who would otherwise have to be appointed to these posts. If, as is evidently the case, the present establishment of Quartermasters A.S.C. is insufficient for the requirements of the Department, it ought to be increased, and the additional appointments filled up by promotions in the usual course. The practice of bringing back pensioners who have left the Service is a makeshift of very doubtful expediency.

A characteristic incident is reported in connection with the death at Dehra Dun of an old veteran N.C.O., who had been for many years well known in this neighbourhood. The man in question, Sergeant Skilling, formerly of the 11th and 4th Hussars, enlisted somewhere back in the forties, came out to India at the time of the Rohilla War, and distinguished himself in something like eighteen engagements down to the close of the Indian Mutiny, and for the last twenty years he had resided at Dehra Dun. When he died, his family asked that he might be allowed a military funeral, but the request was refused on the ground that there were no military at the place. But a few days afterwards a retired major died at the same place, and was buried with the usual military honours. The excuse, therefore, given in the case of the sergeant cannot have been the true reason. I should have thought that there were many reasons in this case why the military authorities should have shown as much honour to the memory of the non-commissioned as to that of the commissioned officer.

I am sorry to find that pensioners still complain about the feeding in Chelsea Hospital. All complaints of this kind it is my custom to take with a grain of salt, but when I find a credible witness deposing to having had set before him a rabbit pie containing three heads and no bodies, I think inquiry may be legitimately raised as to what has become of the rest of the animals. In all institutions of this kind it is necessary to keep a very sharp eye on the officials, in order to see that the inmates get what they are supposed to have, and from what I hear there seems to be room for more supervision of this kind at Chelsea. Some years ago each mess in the Hospital used to receive the dripping out of the meat. This was stopped, and an allowance in cash was given to the men instead. After a time the cash allowance was also stopped, and the men were told that the money would go to provide them with extras. They complain, however, that the fare has been even more meagre since that date than it was before.

The natives of Malta are often reproached on account of their ill-treatment of animals, but it would seem that there are other similar offenders in the island who by reason of their position are far more to blame. In a letter in the Malta Chronicle an "English Civilian" describes a case of gross cruelty through the overloading of a military transport cart; and a correspondent of my own says it is by no means the only case of the kind that has occurred lately. Perhaps the officer responsible for transport arrangements will look into these charges. He is understood to pride himself upon keeping down expenses; but probably he is not aware that his zeal for economy—so laudable within proper limits—sometimes results in one wretched undersized pony being compelled (with the assistance of men shoving behind the cart) to drag a load heavy enough for a couple of animals. Such a spectacle brings the military authorities into disrepute and sets a very bad example to the native population of Malta.

In view of the increase of the Army, we shall probably hear a good deal before long about the necessity of doing something to increase recruiting—something more, that is to say, than the concessions just made and announced in connection with the Army Estimates. Two officers at Aldershot, who have made it their business to collect opinions on the subject from N.C.O.'s engaged in recruiting work, send me the following suggestions as to what is required to increase the supply of men. They seem worthy of notice at the present juncture—more especially as they do not involve any additional call upon the taxpayer:—

1. More recruiting sergeants in country districts, where it is very rare to see one at present.

2. More liberty for soldiers when off duty, e.g., a man of good conduct should not be required to obtain a pass in order to be out of barracks after 10 p.m.; afternoon barrack-square parade under the sergeant-major should be abolished for trained soldiers.

3. A more substantial breakfast should be given to soldiers, who at present have only one solid meal in the course of the day. The recent concession over the grocery ration ought to make this no difficult matter.

4. A smarter walking-out uniform for the Infantry of the Line. Although Cavalry do more work than the Infantry on practically the same pay, they have no difficulty in obtaining all the recruits they require. Recruiting Sergeants attribute this almost entirely to the superior attractions of the Cavalry uniform. It is suggested that there should be two kits, one specially smart for walking-out and ceremonial parades, and the other business-like and serviceable for other parades and fatigues. Probably this division would obviate any increase in the present total cost of kit.

I was favoured the other day by some men of the 2nd Somerset Light Infantry with a sample of the dinner served up to them at Corunna Barracks, Aldershot. I do not wish to do an injustice to the cook, but I am bound to say that, unless the sample had suffered considerably during transit through the post, it did not speak highly for his talents. A less inviting repast I have never seen. I am told that there has been some grumbling on the subject, and that the cook defends himself on the ground that the ovens are cracked. There must be something wrong somewhere, if the sample submitted to me fairly represents the bulk, and I hope that this notice will cause the matter to be looked into.

By the way, is it a common thing for the privates' reading-room to be constantly in use for such purposes as lectures, courts-martial, and married people's tea-parties? It seems that the reading-room at Corunna Barracks has several times lately been closed, for some hours at a time, for one or other of these purposes. Surely other and more convenient places could be found for use on such occasions.

Few officers have better cause to complain of the inconsiderate meanness of the Indian Government than those of the Royal Indian Marine. No branch of the Service is more trying to the health, several stations being notoriously unhealthy; and this is so well understood that the premium for life insurance for officers of the R.I.M. is higher than for any other service or occupation in India. When, however, one of these officers is invalided home, he has in nine cases out of ten to pay his passage both ways at his own expense, and to live at home on a pittance of a few shillings per week. It is true that he is nominally entitled to a non-regulation troopship passage "when available;" but as such a passage is only available during five months of the year, and only very rarely during those five months, while a man invalided home generally has to get away almost at a moment's notice, this concession is purely nominal.

To show the hardship of the case, take the position of a lieutenant of the Royal Indian Marine, who has to come home under such circumstances. His allowance is only Rs.125 a month, paid at the official rate of exchange, and subject to income-tax and subscription to family pension fund. His passage home and back, if he has to pay it, will cost about three-quarters of his whole year's allowance, and he will have something under Rs.400 left to live upon for the whole year. It is a monstrous thing that any man who has temporarily lost his health in a specially arduous public service should be treated like this.

A question in which the public have a double interest as taxpayers and consumers is raised by the Grocers' Gazette, in connection with a recent sale by auction at the Royal Clarence Yard, Gosport. The stores brought to the hammer included the following:—Biscuits, 4,000 lb.; ditto siftings, 5,100 lb.; split peas, 700 lb; flour, kiln dried, 140 lb.; rice, 1,200 lb.; preserved potatoes, 185 lb.; cook's fat, 780 lb. It must be assumed that these victuals had been condemned as unfit for use, and nobody will blame the authorities for refusing to issue them to the Navy. But one would like to know how it comes about that the Admiralty so often has to dispose of similarly large quantities of provisions. A certain amount of loss through the deterioration of such goods in store is unavoidable, but with proper management it might surely be very much reduced. One would like to know, too, what becomes of these condemned provisions. Is stuff pronounced unwholesome for seamen sold for consumption by landsmen?

The Chief Petty Officers of the Navy have, I see, issued an appeal to M.P.s to assist them in obtaining the removal of a pension grievance which has often been noticed in these columns. I hope the appeal will be successful. At present a C.P.O. receives only the same pension as he would have received if he had remained a P.O. 1st class, though in every other respect a distinction is drawn between the two grades. Such an arrangement is both anomalous and unjust, and it ought to be altered by giving the C.P.O., in addition to his ordinary pension, a halfpenny per day extra for each year's service in that rank, just as the P.O. 1st class is given a halfpenny per day more than the P.O. 2nd class.

It would seem from a complaint I have received, that among the guards working on the Indian North Western State Railway are several ex-soldiers, who were induced to accept this employment by the promise that they would be paid Rs. 85 a month, with regular yearly increments, till they reached Rs. 120 a month. The Rs. 85 a month are duly paid, but the increments are never, or hardly ever, granted, the natural consequence being the existence of much resentment and dissatisfaction. Such a breach of faith, discreditable in any circumstances, is doubly discreditable, if it be true, as I am informed, that in some cases the men only went from their regiments to the railway service on the assurances as to their prospects which were given by their commanding officers, though the latter were, of course, only repeating what they believed to be the trustworthy statements of the railway officials.

At the present moment it is, perhaps, hardly of much use to further discuss the ill-advised amendments of the law of sedition in India which have been rushed with such indecent haste through the Legislative Council. Since I dealt with the matter a few weeks ago, however, my attention has been called to one peculiarly iniquitous clause of the Act, which has not been generally noticed. It is actually provided that the code shall apply to any native Indian subject of her Majesty "in any place without and beyond British India," so that, for instance, a native Indian subject in London who while here writes a strong letter or article on the Frontier policy can, under the new law, be tried and convicted of sedition whenever he returns to British India. As another illustration, the Calcutta Bar, in its protest against the Bill, pointed out that > any native Indian subject of her Majesty who petitions the British Parliament for the redress of grievances or against alleged oppression, and thereby excites or attempts to excite any feeling of enmity against the Government of India as by law established, would, though his petition were in such terms as were allowable according to the procedure of the British Parliament, be liable to transportation for life when found in British India. This appears to be in this respect a measure which may affect the authority of Parliament within the meaning of the last clause of Sec. 22 of the Indian Councils Act of 1861, and the putting of it in force in such a case would undoubtedly constitute a breach of the privileges of Parliament.

The whole question has, of course, still to be thrashed out in Parliament.

After all, the Chancellor of the Exchequer's idea of a postal delivery to every house in the country was not exactly stillborn. It is merely growing into life with the extreme deliberation, which, in the course of nature, must be expected of any idea nurtured by the old women at St. Martin's-le-Grand. That is the conclusion I draw from Mr. Hanbury's answer to a question last week respecting the non-delivery of letters to certain residents of a district in Denbighshire. The Post Office surveyors, he said, are proceeding as rapidly as possible with the task of establishing postal deliveries throughout the United Kingdom, but, of course, many localities still remain to be dealt with. Of course. It is only twelve months since the Chancellor of the Exchequer gave his promise and the House of Commons voted the money for carrying it out. How could the Department be reasonably expected to deal with so gigantic a business in so short a time? It will positively involve the appointment of several additional postmen.

Enthusiasts on the subject of "purity" have at one time and another inflicted a prodigious quantity of foul and mischievous literature upon the public; but it is something new to find a beneficed clergyman of the Established Church engaged in this dirty work. At the present time a pamphlet is being systematically distributed among young men by the rector of a parish in Kent. The reverend gentleman's motives are, no doubt, highly meritorious, but few practical people will question that the views set forth in his pamphlet are altogether mischievous. I hear from Oxford that the book is being posted wholesale to undergraduates of that University. It seems to be another among the many cases in which a little censorship on the part of the Post Office might be exercised with great benefit to the public.

With reference to the action of the General Medical Council in regard to unqualified assistants, a medical friend tells me that what has been done is merely to call the attention of practitioners to the rule, which has long been in existence, forbidding the employment of such assistants except under the direct supervision of the principal. I take it, however, that there is no doubt that the rule has always been more or less a dead letter. Here is another letter which gives the case for the Medical Council:—

> In justice to the General Council it ought to be mentioned that one great object at least of their action is to protect the poorer classes, with whom everybody inside a surgery is "the doctor." But the Council would do well to go a step further and obtain powers—if they do not already possess them—to prevent any person who has, for malpractices, been struck off the register from practising as a medical man. If I am rightly informed, there is, at the present time, no law which will prevent such an one from continuing to attend patients, with the sole drawback that he is not capable of signing death certificates; this, of course, necessitating a coroner's inquiry.
>
> In illustration of the foregoing it is only necessary to call attention to an inquest recently held at the East-end of London. The subject of the inquiry was a child eleven years old. Of the two so-called "practitioners" who attended the case, one admitted that he had no qualification whatever, the other stated that he had been a licentiate of the Society of Apothecaries, but had been struck off the register. Very naturally, the coroner doubted the utility of striking a man off the register when there is so little to prevent him from carrying on the practice of prescribing for patients, and, the jury endorsing this view, a rider was appended to the verdict declaring that it is not in the interests of the public that unqualified practitioners should be allowed to practise. And I think, on reflection, nobody will doubt the correctness of such a proposition.

Perhaps I am of an unduly sceptical disposition, but I confess that the solicitude of the medical authorities for the interests of poor patients strikes me as a little comic. No one, of course, can doubt for a moment the desirability of preventing unqualified men from practising. But the fact remains that the action of the Medical Council deprives of their livelihood many men who have shown themselves by years of practice thoroughly competent doctors, and that the benefit which will result to the public is extremely doubtful. If the writer of the above letter is correctly informed, the Medical Council have no power to prevent any unqualified man from practising, although they may prevent a qualified man from employing him as an assistant. The present state of things seems to be that any unscrupulous quack or ignoramus is perfectly free to doctor people, provided he is prepared to face the chance of an inquest; while more conscientious men who have been working for years past as doctors' assistants, but would not care to start now on their own account on the above terms, are suddenly precluded from earning their living. The law is undoubtedly in a very unsatisfactory state, and I cannot see that the action of the General Medical Council makes things materially better. The Council would be far better occupied in devoting itself to getting the law amended, not in the interests of the profession, but in the interests of the public.

Surplice Shirts for evening wear, with pique fronts, 9/6, 10/6 each, made to measure.—Sampson & Co., Shirt Tailors, 268, 270, Oxford-street, London, W. Price lists forwarded.

It would, perhaps, be a piece of poetic licence to say in these days that "chalk and alum and plaster are sold to the poor for bread;" but even if there be nothing wrong with the quality, there is, according to the Master Bakers' Society, a good deal lacking in the quantity of the cheap loaf. "Day by day," says a paper representing the views of the Society, "the public is robbed—that is the proper word—of tons of bread by men who, under the pretence of selling cheap loaves, cheat their customers in weight." The Society ought to be an authority on the subject, and, coming from such a quarter, the demand for more inspectors to check the sale of bread is one which deserves careful consideration at Spring Gardens. There is probably plenty of room for increased inspection, and even more for increased stringency in the enforcement of the law against swindling bakers.

The Swansea Bumbles have been behaving fairly well for some time past; but last week they indulged once more in the luxury of a scandalous scene. It arose upon the refusal of the Board to send the children from the Cottage Homes to a certain school, the Rev. J. Davies (Cadle) remarking that they had "damned the school." Another member, in protesting against this remark, made some occult reference to the connection of Mr. Davies with "an insurance company," whereupon the reverend gentleman broke forth as follows:—

> You are going to hell if you say that. I have never said anything about it. The Daily Post said that the Rev. Burwyn Davies and me were insurance agents for hell. You, and your beer—you are going to hell; you know more about it than I do. I am afraid to go there; I am trying to keep people away from there; but I am afraid I will never keep you from there.

Such incidents must be highly edifying to the ratepayers, to say nothing of the children whose interests were supposed to be under consideration.

It is a decidedly sad and incomprehensible state of things that a man should be under treatment for a month by a poor law medical officer and then die of starvation. This is what appears to have happened in the case of a poor fellow named Griffiths, whose death has lately been investigated by a coroner's jury and by a committee of the Board of Guardians at Newport, Salop. Griffiths went to the doctor, who gave him a bottle of medicine and advised him to go into the workhouse, where he would get the more nourishing food which he evidently needed. The man did not act upon this advice, but contented himself with taking bottle after bottle of the medicine, and at the end of a month he suddenly died. It was found at the inquest that his death was due to starvation; but the jury did not make any allusion to the conduct of the medical officer, which it was understood would be brought before the Guardians. Last week a committee of the latter body reported that they considered the doctor should have recommended the relieving officer to provide suitable relief in kind for Griffiths; but, by the casting vote of the Chairman, the Guardians declined to adopt this report, because, forsooth, it might be construed into a censure. To most people reading the story, it will seem a very sensible and at the same time justifiable expression of opinion.

Several of my readers have contributed further to the discussion of the question whether a tenant who has paid his landlord's income tax, and omitted to deduct it from the next quarter's rent, has a right to make a deduction in the next subsequent quarter. Up to the present, however, there does not seem to be any further ground for believing that the tenant has, at any rate in ordinary cases, such a right. A barrister refers me to Woodfall's "Landlord and Tenant," where on the authority of a case reported in 15 Meeson and Welsby, p. 438, it is laid down that the tenant cannot recover the income tax if he has omitted to deduct it from the next quarter's rent. The Income Tax Repayment Agency write me that cases decided before February 3, 1893, are over-ruled by the judgment of Judge Collier in the case mentioned in TRUTH the other day. My knowledge of law may be imperfect, but it is something new to me to hear that decisions in the superior courts can be over-ruled by a County Court judge.

The case relied on by the Income-tax Repayment Agency appears to be one of "Thomson v. Adcock," tried at the Liverpool County Court, on February 3, 1893. In this case the defendant deducted from his quarter's rent at the end of 1892 income tax for two previous years, which he had omitted to deduct at the proper time. The landlord refused to allow the deduction, sued the tenant, and failed. The judgment, I am told, rested on the ground that the Income Tax Act of 1853 amended the previous Act of 1842, and allowed the deduction under such circumstances. How the County Court judge got over the previous decisions I do not know, unless they were prior to the Act of 1853. Possibly the point is doubtful, but the balance of authority at present seems to be on the side of the landlord. It generally is.

Here is a fresh version of the Indian income tax grievance, this time from a civilian:—

> I am a member of a mercantile firm in Calcutta. The profits of the firm are subject to and pay income tax in India. Part of my share of these profits is remitted to me in England, and on the portion so remitted the Inland Revenue Commissioners again levy income tax on me here. Can the same income be taxed twice by the Queen's Government, i.e., once in India and again in England? If so it appears to be a mere delusion to hold that all subjects of the Crown are on equality in matters of taxation.

There seem to be one or two fallacies here. If the same individual is in the fortunate position of having establishments, mercantile or otherwise, in two or three countries, he must submit to the inconvenience of paying the taxes in all those countries. The fiscal systems of India and of England are as distinct as those of France and Russia, and I can see no reason why a person residing in any one of these countries should be exempt from taxation there because he has been taxed elsewhere.

DUYSEN PIANOS are the most superb of all modern Instruments. They stand absolutely unrivalled for beauty of tone, touch, & finish. A consummate success in small grands.—LLOYD'S, 24, Mount-street, Grosvenor-square, W.

H. L. SAVORY & CO.'S CIGARETTES.—By Special Warrants of Appointments, to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, H.R.H. the Duke of Saxe Coburg-Gotha, H.S.H. the Duke of Teck, and the House of Lords and Commons. To be obtained of all the leading Houses in the Trade.—Sole address, 59, Piccadilly, London, W.

My Legal Pillory this week contains a case from West Powder Petty Sessions which affords a striking illustration of the constant, almost inexhaustible, mercy of many of the magistracy towards persons convicted of ill-treating animals. The defendant had been fined for cruelty on seven previous occasions, and the Bench recognised that the only thing likely to cure him was a term of hard labour. It is quite certain that if he had shown a propensity for poaching or petty larceny, to say nothing of the horrible crime of sleeping out, this remedy would have been tried long before he had reached his seventh conviction; but as he was simply an animal-torturer, he was let off, for the eighth time, with a pecuniary penalty. In the following list there are a number of other examples of the unaccountable aberrations of the Great Unpaid with regard to the relative heinousness of offences:—

Derby County Police-court. Before Messrs. W. M. Jervis, J. H. Gascoyne, and other magistrates. John Saxelby and Edward Saxelby, charged with assaulting John Colclough. They knocked complainant down, and kicked and "pummelled" him whilst he lay on the ground. The Bench said it was a bad assault. Fined £1 each and costs.

West Powder Petty Sessions, Truro. Before Mr. T. R. Polwhele, Sir Geo. J. Smith, and Mr. E. S. Carus-Wilson. Elisha Rickard, charged with cruelty by allowing a horse to be worked whilst in an unfit state. The animal was in low condition and suffering from four wounds under the saddle. There were seven previous convictions for cruelty, and the Bench said nothing, apparently, would cure the defendant unless it was a commitment to gaol. They were "almost inclined" to inflict the full penalty of £5; but only fined him £3 and costs.

Oswestry Borough Petty Sessions. Before the Mayor, Messrs. W. H. Spaull, J. Jones, E. B. Smith, G. Perks, and D. Vaughan. Richard Jones pleaded guilty to a charge of assaulting his wife. She had four children to support, and he had only given her 18s. 6d. during the last four months. He brought home two loaves for his own consumption, and when she begged him to give one to her and the children, he hit her on the head till she became unconscious. The chairman said defendant had behaved like a brute. Fined £1, and bound over.

Shrewsbury Borough Police-court. Before Mr. George J. Holt, Major-General W. H. Herbert, and other magistrates. George Littlehales, charged with assaulting Ruth Brown and John Cullis. Both the complainants were knocked down and rendered insensible by the defendant, who hit them on the head with a poker or some similar weapon. There were five previous convictions against the defendant. Fined £1 and costs for each assault.

Derby County Police-court. Before the same magistrates. John Murdock and George Rivers, charged with stealing a brass tap, value 6d. Murdock, seven days; Rivers, fourteen days.

Malling Petty Sessions. Thomas Chambers, summoned for trespassing in search of rabbits. Fined £2.

Midhurst Petty Sessions. Before Colonel Watson, Colonel Lascelles, Messrs. G. H. Drew, and C. T. Lane. Wm. Osborne, charged with stealing two pieces of harness belonging to his employer. Prisoner had hitherto borne a good character. One month.

Halesworth Police-court. Before Mr. F. E. Babington. Wm. Strange, charged with sleeping out. Fourteen days.

Waltham Abbey Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. J. Parnell, J. W. Melles, R. B. Colvin, and A. J. Edwards. Alfred Curtis, charged with trespassing in search of conies. Fined £2 10s. 6d. or one month.

Neath County Police-court. Before Messrs. J. B. Paddon, E. Davies, and M. G. Roberts. Richard Pearce, charged with trespassing in pursuit of game. Fined £2 and costs, or one month.

Fakenham Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. C. A. Hamond, B. Le Neve Foster, W. Freuer, and Captain F. R. Thackray. John Parke, labourer, charged with stealing a pair of boots, which were hanging outside a shop. Nothing was known against the defendant's character. Fourteen days.

Widnes Police-court. Before Mr. W. W. Gossage and Alderman Sadler. Andrew Hegarty, charged with assaulting Maria Heron. Defendant struck her a blow on the cheek, knocked her down, and kicked her in the back. She was confined to her bed for a week in consequence. Fined 20s. and costs.

Sheffield City Police-court. Before Messrs. J. Robertshaw and G. Senior. John Patrick Swinden, barber, charged with assaulting a boy, twelve years of age, whom he employed. On three successive days the defendant most severely thrashed the boy, causing about forty bruises. Fined £2.

Batley Police-court. Joseph Waddington and his wife charged with assaulting James Hudson. The complainant, an old man, was given several severe blows on the face and knocked down, after which he was kicked on the face and head. The woman fined 6s. 6d.; the male defendant £2 10s.

Reading County Police-court. Before Major Thoyts and other magistrates. William Creed charged with cruelty to a mare, by working her whilst in an unfit condition. The animal was a very old one, "a mere bag of bones," and suffering from a large suppurating wound on the back. Defendant had been previously convicted of similar cruelty. Fined £2 and costs.

Grimsby Borough Police-court. Before the Mayor, Messrs. W. Jackson, C. Morton, S. Oates, A. Connell, E. de Lacy Read, and A. Bannister. George Goodwin, fishing apprentice to the Anchor Steam Fishing Company, charged with neglecting to go to sea. One month.

Chelmsford Police-court. Before Mr. J. Thomasin Foster, and other magistrates. Wm. Collison, charged with sleeping out, and having no visible means of subsistence. Twenty-one days.

Staffordshire Adjourned Quarter Sessions. Before Lord Hatherton and other magistrates. George Henry Greenwood pleaded guilty to stealing a pair of boots. Six months.

Tiverton Police-court. Margaret Donovan and Margaret Western charged with sleeping out under a hay stack. Fourteen days each.

An ingenuous gentleman, who declares himself "a land owner, a magistrate, and a game-preserver," writes me a letter beginning:—

When you advocate the abolition of the Game Laws have you ever considered the other side of the question, I mean the effect which such a step would produce upon the country generally? . .

Yes, I have considered it very often, for it is a subject on which the landed interest is never tired of expatiating. I do not think it necessary, therefore, to print the rest of my correspondent's letter, which is merely devoted to showing the loss which would result to the "country generally" if those at present employed in the game-preserving industry were thrown out of work, if game became extinct, and country gentlemen had no longer the attractions of shooting to occupy them at their country residences. The prospect may strike a landlord with horror, but I think it is one which "the country" may face with equanimity. Of course, if no other industry is to take the place of game-preserving, if extensive tracts of the soil of this country are fit for no other purpose except to grow pheasants for rich men to shoot, rural districts will undoubtedly lose something by the abolition of the Game Laws. The "if," however, is a big one.

At last I have got to the bottom of the mystery concerning the expenditure of £7 15s. 6d. in recovering a legacy of £50 from the clutches of the Court of Chancery, which had taken possession of the money while the legatee was a minor. It appears that a legatee is not allowed to apply to the Court in person, a rule of the Court making it necessary that a solicitor shall be employed to obtain an order on an originating summons. The stamps and fees alone absorb about £2, apart from the solicitor's own costs. Such a rule imposes a monstrously heavy tax on small legatees for the benefit of the legal profession, and it ought to be abolished or amended. In a case like that to which I referred, it would surely be quite sufficient if evidence of the identity and age of the legatee were produced, and this could be done without the assistance of a solicitor.

---

Subscriptions greatly needed by The Royal Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.—6,929 convictions this year; 7,320 last year. Address complaints of cruelty, contributions, letters, &c., to Secretary, 105, Jermyn-st., London.

With reference to the fund being raised to defray the costs of the defendants in the case of Andrew v. Whitworth, I am glad to hear that the public meeting at which the fund was inaugurated passed a resolution instructing the committee to distribute the fund "so that no part can be touched by the plaintiffs." Provided this instruction is carried out, I wish the fund every success, and the bigger it is the better.

Bailie Hay, of Stranraer, modestly disclaims the vainglorious remark, attributed to him by the Stewartry Observer, that he once brought me to my knees. In reply to my paragraph last week he has sent me a letter from which it seems that what he really said was that a year or two ago I "put the Bench right" by giving his version of a case which had been commented upon in TRUTH. This incident, and, indeed, the very existence of the worthy magistrate, had passed from my recollection, but I was quite right in affirming that I had never gone on my knees to his worship, or for that matter to any other Bailie. Bailie Hay admits the soft impeachment that he spoke of certain local scribes as "gutter-snipe, second-hand reporters," and expressed the belief that he could bring them to their knees. He appears to consider that he had plenty of provocation for the language he used; but that is a question which he must settle with his local critics.

A letter has been written by the Chairman of the Eddisbury Petty Sessions in reference to some recent comments in TRUTH on the dismissal of a charge of cruelty to a mare which died while under treatment for jibbing. The treatment consisted in fastening a chain round the mare's neck, having her dragged along a field by a cart-horse, and beating her with a whip to make her rise when she fell, or, as is now suggested, threw herself down. The Chairman says that this was only done after gentler methods had been tried in vain, that death was caused by "heart failure, consequent on the resistance due to the animal's obstinacy," and that the whip could not have been used to an undue or cruel extent, as no marks of blows were found on the carcass. As to "the forcible dragging forward of the mare," the Chairman says that this process is adopted, sometimes with great apparent violence, yet without apparent suffering or injury, when a horse is cast and unable to extricate itself, or buried up to the head in a brook or bog; at the same time, in dismissing the summons, the Bench "by no means committed themselves to an approval of such a method as a cure for jibbing." If the Magistrates had been content to hold that no cruelty was intended, I should not have commented upon their decision. I did so, as I explained at the time, because they went further, and expressed the opinion that no cruelty was even inflicted—an opinion from which, after carefully considering the Chairman's letter, I still most strongly dissent.

The present month is always marked by the awakening of the turf tipster and the man with a betting system from their winter slumber. One of the first to brace himself up for the coming racing season is C. Wildcroft, of 72, Hampstead-road, N.W. He is the inventor of a "method of investment" which, after three years of patient labour, he has just brought to a state of perfection —"winning an absolute certainty," &c. With the unselfishness which should characterise all great inventors, he does not wish to keep this good thing to himself, but, on the contrary, is anxious to give a share in it to "a few gentlemen with sufficient capital to work the same." No doubt the system will work to its prophet's profit, if not to anybody else's.

A few months back, for the benefit of numerous readers and correspondents, I offered an opinion upon the home work business carried on by Coleman & Co., 33, Old Queen-street, Westminster. The substance of my remarks was that although there was no proof that the business was not carried on honestly any lady expecting to increase her income substantially by such means was likely to be disappointed. In view of a recent development, this opinion seems to require a little modification. The principle of Coleman & Co.'s business was that the would-be lady worker first paid 2s. 6d., in return for which she received a sample of the work, materials for her to try her hand upon, and a promise that her name would be entered on the books, and further work guaranteed if her first work was satisfactory. She then had to send another 2s. 6d. for materials to make a dozen of the articles—watch-holders made from macramé string. For each dozen made the payment was 9d., and the second 2s. 6d. was to be returned when the work was discontinued.

A lady went in for this business in November, paid her first 2s. 6d. for preliminary expenses, and a further 2s. 6d. for materials, out of which she completed her first dozen. She then received notice that no more work could be given till the end of January, and when that date was passed she wrote again for more work, or for the return of the 2s. 6d. paid as a preliminary fee, and the 2s. 6d. subsequently deposited. Coleman & Co. answered to this that they could only supply materials in future by the gross, and must have a deposit of 24s. before sending further materials. This being a clear breach of the original agreement, the lady declined to send 24s, and applied again for the return of her 5s., but without success. She then got a solicitor to write a letter to Coleman & Co. on her behalf, and without further demur the 5s. was refunded. It is pretty clear from this that the business is not conducted in a straightforward way, and any lady of limited means who sends 24s. to Coleman & Co. after this will be extremely ill-advised.

THE FAMED "ADELPHI" TURTLE forwarded from the Adelphi Hotel, Liverpool, to all parts of the country. Per quart jar, 18s.; per pint jar, 9s. 6d., carriage paid. Speciality for Invalids.

For Truth, and all other Newspapers, Magazines, and Periodicals, send your Subscriptions to WM. DAWSON & SONS, Ltd., Cannon House, Bream's-bldngs., London. (Estab. 1809.) Catalogue gratis.

Isaac Gordon has found a friend. In the course of a public examination before Mr. Registrar E. S. Gills, in the Chester Bankruptcy Court last week, the debtor mentioned that he had borrowed £3,205 from moneylenders, that he had repaid them £4,464, and that they still claimed £1,672 from him. A number of these transactions were with Isaac Gordon, and for the last £300 that he advanced that insatiable bloodsucker obtained promissory notes for £900. This would have struck most people as a pretty bad example of extortion; but all it elicited from Mr. Registrar Gills was the sage remark that Gordon could not be expected "to lend money without interest"! The Registrar also delivered himself of the equally valuable opinions that "there was a lot of nonsense talked in these days about moneylenders, who might be as bad as they were painted, but there were other things as bad, if not worse." It will probably occur to most people that one thing a shade worse than the exactions of scoundrels like Gordon is the spectacle of a bankruptcy official talking such puerile and pernicious nonsense about practices which cause so much distress and ruin.

The debtor in the above case was lured into the toils of Gordon by a circular purporting to emanate from one "Arthur A. Andrews." The "Andrews" circulars are sent out from 6, High-street, Kingsland, London, N. In another case at the Worcester Bankruptcy Court last week, the victim had been caught by a circular from "James W. Ryland," 6, Livery-street, Birmingham. He borrowed £150 from "Ryland," otherwise Gordon, and repaid £200. Then he borrowed a similar amount from "B. Edwards"—Gordon again, under another of his innumerable aliases. Two days, as he alleged, after an instalment had become due Gordon issued a writ for the balance of the loan, but he graciously withdrew it on payment of the instalment, £3 10s. costs, and £10 for his "extra trouble." The Assistant Official Receiver at Worcester takes a more practical and sensible view of Gordon's methods than the Registrar at Chester, and when the borrower became bankrupt he demanded the return of the £10 which had been thus extorted from him. Here are some charming extracts from the redoubtable Isaac's reply to this demand:—

> It is quite clear that I was strictly within my right to issue the the writ and to demand £10 for my extra trouble, because I am not the bankrupt's slave, dog, or servant to send him writs and write him letters without due and proper payment. I challenge the bankrupt to prove his story, and I wish you would be a bit more long-headed and not simply take bankrupts' words, but insist on having facts before you keep on troubling and worrying people with all sorts of correspondence and rubbishing demands to no purpose, and for which one does not get one penny, and which is extremely irritating and annoying. I often get cruelly robbed by some of the debtors, and I have a perfect right to make the best bargain I can for myself, which I always do—up and above board. Please do not pester me with any more letters on the subject, as I have something else to do than to keep up a correspondence with you to no purpose.

This scoundrel's impudence is scarcely less phenomenal than his rapacity.

There is a usurer or a usurer's tout of a particularly obnoxious type, who calls himself "G. Milner," and dates his letters and circulars from 258, High Holborn, W.C. He marks down as his special prey persons who have given bills of sale, or who have had County Court judgments registered against them, offering loans to get them out of their difficulties. Whether Milner merely collects fees for preliminary expenses, or whether he actually makes advances, it is pretty certain that anybody in financial straits who accepts an offer of this kind will speedily find that he has jumped from the frying-pan into the fire.

The following seems to be a variation on the trick of the soldier and the parrot which was described in Truth a week or two ago. In the obituary notices of a gentleman, who died in London about a month back, he was described as "of Calcutta." A week afterwards, a man called upon the widow with a story about some parcels having just arrived from India by the Ceylon for her late husband, and also a magnificent parrot. He also represented that there was 3s. 6d. to pay for expenses. The mention of the parrot fortunately awakened the lady's scepticism, and she requested the man to fetch the parcels and the bird, and she would then pay all necessary expenses. The man left, but has not since been heard of. He is probably a near relative of the soi-disant warrant officer, who had returned from Crete with a parrot as a present sent by one of the soldiers there to his friends in London. The police should direct their attention to these worthies.

Since the last reference in Truth to the advertising of shoddy pianos for sale at a great sacrifice upon the original cost, I have received a number of particulars which tend to prove the extensive nature of the business. Into three cases I have made inquiry, and the results are quite sufficient to warn any one against being tempted to secure such bargains. The following advertisements have all appeared frequently of late in the Telegraph:—

> 1. Piano, equal to new. A really high-class instrument. Would originally cost forty-five guineas. Great sacrifice to avoid storage expenses. Will accept twenty-two guineas, and arrange for gradual payments if most convenient to purchaser. Italian figured case, magnificent inlaid marqueterie panel front, iron frame, full trichord, patent check action; in fact, every up-to-date improvement for power and sweetness of tone. Seen any time by appointment.—Address, Professional, Box 8,095, Postal Department, Daily Telegraph, Fleet-street, E.C.
>
> 2. Pianoforte.—Lady, in difficulties, must sell seventy-guinea upright grand. Nearly new. Magnificent figured walnut. Every improvement. Noble instrument. Brilliant tone. Nineteen guineas. Approval, carriage paid.—191, Ferndale-road, Brixton.
>
> 3. Pianoforte.—Compulsory sale, very superior fifty-guinea upright iron grand, beautifully inlaid. Improved check action. New last August. Very great sacrifice, fifteen guineas. Private house, 24, Rust-square, Addington-square, Camberwell-road.

A reply to the first advertisement in the preceding list elicited a letter from "Arthur Godfrey," of 11, Canonbury Park South, Islington, who can "positively assure you that this is not of the ordinary common class, but a realy (sic) genuine first-class instrument." My inquiries reveal the fact that no professional of the name of Arthur Godfrey resides at this address, which is the private residence of a Mr. Siegenberg, who happens to be a furniture dealer with a shop a few hundred yards away in Upper-street, Islington. One piano is kept in the front room ready to show to possible purchasers, while four others are stocked in a back room. They are all brand new, all bear the name of "Henry Lender & Co.," and all are of the usual showy, badly-finished type. The second advertisement emanates from a small newspaper shop, whence reference is made to 2, Stockwell Park-road. The lady in difficulties, who descants upon the qualities of the instrument admits that seventy guineas is only the "list" price, but declares that she paid forty-five guineas cash for the instrument. The maker's name is given as "Hoffmann," but no address is attached. The piano referred to in the third advertisement is housed in a small dwelling let out in tenements. The instrument is of precisely the same type as the others. Thirty guineas is mentioned as the price paid for it in September last, and the maker's name appears as "Bansall & Sons," London.

It is obvious from the frequency of the appearance of these and similar advertisements, that the business is a profitable one. It is equally obvious that it is founded upon gross misrepresentations. Of course, no one with any knowledge of what constitutes a good instrument would be deceived by the trick; but there are an unlimited number of people who, considering their homes are incomplete without the inevitable piano, are prepared to become easy victims to the device. One point I should still like to see cleared up. All the pianos bear the strongest family resemblance, and the names of the reputed makers, Warner & Co., Hoffmann, and Bansall & Sons, are not to be found amongst the list of pianoforte manufacturers in the current London directory. I have a shrewd suspicion that they all come from one factory. It is in regard to the identity of the manufacturer that I should like to be enlightened. The agents who undertake to distribute his shoddy stuff are, after all, culpable only in a minor degree. The manufacturer who deliberately sets himself to perpetrate an extensive fraud upon the ignorant, deserves a wider publicity than, unfortunately, I am at present in a position to give him.

Talking of shoddy pianos, here is an experience which may serve as a warning to others besides those who purchase bogus second-hand instruments through trick advertisements in the newspapers. In a suburban drawing-room, the common accident recently occurred of one of the piano shades catching light, and falling on to the keys. Almost as soon as the burning paper touched the keys there was a small explosion, followed by the burning up of a large portion of the keyboard. This I take to be due to the use of celluloid, or some other substitute for ivory. Considering how often one sees piano candle-shades on fire, purchasers of pianos would certainly do well to ascertain what the keys are made of.

I hear that a Roman Catholic priest, or some one purporting to be such, has recently been collecting a good deal of money in some parts of Ireland for an orphanage in London, which, when questioned, he has stated to be situated at Battersea. He recently paid a visit to Newtownards, where he collected a considerable sum. He gave no receipts for the money collected, and when on one occasion asked to give his name to a gentleman who proposed to send some money after him, he declined to do so. When coupled with the fact that no institution in the nature of a Roman Catholic orphanage appears to exist at Battersea, these circumstances are somewhat suspicious. I would recommend any one visited by this priest to obtain full particulars respecting the charity before contributing, and if the collector can be induced to give his own name, I should be glad to have it, together with a description of his personal appearance.

Some person or persons, styling themselves the Memorial Publishing Company, and occupying a room on the second floor at No. 6, Bouverie-street, are at the present time attempting to establish a business, which, if successful, would add a new terror to death. The "company" is appointing agents to hawk from door to door "The Dove Memorial," wherein it is proposed to enshrine, in a gilt frame and on highly-finished cardboard paper, the names and memories of the deceased members of families. To the agent the cost of a complete memorial is 4s., the retail price to the purchaser is 8s. 6d., and the "company" assure applicants for the agency that they have a number of energetic persons in their employ who are clearing more than £5 a week at the business. How this result is to be accomplished appears from the instructions issued to each agent. He is informed that he should call at each house and thus state his business:—"I am taking a list of deaths that have occurred in this locality during the last ten years, and would like to know if you have lost any of your own family during that time." He should "exercise a little tact, never mentioning sale while collecting the inscriptions." Of course not; that is to come later, when, armed with the gilt-framed atrocity, the agent returns to wheedle the victim into purchasing it. The company argues that this is a permanent business, since "death is certain to us all." There is a slight flaw in this argument, and it is to be hoped that the extinction which awaits us all will soon overtake the Dove Memorial Company.

I have been favoured with some particulars of the National Association of General Railway Clerks, a promising infant which will, I trust, develop into a strong and vigorous trade union. No class of railway employees is in greater need of such an organisation, for, as I incidentally pointed out in some recent articles, none is worse sweated. The vast majority of the clerical staff on railways are miserably underpaid, and they have many substantial grievances in regard to excessive hours of duty, Sunday work, night work, and office accommodation which are not likely to be redressed until they can show a united front to the companies.

To take the question of office accommodation, the conditions under which many of the booking clerks in London and other large towns have to labour are simply disgraceful; work in these small, dark, stuffy, unwholesome, badly-ventilated dens being almost as dangerous to health and life as work in the shunting-yard or on the line. It is all the more necessary that the railway clerks should help themselves, inasmuch as their interests are held to be outside the province of the Railway Department of the Board of Trade. There are 64,000 of them in the United Kingdom, and if they like they can, therefore, form a most powerful combination.

Some one sends me a copy of the last report of the York City and County Banking Company, showing that the shareholders were paid a dividend at the rate of £16 13s. 4d. per cent. per annum, and the officers and clerks presented with a gratuity of 10 per cent. on their salaries. In view of the facts disclosed in a trial at Leeds, two or three months since, I should think this gratuity to the managers and clerks—the first that has been forthcoming for eight or ten years—must have been given as a sort of conscience money for the payment of miserably inadequate salaries. At that trial it transpired that a man who had been in the service of the company for twenty-one years, and who held the important position of manager of the Leeds branch of the bank, received the munificent salary of £200 a year. The salaries paid to younger members of the staff, occupying less responsible positions, are said to be in proportion to this, so that the company must be almost as bad a sweater as any of those which I pilloried in my recent articles on the treatment of bank clerks.

THE DEATH AND BURIAL OF L.C.C. ROBIN.

(BY A PROGRESSIVE POET.)

Who'll kill Cock Robin?
I, said the "Markis,"
I'm willin' as Barkis:
I'll kill Cock Robin.

Who'll tear him in pieces?
We, said the Unionists:
We'll be disunionists,
We'll tear him in pieces.

Who'll see him die?
I, said The Spy,
With my "single eye,"
I'll see him die.

Who'll be chief mourner?
I, said the Dook,
With candle and book,
I'll be chief mourner.

Who'll dig his grave?
I, said Lord On-slow;
I'll see him—below,
I'll dig his grave.

Who'll bear the pall?
I, said Lord Halsbury—
I and Lord Salisbury—
We'll bear the pall.

Who'll toll the bell?
I, said A. Balfour
Just give me one half-hour!
I'll toll the bell.

Who found him alive?
We, said the Tories
(Confound your false stories!)
We found him alive!

The electors of London have shown more common sense than I was disposed to give them credit for. At the last General Election the London constituencies returned fifty-one Unionist members to Parliament, against eight Radicals. Notwithstanding every effort to persuade them to vote again solely as Unionists, and notwithstanding Mr Chamberlain's final declaration that the question they had to vote upon was the foreign and home policy of the Government, they have returned to the County Council sixty-eight Progressives against forty-eight of th Moderates, who have preferred to run as Unionists.

I do not suppose, nor will any dispassionate observer, that this indicates the readiness of London to return a Liberal or Radical majority at a Parliamentary election, if it took place now. What it means is that the electors decline to be guided by ordinary party politics in voting on municipal questions, and that in municipal questions they have the sense to see that the only chance of improving the government of London, and bringing it into line with that of the great provincial municipalities, is to vote the Progressive ticket. So many efforts have been made to confuse the issue, and to mislead the electors as to the true nature of the Progressive policy, that I for one should not have been surprised had the Moderates got a majority; and I am proportionately pleased that they have failed.

It is amusing to see the wisdom which the Metropolitan Unionists have learnt—after the event. The Times, which has been foremost in denouncing the "fads," "rash enterprises," and "socialistic tendency" of the Progressive Party, and in appealing to Unionists to save London from the dangers with which it is threatened, discovered on Friday morning that "many Unionists and Conservatives are at the same time far from satisfied at much that they encounter in their domestic affairs," and that "gas and water companies do not command the affections of all who prefer to see a Unionist Government in power." These views were obviously expounded for the purpose of showing that the vote of London on Thursday was not directed against the Government. But how much better it would have been for Unionism had the truth been discovered before the Parliamentary machinery was placed at the disposal of Lord Onslow and his friends! Seldom have the managers of that Party committed a mere egregious blunder. It was not likely that the Unionist machinery would give better results in 1898 than it did in 1895, when the tide of Conservative reaction was at full flood. How, under these circumstances, an ordinarily intelligent politician like Mr. Chamberlain could have gone out of his way to identify Unionism with such a policy of feeble ineptitude as that of the Moderates on the County Council I am at a loss to understand. However, they have taken this course, and they must stand the consequences.

While one line of argument represented the Moderate Party on the County Council as the chief bulwark of the Constitution and the Empire, another upheld it as the only safeguard against the conquest of London by the Socialists. Those who have taken this line have even more cause than the mere Unionist party politicians to stand aghast at the result. Foremost among them is the Editor of the Globe. In his frenzy, this strange journalist last week called upon the Government to make its promised Bill stronger than ever, in order to limit the powers of mischief that a Progressive majority on the County Council may possess. Judging from internal evidence, I take this article to have been written by our old friend George Brooks. The idea of the Globe, I suppose, is that Kensington, Marylebone, Westminster, and a few other equally Moderate constituencies, should be formed into Cities of Refuge, in which the elect may take refuge from the advancing flood. Each will have, I take it, not only its own Mayor, Corporation, water supply, fire brigade, and main drainage system, but its own police, and its own army. And each stronghold will doubtless be surrounded by a wall and fortifications, behind which the Moderate inhabitants will be prepared to die in defence of their sacred monopolies and privileges.

The cry of "Socialism" on the part of some of the Tory Party, whether at municipal or political elections, is uncommonly like the shepherd boy's cry of "wolf!" and, if it is repeated much oftener, the day is probably not distant when those who raised the cry will find themselves in the wolf's jaws. From the point of view of those who are opposed to Socialism, can anything be more mischievous than that a number of prophets, with the Editor of the Times among them, should go about preaching that the acquisition of public works and the discharge of public services by municipalities is Socialism? If this cry is well-founded, then the obvious answer is that as all the great towns in the Empire, including those most Conservative in their politics, are already governed, and governed successfully, on Socialistic principles, there cannot be very much in Socialism to be afraid of. What makes this cry the more offensive is that while Socialism is denounced in the interest of the Moderates, they owe at least one of their seats on the new County Council to the candidature of a Socialist, while evidence has been published during the last week showing that Socialist candidates at the Election were offered money from Tory sources.

I heard a good story of one of the candidates for the London County Council. The constituency which he sought to represent contained a good many electors of sporting proclivities, and in addressing them he dilated on his great interest in sport. A voice: "What have you backed for the Waterloo Cup?" The candidate: "Although I love sport, I never myself bet on horse races."

The following document (type-written) has been handed to me by one to whom it has been addressed. In order to relieve "Radical Socialist papers"—of which, I suppose, Truth is one—of the charge of concealing the truth about Brooks's financial position, I hasten to publish it:—

148, Old-street, E.C.,
February 27, 1898.

My Lord,—The Radical Socialist papers are saying that I have got a generous response from the Moderates to my appeal for financial help because I have published a 48-page pamphlet on good paper. Indeed, it is common talk among the Progressives that I have been subsidised by somebody to a fabulous extent.

You will know it is true I have published the document, for I sent you a copy; but I regret to say it is not true that I have got a generous response from the Moderates. Nor did I expect such help from the Moderates as a party. My faith is in individuals.

I regret to say that I have had to borrow £20 to enable me to get out this pamphlet, and this I wish to pay back, as well as a further £15 to the printer.

I believe you are one of those who, like Sir Theodore Martin, recognise that such work requires to be aided, and, also like Sir Theodore, that a good return for such aid is received in the work done; though it is only men of generous public spirit who can take this view, and these are not common.

One thing ever to be borne in mind is, as I have shown in this manifesto, that the triumph of confiscatory doctrines would be even more disastrous to small property owners than to large ones.

Time is short, needs urgent, and work cries out to be done. It can be done, and effectively, but not without means. Will you assist?—I beg to remain, my lord, your obedient servant,

George Brooks.

P.S. I had 100 copies of the pamphlet given away at Mr. Lowther's Battersea meeting, 240 copies at the Duke of Norfolk's Lambeth Baths meeting, 240 at Mr. Long's New Cross meeting, 250 at Mr. Balfour's Stepney meeting, and 250 at Sir M. W. Ridley's Holloway meeting, and I shall have 500 given away at the Duke of Norfolk's Hackney meeting on Monday. Altogether I am distributing 2,500 copies of this publication, and each one will probably influence ten people. Such work is both laborious and expensive, as you know.

Of course it is the policy of the Progressives to persuade people that I have received more funds than I need, and more than I ought to have—which, according to their view, is—Nothing. But the literal fact is that I require £35 simply to square accounts in relation to this London County Council effort.—G. B.

Not only have the Moderates failed to support Brooks financially, but they have washed their hands of him politically, for since the above appeal was penned the London Municipal Society has publicly repudiated Brooks, and I understand that Brooks has retorted by repudiating the Municipal Society. The ingratitude of these Moderates is sad from a moral point of view, but it speaks better for their intelligence than anything that has happened during the elections. Until I read Brooks's P.S. I was not aware that it is one point in the Progressive programme that Brooks should have—nothing. But if it is, then the Moderates were certainly wise, for once, not to join issue on that particular question. Their ship contained quite enough Jonahs without adding George Brooks to the number. I suppose Brooks has some vague idea that if the Moderates had won he would have had another grant. But clearly this sort of thing must be left in future to "men of generous public spirit"—especially that large and intelligent section of them who forward Brooks's appeals to Truth office as soon as they receive them.

A report recently drawn up by Mr. Gomme, the statistical officer of the London County Council, supplies some remarkable evidence of the way in which railway companies habitually thrust aside the rights of the public for the benefit of their shareholders. In 1883 Parliament passed the Cheap Trains Act, which, among other things, made it obligatory on all railway companies to provide "sufficient workmen's trains;" and as a pecuniary equivalent for this and other obligations that might cause additional expense or loss of revenue, certain remissions and reductions of the five per cent. passenger duty were granted. By these remissions and reductions the Great Western Company has benefited to the extent of about £64,000 per annum, yet ten years elapsed before it began to run a single workmen's train on its metropolitan and suburban lines, and at the present time it only runs two such trains. Only two such trains are run by the Midland Company, which nets £53,000 per annum under the Act.

The workmen's services on these two lines are notoriously inadequate; but it is easy to see how it has come about that the Companies pocket the money without giving the quid pro quo for which it is paid. The Act leaves it to the Board of Trade to decide what workmen's trains are sufficient, and before the Board will put the Act in force it requires the working men interested first of all to get up and present a memorial, and then to prepare and present evidence in support of their case at a public inquiry, and possibly again on an appeal to the Railway Commission. In other words, working men, without the time, money, or organisation for such a purpose, "are required, alone and unaided, to fight their claims to statutory rights against powerful Companies having unlimited command of expert help and financial resources." The County Council at present possesses no power to submit a case to the Board of Trade for putting in force the provisions of the Act, no matter how gross the default of the Railway Company may be. Just before its demise, the last Council resolved to seek this power; and if the present body proceeds with the application, its bitterest opponents will hardly, I should think, care to oppose it.

If you want to entirely Furnish your House or select any article of Furniture or Carpet, &c., send for Hewetsons' Illustrated Priced Catalogue.—Hewetsons, Tottenham Court-road, London.

On Monday, all the evening papers announced that there was a scare in the City, and Consols dropped one-half per cent. Since the present Government came into office there have been rumours of war here, there, and everywhere. One day it is Venezuela, another the United States, another India, another Germany, another France, another the Transvaal. This wondrous Unionist Ministry seems never satisfied unless it is quarrelling with somebody about something. The quarrel generally ends in their knocking some negroes about the head to show how terrible they are when really aroused. But one of these days they will find that they have gone too far in bully and bluster, and to the delight of Mr. Chamberlain, but to the dismay of his colleagues, they will find that they are faced with a war against one or more of the Great Powers.

Lord Salisbury has the influenza. May he soon entirely recover his strength, and use it to keep the Colonial Office in order! When the cat is away, the mice, and other rodents, play. A Commission is sitting in Paris to delimit the frontier between the French and English hinterland. In the meanwhile Frenchmen and Englishmen, or rather, negroes under French and English officials, are occupying villages in the disputed strip of territory, and basing their respective claims upon the priority of treaties with the village headmen. Under these circumstances, both Lord Salisbury and M. Hanotaux have weighed every word they have said in connection with this Central African tangle. Not so Mr. Chamberlain. He rushed down to the House of Commons with a telegram that he had received from an English official, reporting a rumour that a French force had entered the Sokoto Empire, which belongs to us. Lord Salisbury more wisely inquired about the matter of M. Hanotaux, who replied that he did not believe the news to be true; that the French Colonial Minister assured him that there were no French troops in that region, and that if anything of the kind had occurred, it would have been done against the instructions of the French Government.

But what do the newspapers now tell us? That the Royal Niger Company's forces are on their march to Sokoto to resist a French invasion, and that the Agent-General of the Company is awaiting orders with ammunition and stores to expel the French from "British territory." Thank Heaven there is no French Chamberlain at the head of the French Colonial Ministry, for if this were so, the French and the English Chamberlains would unquestionably drag us into war, notwithstanding the efforts of the Ministers of Foreign Affairs of the two countries to restrain them.

Now that the elections for the London County Council have gone against the Unionists, and that Mr. Chamberlain has failed to force on London his views of what is best for it, we may depend upon it that he will seek to efface this defeat by doing something abroad to thoroughly establish himself in the good graces of the howling crew of Jingoes, whose High Priest he is anxious to remain. Rather than that his position should be shaken, or that anything should occur to weaken his chance of becoming the Premier of a Tory Government, he would drag us into war to-morrow. As it is, his tone towards the French is that which he adopts to the Liberal-Unionists of Birmingham, and he seems to be under the impression that he can bully the Great Powers of Europe as easily as he finds it to be to bully into submission the latter.

We have recognised that Russia is justly entitled to have a port free from ice as the Eastern terminus of her Siberian Railway, and Lord Salisbury has given an assurance to this effect. Such a port can only be found in Manchuria, and it is obvious that if Russia has the port, the railway must be built to it through Manchuria. I do not therefore see why we should complain of Russia demanding of China that she shall be placed in the same position as regards Port Arthur as Germany has been in regard to Kiao-Chau. Our treaties with China, which involve free trade in all the dominions of China, include Manchuria. Russia does not contest this, and assuredly it is time enough for us to quarrel with her when she does. If the right to build the railway and the right to have a port involves Manchuria becoming Russian rather than Chinese, we have debarred ourselves from raising this House-that-Jack-built argument by the spontaneous assurances in regard to the occupation of a port given by Lord Salisbury.

"FOR THE FLAG."

[Mr. Balfour said no one doubted the loyalty of Wales, but the question of altering the Royal Standard was a very serious one; and if the Welsh dragon were added there were many other of her Majesty's dominions besides Wales that would require consideration.—Parliamentary Intelligence.]

Quite so; if we a dragon add to leopard and to lion,
Other dependencies, be sure, in turn will have a try on.
From Canada they may request room for a beaver, too;
Australia may with reason ask, "Why not a kangaroo?"
India may urge us on the flag an elephant to place,
The Cape may for an antelope befittingly seek space;
Whilst Colonies we need not name would think it only fair
To add a tiger and a boa, a camel and a bear!
In short, if all should get their way for patriotism's sake,
They'd of our Royal Standard soon a small menagerie make!

B

SCRUTATOR.

EXIT HESS.

ON Wednesday last week the evening papers conveyed to me the intelligence that Mr. Hess had withdrawn his action against me for libel, because he had been informed by his solicitors in the Transvaal that documents, indispensable for his case, had been stolen or illegally removed from the archives of the Johannesburg Court. The next day I received a copy of the following letter, which Sir George Lewis had written to the solicitors of Mr. Hess in London, in reply to a communication from them announcing the withdrawal :—

Ely Place, Holborn,
March 2, 1898.

LABOUCHERE ats HESS.

DEAR SIRS,—We are in receipt of your letter of the 1st inst., in which you purport to give the reason for Mr. Hess abandoning the action for libel brought by him against Mr. Labouchere. In withdrawing the action it became necessary to throw a veil over the act, but the true reason for taking this step is obvious, viz., that Mr. Hess will not go into the witness-box and deny the serious statements which Mr. Labouchere has made against him.

Mr. Labouchere stated that Mr. Hess had been guilty of fraud, perjury, cheating the creditors of one Goodman, and other most discreditable and dishonourable conduct, and supported his statements by publishing a letter written by Mr. Hess in which he admitted that he had committed perjury, and had committed the frauds in question. Mr. Hess thereupon, with a great flourish of trumpets in the papers, brought this action, claiming £10,000 damages for what was no doubt a most shocking libel if it was not true.

Mr. Labouchere wished to give Mr. Hess the earliest opportunity of going into the witness-box and being placed face to face with his own letters and false affidavits confirming his own statement that he had been guilty of perjury. He therefore at once put in his defence that the libel was true in all respects. He then delivered interrogatories to Mr. Hess (as is usual under such circumstances) compelling him to say whether the letters and other documents were written by him and whether he had been guilty of the dishonourable acts set forth in the libel. Inspection of the letters and documents was given personally to Mr. Hess upon two occasions at our office, and four photographs of each document furnished to you. We should have thought Mr. Hess would have hastened to deny that the letters and documents were in his handwriting, but up to this day he has not answered the interrogatories, notwithstanding our notice that an application would be made for a writ of attachment against him for non-obedience of the order of the Court, and that a summons has been served for this purpose.

You have availed yourselves of every possible delay to enter this action for trial, but directly Mr. Labouchere was in a position to do so, he entered it for trial himself, and it is at this juncture, when this summons for attachment is issued, when the case is entered for trial, and when the only escape for Mr. Hess is to abandon the action, he discontinues it, and so deprives Mr. Labouchere of the opportunity of establishing the truth of every statement he has made about Mr. Hess.

Under these circumstances, it is idle for Mr. Hess to pretend that he abandons the action because he alleges there were documents in the Court of Johannesburg which are not now on the files of the Court. If Mr. Hess is guilty of the conduct which Mr. Labouchere has charged him with, it is not difficult for him to invent one extra falsehood, which he does by the statement he instructs you to make with regard to the alleged abstraction of documents. We believe Mr. Hollard to be a thoroughly honourable man, and the imputation made by Mr. Hess against him is wholly indefensible and only made for the purpose of covering his retreat.

We think no intelligent person can fail to see that Mr. Hess, in his own interests, has thought discretion the better part of valour.

We will in due course forward you the costs which Mr. Hess has to pay to Mr. Labouchere.

Yours faithfully,
LEWIS & LEWIS.

Messrs. GUEDALLA & CROSS.

As my readers may possibly not remember fully the exact circumstances under which Mr. Hess commenced the action now abandoned, I give below the statement of claim which he delivered :—

STATEMENT OF CLAIM.

1. The defendant is the editor, proprietor, and publisher of a newspaper called TRUTH, circulating in the United Kingdom, and the British Colonies.

The plaintiff is the proprietor and editor of a newspaper called the African Critic.

2 In the issue of the aforesaid newspaper called TRUTH, dated November 4, 1897, the defendant falsely and maliciously wrote, printed, and published, of and concerning the plaintiff, a false and malicious libel in the words and figures following, that is to say :—

"A DOCUMENT FROM JOHANNESBURG.

"In an article that I wrote two or three weeks back in reference to certain attacks made on me by a South African editor named Henry Hess, I stated that I knew nothing of his antecedents. Last week, however, certain documents relating to that individual were submitted to me by the kindness of the authorities of the Transvaal Republic from the archives of one of the Johannesburg Courts. In view of the rôle which Hess has assumed in London it seems to me that certain facts established by these documents should be made known in order that the English public and the newspaper world (of which he aspires to become an ornament) should know clearly what manner of man we have among us. The manner in which the documents were brought to my notice precludes all doubt as to their authenticity. The most instructive among them is the following letter in Hess's handwriting :—

"Hess & Hess — No. 6, Union Buildings.
"Henry Hess — (Opposite Rand Club.)
"Attorney-at-Law and
"Notary Public of the Supreme Court, — Johannesburg, S.A.R.
"Cape Colony.
"P.O. Box, No. 236. Telegraphic Address : 'Law.'

"November 17, 1890.

"DEAR GOODMAN,—I have just wired you that the mistake has been discovered, that it was entirely an accident, and that, having handed the money to Fineston and also the bill, I await your apologies. The mistake arose in this way. Instead of cashing Ferguson's cheques, he placed them to my credit, and drew out a cheque for £400 instead of one for £500. Out of the £400 he paid your ticket, £7 10s., and bank commission 10s., which should have left £392 due to you ; before placing this in envelope he, instead of paying some monies for me amounting to £12 10s. out of my own funds, took it from yours, and forgot to replace it.

"The matter therefore stands :—

You received in cash	£379	10	0
Ticket	7	10	0
(Letter burnt) { mission of Bank	0	10	0
(Letter burnt) { estone	100	0	0
	12	10	0
				£500	0 0

"The bal (letter burnt) of £12 10s. I am keeping or at least meant to keep here, but since this morning I have received affidavits in your case, which I have just answered, and must pay counsel to go into Court with ; there is no doubt about it they want to make you insolvent, or, if possible, arrest you, but this they can't and shan't do while I am here. I have made an affidavit to-day swearing that I held your power, that you were still in this country, and that you never were, nor are, a partner in the Fountain business.

"To judge by your conduct yesterday morning now that you are away safe from these hounds (? bounds) you don't care a damn what becomes of me, left here alone without a penny to face the music. Not a word of thanks did I get from you, not a £5 note over and above my just rights (and not even that), for all I have done for you outside what I was compelled to do as your attorney, talk about trusting me—bah, you wanted as mu (letter burnt) you could get and when you had it you (letter burnt) care a damn what became of me (letter burnt), matter of a pure accident cropped (letter burnt) you were the first one to suspect me of dishonesty, Finestone didn't, and I have no claim on his regard. Never mind, I have learnt enough now ; of the whole crowd of us there is no one left. I thought you were better than Charlie Smith or Jim Parker, but I am mistaken it seems. If you had offered me £250 out of your haul of £850 it would not have repaid me for the sleepless nights and anxious time I have had on your account ever since first I did business for you. For your sake I have committed perjury, I whom you thought a thief, and if I can manage to scrape a little money together (my own hard earnings) I shall have to flee the country all for your sake, you who have money and are safe, I who am poor and can to-morrow be arrested. I don't beg anything of you, I am too proud (letter burnt) that ; I want what is my due.

"I sup (letter burnt) it is no good my telling you what your obvious duty is towards me, as I regret to say that your late actions show you perfectly bereft of any sense of duty ; you should see me clear out of this and with the money you have gained out of my exertions (as you admitted you would have taken £600 had I advised it, and I could have easily been squared by F.). I cannot stay here if once your share in this business comes out, and must try to make a fresh start elsewhere all on your account. I leave this matter to you now ; whichever way you decide I shall still as long as I am able do your work for you, but I should be sorry, if any harm befell me, to see you reproach yourself as being the cause of it—that is why I have written to you in this strain.

BEXHILL-ON-SEA.—The Mentone of England.—THE SACKVILLE HOTEL, an ideal winter and spring residence. Special inclusive terms till Easter. For tariff, &c., apply to Manager.

"Please destroy this letter when read.

"Yours anxiously,

"Henry.

"The occasional blanks in this document are due to the fact that it has gone through certain curious adventures, into the history of which there is no occasion to enter at present, and has thereby been slightly burnt in one or two places. Enough, however, remains to enable its purport to be clearly appreciated. Now, what is its purport?

"The writer is the aforesaid Henry Hess. The person to whom the letter was written was a man named Goodman. The circumstances under which Hess wrote the letter were these:—Hess was a qualified attorney of the Cape Colony, but had not passed the examination necessary in order to qualify him for practice in the Transvaal. He was, however, at the time of the above letter, in business as a lawyer at Johannesburg, employing a qualified solicitor to do such business as he was not legally competent to undertake himself. Goodman, to whom the above letter is written, was one of his clients. For some time before the letter was written Goodman had been seriously embarrassed, and had several judgments out against him. The only tangible asset he had was a third share in an hotel and restaurant called "The Fountain" at Pretoria. In order to protect this asset from his creditors he transferred it to Hess, and Hess undertook to sell it for him. Hess accordingly arranged with one of Goodman's partners to buy it for £850 The bargain was carried out, and the purchase-money was paid to Hess in cheques for £550 and a promissory note for £300. It was then arranged that Goodman should depart from the Transvaal with the money thus realised, leaving his creditors unpaid. On the eve of his departure Goodman went to Hess for the money. Hess handed him a portion only of the amount—apparently the £379 10s. mentioned in the little account given in the above letter. He made some excuse for not handing over the balance, but Goodman was so inconsiderate as to decline to start until he had some security that he would get the money. An arrangement was consequently made that the balance should be paid by Hess next day to a mutual friend named Finestone, who was to receive the money on Goodman's behalf and forward it to him. On this understanding Goodman left Johannesburg for Natal on the following morning by the five o'clock coach.

"His departure in some mysterious manner at once became known, and one or other of the creditors within a day or two obtained an order sequestrating his estate, the equivalent apparently of our adjudication in bankruptcy. Hess had, on the day of Goodman's departure, paid over the balance of the £850 to Finestone, in accordance with the arrangement arrived at on the previous evening. Within a few days, however, he asked Finestone to return him the money. This, Finestone naturally refused to do. On this Hess obtained from the Court an order directing Finestone to return the money to him, which Finestone then did. The order of the Court for this purpose was made on a sworn statement by Hess, that the money belonged to him, and had been handed to Finestone as a loan to Goodman. Hess thus recovered possession of the whole balance of the purchase money beyond the amount which had been paid to Goodman; and it may be added that, having recovered it, he retained possession of it, and neither the creditors nor Goodman ever got it.

"These facts will enable the reader to perceive the full significance of the letter set out above. Goodman had absconded from Johannesburg on November 16 in order to defeat his creditors. Hess writes this letter to the absconding bankrupt on the following day. It clearly indicates the position of affairs between this worthy pair. In the first paragraph, Hess offers an explanation of his failure to pay over the whole of the money before Goodman's departure, and awaits his absconding friend's apologies. From this and what follows, it is evident that Goodman had, at their last interview, made no secret of his distrust of his attorney. Hess now replies by reproaching Goodman with ingratitude, and formulates his claim on the absconding fraudulent debtor for a share in the 'haul.' He does not beg, he is too proud; he merely puts it on the footing of his 'just rights' as a participator in the conspiracy by which Goodman's creditors had been robbed of the money. He has committed perjury, and rendered himself liable to be arrested to-morrow. As soon as he can scrape a little money together he will have to flee the country and start afresh. He has even so far sacrificed himself as to abstain from being 'squared by F.,'—apparently Mr. Ferguson, Goodman's partner, to whom he (Hess) had sold Goodman's shares in the Fountain. He estimates that all these labours and sacrifices would not have been underpaid at £250 out of the 'haul of £850.' and, while scorning to beg, he leaves Goodman to do his 'obvious duty.' He does not say in so many words that there should be honour among thieves, but that is the general tenour of his communication.

"It seems probable that Goodman was not unduly impressed with the self-sacrifice of his disinterested friend. He had had to go away leaving the larger half of the 'haul' at Hess's disposal—Hess having kindly (as appears from the letter) procured the ticket to facilitate his departure—and he may have felt doubtful about the chances of ever seeing the balance of the money of which his creditors had been defrauded by the pair. What reply he made to Hess's plaintive upbraiding does not appear; possibly he made none. But what the disinterested Hess did next is clear enough by the light of the official documents from the Transvaal Court. Not being satisfied about the effect of his appeal to the absconding bankrupt, he forthwith took steps to recover possession of all that he had left behind him. He had, according to his own modest statement, already committed perjury for Goodman's sake: and had rendered himself liable to arrest at any moment. On the principle, presumably, that one may as well be hanged for a sheep as a lamb, he proceeded to perform a further masterpiece of perjury on his own account. By this means he got possession of the rest of the money that was to have been sent to Goodman through Finestone, and defrauded the creditors of all that the absconding bankrupt had left behind him.

"There are other facts, prior to Goodman's departure and subsequent to it, equally illustrative of Hess's character. To go into the whole story of sordid knavery would be waste of time. It is sufficient, and more than sufficient, to leave Hess to the public judgment as he stands revealed by his own letter and the circumstances surrounding it—a swindling attorney, first engaged in a conspiracy to enable an insolvent debtor to cheat his creditors, then appealing to his fellow conspirator to reward him for his perjury with a share of the spoil, and finally resorting to further perjury in order to rob the creditors on his own account. The man is shown by his own letter to be a rogue of the dirtiest type, sticking at no villainy in order to put a few pounds into his own pocket, even at the expense of an accomplice."

The plaintiff claims £10,000 damages.

Place of trial, Middlesex.

C. F. Gill.

Such were the grounds on which Mr. Hess commenced his action against me. In order to succeed in his action, he had to prove that the letter reprinted in the article was never written by him to Goodman, but was a forgery, and that the transactions between himself and Goodman, referred to in that letter, and evidenced by various affidavits and other legal documents in my possession, never, in fact, took place, or could be satisfactorily explained away. Even before his action was commenced, he had ostentatiously proclaimed his ability to do all this, and, if he was really innocent, it should have been a simple matter. On the publication of the Truth article he had at once informed a newspaper correspondent who interviewed him that the letter to Goodman published in the article was a forgery, and that it had been proved to be such in certain proceedings at Johannesburg, when, as he asserted, he had been tried and acquitted of charges identical with those put forward in Truth. With characteristic braggadocio, he added that I had given him the whip-hand over me, and to show that he meant to use the whip-hand he intimated that the only question in his mind was whether he should take criminal or civil proceedings upon the Truth article. To assist him in deciding this point, my solicitors wrote to his, intimating that as a criminal prosecution would expedite the settlement of the question, they would offer no opposition to an application for leave to institute such proceedings. The proposal was declined, and Hess delivered the statement of claim set out above, laying his damages at £10,000—a fact which was also paraded in the Press.

Now, had Mr. Hess and his advisers so desired, the action thus commenced might have been by this time ready and waiting for trial. My defence, justifying the alleged libel in every particular, was delivered at the earliest possible moment. Mr. Hess and his solicitor at once had inspection of all the original documents in my possession. Then followed the delivery of interrogatories on my part, designed chiefly to ascertain whether he admitted or denied the genuineness of the documents, and what was his explanation of the transactions with Goodman described in the alleged libel. For the benefit of those inexperienced in the law, it should be explained that such interrogatories have to be answered by affidavit; and as they were in nearly every instance germane to the issue, a false statement in the answer would have exposed the party making it to a prosecution for perjury. In another proceeding which came before the Courts about the same time, Hess incidentally swore that the letter to Goodman, reprinted in the TRUTH article, was a forgery. In that case, however, the genuineness of this particular letter was hardly material to the issue, and it is extremely improbable that Mr. Hess could be successfully prosecuted for perjury on that affidavit, even if his statement were proved to be false. In the present action the position was very different, the genuineness of the letter to Goodman being the principal point at issue. Note then what follows. The interrogatories were delivered on December 14 last. Mr. Hess failed to give his sworn answer to the interrogatories within the appointed time. Sir George Lewis wrote twice to his solicitors calling their attention to the omission, but still the interrogatories remained unanswered. This was a strange attitude for one who had the whip-hand of his antagonist. It became open to me then to apply to have the action dismissed; but as I had no desire to play into Hess's hands by placing him in a position to say that I had got rid of the action on a mere technicality, Sir George Lewis adopted another alternative, and threatened to apply for an attachment against him for disobeying the order of the Court. This produced some shuffling explanation as to Hess being unable to swear his affidavit until he had certain information from Johannesburg, on which ground further indulgence was asked for, and was granted. In the meantime, I became entitled to set the action down for trial on my own account, and did so. Time went on, the interrogatories still remained unanswered, and Sir George Lewis was considering the best means of bringing Mr. Hess up to the scratch, when the notice suddenly came that he had abandoned the action, because certain documents had mysteriously disappeared which were necessary for his case.

Princes' Restaurant, Piccadilly.—The fashionable resort. Finest wines and cuisine only. Table d'hôte luncheon 4s. 6d. Dinners à la carte, Suppers 5s. Mang. Directr., G. Fourault, from Benoist.

There can hardly be a person in England, outside an idiot asylum, who will be imposed upon by this childish and empty excuse. My statements in regard to Mr. Hess stood or fell on his letter to Goodman, in which he himself described the transactions between them up to the date that the letter was written, and on the affidavits subsequently made by him, which carried the story on beyond that date. Either the letter was written by him and the affidavits were sworn by him, or they were not. No books kept by him, no other documents produced by him, could destroy the damning character of the letter and of the affidavits if they were genuine. The only possible defence was a denial of their authenticity. That denial, although he has given it defiantly and ostentatiously to Press interviewers, Mr. Hess—"the belligerent Heinrich," as an admirer once fondly styled him—has flatly refused to give when faced with the necessity of giving it on oath. What these missing documents were, in the absence of which he could not swear his affidavit, he makes not an attempt to explain. In what way they could dispose of his letter to Goodman, his own affidavits in the bankruptcy proceedings, and the other documents from the Johannesburg Court, he leaves in equal darkness. He was specifically asked in the interrogatories whether the letter signed "Henry" was in his handwriting, and whether the other documents shown to him by Sir George Lewis were in his handwriting. What documents could he possibly require to enable him to answer these questions—the vital questions in the whole case? If there were further questions asked him in regard to his dealings with Goodman, which he could only answer by reference to his books, and if these books, as he says, were impounded by the Transvaal Court, and he had failed to obtain copies of them, he might have given this as his reason for not answering them, or have asked for time to obtain copies of these books, which no doubt would have been granted him by the Court. If in the end he could show, what he now vaguely asserts, that any documents which would have put a different complexion on his letter and affidavits had disappeared from the archives of the Johannesburg Court, and that he could neither obtain sight of them nor certified copies of them—facts which require a good deal more proof than his unsupported assertion — this circumstance, established by proper evidence, would have told much more in his favour than against him. In putting forward, utterly without proof, the story about the abstraction of documents as a reason for declining to swear to his own innocence, and to come into court in support of his oath, it would really seem that he is under the impression that this country is inhabited by such a race of dolts that any absurdity which he trumps up is sufficient to hoodwink them.

The true reason for his retreat is so obvious that it hardly needs to be stated. Mr. Hess was in a hopeless dilemma. In a recent action in England he had sworn that his letter to Goodman was a forgery, although, as explained above, it was doubtful from the circumstances of that case whether he had thereby exposed himself to conviction for perjury, even if the statement were false. If, however, in his action against me he had denied the authenticity of the letter, he exposed himself to the certainty of conviction for perjury if a jury once found the letter to be genuine. On the other hand, if he admitted the authenticity of the letter, he was denying his own previous sworn statement, and at the same time establishing the truth of all my charges against him. Hence the delay in answering the interrogatories, and hence the ignominious withdrawal of the action commenced with such a flourish of trumpets last November. It cannot be supposed that he took this decision without knowing the disastrous consequences to himself. He cannot have expected seriously that the transparent subterfuges by which he has sought to mask his retreat would impose upon any intelligent being. He must have foreseen that his withdrawal will be accepted as a confession of guilt, and that it means ruin to him in England. But he has deliberately accepted this alternative rather than face the consequences of swearing on affidavit the nature of his defence, and going into court in support of his sworn statement. Disastrous though the consequences of his retreat must be to him, I think he has chosen wisely.

There is one other point put forward by his solicitors, and also by himself, on which I ought, perhaps, to say a word. It is the familiar chose jugée argument. In the Transvaal, as in all countries where the Roman law is the basis of jurisprudence, one individual cannot directly prosecute another criminally. If he wishes to do so he has to show cause for the prosecution to the Public Prosecutor. Should the latter consider that there is primâ facie ground for a trial, he undertakes the prosecution at the instance of the complainant. This is what occurred in respect to the prosecution of Hess at Johannesburg. The evidence produced at the trial showed clearly that Goodman and Hess had jointly swindled certain third parties, and that Hess had swindled Goodman out of the lion's share of the proceeds of this joint robbery. The jury, perceiving presumably that the issue was one raised by one thief against another, declined to convict. I can understand the feeling that actuated the jury, but I was and am prepared to prove that their verdict, so far as the question of Hess's guilt or innocence was concerned, was a miscarriage of justice. The authenticity of the letter of Hess to Goodman, and of the affidavits sworn to by Hess in respect to his proceedings in aiding Goodman to swindle, and then in swindling Goodman, was never for one moment contested at the Johannesburg trial, and at the end of the trial letter and affidavits were impounded by the Court. The more material of these documents have temporarily come into my possession, and I have given a receipt for them. It is idle for Hess to impugn to-day the authenticity of documents which he never disputed at the Johannesburg trial. Equally idle is it for him to take refuge in the plea of chose jugée after having accepted defiantly a challenge to prove his innocence in an English court, and having ignominiously thrown up the sponge when confronted with the original documents and called upon to admit or deny their authenticity on oath. On my side, I have asserted that he was wrongfully acquitted. He undertook to prove the contrary. When he sees that the task is hopeless, and that if he goes on he is in danger of placing himself again within reach of the criminal law, he beats a hasty retreat, and cries that the issue has already been decided in his favour. Of what use is this, except to make his position the more ignominious?

With this I must leave Mr. Hess to the tender mercy of the public. The abortive effort which he has made to vindicate himself proves that I have estimated his character accurately. That an adventurer, with such a record as his, should come over here from Johannesburg, or Frankfort, or wherever it may be, arrogate to himself the character of a new light in English journalism and a law-giver in finance, politics, and morals, and succeed in the attempt, would hardly be flattering to native English journalists, or creditable to the intelligence of the public generally. But, happily, he has failed, and failed with ignominy. He now stands revealed to all the world in his true colours. Let us hope the last has been heard of him.

A POLICY OF SHADOW-GRABBING.

It surpasses my understanding how a sensible, practical nation like this can allow itself to become the victim of one of the silliest crazes that ever affected humanity. In the Far East there is a vast market for the sale of our goods. We have treaties with China that secure to us a fair field and no favour. No Power has ever contemplated forcing China to abrogate them. For a considerable number of years we had a monopoly of this trade, because, as manufacturers of most of the goods that China is prepared to take from Europe, we had no competitors. But now the European Continental Powers are seeking to obtain a share in it. All our efforts should, therefore, be concentrated on holding our own in the Eastern markets; and whether we succeed will depend, not upon the action of our Government, but upon the intelligence and enterprise of our citizens. Instead of this, we allow ourselves to be fooled into a vast expenditure for the purpose of acquiring territory in Africa on the ground that we must open out new markets. In doing this we are dropping the substance to grab the shadow. Europeans cannot colonise the interior of Africa; indeed, they cannot live there. The African never yet has worked for anything beyond his simplest requirements, unless forced to do so. In West Africa, and in East Africa, we have to tolerate slavery in the hope that the inhabitants will be made to produce something wherewith to buy our imports. In South Africa Mr. Rhodes has explained that, so long as Exeter Hall prevents the few white gold hunters there compelling the natives to grub after gold for them, there is no chance of Rhodesia ever paying its way. Practically, therefore, this endeavour to create markets in Africa is based upon slavery, more or less disguised.

But even if slavery be permitted, there is exceedingly little probability of Africa becoming a dumping ground for our goods, because the natives have, and always will have, comparatively little to exchange for them. Take Uganda as an instance. We are told that rice can be grown there. But the country is 700 miles from the seaboard, and from thence to a market there is a long sea voyage. Assuming that this rice were produced in excess of the food supply of the country itself, where would it be sent? We seem to forget that the world is suffering already from excess of production of food supplies, and that export is only profitable from places advantageously situated in regard to market. Cotton, too, we are told, will grow in Uganda. But in the latest official trade Report, it is suggested that we should put up cotton mills in the country to compete with Lancashire. As a matter of fact, the only export at present is ivory, the supply of which is getting less and less each successive year, whilst the value of imports during a year does not amount to £20,000, the greater portion of this being sent for the consumption of European officials in the country. We are building a railroad to connect Uganda with the sea at the cost of many millions, and we have recognised that our Protectorate over it will cost us above £200,000 per annum. Regarded, therefore, as a matter of business, our Protectorate over Uganda has proved a dismal failure. It is now justified on the ground that the possession of Uganda will enable us to become possessed of the district between it and the country ruled over by the Khalifa. But of what practical use this district will be to us no one can explain. I am merely taking Uganda as an instance of our folly, for in the Soudan, in West Africa, and in South Africa it is the same story. The "markets" of Africa are as real as the mirages that tempt the traveller onward in its deserts. It is time that we dropped the shadow-grbbaing policy that sends us in pursuit of them.

BELLIS'S world-famed real TURTLE SOUP, more strengthening than any beef fluid. Glass flacons 7/-, tins, 5/-.—Obtainable everywhere, or direct, postfree. T. K. BELLIS, 6, Jeffrey's-square, London.

We have a strong Navy. I have always been in favour of this, although I believe that we have at present exceeded our requirements in the matter of naval armaments. But our having this strong Navy is made a plea for augmenting our Army. We have this year voted an increase of 23,000 men. We are told that our Army must be sufficiently numerous to enable us to man all our garrisons abroad, to employ permanently some 20,000 men in African grab, to defend these islands, and, in addition to all this, to leave us two Army Corps—i.e., 70,000 men—always at hand to invade and vanquish any Great European Power that may declare war against us. Lord Wolseley has stated that these modest aims cannot be met unless we add, not 23,000 men, but about 70,000 men to our Regular Army. But, even if we did this, we should only have two Army Corps to launch against the world in arms. The Continental Great Powers count their soldiers by millions. Of what use, then, would it be to attack one of them with 70,000 men? If we are to compete with them in the matter of soldiers, we must be prepared to increase our Army, not by 70,000 men, but by 700,000 men. But how is such an Army to be obtained? Voluntary enlistment has already pretty nearly reached its limit. The military authorities tried last year to obtain about 3,000 additional soldiers. They could not get the full number, and many of those that they did get were taken from the Reserve, thus robbing Peter to pay Paul. That the military authorities really believe that they will get an additional 23,000 men, and at the same time obtain the 35,000 recruits that are needed each year to keep up our present establishment, I greatly doubt. They suggest that they possibly may, by giving to soldiers an extra 1½d. per diem, and reducing the period of enlistment, although those who take advantage of the latter are not to profit by the former. Of the 35,000 men obtained, or sought to be obtained, each year, about one third are lads who love adventure for adventure's sake. The extra 1½d. will not augment their numbers. Nor will it increase the number of the others, who go into the Army as a last resource, when they can get no work elsewhere. Englishmen are good fighters when attacked, but they do not take kindly to the discipline involved in a soldier's life. Foreign countries, the inhabitants of which are perhaps more inclined to a military life than Englishmen, are obliged to have recourse to conscription, and if we are not only to outbuild them in ships, but to compete with them in the number of our soldiers, we shall have to fall back on conscription. Is the country prepared for this?

In the first year of the Queen's reign our total expenditure on armaments was about 12½ millions. It is now about 43 millions, exclusive of the Indian Army and of the little armies of mercenaries that the Foreign Office and the Colonial Office are bringing into existence in various parts of our possessions. Even with this expenditure our naval and military amateur experts are not satisfied. They want more. And more they will get, if the taxpayer does not make his voice heard. The country is for the nonce exceptionally prosperous. But fat years are invariably succeeded by lean years. As it is, money cannot be found for many things that would better the condition of our workers at home, and no taxes can be taken off, although the revenue is expanding. What will happen when there is a shrinkage in the revenue? Two things will put an end to our present military craze—one is conscription, the other is the imposition of new taxes. Both are certain to come, and, to my thinking, the sooner that they do come the better, for this will bring home to us our folly. The fear is that we shall be dragged by Mr. Chamberlain and his swashbucklers into some great war before the cure is effected. If we really hold with Mr. Chamberlain that our Empire can only be maintained by perpetual expenditure, it is clear that we soon shall have to expand by means of war. As it is, all the surface of the globe worth having has been seized. We are now annexing what is comparatively valueless. But even this valueless country has its limits, and then to carry out the creed of expansion, we shall have to find some cause of quarrel with one of our neighbours in order to lay hands on what belongs to them.

The country, probably, is more Radical to-day than it was twenty years ago. But Radicalism, as a factor in the political situation, is far weaker than it was then. For this there are many causes; but one of the most important is, that a mania for expansion abroad has diverted attention from Democratic progress at home. A nation in which militarism is predominant may become great, but it ceases to be Democratic. The greatest mistake that the Liberal Party ever made was to seek to out-Jingo the Tories, under the illusion that this might secure to it a majority. It played into the hands of its opponents, and its desertion of its principles only led the electorate to despise it. Until it reverts to its time-honoured principles, and bases its claim for support on its determination to give effect to them, the Tories will remain in power. Since the world began, every man, or set of men, who have sought to stem the advance of Democracy in any country have played the card of a "spirited foreign policy," and so long as they have been able to practise it they have remained the masters of the situation. What are the Radicals at present? A negligible quantity. What ought they to be? The masters of the country and of its destinies. They look on helplessly and hopelessly, whilst politics have become an arena in which two gangs, the one as little truly democratic as the other, dispute for the spoils of office by adopting a policy which not many years ago was confined to the music-halls. When I listen to a debate in the House of Commons, I am reminded of the songs of "Jolly Nash" and of the "Great Vance" that used to be received with rapturous music-hall applause twenty years ago.

THE NEWSPAPER COMPETITION TRICK.

The time seems to have arrived when the proprietors and editors of newspapers ought to give their attention seriously to the growing abuses arising out of the "competitions" run through the medium of their columns. Scarcely a week passes without bringing complaints on this subject from one quarter or another. Sometimes these complaints relate to the manner in which the competition is conducted or the prizes awarded; sometimes they are directed against the nature and form of the competition; and not unfrequently both the character and the management of the competition are impugned. Let me give two recent instances.

A ladies' journal with the seductive title Hearth and Home has lately been offering what are described as "scholarships" for competition among its readers. The noble aim of promoting the higher education of girls makes this a peculiarly striking and attractive offer. The competition is of the simplest form. The scholarship is awarded by the votes of the readers of the paper, each vote being given on a coupon published with each copy of the journal. The names of the candidates are to be written on the coupons, and the coupons forwarded in packets to the Editor. On the principle of allowing a reduction on taking a quantity, an annual subscription to the paper entitles the subscriber to seventy votes, or eighteen more than would be obtained by buying fifty-two copies week by week. The poll remains open for six months, and during that period the names of the candidates, with the number of votes polled for each, are published week by week—obviously for the purpose of stimulating the candidates to renewed efforts. The first prize or "scholarship" is £50, the second £10, and the third £5. The candidates must be under twenty-one years of age, and the money must be spent on education in any line—scholastic, artistic, or technical; but there is no limit to the time within which it must be thus expended, and what security the editor has that it will be expended in that way at all is not revealed. These are the only conditions.

Now, what does this amount to? Any person of average intelligence can see that it is simply an ingenious dodge for selling and advertising the paper, by offering a prize to the girl who buys, or persuades her friends to buy, the largest number of copies, or who succeeds in obtaining the largest number of annual subscribers. Now to advertise a paper and increase its sale are perfectly legitimate objects, as I should be the last to deny, and an ingenious dodge for that purpose need not in itself be open to objection. From the Editor of the Times downwards we are all anxious to increase our sale, and we all have our own favourite dodges, which we hope may lead to that result. But the particular dodge above described is open to many and serious objections. To begin with, the girl with the longest purse, and the largest number of friends with long purses, has evidently the best chance of winning the £50. This consideration at once disposes of the "scholarship" fiction. More than this, the contest may easily resolve itself into a mere blind gamble, conducted on very much the same principles as the game of "poker." In the earlier stages the girl who by a judicious cash investment could put in a big block of votes (at 3d. apiece, or seventy for 15s.) might easily "bluff" all the other competitors, and get the field to herself. Or suppose, failing this, that several competitors are running one another close up to the last week or two. It is then obvious that any one of them has a chance of turning the scale in her favour and securing the £50 by putting in a handsome batch of yearly subscriptions (at 15s. each). Each competitor is under the strongest inducement to bid her highest at the close, more especially if she has already risked her own money in the game. Could a more pernicious form of "competition" possibly be devised?

That this is no exaggerated estimate of the possibilities is shown by the last contest, in which four competitors each secured over 8,000 votes, the winner scoring 8,927 and the second 8,848—a margin of only seventy-nine Had the second girl invested 17s. 6d. (one yearly subscription and ten odd copies) in the last week, she would have won the £50. The language of the Editor's award does very fair justice to the state of the case:—

> After a most exciting finish the winner has been found in Marian Symons, who at the last moment snatched the victory from Sylvia Field. We congratulate Marian Symons most heartily on her victory. At the same time, although Sylvia Field wins the second prize, we feel for her in her disappointment in not winning the race in which for so long a time she was leading. Margaret Spencer is a good third, and she is closely followed by Enid Weeks, and at a longer interval by Sarah Logan and Emily Mosse. These last three have all worked well, and at one time or another each has led, but towards the end their efforts seem to have relaxed. Nevertheless, we congratulate them on the sterling efforts they have made, and sympathise with them in their failure to win outright.

By way of stimulating his young lady readers to further "sterling efforts" in the same direction, the Editor awards two extra £5 prizes to the fourth, fifth, and sixth competitors, and then expresses a pious hope that "candidates who have not been successful in this competition will try again, and not be put off by one failure." Well he may! Let us look at the competition a moment from his point of view. Taking each vote as representing one copy of the paper, here are the cash values of the amount polled by each of the first six competitors:—

	£	s.	d.
No. 1. (£50 prize—8,927 votes)...	111	11	9
No. 2. (£10 prize—8,848 votes)...	110	12	0
No. 3. (£5 prize—8,679 votes)	108	9	9
No. 4. (£5 prize—8,029 votes)	100	7	3
No. 5. (£5 prize—5,527 votes)	69	1	9
No. 6. (£5 prize—4,807 votes)	60	1	9

There are eleven more competitors, whose total votes represent a cash expenditure of £76. 18s. 9d. The total amount of business, therefore, done for the paper by the "scholarship" competition was £637 3s.—a result well worth the modest expenditure of £80 in prizes It is true, of course, that the amount of cash expended may have been somewhat less than this, owing to the extra votes given for a yearly subscription. But as against this, it must be remembered that a yearly subscription is worth more to a newspaper proprietor than the sale of fifty-two separate copies of his paper through newsagents, who take a substantial share of the profits on the ordinary sales, so that the larger the proportion of the £637 taken in yearly subscriptions, the larger would be the percentage of profit on the turnover. In order to do this amount of business for the paper, it is evident that each of the six first girls on the list must have been cadging away mercilessly among all her friends and acquaintance for six months, even if she did not invest a substantial sum on her own account. The friends and acquaintance have, no doubt, paid their money largely in the hope of getting the canvasser her £50 scholarship. In the case of the one girl who has secured the £50, £111 odd has been expended for the purpose; and this is the best case of the lot. In the worst case (No. 3), no less than £108 has been expended to obtain a £5 prize. Looking at all these aspects of the competition, few, I think, will deny that it is in every way undesirable that the juvenile readers of ladies' papers should be enrolled as agents and canvassers on such terms; or that the pretence of aiding in this way the higher education of girls is a piece of very delusive humbug.

There is the more reason for saying this plainly, because, no doubt stimulated by the example of the rival publication, another ladies' paper, Woman, has also started "free scholarships" for its readers on the same lines. In this case the net is cast a little wider, ladies up to the age of thirty being eligible. Considering the number of spinsters who, however long they may live, never get beyond the age of thirty, the candidates eligible for this "free scholarship" must be named Legion. In a curious editorial note they are advised to enter at once, or they "may find themselves left behind by the early birds." That puts the position very frankly. If you must be a worm, it is better to be the one who is left behind by the early bird than the one who is caught.

Let us turn to a competition of a totally different class. A month or two before Christmas a number of provincial journals—I am sorry to say that the Leeds Mercury (weekly) was one of them—started a "Grand Inventions Competition." The condition of entry was that the inventors who competed took out provisional protection or full patents for their productions, through the medium of the paper, paying three and a half guineas in the former case and eleven guineas in the latter. These were represented as "reduced" fees, and to add to the inducement to compete a first prize was offered of fifteen guineas, a second prize in the shape of a complete patent value twelve guineas, and a third a provisional protection value four guineas, besides fifty silver medals, fifty bronze ditto, and fifty diplomas of honour. The announcement of the competition was seasoned with the most extravagant flim-flams about the fortunes to be made out of patents for common articles in everyday use.

Now it will be clear to any one with a glimmering of technical knowledge that such a competition must necessarily be an utter farce. One competitor, we will say, submits a new idea in boot-jacks, a second an improved mangle, a third a novelty in ship's steering-gear. How on earth can any expert that ever lived decide fairly on the respective merits of these inventions? A competition in which every one should submit a new invention for one and the same purpose would be reasonable and legitimate, but a competition between inventions which have absolutely nothing in common as a basis of comparison is as nonsensical as the Caucus race in "Alice in Wonderland." But this is only one objection. If the competition is to be genuine, every pains ought to be taken to ascertain that the successful specifications can really be the subject of a valid patent. It is a scandal, indeed, if the proprietors of a great newspaper are going to take four or ten guineas from an impecunious enthusiast for obtaining a patent which will be upset as soon as granted. How far was this done by the journals which promoted the competition in question? One instance will show. A sceptic, who saw the mischievous folly of the whole thing, purchased in a shop a window-sash fastener which had been patented in 1886, and sent it as his contribution to the competition. In due course he was awarded a diploma of merit; and—not the least significant point in the story—received communications from the "Patent Editors" of the Leeds Mercury offering to obtain him full protection at the further reduced fee of nine guineas (this offer only to be open for a fortnight), and suggesting the desirability of taking out patents on the Continent and in America. This incident proves up to the hilt that no attempt, worthy of the name, was made to test the novelty of the inventions submitted for competition. Can it be said that the Editor of an influential newspaper, circulating in an industrial district, who induces working men and others of little education to use him as a patent agent, and is anxious to take their money with so little security for getting value in return, occupies a very creditable position?

I am sorry to say that is not the end of it. As already mentioned, several other journals in different parts of the country started a similar competition at the same time. When the awards were published, it turned out that the prize-winners were in all cases the same. This shows conclusively that what was announced in the Leeds Mercury, and I believe in the other papers, as an enterprise started by each paper on its own account for the benefit of the public and inventors, was really either a joint undertaking of several papers, or, what is more probable, the undertaking of some individual in the background—presumably a patent agent or firm of patent agents—using the names of all these papers. The concealment, or misrepresentation, of this fact was certainly not fair to the competitors. Again, in at least one case, a competitor was allowed to pay fees and enter after the nominal date of the closing of the competition.

Some of these facts came to the knowledge of one of the competitors — a working-man — and he commenced an action in the County Court against the Leeds Mercury to recover his money. The course taken by the defendants was peculiar. They applied for and obtained an order for the removal of the case into the High Court, on the double ground (1) that if one competitor recovered his money a large number of others could do so; and (2) that difficult points of law were likely to arise at the trial of the action. The plaintiff being a man of very limited means could not possibly fight the case in the High Court, and, being unable to obtain help, abandoned his action. It may be asked why the aggrieved parties do not take combined action. The answer is that many of the names were published with insufficient addresses, and when application has been made for fuller information it has been refused. The complainants are, therefore, checkmated. I do not say that there has been on the other side any intention of taking advantage of their poverty, or of avoiding a public ventilation of the whole circumstances. But I do say that the whole competition was a stupid thing for the proprietors of any respectable paper to get mixed up with; that it has been conducted in a most unsatisfactory way; and that such occurrences are calculated to bring discredit upon the Press generally.

"THE SEA FLOWER."

It is intensely amusing to me to note the defeat of the realists on their own confession. The stage can never be real. In order to exist, it must be surrounded with an atmosphere of imagination. To be true to life, to be accurate to every-day conversation, to be pedantic as to what actually occurs in our miserably prosaic lives, is to fail on the stage. The so-called problem play did not succeed because it was coarse and common-place. The younger Dumas wrote problem plays long before Ibsen and his imitators were ever heard of. The "Dame aux Camélias" is the oldest of problem plays. It has held the fort. Why? Because, morbid as the subject may be, it has been treated by a sensitive and imaginative writer.

Mr. Arthur Law has written a clear, interesting, and wholesome work, which has been applauded by the majority of the playgoers who have seen it. Being a play for the theatre, and not a problem for the philosophic discussion forum, we are told that "grown-up people are to be fed with a pap-ladle, and soothed with dill-water." In other words, playgoers are to be playgoers, and not musty, dusty philosophers. All lovers of the play are more or less children. They revert to their original innocence. They adore the injured heroine; they hate the detestable villain. If this were not so, the theatre would have no charm. There is surely misery enough, sorrow enough, and the curse of realism enough outside the walls of the theatre without compelling people to see more for their narrow enjoyment. The parson who fulminates and fumes, and sends his trembling congregation red hot to the lower regions is the unpopular parson. The dramatist who harps incessantly on the agonies of life is the unpopular dramatist. We do not go to church to be consigned to the flames, and we do not go to the play to be worried and tortured with problems and pessimism. So I therefore venture to praise Mr. Arthur Law, a clever and experienced dramatist, for his undoubted tact in understanding his audience. This play at the Comedy pleases me by means of its wholesomeness and humanity. Presumably, Tom Pinch is pap-ladle, and Little Em'ly is dill-water, and dear Old Peggotty is a happy blend of both, but the readers of Dickens love them all the same. Then are the admirers of Dickens to be accused of "living on bon-bons"? If so, they are very good and extremely wholesome bon-bons, and rather more palatable to my taste than the "nips" of vitriolic spirit marked with the brand of Ibsen or Maeterlinck. The public has tried them both, and prefers the delicately-flavoured sweetstuff.

And, after all, who can complain when in exchange for good, honest money come such performances—artistic to a pin's-point—as those, for instance, of Charles Groves, and Arthur Playfair, whose gallant struggles have at last landed him on the great high road of success? And the ladies, too, are not far behind; notably Miss Eva Moore the embodiment of all that is gentle and sweet, Miss Lena Ashwell, with her pathetic voice, and Miss Gladys Homfrey, who, having found her chance, makes the most of it. One of Mr. Arthur Law's apologists says, "There is a great deal of childishness in us all, and perhaps the world is none the worse, because it will always listen to a well-told fairy tale." Such satire misses its mark. Here we have the definition of the true playgoer. He will be a child to the end of time, and always listen to fairy tales. He does not care for realism, he has an imagination, and he loves fancy and idealism.

NOTES FROM PARIS.

FRENCH VIEWS OF KING GEORGE.

THE French no doubt are the friends and allies of Russia. But if Russia long stands in the way of their crusading instincts, love may turn sour. They cannot forgive King George for playing into the hands of the Czar's Government. His duty and best policy were to have forced M. Hanotaux to come forward with the Greeks as against the Turks, and to promote a French expedition which must have turned the tide of victory in the plains of Thessaly. Independent writers of the Paris Press are terribly severe on King George and his sons. M. Henry Bauer gives the following anecdote to show how much the dynasty has fallen in public estimation. The Queen of Greece, in one of her frequent visits to the hospitals, was shown a wounded soldier. She approached his bed to see in what way she could serve him. "Begone!" he cried; "it is not meet that one who is dying for his country should be aided by the mother of three traitors." Her eyes filled with tears. When she left the ward she sat down and wept bitterly. M. Henri Bauer speaks of the Court of Greece as a mere pawn in the hands of the Concert—that is to say, of International Finance, with which the King for years coquetted through Baron Erlanger. His paltry conduct and bourgeois care for family interests (the expression is not mine) enabled Hanotaux to join in keeping up bonds. Had he elected to fight the Turks in good earnest, he must have been master of the game. Any French Government refusing to help him must have been tossed over.

Among the causes of the prevailing Judenhetze in France should be reckoned the support given by the Jews to Turkey. The French longed to force the Dardanelles and avenge the Armenian massacres. They next wanted to give practical expression to their sympathy for Greece. But the papers, obedient to Finance, kept silent about massacres, and throw cold water on Greek fire, or fever.

A daring and capable man in King George's place might have led Greece to victory. Imagine what a Mehemet Ali could have done with the Greek Navy. Those men in ballet-girls' petticoats whom I saw on the Parade at Athens may not be first-rate soldiers; but nobody can assert that the Greek sailors are not among the best in Europe. Finance condemned them to remain inactive.

The death of the Duchesse de Doudeauville, née De Ligne, was almost sudden. She, as Duchesse de Bisaccia, enjoyed a brief hour of triumph at Albert Gate House in 1873. The Queen, associating her with the Prince de Ligne who offered the Belgian Crown to Leopold, was particularly gracious. The Duc de Bisaccia refitted and overhauled the Embassy at his own expense. This showed that he hoped to remain long in London. But he offended MacMahon in acting as if he represented merely French Royalty. The Marshal had a fine sense of dignity and propriety, and put his foot down so decisively that the Bisaccias were recalled.

The Comte de Chambord was glad of this step. He had a poor opinion of all the French Ducs, and was jealous of any attention shown to the Comte de Paris. On the death of the Legitimate Pretender, the Duc and Duchesse became warmly Philippist. Their relations with the head of the Orleanist branch gave them a peculiar standing in Royalist society. They were already very wealthy, and had most brilliant expectations. The death of the fat Duc de Doudeauville brought them some years ago his title and a great increase of fortune. Every fête they gave was an event in the Faubourg St. Germain. The Duc de Doudeauville (as he had become) liked to dazzle. The Duchesse enjoyed being hospitable. She was counted the most charming hostess in the noble faubourg. Polish liveliness (her mother was a Pole), Viennese manners, and Belgian sonsiness formed a pleasing combination. Without being a beauty, she was singularly comely and agreeable. The younger daughter of a Prince de Ligne's third wife, and a member of an endless family, she was no spoiled pet in youth. The brilliant situation to which she rose through marriage brought years of unalloyed enjoyment. But, as she advanced in life, she sometimes wished for a more intellectual atmosphere. She was also seized with a desire to innovate. One of her whims was to set herself up with an American secretary. An ex-beauty of the Empire qui a le chic et le chèque followed this example. The American secretary seemed likely to become an institution; but he somehow dropped out of sight. It was complained that he asked for too many invitations for fair compatriots.

The Duchesse de Doudeauville died of meningitis. She was for two days unconscious; but as she was on good terms with the Church, she was shriven and aneled. Her death must cause a painful void in Royalist society.

Zola's French friends rejoice in his martyrdom. They feel that he might have been made ridiculous were the First Offenders Act applied to him. But six months of Ste. Pélagie is a severe ordeal. The sentence is for twelve months. But the custom is to release literary misdemeanants sentenced to a year on the first day of the seventh month. No exception will be made in Zola's case, if his admirers keep quiet. Should they think prolonged captivity good for the cause he has taken up, they will agitate about him. Agitation would have the effect of keeping him in for the whole year. Any English fuss or interference would certainly be resented. Public opinion would be with the Government in treating it as impertinent. The French, an ex-Canadian Minister tells me, prevented Riel's sentence being commuted by getting up sentimental demonstrations in that rebel's favour. It was impossible to let him off when once they meddled in the matter.

Zola has now more than a month to sun himself. Zola's publisher must be rather disappointed at the sale of "Paris." Naturally, he expected that a great trial would vastly raise the sale. "Paris" came out as a feuilleton in Le Journal. The publication of the last serial slice coincided with that of the work as a book. At first the French orders exceeded those for any previous work by the same author, but as the trial proceeded counter orders grew numerous. On the day after the verdict, they amounted to 10,000, but orders from Russia, Hungary, Germany, and Italy have more than made up for this loss. These countries do not go in so much for translations as England and the United States. They are to be congratulated. The cesspool fluid with which Zola waters his garden may be tolerable in French hydrants; but in British or American watering carts it is too offensive.

Though the book trade is now dull to stagnation, Frasquelle had orders for 65,000 copies of "Paris" some time before it came out as a book. It had been feared that Daudet's death and funeral apotheosis might injure the sale of "Paris." Daudet, though he, too, had sat at the feet of the Goncourts, was at the opposite pole from Zola. He went in for delicate sensibility and emotion, for grace and charm, for playful satire, and for a charitable view of human errors. "They are not so bad, after all," is the teaching of his novels. But he saw that goodness on the whole made for happiness; that one is better off in taking the strait and difficult path than in following the wide and easy road.

LETTER FROM THE LINKMAN.

TOWARDS the end of October, 1888, dear Lady Betty, the Government of the United States demanded the recall of Lord Sackville, the then British Minister at Washington; and as Lord Salisbury did not at once accede to the request, on October 30th the President forwarded to Lord Sackville his passports. Mr. Phelps, who was then United States Minister in London, supported the action of his Government in a letter which he addressed to Lord Salisbury, and in this letter occur the following passages:—"In asking from her Majesty's Government the recall or withdrawal of its Minister . . . . the Government of the United States assumed that such request would be sufficient for that purpose. . . . . It was believed that Old False Teeth Bought.—Many ladies and gentlemen have by them old or disused false teeth, which might as well be turned into money. Messrs. R. D. & J. B. Fraser, of Princes-street, Ipswich (established since 1833), buy old false teeth. If you send your teeth to them they will remit you by return post the utmost value; or, if preferred, they will make you the best offer, and hold the teeth over for your reply. If reference necessary, apply to Messrs. Bacon & Co., Bankers, Ipswich.

the acceptance or retention of a Minister was a question solely to be determined, either with or without the assignment of reasons, by the Government to which he was accredited."

Spain has now demanded the recall of General Lee, the United States Consul-General at Havana, and the State Department of the Government at Washington has authorised the publication of the following statement:—"The President will not take General Lee's recall into consideration!"

The matter is a serious one, for it is now obvious that the Government of the United States does not consider itself bound by international usage, in the conduct of its diplomatic relations with other countries. According to every precedent, it committed a grievous wrong in handing Lord Sackville his passports in 1888. But, on that occasion, the Government of the United States distinctly laid down the rule of action which it imagined to be binding upon it in such circumstances; and, therefore, its refusal to accede to the request of Spain now stultifies it in the eyes of the whole world. Lord Sackville was a distinguished diplomatist who had served his country long and well, and, in handing him his passports contrary to all the usages of nations on such occasions, Great Britain was grossly insulted in the person of her Minister, and a cruel wrong was done to Lord Sackville himself. It was hardly to be expected that, within ten years, the Government of the United States would act in a totally contrary manner on an occasion which is on all-fours with the celebrated "Sackville Incident" of 1888.

* * * * *

The Ambassadors, Ministers, and Chargés-d'Affaires accredited to the Court of St. James have been much disturbed by a regulation which was communicated to them last week by Sir William Colville, the Master of the Ceremonies. It has always been the custom for the head of a Mission to have his name called out by the official whose duty it is to do this, before passing the Queen at a Drawing Room, and his suite followed. A regulation was issued last week requesting the heads of Missions on such occasions to stop when they came beside the Queen, and then to name to her Majesty each member of the suite as he passed. There can be no reason for the innovation, which is one that must cause some inconvenience, and, however well-trained a courtier a diplomatist may be, he occasionally resents being compelled to submit to unnecessary regulations. It is to be hoped that this unfortunate departure will not be insisted upon, now that it has been ascertained that it is displeasing to many of those whom it concerns.

* * * * *

It is understood that the celebrated Hope collection of pictures from the galleries at Deepdene will shortly be sold, sanction having been obtained for the sale. It is to be hoped that, if the report is correct, the sale may be held at Christie, Manson, & Wood's auction-rooms; for, in that event, the dispersal of this magnificent collection will be one of the sensations of the season. There is, however, some ground for believing that the collection may be sold intact by private contract. The Hope pictures must be worth considerably over £100,000; and, indeed, a dozen of the best of them should fetch about £60,000 or £70,000. Amongst the best are three Rembrandts, three Metsus, two Wouvermans, a Jan Steen, a Paul Potter, a Cuyp, a Peter de Hooghe, a Hobbema, and an Adrian van Ostade.

A well-known collection of works of art, chiefly of the fourteenth, fifteenth, sixteenth, and eighteenth centuries, formed by the late Herr Hechscher, of Vienna, will be sold by auction by Messrs. Christie, Manson, & Wood, during the present season. The collection is very similar in character to the Colworth collection, though not so extensive as the latter. The especial features of the Hechscher collection are the French bijouterie and snuff-boxes of last century, and perhaps the most interesting is the gold and enamelled watch which belonged to Louis XIV. when he was Dauphin. The whole collection has been exhibited of late years at the Imperial Museum in Berlin.

. . . . .

Lady Milltown has presented to the National Gallery of Ireland the valuable collection of pictures, works of art, furniture, and books from Russborough, Blessington. This includes some fine examples of the school of Wattean and four Sir Joshuas', being altogether over a hundred pictures. Several rooms are to be built to contain the collection, the cost of erecting which the Government has very rightly consented to defray. The gratitude of all Irish men and women is due to Lady Milltown for the munificent gift which she has made to that especially deserving institution, the National Gallery of Ireland, and it is to be hoped that others of her country-men and women will follow her patriotic example in this regard.

* * * * *

It is with inexpressible regret that I record the death of the Reverend Father William Eyre, S.J., which occurred on Sunday at Mount-street, Grosvenor-square, after an illness of several weeks' duration. The late Father Eyre, who was a brother of Archbishop Eyre, Archbishop of Glasgow, was a prominent member of the Society of Jesus, and one of the most popular Catholic ecclesiastics in Great Britain. An especially learned theologian, an eloquent preacher, an experienced man of the world, who had devoted his large fortune, his energies, and his life to the good of the Church to which he belonged, his memory will live for ever in the affectionate remembrance of those whose privilege it has been to be educated under his guidance. It is with immeasurable pain that I indite these few lines expressive of deep regret at the loss of the kindest of friends.

. . . . .

The death of Sir Frank Lockwood, the eminent Queen's Counsel, caused widespread regret, but those who now see for the first time his sketches—a collection of which are being exhibited at the St. James's Galleries—will realise as they never did before how genial and how generous was his disposition. The collection numbers several hundreds of sketches which have been lent by, amongst others, the Prince of Wales, Sir Frederick Milner, Sir Richard Webster, Lord Field, Lord Battersea, Sir Edward Lawson, Lord Justice Rigby, Lady Cave, Lord Rosebery, Lord James of Hereford, the Dowager Lady Shrewsbury, Mr. Justice Wills, Judge Bacon, Mr. Frank Burnand, and Sir Henry Roscoe. The vast majority of the sketches were drawn, on the spur of the moment, on odds and ends of paper which happened to be at hand, and in no instance can any suspicion of spitefulness be traced. The collection, which ranges over a period of about thirty years, contains only one sketch of Lord Beaconsfield, and few that deal with political events. They are all boldly drawn, and show that the late Sir Frank was overflowing with good spirits and original humour. One of the most amusing is his sketch of "Mr. Lawrence, Q.C., going North," extended on four railway trucks; and a memorable one is of "A Christmas Reconciliation" between the late Lord Chief Justice Cockburn and the late Dr. Kenealy. These two were intimate friends until the conduct of the latter in the Tichborne trial caused a rupture between them. Sir Alexander Cockburn was an especially witty man, and he aimed his shafts at Dr. Kenealy on several occasions after their friendship terminated. Once some one was deploring that in English there was no equivalent for the French word canaille. "Oh, but there is," maintained Sir Alexander Cockburn, "it is Kenealy." Few are aware that the late Dr. Kenealy wrote some of the prettiest poems in the English language. It is a pity, now that the irritation caused by his action in the Tichborne trial has ceased to exist, that these poems are not republished, for they are too good to cast away.—Believe me to be, very truly yours,

MARMADUKE.

China and Glass. — Messrs. Goode, Artists and Designers, solicit an inspection of their collection in their recently-extended South Audley-street premises, now by far the largest and most important in Europe. Messrs. Goode guarantee the excellence of all their productions, and invite a comparison of their prices with those of any co-operative stores.

SPORTING NOTES.

THE new course "at Folkestone" (an absurd description, considering that it is really several miles from that place) was "inspected" by the Press last week, and florid puffs of any undertaking are as sure to follow closely upon a gratuitous entertainment of this kind as thunder is certain to come after lightning. The writers who have indited gushing eulogies of the course, and everything and everybody connected with it, must be perfectly aware, if they are in possession of their senses, that the undertaking is certain to be a complete and ignominious failure. Considering the frantic competition which now prevails among race meetings, how can there possibly be room for another, and especially in Kent, where all the old and once well-established open fixtures have died from sheer inanition. Kent seems to be altogether played out in connection with the Turf. The Sporting Times gives a list of seven Derby winners which were bred in the county, but the last of them won at Epsom in 1884. The late Lord Falmouth did well in former days at Mereworth, and so did Sir Joseph Hawley at Leybourne, but their successors at those places have not been fortunate. I cannot remember that the present Lord Falmouth has bred anything better than Butter, although neither expense nor trouble has been spared to make his stud a success.

The backers of Perthshire for the Derby surely ought not to be at large. If any horse has ever demonstrated his inability to stay even six furlongs in the most conclusive fashion it is certainly Mr. Dewar's insanely over-rated colt, and his price for the Epsom race should be not 50 to 1, but rather 5,000 to 1. It would be a fantastical piece of fatuity to train Perthshire for the Derby, as his speed would certainly become impaired, and the chances are that he would never win a race.

The Cheltenham Steeplechases are to be revived this year, the meeting taking the place of the Cotswold Hunt Point to Point races. This fixture is to be held over the Prestbury Park course, which is a very good one.

Mr. Edmund Tattersall died on Saturday in his 83rd year, after a long illness. A more popular man never lived. He was always most genial, hospitable, and generous. Mr. Tattersall was a consummate auctioneer, and an excellent man of business, besides being a first-rate judge of all kinds of blood stock. For a few years Mr. Tattersall raced under the name of "Mr. Somerville," and with Oxford Mixture he ought to have won an important handicap, but the mare was grievously mismanaged, being constantly run out of her proper course. If Marie Stuart had been out of the way, Oxford Mixture would have won the Oaks of 1873, as she was certainly second-best in that race. Mr. Tattersall won the Newmarket October Handicap (then an important race) in 1873 with Tichborne, and he carried off several stakes with Miserrimus. Mr. Tattersall's death will be lamented by all who knew him, and he will live long in the affectionate remembrance of a very large circle of friends in all classes of life.

The Aldershot Point to Point Races are to take place next Saturday over a course in the neighbourhood of Banbury, and the Duke of Connaught, who will be present, has given a cup for competition.

County Council won the Grand Military Gold Cup at Sandown Park on Friday in a common trot, there being eleven runners. Major Fenwick's horse was so much fancied that he started a hot favourite at 9 to 4. The fact has escaped the notice of the papers that County Council was bred at Sandringham by the Prince of Wales in 1889, and a very high opinion was entertained of him as a yearling, so that he was heavily engaged. County Council carried the Prince's colours several times in 1891 as a two-year-old, but his only success was in the Ham Stakes at Goodwood, and he was shortly afterwards weeded out of the Royal stud.

The Prince of Wales may very likely win the Suffolk and Berkshire Welter Flat Race Plate of £200 at Kempton Park next Friday with Oakdene, who was expected to distinguish himself over hurdles, but he has proved a failure in that line. Oakdene was going very well at Newmarket last week, and he will have the best of the weights with several of the starters. The entry of twenty-six includes Knife Boy, Rampion, Court Ball, and Lord Key, besides Manifesto, who is not likely to run.

The Australian horse Daimio, about whom there was such a prodigious trumpeting some twelve months ago, when he was proclaimed by some harebrained enthusiasts to be the best steeplechaser ever foaled, has been struck out of the Grand National, for which race he was remarkably well handicapped, and he will return shortly to his native land. The climate of Europe has not suited Daimio, and it is a great pity that he ever left Australia.

Several very speedy horses have been entered for the Ely Plate of £200 at the Newmarket First Spring Meeting, including Ugly, Lucknow, Vatel, and The Convict; and I feel convinced that all these animals will be worth following next season when running for T.Y.C. events.

No fewer than thirty-four maiden three-year-olds have been entered for the Scarborough Stakes at the Houghton meeting, which race also closed last week. The entry includes Mr. Baird's Brio and Helianthus and Mr. de Rothschild's Isabinda, own sister to St. Frusquin, who is likely to prove a very difficult animal to train, and I fear she will never greatly distinguish herself on the turf. As to Mr. Baird's pair, Brio is good looking enough for anything, and he will very likely prove to be the best "dark" horse for the Two Thousand and Derby. Brio is a very racing-like colt, with capital action, but he has never been tried in any sort of way whatever, so that nothing is known as to his racing merits. His breeding is not calculated to inspire his friends with much hope of his turning out a flyer. Helianthus was very backward when he ran his only race last season, which was the Clearwell Stakes, won by Orzil, but he has made a vast improvement during the winter, and he ought to win plenty of races if judiciously placed. Cap Martin is likely to turn out a failure, and he need not be thought of for a moment in connection with any of his spring engagements.

Lord Rosebery's Illuminata (dam of Ladas and Chelandry) has foaled a colt by Royal Hampton, and she goes to Sheen, another son of the sire of Ladas. Craig Crook has a colt by Sir Visto, and goes to Ladas. Avilion has a filly by Ladas, and goes to him again. Orfe has a filly by Ladas, and goes to St. Frusquin.

The Duke of Devonshire's colt Dieudonné has settled down to good work, and he seems all right, and is evidently very fresh and well. Dieudonné will not run until the Two Thousand, although he has a previous engagement in the Craven week, and it is quite possible that he may be reserved for the Derby, the same policy being adopted with him as proved so successful two years ago in the case of Persimmon. He is just the stamp of colt to run well over the Epsom gradients. He is in all the principal three-year-old races at Ascot, and in the Rous Memorial, but, oddly enough, he was not entered for the rich Hardwicke Stakes, a race which will not require much winning this year, as neither Velasquez, Galtee More, nor Chelandry is engaged, Melange, Cortegar, Bay Ronald (who won last year), and Crestfallen being the best of the older horses, while the three-year-old list includes Batt, Collar, Jenny Howlett colt, Jeddah, and Orzil. The Hardwicke Stakes will be worth £2,670, and it is the richest event in the Ascot programme, excepting only the Gold Cup and the Coronation Stakes. I am assured that Dieudonné is perfectly sound in his wind, there being no truth in the report, which was generally credited at Newmarket, that he makes a noise.

The Duke of Portland went to Newmarket last Thursday to see his horses gallop, and his dark three-year-old Wantage, by Sheen out of Satchel, who is a remarkably good-looking colt, went very well indeed over a mile and a quarter. I do not expect that Wantage will distinguish himself in the "classic" races, and he may very likely be reserved for Ascot, where he has several nice engagements, in which event his maiden allowance would be an advantage. The Duke saw several of his two-year-olds sent a racing gallop over nearly five furlongs, and they will, no doubt, be tried next week, as all this lot are entered for the Brocklesby Stakes at Lincoln. It is quite probable that Arrowroot, filly by Morion out of Semolina, will be the best of the Heath House team at Lincoln. Her dam won the Brocklesby Stakes nine years ago.

Champ de Mars has been stopped in his work at Newmarket, and it is said that Mr. Baird's colt has injured his shoulder. It is earnestly to be hoped that this accident is not of a serious character, as Champ de Mars has grown into a beautiful colt, and everyone at Newmarket regrets that he has no engagements of much value. I understand that it was Mr. Baird's intention to start Champ de Mars for the Chippenham Stakes, which is run on the day after the Two Thousand, and that event should be a good thing for the colt if he is all right.

Mr. Baird will have a dangerous candidate for the Brocklesby Stakes in Marauder, by Martagon out of Petulance, who did well last week in a gallop over five furlongs with Marasca, who is believed to be now in good form. Marauder is probably a very smart colt, and he may prove as useful to his owner as did Champ de Mars last year, when he won the Molyneux Stakes at Liverpool in the first week of the season.

I have repeatedly warned my readers to leave Gulistan alone for the Lincolnshire Handicap, and my advice has been justified by the sudden withdrawal of this horse from that race. Gulistan was zealously "written up" for Lincoln in certain quarters, and silly backers have been gulled into throwing a great deal of money away on him. It was always doubtful whether Gulistan would stand a preparation, as everybody at Newmarket perfectly apprehended, and Mr. de Rothschild's horse has now broken down so badly that his turf career is probably at an end. Gulistan has cost the public a pretty penny from first to last, but his supporters have only to thank themselves for their misfortunes, as they would rush in and back him for race after race in utter ignorance of his real condition.

Knight of the Thistle has not broken down, as has been reported, for he is still in good work, and he goes well in his gallops. How any sane person could be so infatuated as to back Mr. McCalmont's horse for the Lincolnshire Handicap at the weights it is quite impossible to understand, but it is quite certain that he had a numerous band of supporters. Captain Machell, however, who is a practical man, no doubt recognised the fatuity of the notion that Knight of the Thistle could possibly have a winning chance at Lincoln, and the horse will now probably be reserved for the Doveridge Handicap at Derby—a race which he is quite likely to win.

Sir R. Waldie Griffith is likely to be dangerous in the Brocklesby Stakes at Lincoln with an own sister to Merle, who is a most promising and racing-like filly, and she is believed to be smart. I expect, however, that as the season advances this filly will be found a long way inferior to her stable companions — the colt by Bend Or out of Molly Morgan, and Desmond, by St. Simon out of l'Abbesse de Jouarre, both of which animals are owned by Lord Dunraven. Desmond is a truly magnificent animal, with beautiful action, but I fancy he will not be seen out during the early part of the season.

Mr. de Rothschild's Isabinda, own sister to St. Frusquin, is likely, as I have said, to turn out a difficult animal to train, and it will probably be the autumn before she is thoroughly fit, even if she stands a preparation. I see that Isabinda is mentioned as likely to be a formidable opponent to the best of the public lot in the One Thousand and Oaks, but I do not believe she has a 500 to 1 chance for either the one race or the other.

Sir Blundell Maple has a smart two-year-old in Monopoly, by Common out of Minting Queen, and she will be thoroughly fit to run either at Lincoln or at Liverpool. Monopoly is very racing like, and a grand galloper. It will be remembered that her dam carried off the Brocklesby Stakes six years ago.

The Grand National will be a more than usually difficult race to win this year, for there is sure to be a very large field, and a crowd greatly increases the chance of accidents, for a horse in falling is tolerably sure to bring down others. Manifesto, who is, of course, favourite, fell two years ago when running at Aintree. It is said that Timon was pulling hard when he fell last year, and if this is correct he has only to keep on his legs to make certain of beating Manifesto. Timon, however, is a beast for whom excuses have continually been made. The recent public performances of some of the Liverpool horses have been most perplexing, and the form in many races must have been all wrong. The odd thing is that the fact of a horse having been ignominiously beaten does not appear to permanently weaken his position in the betting. For example, The Soarer has been in brisk demand since his queer defeat by Ruric, although one would have expected him to be knocked out. Parapluie, who won the Grand Military Gold Cup last year, has been backed for good money, and this horse certainly cannot complain of being overweighted, but he may not stand a preparation. Many clever people greatly fancy Gauntlet. It will be a very dangerous race to meddle with, the risks of a fall at Aintree being great and manifold on all occasions, but with a huge field they are enormously increased.

I see it is stated that Ninus will run for the Newmarket Biennial on April 13, but Prince Soltykoff's colt is not at all likely to be seen out before the Two Thousand. It will take Gibbons all his time to get Ninus thoroughly fit by April 27, and there would be no object in knocking the colt about, for he is so heavily engaged that he can very well afford to miss such a trumpery event as the Biennial. Ninus would have to give a lot of weight in the Biennial to Cowl, Devon, St. Maur, and Gerolstein; and Prince Soltykoff might find a more suitable candidate for this race in Leisure Hour. I see it is stated that Nina, dam of Ninus, was bred by the late Duke of Hamilton. As a matter of fact, however, Ninus himself was bred by the Duke, and he was sold as a foal, with his dam, for 1,500 gs., to Prince Soltykoff, at Newmarket in July, 1895. Nina, dam of Ninus, was half sister to Ossian, who won the St. Leger in 1883. I must add that the pedigree of Ninus is not encouraging to those who are "going for" him for the Two Thousand, as his own brother, The Nipper, was always a T.Y.C. horse, and of no use over any distance beyond an easy five furlongs, although his sire was such a fine stayer as Sheen.

The English Rugby Football Union has a bad bee buzzing in its bonnet. That bee is Mr. A. J. Gould, the late Welsh International three-quarter. It will be remembered that the English Rugby Union forbade him to play with or against English teams, because he had received a testimonial some fifteen months ago. I do not wish to go over the old ground again, nor do I wish to say anything more about the refusal to permit Gould to play football. That incident was concluded when the terms upon which England and Wales were to meet in an International match were arranged. One hoped that this wretched dispute which reflected but little credit on the English Union was once and for ever at an end. But this was not to be; the persecution of Gould has not ceased. The English Union has forbidden him to referee in English matches. In the West of England he is very popular as a referee, and there is no one who has a better knowledge of the game. Being a Welshman, no one can accuse him of bias in important West-country games. All this has been stopped by the despicable action of the English authorities, whose conduct is as mean and petty as one can conceive. It is a matter of profound regret that the management of English football should be in the hands of men who have shown themselves capable of such narrow-minded and unsportsmanlike action. Probably these modern inquisitors are now hunting round for some fresh methods of punishment and torture. Let me suggest to them that they should forbid Gould to be a spectator at the forthcoming International match at Blackheath. The mere presence of such an unmitigated and unrepentant reprobate on the ground would be sufficient in itself to contaminate the pure and saintly souls of those who run the English Union. But if this is not enough, and they wish to draw out their punishment to its full tether, then they might first of all forbid him to touch judge and finally prohibit his presence on any football ground in England. I only hope that at the next meeting of the Rugby Union English footballers will let the present authorities clearly understand that they are thoroughly disgusted with and entirely dissociate themselves from the tyrannical proceedings to which I have referred.

Naturally Southerners are delighted with the fact that Southampton have got into the semi-final for the English Association Cup. Playing on their own ground they gave a splendid display, and literally overran the Bolton Wanderers. Derby County visited Liverpool and gave the local club a thorough beating. They meet Everton in the semi-final, while Southampton have to play Notts Forest. It is by no means improbable that the Southern team will get into the final. Their successes indicate that the game has made enormous strides in the south. No team could have done so brilliantly in the cup competition had it not been meeting good clubs in the earlier part of the season.

The International Association match between England and Ireland was played on heavy ground at Belfast. At first the Irishmen had the best of the play, but just before half-time the English team settled down and attacked briskly. During the second half the visitors lost Forman, the Notts Forest half for a time, and the game was fast, the Irishmen seeming to revel in the mud, which became worse every minute. However, the Englishmen kept the lead they had secured fairly easily. Several of the League teams were weakened by having representatives playing in this match. The chief match was between the two leading teams, Sheffield United and Sunderland, whose attack all through the game was singularly strong, and so they won rather easily. Twice this season Derby County have beaten the Villa, but last Saturday the Aston team had its revenge. It simply made rings round Derby, who had perhaps had quite enough football when they met Liverpool in the Cup tie earlier in the week. In the final for the Staffordshire Cup, Burslem, who did so well in the Association Cup, after a hard struggle beat West Bromwich.

The Old Westminsters and Carthusians fill such an important place in the amateur game that the meeting between the two schools is always interesting. For the first time for many years the Westminster boys won. They have a clinking set of forwards who shoot brilliantly, and the Carthusian goalkeeper did some wonderful saving. For a London school to beat a country boarding-school is in itself a creditable performance. The gallery round the railings at Vincent-square became wildly enthusiastic. Where will these faithful followers of the Westminster boys go to if the improvement scheme for that neighbourhood becomes a solid fact?

A well-informed correspondent thinks I must be mistaken in saying that any League club demands money for the transfer of an amateur. The case was mentioned, however, in the London Press, and not contradicted. My correspondent also says that the club with which he is connected would not act in that way. That may be; but the fact that another club has acted differently shows the need for legislation.

If ever a crew had bad luck, that crew is the Cambridge University eight. There is a persistent fate pursuing the crew and coach, who, nevertheless, seem to rise superior to all the difficulties that present themselves in a way which commands the admiration and sympathy of everybody. At Bourne End the crew was improving rapidly. Old Blues were literally surprised at what Fletcher had done with the material at his command. The marvellous improvement in the men to which I have previously referred was being maintained, the crew were apparently flourishing, for they were gaining in weight, when, all of a sudden, Steele, the stroke, was laid up with influenza. Fortunately, the crew are in a forward condition. But the fact that the men have not been able to take full advantage of their stay on the Upper Thames is an almost irreparable loss. A well-known oar, who recently saw the crew, said that while it did not contain a single brilliant oarsman, the level of all-round work was so good that any crew would have the greatest difficulty in getting away from it. That this was the case is shown by the fact that the Oxford President, with four old Blues and two men who had won the Ladies' at Henley, deemed it necessary to bring up Carr to row again. No greater compliment could have been paid to Fletcher, or the men who have so keenly and successfully carried out his instructions. I have no doubt the Cambridge men would rather that the compliment had not been rendered necessary. The Oxford men are very much in the same condition that they were this time last year when at Henley, except that this year they have often seemed rather slovenly in their work. Some hard rowing has pulled them together, and they will certainly be a powerful crew. It must be remembered that the seven Etonians all rowed for their school, while the three Cambridge men from the same school were never in the Eton eight. This fact alone gives the Dark Blues a tremendous advantage. A correspondent points out that the last time Cambridge won was on March 26, the day of the race this year.

The Cambridge University sports were productive of some very good racing. There is quite a glut of milers in residence. That race was won in 4 min. 26 sec. Graham, Workman, and Hunter were all together a hundred yards from home, and the last named, finishing remarkably strongly for such a fast race, won by 15 yards from Workman. Maundrell has improved wonderfully over the hurdles, and does not hang as he did last year. His time was given as being just over 16 sec. It should be a fine race between him and Garnier, of Oxford, who earlier in the week at Fenner's, when running for Oriel against Clare, was about a yard and a half slower. Carter, the President, could not run in the sprints owing to an injured instep. But Davidson and Harrison both did good time in the quarter. Bullock will have to improve at least a foot in the weight to make certain of this event against Oxford. Athletic meetings between the colleges of each University are now a regular feature in the Lent term. These events help to relieve the deadly monotony which comes over the Universities when the Lents and Torpids are over, and the football clubs have finished their matches. In these events the best performances were by Garnier, Farncombe, and Vassal, all of Oriel, in the hurdles, weight, and long jump, while Bevan, of Trinity Hall, did a fine leap of 22 ft.

Once again the South took part in the Cross Country Championships, which were held near Northampton over a genuine cross country course. The arrangements showed a decided improvement. Martin's absence, owing to influenza, undoubtedly cost the Essex Beagles the Championship, as they were only two points behind the winners, Salford. The race for first place was a close one, and a local runner, Robinson, pulled out at the finish, and was again easily first, with Bartlett, of the Essex team, second, and Harrison, from Manchester, third.

Last week the preliminary rounds in the competition for the Army Racket Championship were played. The matches were not very interesting, as the losers all through the competition only won a single game. In the final round Captain King and W. E. Foster, of the R.A. Aldershot, qualified to meet the holders by beating Colonel Spens and Captain Mounsey-Heysham of the King's (Shropshire Light Infantry). Colonel Spens retains his form in a wonderful way, but both he and his partner failed to show such good form as in the earlier games. The match was a one-man game, Foster, who is brother to the champion, doing all the work. He started and won the first game without losing his hand. His returns were very severe, his service good, and his placing excellent. He was a class above the rest of the players.

A Most Wonderful Package of Crockery. Send your name and address to the Pearson Pottery Co., Hanley, Staffs., and we will forward one of our catalogues of cheap Crockery. One Hundred Pieces of Crockery for £1. 1s., including complete Dinner and Tea Services, and other pieces. Even an imitation of this advertisement impossible. Drop a post card for particulars.

MAMMON.

FROM MOSES MOSS TO BENJAMIN BOSS.

Sunday.

MY DEAR BEN,—We have again been suffering from a succession of adverse rumours with regard to affairs in almost all parts of the globe, and it is a long time since the Stock Markets have had to face so curious a combination of untoward circumstances. At the same time, there is no doubt that many of the reports are exaggerated, and that one of these days most of these ominous clouds may vanish, leaving us wondering that we ever attached any importance to them. In the meantime, however, every rumour is aggravated by sensational journalism, and the ursine party are doing their best to create

PANICKY MARKETS.

First and foremost there is the strained position between the United States and Spain. The news dished up in the States and cabled to this side is of an unusually unreliable character. Much of it is manufactured in Washington by statesmen and legislators and their hangers-on, who are evidently speculating in Wall-street. The moderate measures which have been taken by the United States Government to strengthen the defences of the country are being exaggerated into active military and naval armaments for the purpose of attack. Yet interest in the Maine disaster is flagging considerably, and it seems almost to be dropping out of sight. This is precisely what happened at the time in connection with the Venezuelan scare, and as the Spanish Government seems to be determined to go to considerable length in concessions to Cuba in order to pacify the American people, it is not improbable that with the arrival of the new Spanish Minister, Señor Louis Polo Bernarde, the tide will turn again towards peace. There is just the danger that with all the Yankee talk the Spaniards will lose patience, and the latest move of Spain in demanding the recall of General Lee confirms this view. In the meantime, there are indications that powerful interests are buying American Railroad stocks on the declines in New York, and a marked rebound may happen any day. Efforts have again been made by certain organs of the Press to keep the West African question alive. It appears that the two French members of the committee now sitting in Paris are ill, and one really wonders whether some of our sensational jonrnals will not say that they fell ill on purpose, so as to delay the negotiations. Fortunately, however, there is every reason to anticipate an early and peaceful settlement, and as a market factor the West African question has almost disappeared, only to make room, however, for a fresh outburst of the Russo-Chinese scare. There remains the Transvaal difficulty. Great efforts are being made in certain quarters to create the impression that President Kruger is about to renounce the suzerainty of England. I do not anticipate anything of the kind, neither do I consider the much-talked-of imposition of 15 per cent. on the profits of mining enterprises as anything else but an effort of imagination. In the meantime, the mining industry in the Transvaal is making satisfactory progress, and as soon as certain big accounts are disposed of, a rally is probable. The trouble between the Parquet and the Coulisse in Paris is a disagreeable feature, but latest advices are more favourable, and there is evidently no fear of the Coulisse being actually done away with, while, after all, a reform of the Bourse appears imperative. Too much is also being made of the prospects of dearer money. Rates are at present low enough in all conscience, and while some big new loans are in sight, there is also a prospect of further Government disbursements and of the April dividend payments. Thus, while it is not likely that we shall see lower rates, no advance on the Bank rate of 3 per cent. need for the present be apprehended. The West Australian department has maintained a very firm tone in several leading sections, and is thus in distinct contrast with the Kaffir Circus. The Industrial market is inflated, and a day of reckoning is undoubtedly coming with reference to a great deal of over-speculation and over-capitalisation which has been going on. But looking at the other departments of the Stock Exchange, and at the comparatively moderate level of prices, together with the satisfactory state of trade, and such favourable features as the coming opening-up of China, I cannot resist the impression that one of these days, when the political clouds are blown away, we shall have a very marked revival.

HOME RAILS—NARROW FLUCTUATIONS.

Notwithstanding several favourable features, the Home Railway department is showing dulness, and as there is a considerable "Bear" account, the ursine party every now and then make an attack on the market, without, however, making much impression. The dear money question is also being trotted out, but on the other hand stock is so scarce that the argument loses its force. The Caledonian dividend has fully borne out my anticipation, the distribution of 5 per cent. having been maintained, although the balance carried forward is £8,000 less. The announcement was greeted by a rise of Scotch stocks in the market, but this has since been lost again. Caledonian Deferred Ordinary (Coras) are, however, very cheap at anything like 56 or 57, as they yield nearly 4 per cent. per annum, and thus form one of the best investments in this section. Trade reports are, moreover, so favourable, that it is confidently anticipated that the Caledonian will show further large increases, especially when the resumption of work by the engineers tells upon the traffics. I am not very sanguine with reference to the North British dividend, but the quotations of the stocks are low enough. What exactly caused some of the Home Railway traffics for the eighth week of the current year to be comparatively poor it is difficult to say, especially as the resumption of business in the engineering trade had caused sanguine views to be entertained, but the occurrence is probably only temporary. Brighton "A" had been fairly steady at 175½, and Dover "A" moved in the neighbourhood of 111½ until the Russian scare put prices down again. Dover "A" is, undoubtedly, a most progressive stock, and as the supply in the market is small the price is likely to advance. Chathams and Great Easterns have been a quiet market, and the Heavies have suffered somewhat from the pause in the traffic increases. Great Northern Deferred have been fairly steady, but Midlands have shown some weakness. These are the two lines which will chiefly be affected by the Great Central extension to London. I have of late received a great many inquiries from correspondents who do not appear to have perused the remarks which I made on the actual position in TRUTH of January 6, and which I, therefore, herewith briefly recapitulate. By the extension to London the Great Central becomes one of the great trunk lines of the country, spreading its arms to the east as far as Hull and East Grimsby, and to the west as far as Manchester and Liverpool, covering the centre at Sheffield, Nottingham, Leicester, and Rugby. Thirty-five years ago, in the case of the Midland, the same pessimistic croakings were employed which are now being uttered in certain quarters with regard to the Great Central. Yet the Midland, which then had an Ordinary share capital of about eleven millions, has now a capital of about thirty-four millions, while the revenue has grown in proportion until it has reached the magnificent total of about ten millions per annum. The Great Central has at present a prospective Ordinary share capital of £11,250,000, divided into £2,750,000 Preferred Ordinary stock, £2,750,000 Deferred Ordinary, £2,750,000 1894 Ordinary stock, and £3,000,000 Extension Scrip. This comparatively small amount of about £11,000,000 will become entitled to the whole profits, which will be divisible after the Debenture and Preference charges have been paid. When I penned these remarks in January I expressed my full concurrence in the view held by a correspondent signing himself "Railway Investigator" to the effect that, while it is impossible to say how the returns will work immediately on the opening of the new line, big increases must come eventually, and that a gain of £20,000 per week, which would give the Company a net increase of at least £400,000 revenue, would be a reasonable estimate. In Great Central stocks a fair business is passing, and Great

Central 1894 Ordinary is being picked up by investors in the neighbourhood of 41 as a promising lock-up. Metropolitans are slightly easier, but Districts have been very steady at about 29. This is not surprising, as not only is the line doing very well now, but the various extensions which have been authorised will eventually bring a large accession of traffic to the Company. The promising position is clearly set forth in a letter which appeared in the columns of the Financial News a few days ago, and which I consider well worth reproducing :—

With your permission I should like to place before your readers reasons showing District Ordinary to be at the present time much undervalued. The last carry-forward, after payment of an increase of ½ per cent. on the Contingent Prefs. was £4,000. The traffic increase of the last seven weeks amounts to £2,400. This rate being continued, the full dividend of 5 per cent. for the current half-year is assured. The last full payment on the Prefs. was in 1884, when the Ordinary touched 72. In 1887, only one half-yearly dividend was paid, at the rate of 1½ per cent. ; the Ordinary then reached 43. In 1889 the Preference dividend was entirely passed, and the highest quotation for the Ordinary was 39. Now that full payment is again in sight, the extensions well in hand, and Electric Traction in the near future, Districts stand at 29, although the security above them has risen during the past year 14 points.

It will not surprise me if the market wakes up some day to find Districts five or ten points higher. A very large business is being transacted in Central London Railway shares, and the fully-paid Ordinary have been dealt in up to 10⅞, while the partly-paid Ordinary are quoted 6¾, the Preferred 1¾, the Deferred 5. I see that my contemporary Engineering is going in for a series of articles on the Central London, and that the estimate of traffics is computed by some writers at from 80,000,000 to 100,000,000 passengers a year. This would mean that the Ordinary stock would receive over 10 per cent. dividend per annum, and under all the circumstances investors have an excellent opportunity at present of acquiring an interest at a moderate price in a Company which bids fair to become one of the most prosperous railway undertakings in the country.

The Yankee Market—Rumours and Scares.

Rarely have the "Bears" in Wall-street had such opportunities of availing themselves of all manner of rumours manufactured ready to hand for them as during the last few weeks. Hardly had the De Lôme incident passed off when the Maine catastrophe furnished a most sensational event for the Cuban Jingoes to take hold of, and we have heard all kinds of unfavourable explanations of the disaster. Spanish treachery, submarine mines, and the most circumstantial accounts of the blowing up of the vessel through attacks from the outside, were discussed ad nauseum, and war was, ever so many times, declared as imminent. The fare was, however, evidently somewhat too strong, and it finally satiated the public, both in the States and here, to such an extent that the Maine disaster has taken quite a back seat of late, and it looks as if it were to pass into oblivion, as so many other sensational "Bear" points have done in the past. The fact is that the work of the divers has apparently been without any result, for the very good reason that the catastrophe was the consequence of an accident and of internal causes. But the Jingoes have not been slow to take up another cue, and that is the necessity of the United States interfering for the benefit of the Cubans, in case Spain cannot bring the war to a speedy termination; and now every measure for the strengthening of coast defences and for bringing up the American navy to some degree of efficiency is magnified into preparations for war. The United States have undoubtedly neglected their coast defences to an extraordinary extent, and are at present making up for lost time; and it would not be surprising if they were to strengthen their navy, which is not at all in proportion to their pretensions in connection with foreign politics. But this does not exactly mean war with Spain, and the manner in which President McKinley has so far conducted the Government gives rise to every hope that he will keep his head cool and refrain from precipitating his country into war. The question is, however, how far the latest action of Spain in demanding the recall of General Lee may precipitate matters. Another unsettling feature in the American and Canadian markets has been the continued war of rates between the Canadian Pacific and the Grand Trunk in alliance with the American Pacific roads on the other. Several times the rumour had gained currency that a settlement had been reached, but so far these reports are unconfirmed. I do not think that the whole matter is of so much importance as has been attributed to it in the market, the Klondike traffic being probably over-rated, and the last traffic returns of the Canadian roads do not show any traces of this disturbing factor. But it seems nothing short of wanton mischief than to quarrel at the present juncture when both the Canadian Pacific and Grand Trunk roads are on a wave of prosperity, and promise to make up to the shareholders for the disappointments of recent years. It is stated that the German shareholders are remonstrating seriously with the Canadian Pacific management, and it might be as well if the British shareholders in both Companies were to bring pressure to bear upon their respective boards. If the latter do not speedily conclude peace they will lay themselves open to the charge of carrying on this war for their own private benefit. It is true that experience with American Railroad directors has shown that they utilise their positions for the furtherance of private interests and for stock-jobbing purposes, but I refuse to believe that the Canadian Pacific and Grand Trunk directors come into that category. Movements in Yankee Rails have been of a seesaw character, and after a substantial recovery there is a renewed and severe fall, which has practically affected the whole of the active stocks. The rally, whenever it comes, will doubtless be equally general. Upon the whole, Milwaukee have shown a firm front, and there are indications that the Standard Oil group is picking these up at every opportunity. The dividend announcement will shortly be made, and will probably be 2½ per cent., or it may be in the form of a 2 per cent. dividend and ½ per cent. bonus. The present price must, under the circumstances, be considered moderate. Whenever the improvement comes, Louisville, Erie Prefs. and Ordinary, Denver Prefs. and Ordinary, Norfolk Prefs., and Missouri, Kansas, and Texas will no doubt be well to the front, and as the so-called Klondike division has been greatly depressed, there is every prospect of Northern Pacific Prefs., Union Pacific Prefs. and Ordinary, and Central Pacifics experiencing a sharp recovery. In the matter of the Canadian section traffics have been very satisfactory, the Grand Trunk showing an increase of £9,464, the Canadian Pacific one of $71,000. A moderate recovery in Canadian Pacifics has been lost again in the scare, the quotation being down to 84, while Grand Trunk First Prefs. have fallen to 63¼, the Guaranteed to 72¼. These stocks must necessarily sympathise with the movements of the Yankee market.

Foreigners and South Americans.

The Foreign department has been adversely affected by the trouble between the parquet and the coulisse on the Paris Bourse, to which I am referring further on. Spanish, moreover, have suffered from the ever-recurring rumours of an outbreak of war between the United States and Spain, a fall to 56½ being caused by the latest action of the Spanish Government. Turks have been dull, although the Greek Loan is in a forward stage; and Italians have been steady. Rio Tinto kept up well, until the trouble with the coulisse came to the front, when there was a temporary reaction. So far, however, there has been no financial difficulty on the Paris Bourse, and the settlement was completed without any failure. Argentine Government stocks, after improving, are again lower, the Funding Loan at 88, the 1886 Loan at 89¼, Buenos Ayres Water and Drainage bonds at 71¾. Argentine Railway stocks, on the other hand, have shown renewed dulness, there being still a considerable "Bull" account open in these. Buenos Ayres Great Southern Ordinary stand at 151, Buenos Ayres and Rosario at 72, Buenos Ayres and Pacific First Prefs. at 91, Central Argentine at 80½, while Cordoba Central (Central Northern Section), Income Debenture stock is quoted as low as 48½. I gave my readers timely warning not to buy the last-mentioned stock as long as the large traffic decreases continued, and for the present there appears to be no prospect of any improvement, although if I were a holder I should not sell now. The strongest stocks in the South American section have been Uruguay, the Old Loan having risen to 44, the New Loan to 55½. The news from Monte Video is in every respect satisfactory, and Señor Cuestas is apparently firmly established as dictator. Mexican Sixes and Peruvian Corporation stocks have been fairly steady, but Brazilians continue dull notwithstanding the election by a large majority of Señor Campos Salles as President. I suppose there is something very wrong in Brazilian finance, as otherwise the improvement in politics would have affected the prices of the stocks favourably.

Reforming the Paris Bourse.

The disputes between the parquet and the coulisse of the Paris Bourse have finally forced action on the part of M. Cochery, the French Minister of Finance, and it is indeed surprising that some reform of the antiquated methods of the Bourse has not been attempted long ago. I believe that the Bourse was instituted, in the first place, by decree of Napoleon I., while at Moscow, and that there has been hardly any change in the conditions under which the agents de change carry on business. Of these the number is limited to sixty, and they are practically alone authorised to deal in officially quoted securities. The coulisse, or outside market, has, however, gradually grown up and assumed very large proportions, especially in dealings in securities that are not officially quoted. Gradually the coulissiers have encroached upon the privileges of the agents de change—the members of the parquet—which is not by any means surprising, when it is considered how enormously business in stocks and shares has grown during the nineteenth century. The privileges of the agents de change are most valuable, but their number is too small, and one of the changes now proposed by M. Cochery is to increase their number from sixty to eighty, by raising some of the leading coulisse firms to official rank. The further measure proposed by the Minister, of grouping the agents de change by specialties thus creating separate markets would be obviously useful. Indeed, it is difficult to see how business could be carried on on the London Stock Exchange without this sub-division into different markets. On our Stock Exchange, however, we have the assistance of the jobbers, who create the different markets, while in Paris the "jobber's turn" does not exist, broker dealing direct with broker. The much-maligned jobber, however, has his very useful function, as through him there is always a dealable market in the various sections of stocks, which is not the case in the French capital. The commissions of the agents de change, moreover, are high, and while the parquet charges, for instance, ⅛ on Turks, the coulisse does business at $\frac{1}{16}$ or even less, while the commission of the coulisse on Spanish is $\frac{1}{32}$ to $\frac{1}{16}$ per cent., as against ⅛ to ¼ per cent. of the parquet. Hence the third reform proposed, viz., the lowering of the brokerage of the parquet. In view of the privileges hitherto conferred upon the agents de change, their positions were highly appreciated, and the goodwill was valued, according to the clientèle at from 2,000,000 fr. to 10,000,000 fr., the latter price having more than once been paid. In addition to paying a certain sum for membership the agent de change has to make a dépôt of 1,000,000 fr. in the Banque de France, and he must also provide a fonds de roulement of 1,500,000 fr. Thus it is evident that only a wealthy man can hold this position. The coulisse, by the way, cannot possibly be done away with, neither is it intended to do so, and M. Cochery fully realises that the dealings in the coulisse, or unofficial market in French Rentes, for instance are absolutely necessary for the public credit. I have no doubt but that the reform of the Bourse will leave the position of the coulisse very much where it was. For instance, in stocks not officially quoted they will almost have a monopoly, and as no mining shares of any other par value than 100 fr. (£4) are officially quoted, the coulisse will retain the business in all the mining shares of a lower denomination, and more especially in those of 25 fr. (£1), which is the general run of the mining market. It is obvious, therefore, that the reforms now contemplated will not hurt the South African market to any extent, and if there is any fault to find with the movement it is that the reforms will not go far enough, and will not do away altogether with the antiquated usages practised on the Paris Bourse.

The Kaffir Circus Still Nervous.

The rally in the Kaffir Circus had made room for a fresh reaction. Somehow or other, people appear to think that something is going to happen in South Africa which will interfere with the market. From all accounts which I have been able to obtain, however, there is nothing in this nervous state of apprehension. President Kruger is not, perhaps, in the best of humours with this country, and various hints have been thrown out that the Volksraad means to disavow the suzerainty. As far as I can learn, Oom Paul is not going to proceed to such extremes, but he will temporise, especially in view of the fact that the foreign complications of this country are gradually being solved, so that there is no chance of taking Great Britain at a disadvantage just now. Mr. Chamberlain is not going to trouble himself about the question of judges in the Transvaal, and on the other hand, the talk about the Transvaal Government putting a tax of fifteen per cent. on the revenue of the mining companies is evidently altogether irresponsible. There remains the unfavourable circumstance that the February crushings of the Witwatersrand mines cannot mark a record. To begin with, it is a short month, and it is known that native labour was scarce. On the other hand, this and more than this is fully discounted in the present low prices of South African shares. It is true that there may still be some wreckage to clear away from last account, but a considerable proportion of the stock which has recently been thrown on the market has undoubtedly found a resting-place in firm hands, and to this extent the position is distinctly improved. The most important decline has occurred in Rand Mines, which dropped at one time to 28, rallying to 28¾. All kinds of rumours have been current concerning the Deep Level mines, with the object of causing a relapse in these, but I fancy that the Deep Levels will defeat their enemies. I learn from my Johannesburg correspondent that very satisfactory progress continues to be made with the Deep Levels. The latest Company to strike the reef and to arrange its finances on a sound basis is the Knight's Deep, which owns 185 claims on the dip of the Glencairn and Witwatersrand Companies, and adjoins the Glen Deep on the east. The reef was struck in the "Robertson" or western shaft at a depth of 1,173 ft., and the assays vary from 8 dwt. to 20 dwt. over 4 ft. As regards finance, a loan of £400,000 has been arranged, in the form of debentures bearing interest at 5½ per cent., with the option to convert into Ordinary shares at £4 within two years. The principal and interest are guaranteed by the Consolidated Goldfields of South Africa, which Company, moreover, waives its right to call 29,500 shares, at £3 per share, a call granted in consideration of an existing loan of £88,500. As the Knight's Deep has 106,000 reserve shares unissued, the debenture loan is fully secured, and the arrangement must be considered a most satisfactory one from the shareholders' point of view. The large firm interested in Rand Mines, Limited, can, of course, by simply showing itself in the market again, put the price up two or three points, and I would strongly advise operators not to go short of these shares. There is no doubt that a great deal of "Bear" selling is going on just now, and the slightest improvement in the outlook would bring about a regular "Bear" squeeze, in Rand Mines, in Consolidated Goldfields, and in East Rands, which have been specially selected for attack by the ursine party. In most of the other shares the mere fact that stale "Bulls" have cleared out has caused slight falls, but the reaction has been by no means important, and in the case of a number of the lower-priced shares, bottom has evidently been reached. A rally in Chartered shares is ascribed to the communication made by Mr. Chamberlain, according to which the Government does not object to the re-election by the shareholders of Mr. Cecil Rhodes on the board, and under these circumstances it is a foregone conclusion that at the meeting to be held on April 4, not only Mr. Rhodes, but also Mr. Beit, will be reappointed. I am glad that my suggestion, that the shareholders of the South African Gold Trust should reverse their decision with regard to the directors, has been adopted. At Monday's meeting of the shareholders a vote of confidence in the Board was passed, and the merits of the Chairman, Mr. H. E. M. Davies, were duly acknowledged by every speaker. It is satisfactory to know that the valuable services of the chairman will be retained by the Company. Diamond shares have displayed weakness, De Beers suffering from the nervous state of the Paris Bourse, and from the Russian scare, which have put the price down to 27¾. New Jagersfontein are also lower at 7¾.

Golden West Australia.

Although the surroundings were most discouraging, the "Kangaroo" department has kept up its spirits remarkably well. There have been declines in various directions, they but took place chiefly in the less-known mining shares, while advices from the colony are in every respect satisfactory. The latest from Western Australia is the announcement that the coal discoveries are proving most important, and that several collieries will soon be at work. This will be of considerable importance to the mines, as the wood surrounding the better-known properties is being cut down to such an extent that little fuel will be left for the use of the mines. The production of gold goes on steadily, although for February the exports fell off. This, however, is evidently only a temporary circumstance, due to accidental causes, and March is expected to prove all the more favourable, a record crushing being looked for. During the past week the following crushings have been reported:—

—	Tons of Ore Crushed.	Oz. of Gold.	Assay of Tailings per ton.
Great Boulder Proprietary	1,413	3,220	—
North Boulder	341	350	—
Cuddingwarra	335	335	—
Golden Arrow	98	101	—
Australian Champion Reef	373	168	—
Champion Extended and Home Rule	785	396	—
St. Agnes Gold Reefs	370	162	—
Crown United	40	19	—
Burbanks Consols	18	14½	—
Queensland Menzies	220	670	—
Princess Royal (Cue)	130	126	—
Belle Vue Proprietary	186	210	—
Australia United	210	439	—
Norseman	697	515	—
Bayley's United (tailings)	679	842	—
Menzies Consolidated	650	597	—
Ivanhoe Gold	929	1,497	14 dwts.
White Feather Main Reef	600	380	—
White Feather Reward Claim	527	282¼	—
Hannan's Brownhill (Sands and Slimes)	994	1,840	—
Light of Asia Amalgamated	200	189	—
Menzies Crusoe	133	106	10 dwt.
,, ,, (Cyanide)	800	600	—
,, ,, (Plates)	—	93	—
Menzies Gold Reefs	60	102	14 dwt.
Burbank's Birthday Gift	460	851	—
Hannan's Reward (Cement)	513	86	1 dwt.
Robinson (W.A.)	415	292	—

The Great Boulder Proprietary is steadily going on with a large output. Some of the trial crushings above referred to are not, perhaps, very encouraging, but other returns must be considered as exceedingly satisfactory. An announcement which caused at one time a considerable improvement in Lake View Consols, now quoted 9¼, has been that of another dividend of 10s. per share, making £1 per share so far declared; but I do not suppose that the price of Lake View Consols will rise to any considerable extent until the crushings become larger, which should occur when the new battery gets to work. According to the latest cablegram from the mine, the ten additional stamps were expected to start on March 6, and should therefore now be crushing. It also appears that the filter presses have only just been delivered complete, and these will commence to run on March 21. The news concerning the developments at the 300 ft. level is also very satisfactory. The special settlement of the Ivanhoe Mine has at last been fixed for the 17th inst. The news from that property is in every respect satisfactory, and seems to point to a considerable advance in the price of the shares. Further meetings of the various sub-Companies of the London and Globe Finance Corporation have been held, and there seems now to be a distinct change in the views taken by those who are seeking to guide the opinions of the shareholders. The fact is that the latter are realising that unless they agree to the amalgamation there will have to be reconstruction, in which case they will have to put their hands in their pockets to find more working capital. If, on the other hand, the scheme of the London and Globe Corporation is accepted, this company will guarantee the finding of the working capital. The policy which has now been adopted, to ask the shareholders at large to signify their wishes by filling in a form as to whether they would prefer amalgamation to reconstruction, is undoubtedly a correct one, and I sincerely hope that the shareholders will take the trouble to fill up these forms. That will place the directors and members of the shareholders' committee too, in a position to fulfil their desires. Personally, I repeat the view that amalgamation would be to the greater advantage of the shareholders, and that it would be more likely to recoup them at an earlier date for the losses and disappointments they have experienced. The West Australian Market Trust group has again shown great strength, and Northern Territories have now gone ahead to 4¾, on a cablegram received from Port Darwin by the Financial News, according to which the properties are phenomenally rich, especially the Eureka and Howley. It is stated that in the former there is sufficient high-grade ore in sight to keep forty heads of stamps at work for several years. A new mill is in course of erection, and it is reported that the cyanide plant is at work on the tailings, of which about 50,000 tons are stated to be available from old Chinese workings, running from 1 oz. to 3 oz. per ton. Some remarkable trial crushings are reported, but the cablegram states that the general value at the 150-ft. levels is roughly 6 oz. West Australian Loan and General Finance shares are steady at 2 1/16, and a large business has been transacted in West Australian Joint Stock Founders' shares at 1 to 1⅛. In view of coming dividends these shares are considered very promising. The news from the Australia Mine of the Associated Gold Mines is exceedingly favourable, and the price of the latter shares is close upon 4. Great Boulder Proprietary have been dull and lower at 21s. but a recovery does not appear to be far off. I hear that the West Boulder Company require some further working capital, and that a reconstruction has been arranged, in connection with which the amount necessary has already been guaranteed by substantial men. From the Central Boulder advices are of the most favourable character, and it is expected that this will prove a very rich property. A further issue of shares will be made in order to energetically work the property, and this will be offered to the shareholders in the first instance, although the whole amount has been guaranteed. Mr. John Waddington, who has just returned from Western Australia, brings some very favourable news concerning this property, and also with respect to the karri and jarrah industry. In fact, I believe he has some important concessions in connection with these in his pocket. Hannan's Proprietary have eased off to 16s. 6d., but in the new account they will doubtless again advance, as the news from the property continues in every respect satisfactory. West Australian Goldfields have been dull at 1⅞ while Hampton Plains have given rise to but small dealings at 15/16. In the London and West Australian Exploration group, Hannan's Brownhill have been firm, but after rising to 8¼, have reacted to 8. A steady business has been transacted in East Murchison United at 1, in Consolidated Murchison at 5s. 3d. West Australian Venture Corporation shares have improved to 6s. on a very favourable report which has been received from Field's Find. Lady Shenton's have risen to 2½ buyers, and there is reason to anticipate a jump in these shares at an early date. Golden Horseshoes have shown weakness, and are quoted 7$\frac{1}{16}$. According to mail information the main shaft on this property was on January 25 down 324 ft. There has been little doing in Great Boulder Perseverance and Kalgurli, and Belle Vue Proprietary have been fairly steady at 1$\frac{1}{16}$. At Monday's meeting of shareholders in the Corsair Consolidated, Limited, the proposal made by the vendors to hand over to the Company two new properties, and the scheme of reconstruction connected therewith, were unanimously adopted. There is every prospect that the Company will now retrieve its fortunes, and it is gratifying that the vendors have behaved so handsomely in the matter

Indian, Australasian, and British Columbian Mines.

In the Indian mining section a firm tone has prevailed, notwithstanding the surrounding depression. Movements have, however, been slight, and with the exception of a decline in Ooregum and a rise in Goldfields of Mysore, no changes have to be reported. Yet crushings continue most satisfactory, especially at the Mysore Gold Mine. Amongst Australian mines, other than West Australian, Broken Hill Proprietary have advanced, and New Australian Broken Hill are also firmer; but Mount Lyell, Mount Lyell North, and Aladdin's Lamp have given way. In Charters Towers mines Day Dawn P.C., Brilliant and St. George United, and Brilliant are all lower. In the New Zealand section losses have preponderated, notably in Waihi Silverton, Komata Reefs, Kauri Freehold, and Waitekauri; but Taitapu Estates are firmer. In the British Columbian department movements have been irregular. Hall Mines have been better, but B.C. Financial Trust and London and B.C. Goldfields have receded. New Goldfields of British Columbia are lower, while Fairview have hardened. British America Corporation shares, after rising to 3s. 3d. premium, are easier at 2s. 9d. premium; but the Hon. C. H. Mackintosh has now arrived with a number of reports and documents concerning the holdings of this Company in British Columbia, and it is expected that an important advance will take place shortly. By the way, several interviews are published which Mr. Mackintosh had before starting for this side. Amongst these is one which appeared in the Rossland Miner of February 8, which gives very favourable statements concerning the position of the Company, and seems to fully dispose of recent criticisms. I also gather from the British Columbia Mining Critic that the British America Corporation has now bought the Argenteuil claim on the North fork of Salmon river—a very promising district indeed, and has bought for $285,000 another important Rossland mine, the Columbia and Kootenay. My British Columbian contemporary also states that the British America Corporation has secured, at a price stated to be $25,000, Mr. E. Haney's interests in the Pack Train and Legal Tender mining claims on Nickel Plate flat. Mr. Haney's interest was contested, but the corporation has acquired the opposing rights, and now controls the ownership of the property. It is further reported that the British America Corporation has secured the Whoop-Up on Sophie Mountain, the sale of which has been already reported. In the general foreign section, Tolima "A" and "B" have hardened; but Consolidated Goldfields of California have been extremely flat, and there have also been declines in Montana and Bassett. Mexican gold mines have been steady, Grand Central at 1$\frac{13}{16}$, Consolidated Goldfields of Mexico at 1$\frac{3}{16}$, Campana at ¾.

Where are J. Edwards & Co. Now?

On February 24 I mentioned the experience of a reader of Truth in connection with certain "operations" of J. Edwards & Co., outside stock and share brokers, Talbot House, Arundel-street, Strand, W.C., and I stated that these people, who have hitherto boasted all along of enormous profits realised for their clients, admitted under date of February 16 that "the workings of the operation in Caledonian Deferred stock opened on February 9, 1898, have proved so unfortunate as to involve the total loss of the cover subscribed." The number of communications which have since reached me concerning J. Edwards & Co. has caused me to make inquiries at Talbot House, when I discovered that the persons trading under this name had left several weeks ago without giving any new address. I am not at all surprised at this collapse, which I have been anticipating for some time. What I cannot understand is, that notwithstanding my repeated warnings, persons could still be found foolish enough to trust these syndicate touts. J. Edwards & Co. held out much longer than many of the others, chiefly because they were not within reach of the City Solicitor. Had their domicile been within the City, they would long ago have made acquaintance with the law. Where they may have gone to is at present impossible to tell, but I should not be at all surprised if the same persons were to crop up elsewhere under a different name. I cannot refrain from quoting from the last circular of these individuals which came under my notice, and was dated February 7, in which the boast was made that forty-three different operations had during the past few weeks been successfully closed at profits ranging from 20 to 201½ per cent. I have frequently argued that if these touts could make the enormous profits of which they boasted, they would make them for their own account, and have retired as millionaires long ago, instead of realising them for entire strangers. As it is, they are merely clumsy touts, who rake in the money of foolish people, pay up on one or two "operations," and, after having induced their subscribers to increase their stakes, decamp with the lot, and nothing more is heard of them.

New Enterprises and Issues.

The prospectuses of the following new enterprises and issues have been placed before the public during the week:—

Lipton, Limited.—This Company has been formed to acquire as a going concern the business of Sir Thomas J. Lipton, which deals with tea, coffee, fruit preserving, cake and biscuit baking, confectionery, provisions, and general food products. The principal warehouse is in the City-road, with branches distributed all over England, Scotland, and Ireland. The Company also acquire several tea estates in Ceylon. The capital is fixed at £2,000,000, divided into Preference and Ordinary shares of £1 each, with a Four per Cent. Debenture issue of £500,000. The Ordinary shares are issued at 5s. premium.

A. Baker & Co., Limited.—With a capital of £200,000 in shares of £1 each, this Company has been formed for the purpose of purchasing the business of manufacturing and retail tobacconists carried on by A. Baker & Co. at 65, Holloway-road, with branches in the metropolis and suburbs.

The Patent Double Pick Loom Company, Limited.—This Company has been formed to acquire and work the inventions of Messrs. Slicer & d'Andria for the patent double pick loom, which have been secured for the United Kingdom and other countries. The share capital has been fixed at £150,000 in shares of £1 each.

The purchase price of this invention is to be £100,000, and the prospectus states that the German and Belgian patents have been sold for £80,000. The prospective profits are put down at £50,000. Is not this a little too transparent? It certainly ought to put investors on their guard. If as good as represented, the patent should be worth more than £20,000.

The Lake Bennett and Klondike Steam Navigation Company, Limited.—With a capital of £150,000, in £1 shares, this Company is formed for the purpose of establishing a line of steamers to trade from the head of Lake Bennett to Dawson City.

The prospectus states that this Company has a practical monopoly of the trade and passenger traffic to Klondike, but they wisely state "during the ensuing season." After that time there will, of course, come a flood of competition, and the expected profitable returns may be found wanting.

The Maximum of Effect at the Minimum of Cost.—An Object Lesson in Decorating and Furnishing can be obtained by inspecting Messrs. Waring's Suites of furnished rooms at 175-181, Oxford-st. W.

My Letter Box.

The following are replies to inquiries from various correspondents:—

Government, &c., Bonds.

Calm.—1. The new Chinese Loan cannot obviously be a safe investment, it would not bear such high interest if it were. The security is a reasonable one, but in your position you should run no risk, and should be satisfied with a yield of about 3 per cent. in gilt-edged securities. 2. The same applies to this. F. N.—Quite so. I am glad you are profiting by my advice as regards Uruguay bonds, which from 40 have advanced to 44½. Reader, Finchley-road.—It is impossible to recommend an absolutely safe South American Government stock, but I consider Uruguay bonds a good investment at the present price, and if you had bought the same when I recommended them at 40 you would have done better than buying now at 44½. Beaulieu.—It is really impossible to talk about safety in connection with South American Government securities or other securities yielding a high rate of interest, such as Chilians, Mexicans, Chinese, and Japanese. At their present prices they are fair investments, but there is always an element of risk connected with them.

Banks, Trusts, and Financial.

Constant Reader, Belfast.—If you are a regular reader of Truth you must know that my advice is to deal only through members of the Stock Exchange, and to leave outside concerns alone. Finance.—You would obviously forfeit the shares by not paying up, and all the same be liable for the calls, so that there is no option but to pay. A. W. J.—I cannot reply by letter. 1. No; I do not consider that this Bank is in a sound position. 2. To some extent fully merited. 3 to 5. You will find a leading article on this Bank in the Citizen of February 26, which will enlighten you fully. I. Do not deal with outside brokers. II. Of course, they are not members of the Stock Exchange but outside brokers. With regard to the mining matter referred to, there is no such exchange now, and it never had any chance of succeeding. J. T. P.—The documents are returned. You appear to have some cause for complaint, but I cannot help you in the matter. If you wish to employ a sharp City solicitor I will, on receipt of a stamped and addressed envelope, send you the name of such a firm. At the same time, I have so frequently warned my readers against having anything to do with outside brokers that I am surprised at your having any dealings with them. L. M. M.—I really could not take any responsibility as regards the solvency of the people you inquire about, and personally I doubt very much whether it will be possible to recover any of this money.

Home Rails.

B. T. R.—There is no special reason for getting out of Midland Deferred and Preferred at present. I, however, consider Dover "A" and Great Central 1894 Ordinary more promising investments. Deva.—1. I have again referred to the actual position of Great Central 1894 Ordinary in to-day's issue under "Home Rails." 2. I should prefer Glasgow and South Western to London and South Western Deferred, but even better investments are Caledonian Deferred (Coras) and Dover "A." X. Y. Z.—Obviously a clerical error. The yield at present is, as you say, 7½ per cent. per annum. Pilot.—I quite agree with you that Great Central 1894 Ordinary at present price are a good investment. Perplexed.—You do not seem to understand that the dividend of 3 per cent. per annum on Great Central 1894 Ordinary stock is only payable until the opening of the extension to London, but there is every prospect of good dividends being earned eventually. G. O. P.—I should think that Dover "A" and Coras (Caledonian Deferred) would be the best speculative purchase.

American and Foreign Rails.

Leo.—The trouble about the Antofagasta (Chili and Bolivia) Railway is that the mine belonging to the guaranteeing Company, the Huanchaca Mine, is flooded, thus rendering the position somewhat doubtful. After the heavy fall it would be advisable to hold, but you should not average yet. F. L.—Yes, you should certainly hold Baltimore and Ohio bonds, as the reorganisation plan is in course of preparation. F. C., Ramsgate.—1. I do not recommend the purchase. 2. After the heavy fall I should think that it would be better to hold now. The dividend will, of course, be considerably curtailed in view of the bad traffics. 3. I do not think there is any fear of war breaking out between the United States and Spain, and you had better hold your American Rails. Skipper.—1 and 2. No reason to sell. 3. Certainly hold Union Pacifics, there is every prospect of an important improvement. Dum.—After the heavy fall, I think it would be better to hold these Debentures. James.—It is really impossible to give an opinion on this matter without having all the documents before one, and I think you had better consult a solicitor.

Mining Shares.

L. A. C.—This is not the time to sell South African or any other mining shares, and you should hold all yours, No. 1 to 9. Ivanhoe (10), British America Corporation (11), and Narket Trusts (12), are good purchases; and No. 13 will doubtless recover. Scot.—1. These shares have declined in sympathy with the general collapse in the South African Market, and there is no option but to hold. 2. Hold for a recovery. 3. Do not sell Sheba now. Lincolnshire.—If you want to speculate in South Africans you might select such leading shares as Rand Mines, Consolidated Goldfields, East Rands, Randfontein, and Glencairn. Shirley.—This is a very doubtful concern, and prospects are by no means satisfactory. Sphinx.—Amongst the mining shares mentioned by you I consider the following the best purchase:—Lady Shenton, Randfontein, British America Corporation, and W.A. Market Trusts. Z.—1. I do not advise a purchase of Chaffers now. 2. Not at present. 3. Yes, you might average South African Gold Trusts. Weekly Reader.—Yes, Lady Shentons are good enough to hold for twice the present price. You had better double your holding in these rather than buy the other shares mentioned. See remarks elsewhere with regard to J. Edwards & Co. Heinrich.—I think that the improvement in West Australian Loan and General Finance shares speaks for itself. Brokers are very fond of repeating the claptrap which they hear from other people. No reason to sell. Shareholder.—These West Australian Syndicate shares have been very disappointing, but they should be held, as, with a general recovery, they will also doubtless improve. One Interested.—I have for a long time expressed an unfavourable view of the Guadalcazar Quicksilver Mines, and still hold the same opinion. Cribden.—You should hold all your mining shares for an improvement, and if you wish to make a further purchase you should buy Lady Shentons and Florence shares. A. The British-America Corporation is promising. B. I think that Tangier shares, which are similar, are preferable now as the price is lower—viz., 1⅜. D. Sons of Gwalia shares are promising, as are also Brownhill Central (E). Jimmy.—The South African market is at present very flat, and when it recovers these shares will probably improve. Gracedieu.—You should certainly hold Randfontein for a marked improvement. Twyn.—1. There is very little market for these shares at present, and there is no option but to hold. 2. I am afraid that the management is bad. 3. No option but to hold. Warwick.—No; I do not advise a purchase of these shares. This mine has nothing to do with the Lake View Consols. K. M.—You have done quite right in buying Florence shares (1) and Sons of Gwalia (2), which you should hold for a rise. As regards No. 3, you probably have a profit now, which you should take and reinvest in No. 3 (Tangier). Sell No. 4 on an improvement. J. R. Paisley.—I have referred to the question of J. Edwards & Co. in a separate paragraph. Hannan's Props. should be held for an important improvement. They have been taken in hand by a strong group, and the news from the property is very favourable.

Industrial Shares.

Nemo, Watford.—No; I do not advise the purchase. J. J.—A fair investment, but no catch. Hifa.—The following Industrial Debentures should suit you:—Millwall Docks Perpetual Five per Cent. Debenture stock at 152½; Gordon Hotels Four and a Half per Cent. Debenture stock at 137½; Savoy Hotel Four per Cent. Debenture stock at 112½; Courage & Co. Four per Cent. Debenture stock at 129; Guinness Five per Cent. Debenture stock at 122, and Parker's Burslem Four per Cent, First Mortgage Debenture stock at 113. 1. A fair investment, but at present I do not care for Dock stocks. 2. A fair investment. Water Gruel.—There is no official quotation for this stock. Erie.—1. Fish oils are a most speculative share, and I should not advise you to have anything to do with them. 2. This is a highly speculative and dangerous investment. 3. So high that a collapse might come about any time. 4. A fair investment at present price. 5. I do not care for these, or for Nos. 6 and 7. Mother.—As regards Industrial debentures see reply above to "Hifa." I cannot tell you when an official quotation of the new Welsbach stocks will be granted, but the present price of Welsbach Preferred stock is 101½, so that the value of the £5 Preference shares works out to slightly over 5. I cannot possibly express an opinion with regard to the Industrial issue in question until I have full particulars before me. You will find the information you require in the Citizen, which is published weekly (on Saturdays) at 10, Throgmorton-avenue, E.C., price 1d. Cymro.—Yes, I think you might with advantage exchange into Lady Shenton shares. M. J. R.—No, I do not advise investment in City and West-End Properties Prefs. Derby Ram.—No, I do not care for Bread shares, for which there is not always a ready market. Investor, Grimsby.—The capital of this Company is £200,000 in shares of £10 each, half being Five and a Half per Cent. Preference shares, and the other half Ordinary shares, in addition to £150,000 Four and a Half per Cent. Debenture stock. The Prefs. are a fair investment of the kind. Roland.—(A) A fair industrial investment, but, of course, speculative; you cannot call such a share safe. (B) This is not a high-class Mortgage debenture. Blackwood.—I certainly do not advise the purchase of the two last-named industrial shares. The Electric Preference shares may do fairly well. Acorn.—See reply to "Hifa." G. G.—I have heard nothing against this concern, but I do not advise you to do any business with it. Deal only through members of the Stock Exchange. I do not advise a purchase of the cycle shares now, as the depression in this section does not appear to have passed off. Allsopps (6) at present are also very dangerous, and the Tin shares (1), too, are not promising.

Mixed Investments.

Deodora.—A. This is not a stock which comes under the ordinary range of investments. B. No reason to sell. C. Ditto. D. No option but to hold. E. These may recover again. F to I. Hold these for the present. J and K are good investments, and

L, M, and N are fair investments of the kind. Vexatus.—1. Your best plan is to hold the South African shares for a recovery, which appears to be close at hand. No option but to hold the other shares. I see no objection to putting the other money into Lloyd's Bank shares. Ohio.—The Funding Loan certificates are about to be repaid, as you will gather from my remarks last week under "South Americans—The Corporation of Foreign Bondholders' Report." The Baltimore and Ohio bonds should be held for a recovery, as the reorganisation which is now being arranged should put the roads on its legs again. E. C. T.—1. A fair industrial investment, but speculative. 2. Broken Hill Props. are speculative, owing to the fluctuations in the price of silver, but at the present price they seem to be fair value. 3. No particular reason to sell at a loss at present. Another Mother, Ealing.—1. You will find some Industrial debentures suitable for you mentioned in reply to "Hifa" under "Industrial Shares," but you will quite understand that these are not gilt-edged securities, and if you want such you cannot obtain more than from 2½ to 2¾ per cent., as in British Corporation stocks. 2. Great Central 1894 Ordinary is very promising, but the stock should be locked up for some time. Quondam.—Why do you deal with outside brokers, who take every advantage of any little quibble? I do not see how you can resist the matter. If you wish to do so, I will send you the name of a smart firm of City solicitors, on receipt of a stamped and addressed envelope. The South African mine mentioned has been very disappointing, and you should not throw good money after bad, but get out the best way you can. N. M. T.—1. You are quite right. Amongst Uruguay bonds the 5 per cent. Loan returns the highest yield, but the bonds are not so well placed, and you will find that in any movement the 3½ per cent. Loan will go more quickly. Do not make any change. 2. Not at present. 3. Certainly, Lady Shentons should be held for a very important improvement. 4 and 5. No catch. Novice.—Yes, I consider Central London Railway fully-paid Ordinary at 10⅞ a good investment, and there is every prospect of an advance. The brewery company is a local concern, about which no information is available here. Holywell.—1. You cannot possibly buy at the lowest quotation. I believe the price was then ¾ to ⅞, which means that the buying price was ⅞, and the selling price ¾; but it will not be a question of a small fraction, and you are sure to do well with the shares. 2. No particular catch. 3. Speculative. 5. Lady Shentons are the most promising.

Various Investments.

Money is not getting dear enough for some people, and the money-bags have been doing their utmost to raise rates. While I do not see any chance of really cheaper money for some time to come, I do not anticipate either that we shall get very high rates, unless exceptional circumstances should occur. Just at present the American demand is falling upon the Bank of France, while our own money market is in a strong position, and gold is being attracted to this centre. The Chinese Loan is, I am told, to be issued very shortly, and is already fully underwritten. I do not suppose that much gold will leave this country on account of this loan, as both China and Japan will have large amounts to meet here. Silver is again on the downgrade, having declined to 25$\frac{3}{16}$d., but Rupee Paper is steady at 63½. Owing to the rumoured Russian demands on China, the Chinese loans have declined the Five per Cent. Gold Loan to 100½, the Six per Cent. Gold Loan to 105, the Silver Loan to 101. Consols, which are now quoted ex dividend, are lower at 111¾ x.d., but this is not by any means a low quotation, and certainly does not indicate any serious alarm of capitalists concerning the political outlook, notwithstanding the semi-panic through which we are passing. In the Cycle section an irregular tendency has prevailed. Humber Ordinary are unaltered at 14s., while the Extensions have hardened to 7s. 6d. Cycle Components are slightly easier at 2⅛, and Swifts are quiet at ¾, Singers at 13s. 6d. Amalgamated Tyres remain flat at 5s., while Dunlop Deferred have risen to 14s. 9d., and French Dunlops are quoted 5s. Allsopp Ordinary have been dull at 151, and brewery stocks generally have been somewhat neglected. Bovril Deferred have been dealt in to a considerable extent at 11s. 6d., and the Ordinary are quoted 20s. Recent sales have not been effected by any one connected with the Company, and it is understood that large profits are being earned. Schweppes have been steady, the Deferred at 11s., the Ordinary at 1$\frac{3}{16}$. A sharp relapse occurred at one time in Welsbach Incandescent Gas Light shares, but prices are now somewhat above the lowest, the Ordinary at 115½, the Preferred at 101, the Deferred at 21s. Lyons shares have advanced to 3⅝ on a variety of rumours, most of which are unconfirmed. The rise would certainly not be justified merely by the acquisition of premises for a depot in Throgmorton-street. The dangerous gamble in Russian Petroleum shares, which have now risen to 21½ for the £10 shares, may collapse at any time. Hudson Bays, which at one time were so largely dealt in speculatively, have turned quite dull, and the price has fallen to 21¼. I have received several communications with reference to the liquidation of the firm of Eliot, Pearce & Co., bankers, Weymouth. This bank stopped payment on March 31, 1897, and up to date one dividend of 6s. 8d. in the £ has been paid. Many persons have lost their all, and the distress amongst these is great. It is really desirable that some more light should be thrown upon the whole matter, and I hope that the liquidator will publish a full report at an early date. The following advertisement recently appeared in the Daily Telegraph:—

> Large Profits.—Persons desirous of obtaining a very large return on their capital, combined with absolute safety, should write for particulars of one of the most lucrative investments of the day to Messrs. Davenport & Co., 18A, London-street, London, E.C.

A reader of Truth, who thereupon wrote to Davenport & Co., received from them a circular in which they recommended their "Double Operation Guaranteed System:—A mathematical and infallible method of making money by transactions in active securities quoted on the London Stock Exchange." Of course, Davenport & Co. promise immense profits without risk to those who favour them with subscriptions of either £5, £10, £20, £50, £100, and upwards. I have already explained on a former occasion that this double system consists of opening a "Bull" and "Bear" account in the same stock at the same time, a most curious combination which cannot, according to my lights, ever result in any satisfactory profit. Another outside broker is working under the title of "The Alliance Guarantee Syndicate," of 15, Great St. Helen's, E.C. He also patronises the advertising columns of the Daily Telegraph, the following advertisement having recently appeared:—

> How to Become a Modern Crœsus.—Investors having £5 and upwards should write for particulars of a highly-lucrative Investment. Interest paid weekly. Not a speculation.—Address Genuine, Box 9,365, Postal Department, Daily Telegraph, Fleet-street, E.C.

On replying to this advertisement a reader of Truth received a typewritten circular from the Alliance Guarantee Syndicate, proposing the investment of amounts of from £5 to £100, for which a weekly profit of £2 10s. on every £100 is promised. It appears from this document that the boom in British Columbia offers endless facilities for the employment of capital in the manner suggested by the Alliance Guarantee Syndicate, and as far as the somewhat hazy circular explains, the profits from which this large return is to be made are to be obtained by exercising options for the purchase of gold-bearing claims in the Kootenay goldfields. I should, however, strongly advise my readers to keep their money in their own pockets.—Your affectionate uncle,

MOSES.

P.S., Tuesday Morning.—Like a bolt from the blue the news of further action by Russia in China has come upon the Stock Markets, aggravating the depression which had already prevailed. The Cuban scare, too, assumed alarming proportions; but it almost looks as if, now that Spain has withdrawn her demand for the recall of General Lee, and that the question of the vessels to carry aid to the distressed Cubans has been adjusted, the incident might clear the air, and, at all events, calm somewhat the Jingo talk in the States, which has all along been the greatest source of danger. This view was this morning taken on the London Stock Exchange, which opened $1 above New York parity. The favourable decision in the Nebraska case would, under ordinary circumstances, have caused a smart advance, and it will in due time benefit the market, as it greatly improves the Railroad position.—M.

Brighton.—Norfolk Hotel.—Old-established County and Family Hotel. The best situation. Replete with comfort, style, and luxury. Moderate charges.—Jules A. Creighton, Manager.

All Rights Reserved.

QUEER STORY.

MRS. BRABAZON'S BICYCLE GYMKHANA.

A BICYCLE gymkhana seems an innocent amusement enough on the face of it, but somehow the one that Mrs. Brabazon got up was responsible for several untoward consequences. For one thing it made deadly enemies of two people whose families had been close friends and allies for generations—but that, as Mr. Kipling says, is another story. Then it brought about the meeting of Captain Willis and Mrs. Davidson, and all the world knows what came of that—but that also is another story. Then as regards Jim Beresford and Mab Montague. Well, if it had not been for Mrs. Brabazon's Bicycle Gymkhana, Jim Beresford and Mab Montague might never—but that is the story I am going to tell, so I must not anticipate.

Mab was nineteen and very pretty, with the most kissable little face in the world, and a general air of fluffy innocence that made her look like an overgrown baby. Her ways were as pretty as her face, and she managed to charm and beguile all the men with whom she came in contact save and except General Tempest only. General Tempest was her guardian, and he was about as well fitted to occupy that position as is the usual round man to occupy the usual square hole—that is to say, he was not fitted at all. The fates that rule our destiny are not infallible, and when they decreed that the guardianship of Mab Montague should fall to the lot of General Tempest, they made a very grave mistake indeed. For he was a martinet of the most aggressive type, and a tyrant of the first water; intolerant, selfish, unjust, and ungenerous; the very last man who ought to have been set in authority over a high-spirited, warm-hearted, sensitive girl. He did not understand women, and did not try to; and his sole idea of dealing with them could be summed up in one comprehensive word—bullying. He had bullied Mab systematically and conscientiously during the ten years that she had lived under his roof, and she had stood it very well on the whole. For ten years she submitted to have her small follies and vanities sneered at, her opinions derided, and her feelings hurt, and made no open show of resentment or rebellion; but, at the end of that time, the inevitable climax came. It took the shape of two lovers. Mab loved the one and hated the other, and the General approved of the one and disapproved of the other.

There was a scene. Mab pleaded and protested, and expostulated, and wept floods of passionate tears, but the General was adamant. She could not touch him anywhere. The fancies of a love-sick girl, he declared in his most dogmatic manner, were beneath the serious consideration of any sensible man, and he should not consider them. The choice of a husband was not a matter in which she ought to expect to have a voice, and he should not allow her one. He did not wish her to marry Jim Beresford, and he did wish her to marry Philip Cunard, and she would have to marry Philip Cunard, and the sooner she made up her mind to it the better.

Then Mab dried her eyes and wept no more tears, but faced the General, holding her pretty head very erect, and told him that she intended to have a voice in the matter, whether he allowed her one or not, and to marry the man she loved in spite of him.

The General's face was a study. After she had said her say, he sat in silence for quite two minutes, choking with wrath and amazement. Then the storm broke, and raged with unabated fury, until Mab grew tired of listening to bitter and unjust speeches, and quietly left the room.

The General was a man of action as well as a man of words, and after that day he installed a grim, elderly maiden cousin at the head of the household, ostensibly to act as chaperon to Mab, but in reality to be a spy and check upon her actions. Poor Mab! The state of things was now very bad indeed. She had no privacy, and no liberty. She was not allowed to go out of the house alone, and she had no chance of writing or speaking to Jim Beresford, while Philip Cunard's hateful company was forced upon her constantly. Yet she did not despair. She knew that Jim loved her, and she trusted that in time all would be well. Only the time seemed so long. She was very young, and youth is always intolerant and impatient. The calm unruffled philosophy that weighs one thing with another and takes life as it comes is the growth of age and experience alone.

Matters had been in this uncomfortable state for some months, when Sir George Tempest, the General's elder brother and the head of the family, came to stay at East Hill. Now, Mab adored Sir George, who was always kind to her, and Sir George was very fond of Mab. Privately, he took her part in every way, and thought the General's treatment of her little short of brutal. Openly, however, he seldom interfered, or said a word on her behalf—not because he did not long to interfere and say a good many words on her behalf, but because such interference had no effect beyond that of further incensing the General, and so making things worse.

When one morning, as he was smoking a cigarette in the garden, Mab joined him with tears in her eyes and a most woe-begone expression on her face, he was very much upset.

"I am so miserable, Sir George," said Mab, "awfully miserable."

She broke off with a little sob, and Sir George coughed uneasily. He liked pretty girls, and he hated to see them cry.

"Are you, my dear?" he said, kindly. "I'm very sorry to hear it."

She slipped her hand through his arm, and gave it a little squeeze.

"I want to talk to you," she said. "May I?"

"But, my dear," objected Sir George, "you're going to cry, and I can't bear to see a woman cry, you know. It knocks me out of time altogether."

"No," said Mab, resolutely strangling a wild desire to laugh and sob at the same time. "I am not going to cry. I am not going to make you uncomfortable in any way. I am going to ask you to do something for me, that's all. Just one little tiny, weeny thing. Will you promise to do it?"

She flashed him a very eloquent glance from her big—yes—such pretty blue eyes! and Sir George resigned himself to his fate.

"Well, my dear," he answered, "you must tell me what you want first, and then if I can do it for you I will."

"Oh! you can do it," returned Mab, "you can do it if you will."

"Well, what is it, my dear?" asked Sir George.

She clasped her hands round his arm, and rubbed her soft cheek caressingly on his rough tweed shoulder.

"I want to ride in Mrs. Brabazon's Bicycle Gymkhana," she said, "and I'm afraid the General won't let me. Do arrange it for me, you dear old thing."

"Mrs. Brabazon's Bicycle Gymkhana," Sir George repeated; "I don't think I knew she was going to give one."

"Oh, yes!" said Mab "It is to be on the 15th. They were all talking about it at Mrs. Robinson's garden party yesterday. It will be no end of fun, and I'm simply dying to ride. Our invitation came this morning, I know, for I saw the card on the breakfast table."

Sir George shook his head.

"I'm afraid my brother won't let you ride, my dear," he said, reluctantly; "and I don't see what I can do in the matter."

Mab drew up her tiny figure to its full height, and faced him with flushed cheeks and flashing eyes.

"The General is a tyrant," she cried, passionately. "He has no heart, only a stone. He is hard and cruel and unjust. He thinks he can force me to give up the man I love, and compel me to marry the man I hate, but he will find out his mistake. No woman worth the name was ever forced in matters of that kind. If he were my father it would be different, but he is not my father. If there were anything against Jim, it would be different; but there is nothing against him. He is the best man in the world, and I will never give him up; never! I will stand by him through everything, and at all costs." Then suddenly, all the passion died out of her face, and her eyes grew dark again with unshed tears. "Do you think me very wicked?" she asked, in a weary, hopeless tone that went straight to Sir George's kind heart. "Perhaps I am. I don't know. I only know that I am very, very unhappy."

Sir George took her hand in his and patted it soothingly.

"There, there, my dear," he said, "never mind. You mustn't cry, or I shall have to run away."

"I won't cry," said Mab, "I promised I wouldn't, and I won't, but—but—Oh! Sir George, Jim will be at Mrs. Brabazon's. He is going to ride, and if I could ride too, perhaps I might get a word with him—just one word. You wouldn't grudge me that, would you?"

"I, my dear?" said Sir George, rather huskily, "I wouldn't grudge you any number of words. I like Beresford, you know. I consider him a very fine young fellow, and good enough for you—and that is the highest praise I can bestow on any man, for only the very best is good enough for you."

Mab laughed to save a sob.

"Don't," she said, with a little catch in her voice—"don't talk to me like that! I'm not used to it, and I shall only do something silly and annoy you."

Sir George patted her hand again.

"I am afraid I can't help you, my dear," he said, "so you'd better give up thinking about it. If I were to try and persuade my brother to let you ride, it would only make him all the more determined not to let you. You know he always does exactly the reverse of what I want him to do."

Mab nodded.

"I know he does," she said, "and that is just why I think you can help me so well. If you try to persuade him to let me ride, of course it will make him determined not to let me, but if you try and persuade him not to let me ride, there is just the off-chance that it may make him determined to let me, just to show you that he won't take any interference from you. Do you see?"

Sir George looked doubtful.

"Oh! yes, I see," he answered, "but it's a poor chance, a very poor chance. I shouldn't pin my faith to it, my dear, if I were you."

"But will you try it?" Mab cried eagerly, "Oh! do say you will try it. Do."

Very few men could have resisted the look in her uplifted eyes, and Sir George did not try to resist it.

"Yes, I'll try it, my dear," he answered. "I'll try it, but I don't think it will be any good."

A joyful light flashed over her eloquent face.

"You dear old thing!" she cried. "Oh! you dear old thing! I love you better than any one in the world, except Jim. It's awfully good of you to try and help me, and I'll never forget your kindness, even if you don't succeed; and—and—Oh! would you mind going now, at once? Do go now. I can't bear suspense, it maddens me. I would far rather know the worst."

"Very well," said Sir George, good-naturedly. "I'll go now, my dear, but don't—don't be too hopeful."

He found the General sitting at his writing table in the library with Mrs. Brabazon's card before him. His pen was in his hand, and he was just on the point of writing an answer when Sir George entered the room.

"Oh! it's you," he grunted, when he saw who the intruder was, "Sit down for a minute, will you, while I answer this thing. I'll talk to you afterwards"

Sir George strolled up to the writing table, with his hands in his pockets and the most indifferent air he could assume.

"What is that?" he asked, nodding towards the card.

The General snorted contemptuously,

"An invitation to Mrs. Brabazon's Bicycle Gymkhana," he answered "Really there seems to be no limit to the rot that people inundate one with nowadays. A Bicycle Gymkhana indeed! What next?"

Sir George nodded.

"What next!" he echoed. "Of course you're going to refuse."

"Humph!" grunted the General.

"Of course you won't go to it," Sir George went on, feeling like a nineteenth century Machiavelli, "and as for letting Mab ride, why of course you would never think of such a thing."

The General looked up sharply.

"Why?" he asked.

"Why?" echoed Sir George, assuming quite a judicial tone. "Oh, because it would be a very ill-advised thing to do, a very ill-advised thing indeed. Ten to one young Beresford will be there, and if you take my advice——"

"Confound your advice!" spluttered the General, turning purple with rage, "Confound your advice, sir! Keep it till it's asked for. You may be my elder brother and the head of the family, but I'll see you at Hanover before I'll be dictated to and domineered over by you. What do I care for young Beresford? What do I care for fifty young Beresfords? Am I such a fool that I can't manage a girl of nineteen? If I choose that Mab shall ride in this rotten show, she shall ride. And if she rides I'll see that she conducts herself properly, in spite of young Beresford or young anybody else."

Sir George stroked his moustache to conceal a smile.

"I didn't mean to put your back up," he said, "I only thought——"

"Then you shouldn't think," raved the General. "What business have you to think about my affairs? Things are coming to a pretty pass, a very pretty pass indeed, when I'm hectored and brow-beaten in my own house, first by an ignorant, ungrateful child, and then by my own brother. But I won't stand it, George. I'm a mild-tempered man, as all the world knows, but I won't take interference from anybody. I shall go to Mrs. Brabazon's Bicycle Gymkhana, and I shall let Mab ride, so there's an end to the matter. It's no good arguing with me. My mind is made up."

Sir George smiled again as he sauntered out of the room to rejoin Mab in the garden.

"The child's a thorough woman, though she looks such a baby," he mused. "A wilful woman, too; and a wilful woman must have her way." And then he quoted four lines of an old rhyming proverb, smiling still more—

> That man's a fool who tries, by force or skill,
> To stem the current of a woman's will;
> For if she will, she will; you may depend on't—
> And if she won't, she won't; and there's an end on't.

* * * * *

The day of Mrs. Brabazon's Bicycle Gymkhana dawned fresh and fair—an ideal June day of cloudless skies and golden sunshine, glad with the song of birds and sweet with the scent of roses. The large lawn in front of the house was a very gay and animated scene indeed, when the East Hill party arrived. The tracks were all marked out with brightly-coloured flags that waved and fluttered in the breeze, and a band discoursed sweet music under the trees. Most of the competitors had already assembled, and were laughing and talking in groups, criticising the arrangements, and discussing one another's chances of carrying off the prizes, which were temptingly displayed on a little table outside the drawing-room window.

Mab went to get her number, escorted by Miss Tempest, and then returned at once to her party to wait under the General's personal supervision until the races began. She looked nervous and excited, and her eyes kept wandering wistfully over the laughing crowd towards a little group of which Jim Beresford formed the centre. The most formal of bows was the only greeting that had passed between them, and Sir George wondered how they would manage to exchange any words directly under the lynx eyes of the General and Miss Tempest. That they did manage it some way subsequent events showed, but how, when, and where, Sir George was never able to make out.

At three o'clock the starting bell sounded, and a little flutter ran through the expectant crowd. Mab sprang to her saddle as lightly as a bird, and wheeled swiftly away to join the groups that were collecting at the head of the tracks. Very pretty and very dainty she looked in her fresh white bicycling suit. Her cheeks were flushed with excitement, her eyes shone like stars, and the perfect poise of her slender figure, swaying lightly and easily with every motion of the wheel that she guided so skilfully, gave the lie direct to the oft-made assertion that bicycling is an ungraceful and unbecoming exercise for women.

"Go!" cried the starter; and away flew half-a-dozen girls, dropping potatoes into flower-pots as they went.

Mab was the most successful one. She managed to drop all the homely vegetables with which her hands were filled into the receptacles provided for them, and quite a little round of applause greeted her as she rode back to the starting-point, looking prettier than ever.

"Well done, Miss Montague!" said the starter, and then he began to marshal another line of girls into something approaching order.

Race followed race in quick succession, and the afternoon wore on. Of course they had an egg and spoon race, and a tortoise race, and a serpentine race, and all the usual exciting events. The last and most successful of all was the musical ride, in which Mab distinguished herself afresh by playing the guitar and singing a fashionable plantation song in a way that elicited a perfect storm of applause from the audience. Jim Beresford clapped louder than anybody, but he kept his distance.

Then came tea under the trees, and as soon as the General had swallowed a cup he began to think about going. He always liked to be as nearly as possible the last to arrive at entertainments, and the first to leave. That was one of his amiable weaknesses.

"Now, Mab," he said, standing up.

Sir George, who was sitting by Mab, saw a look of utter dismay and consternation flash over her expressive face; but the next moment she was walking decorously by her guardian's side towards their hostess.

"Going!" exclaimed Mrs. Brabazon, making no attempt to take the General's proffered hand. "Oh! nonsense. I can't hear of such a thing. You mustn't take Mab away, and break up my party like this. Why, the prizes haven't been given yet, and Mab has won two. Besides, there is another race to come off after tea—an extra event that we only put in this afternoon after the programme was made up. It was Mab's suggestion, too, and she persuaded me to have it, so you must let her take part in it. Sit down again, please, and don't say any more about going till I give you permission."

The General was bearish, but he was also by way of being a gentleman, and he could not very well refuse his hostess, so he gave in with the best grace he could muster.

Sir George looked down at Mab.

"What is the extra event, my dear?" he asked. "If it's your suggestion, it's sure to be something good."

She laughed, and the pretty colour deepened in her cheeks.

"Oh! it's only a trick race," she explained. "Everybody is to show off their own special trick, you know. No restrictions."

"Oh! is that all?" said Sir George. "It will be very amusing, I dare say. What is your special trick, my dear?"

She laughed again.

"Wait and see," she said. "Wait and see."

The extra event proved to be most amusing, and quite the feature of the entertainment. All the competitors gave some special performance on which they prided themselves, and some of them were very funny indeed.

"This was a good suggestion of yours, Miss Montague," said the starter, between shouts of laughter. "It's brought out some queer exhibitions, by Jove! And now, how about your turn? I think it's time for you to show us what you can do, isn't it?"

Mab grew rather pale, and a curious look of mingled defiance and amusement flashed into her eyes.

"All right," she said, "I'll show you."

Sir George from his place in the audience watched her attentively as she started off, riding very slowly and carefully.

"I wonder what she is going to do," he said.

Just then a furious exclamation broke from the General.

"Look at that! Look at that, I say! Under my very eyes, too! What does it mean? What the—the deuce does it mean?"

Sir George looked, and as he looked he could not repress a smile. For as Mab rode along, Jim Beresford wheeled out from the crowd and joined her, and they rode side by side and hand in hand, while the spectators looked on wonderingly.

"I suppose," said Sir George, "they are going to do something together—a sort of Gretna Green race it looks like."

It did indeed. At that point Jim and Mab reached the end of the track, and suddenly unclasped their hands. A moment later they had put on speed, and were racing down the lawn towards the drive as if they were racing for dear life.

"Stop them, can't you!" shrieked the General, addressing himself to the crowd at large and dancing about in a perfect frenzy. "Stop them! Stop them! What the devil—the devil! Stop them, I say! Stop them!"

But the spectators only looked wonderingly at one another, for they did not at all grasp what had happened. By the time they realised the fact that Jim and Mab were not performing a trick in the common or gymkhana sense of the term, pursuit was practically useless, for the runaways had left the park far behind them, and were speeding along the high road in the direction of the nearest railway station as fast as two 1898 first grade machines could carry them.

Then Mrs. Brabazon's Bicycle Gymkhana came to an abrupt close.

MUSIC.

ANOTHER "DIPLOMA" DEPOT.

About a year ago I devoted some attention to certain schemes put before the public for musical examinations and the granting of more or less valuable diplomas. Some of these enterprises are still existent, and no doubt are reaping an excellent harvest, while others seem to have gone under. A new scheme has been started, though not, I think, under the limited liability plan, or, at any rate, I cannot find any record of it at Somerset House. It seems to be entitled the "Music Teachers' Guild, British and Colonial"; its offices are at 73, Berners-street, and its secretary, pro tem. is Mr. F. W. Chanot. Parenthetically it may be remarked that Mr. Chanot is a violin maker and importer and publisher of violin music at 73, Berners-street, aforesaid. The new Guild is declared to be the result of a remark made by Sir John Stainer at the last conference of the Incorporated Society of Musicians. Sir John was speaking about the real or supposed necessity of securing from parliament a registration of teachers. This the new Guild, amusingly enough proposes to do. Like the rest of her Majesty's subjects, it has the power to grant diplomas, and it proposes to do so to teachers "after thoroughly testing their qualifications, the test, apparently a mere arithmetical one, being the number of pupils they have already passed." Then, of course, the teachers who have paid for these valuable documents will possess for their money all the honour which Mr. Chanot, the violin maker and importer, and his friends can bestow. The following is Mr. Chanot's letter, addressed to a musician, whose opinion of it may be judged by the appearance of the document in these columns:—

Music Teachers' Guild, British and Colonial.

73, Berners-street, W.,
21.2.98.

Dear Sir,—It was mentioned at the recent conference of the Incorporated Society of Musicians that the society had long but ineffectually sought to secure the registration of teachers, and Sir

Look to your Drains.—Have the Drainage and Water Supply of your residences Examined and Certificated by Carter Bros., 65, Victoria-st., S.W. Consulting Sanitary Engineers Hotel Cecil, &c.

John Stainer dwelt on the very unsatisfactory status of music teachers in this country. Numerous teachers who are quite unfitted for their occupation at present take pupils, to the detriment of competent members of the profession. It is for the purpose of protecting bona fide teachers that the Music Teachers' Guild has been founded. Its work will be to grant diplomas to teachers after thoroughly testing their qualifications.

The system of tests adopted will be based on the actual work of the teacher, and its value as demonstrated by the number of his pupils who have successfully passed the examinations of the Royal Academy of Music, the Royal College of Music, Trinity College, London, the Royal College of Organists, and such other institutions as may be approved by the Council.

A representative council is being formed, and will include most of the leading members of the profession, and I am instructed to say that the Guild will be pleased if your name may be added as a member of the Council.—I remain, faithfully yours, pro F. W. Chanot, Sec. pro tem.

Sir John Stainer will, I hope, excuse me for saying that he talks too much and composes too little. The registration of teachers, as he knows perfectly well, is a question that bristles with difficulties. Would he, for example, exclude Tonic Sol-faists who cannot teach the staff notation, and would he throw out of work the large army of struggling musical governesses, whose duty it may be to instruct only the very young? He would do far better to concentrate his efforts upon the abolition of speculative diploma-conferring concerns, and to limit the lawful grant of musical diplomas to the chartered institutions. We should then get rid of that burlesque "College of Pianists," which, as I have frequently shown, was started and run by a plumber and members of his family. As to Mr. Chanot's circular, except that, thanks to an absurd defect in the law, he shares with the crossing-sweeper round the corner, the privilege of granting "diplomas" in music, with or without examination, a more ridiculous scheme it would hardly be possible to devise. Who are the "Council" of this concern has yet to be settled, and, indeed, the letter above will indicate that the profession are being circularised for recruits. But the test of the number of pupils which a teacher has sent up for examination elsewhere is self-evident nonsense. Supposing that a teacher, like many other sensible people, has a conscientious objection to speculative or other examination schemes, and has never sent up a pupil to them at all. Is he, therefore, to be deprived of the certificate or "diploma" of this precious "Music Teachers' Guild"? So far as teachers are concerned, they know perfectly well that there are examinations open to them as a test of their qualifications for degrees in music and the arts at the Universities of Oxford, Cambridge, Durham, and Dublin. There are also special Teachers' Examinations at the Royal Academy and Royal College of Music, examinations to the worth of which the Prince of Wales, as President, has borne testimony. A diploma from any of these bodies, and more particularly from the Universities or chartered institutions, would possess a value absent from the certificates of an anonymous enterprise like the "Music Teachers' Guild." If the Musicians' Company, the only musical guild of the City of London, had done its duty, instead of confining its efforts to the granting of an annual medal and the eating of an occasional dinner, we should not perhaps have heard so much of the diploma-conferring enterprises.

The following question appears in an evening paper. I have not yet seen the reply, but I have no difficulty whatever in recognising the enterprise to which this luckless individual refers. The "free scholarship" business has often been exposed in Truth, and it would probably have been stopped long ago if the daily papers in town and country had refused to insert the advertisements. Here is the question:—

(37,952) Harmony.—I entered into an agreement for a so-called free scholarship for musical tuition; I was told that I had to pay two separate sums for the first two terms, which I did pay, and then afterwards was to receive the remaining two years free tuition, subject to the rules of the institution. One rule was that I was required to pay a lump sum down half-yearly in advance for my music. I am willing to pay for my music, but not thus in advance. Can I not demand the remaining two years' tuition, without this advance payment?—R. G.

The Greatest of all Pianofortes.—The Steinway Pianofortes. New York and London.

Perhaps I may be allowed to give a word of advice. Sue the proprietor for a return of the money paid, on the ground that it is no "free" scholarship at all, and particularly subpœna the proprietor as a witness. There is many an ambitious young barrister who would be delighted to get our friend into the witness-box on the question of "free" scholarships.

The Philharmonic concerts begin on Thursday of this week. There has, I learn, been a "ruction," owing to the very proper refusal of the Covent Garden authorities to allow the sending of deputies to the Opera on Philharmonic nights. More than once a new opera or important revival has been postponed because the rehearsal clashed with that of the Philharmonic. Considering that the entire Philharmonic engagement is only for seven nights, for which, I believe, the Ripieni receive for the season a total sum of about £11, it is hardly likely that the Directors of the Opera, who offer an engagement extending over upwards of fifty nights would long submit to have their arrangements upset in this way. In point of fact, the Philharmonic ought to change its day of performance. Thursday is often an important opera night, and is in many respects one of the most inconvenient days of the whole week. The old Philharmonic nights, if I recollect rightly, some thirty years ago, were Mondays, and afterwards the even more convenient Wednesday was chosen, for Wednesday has always been recognised as a sort of "off" night. However, although the Philharmonic dates clash with only two or three of the opera performances about a dozen members of the opera band have preferred to stick to the Philharmonic, and their places at Covent Garden will therefore be filled up, some of them, I believe, by players whom M. Flon will bring over from Brussels.

Two important organ posts have been filled up during the past week. One was the office of Borough Organist at Leeds, a berth held for something like fifty years by the late Dr. Spark. It is only worth £200 a year, but it is, nevertheless, one of the prizes of the profession, and there were seventy-eight candidates for it. Eight of these were selected, and played at the Albert Hall before a committee of three, Sir Frederick Bridge, Dr. Villiers Stanford, and Mr. Perkins, of Birmingham. The judges were, I believe, hidden behind the drawn curtain of one of the private boxes, but the post was carried off by Sir F. Bridge's clever pupil, Mr. Fricker, who is at present organist of Trinity Church, Folkestone. The other post is that of organist at the Temple Church in succession to Dr. Hopkins, who has now retired owing to old age. Here, I understand, a Committee of Benchers made the choice, with the assistance of some ladies, who probably knew more about music and less about law than the Benchers. The berth fell to Mr. Davies, another of the numerous pupils of the Royal College who have recently secured good posts.

Many will regret to learn of the death of Edward Howell, who was one of the best 'cellists of native birth that we ever had. His father, James Howell, was for many years a leading double bass player in the orchestra, while his brother Arthur, also a double bass player, was the husband of Mme. Rose Hersee, and was for a very long time stage manager to the Carl Rosa troupe. Edward Howell, I believe, was a student of the Royal Academy of Music, and, besides being an accomplished soloist, he was for very many years principal violoncellist at the opera, the Philharmonic concerts, the Queen's private band, and the principal musical festivals.

The Bohemian quartet party have returned to London, but they were unwise at their first concert to trust to the classics instead of to Bohemian music, in which they are always heard at their best. At their next concert they will remedy this mistake by performing Dvorak's Quartet in C. Their rendering of Quartets by Beethoven and Schumann last week was rather rough, though full of fire and enthusiasm. The new Sonata for violin and pianoforte by Oskar Nedbal, their viola player, which was then performed for the first time in England, proved to be a clever, though not particularly striking work. At the Popular Concerts, too, Dr. Joachim and Lady Halle attracted an enormous audience last Saturday by their performance of Bach's double Concerto in D Minor. Here, also, Richard Strauss's early Sonata in F, written when the now "advanced" composer was a melodist, was performed for the first time in England by Miss Fanny Davies and Herr Becker. Next Monday the Joachim Quartet party will appear at the Popular Concerts. It is a pity they could not have come earlier in the season, for they have been sadly needed.

The principal orchestral concerts of the season commence this week. The Philharmonic concerts begin on Thursday, but without Herr Rosenthal, who has slightly injured his arm, and prefers to delay his return to England until his provincial tour starts. The soloists at the Philharmonic are more or less "guests." Some of them play or sing gratuitously, while others receive much less than they would at ordinary concerts. Herr Rosenthal was therefore wise not to risk tiring himself. The Crystal Palace Concerts likewise start this week, although I believe the band is to be reduced and the programmes are to be formed of more or less hackneyed, though popular, works, mainly, perhaps, for the benefit of the Sydenham residents. M. Lamoureux last week gave an unequal performance of Tschaikowsky's "Pathetic" symphony. The first movement went capitally, but the rest indicated pretty plainly that Richter is still the greatest of conductors of this now famous work. At Queen's Hall on Saturday Mr. Wood again attempted to popularise Moussorgsky. The public, however, received a March in A from the deceased Russian composer's pen in chilling silence. It indeed seems strange that the valuable time of this excellent orchestra should be wasted upon such material.

Conrad Behrens some five-and-twenty years was one of the principal bassos at Her Majesty's Opera. He also organised the first tour in Scandinavia for the late Mme. Trebelli, and he, I believe, got up some performances in the United States, where he has resided for something like sixteen years. Behrens died in New York a week or two ago. He was originally in a merchant's office, but was "discovered" by the King of Sweden, who paid for his education and brought him out at the Stockholm Opera.

It has more than once been declared to be a defect of our schools of music that after the period of tuition is over they take little or no interest in the future success of their pupils. For example, they all turn out dozens of lady violinists, although they know perfectly well that no woman will ever receive a guinea in a professional orchestra, and that only one Lady Halle is born in a generation. At the Royal College, however, Dr. Stanford is continually, and very rightly, pushing the claims of the best of the male students of the institution. I believe that the necessary recruits for the Bach choir band, which commenced proceedings for the season on Tuesday, have been derived from the Royal College; young and vigorous players who, as the orchestral concerts of the College have proved, are quite competent to take their places in ordinary professional bands. No doubt this causes a good deal of grumbling amongst some of the seniors. But it cannot be helped. As a matter of fact, down to a comparatively recent period, the best places in our leading orchestras were almost the monopoly of a few specified performers, some of whom placed all sorts of difficulties in the way of conductors.

Signor Leone Chiozza has given a humorous turn to the discussion concerning the engagement of a cheap Italian band at the Imperial Institute. In a communication to the paper so ably edited by Mr. T. P. O'Connor this gentlemen suggests that the ultra patriots should see that the band parts are written "in Tonic Solfa, that grand English invention. The Staff notation was invented by some miserable Italian who did not know any better." The discussion is still going merrily on concerning the engagement of the Campanari orchestra, but there is a disposition to do fairer justice to Signor Randegger, who negotiated the affair. As I have already said, it would be absurd to blame Signor Randegger for preferring his own countrymen, and the fault, indeed, lies with the authorities of the Imperial Institute who allowed or authorised him to engage a band whose chief qualification seems to be that it comes cheaper than a British orchestra. The discussion appears, however, in one respect to have done some good. In the programme of the Ladies' Concert to be given under the direction of Signor Randegger at the Imperial Institute to-night (Wednesday), we find works by Cowen, Goring Thomas, Percy Pitt, Ernest Ford, and Sir George Macfarren. If we continue in this reforming way we may even some day discover British music in the programme of a State Concert.

LETTERS ON BOOKS.

MY DEAR MR. WYNDHAM,—"The indolent reviewer," whom Tennyson denounces in his experimental hexametres, had better review Mr. Conan Doyle's "Tragedy of the Korosko" (1) according to Sydney Smith's receipt; "Cut the book carefully and then smell the paper-knife." If he ventures to open it, he will be swept along at a pace he little reckoned upon till he finds to his surprise, and also to his regret, that he has read to the very end.

It is a perfectly breathless narrative of the capture, captivity, and rescue of a party of tourists—English, Irish, American, and French—who had ventured too far into the Lybian desert; and the sole fault the most cynical novel reader is likely to find with the story is the superlative heroism it attributes to all its personages, whatever their age, sex, nationality, or colour. "When everybody is somebody, then nobody is anybody," as one of Mr. Gilbert's heroes observe, and it is inartistic as well as unnatural not to make one star differ from another in glory. No doubt, Mr. Conan Doyle attributes the common heroism to a common peril; but peril is not a creator, but a revealer of character, and the same fire which purifies gold hardens clay. Instead of the entire party having been made by their common calamity equally and divinely unselfish, at least half of it would have developed selfishness the reverse of divine. By the way, Mr. Conan Doyle is a still more firm believer in the divine unselfishness of England, which absorbs India, Egypt, &c., in the exclusive interests of the peoples of those countries:—

> We came to India by a kind of natural law, like air rushing into a vacuum. All over the world, against our direct interests and our deliberate intentions, we are drawn into the same thing.
>
> Except the pay of a couple of hundred men, who spend their money in the country, England has neither directly nor indirectly made a shilling out of the occupation of Egypt, and I don't believe you will find in history a more successful and more disinterested bit of work.

What a commercial-traveller view of statesmanship, that

> The worth of anything
> Is so much money as 'twill bring!

Maxwell Grey's "Ribstone Pippins" (2) is the simplest of stories of a rustic courtship, told in a dialect which is nothing short of maddening. The chorus of a Greek play is a simple matter to master compared, for instance, with this letter, upon which the fate of the lovers hung:—

> Throo jellusy she wood not do know such thing been. Stiddy bewty is vane hand makes sum mad witch the kitchen winder hopen I cooed year all was that jelluss hand spitefull off her she aint much two boste off hand fond of millitry pardon, the libberty hand remane with luv too hall kind fiends ewer obedient humble well-wisher has object. To like no name she wood bee that mad hand doo lather a pore fallow sirvant offal sow nott lett out i rote.

The story ought to have appeared in one of the puzzle-journals, with an offer to its decipherer of a prize of £50, which would certainly not have to be divided and remitted in halfpenny stamps to a host of successful contributors. From the sweet simplicity of "Ribstone Pippins" to Miss Braddon's complex study of a philanthropist whose enthusiasm for humanity

(1) "The Tragedy of Korosko." By A. Conan Doyle. With forty full-page Illustrations. (London: Smith, Elder, & Co. Price 6s.)
(2) "Ribstone Pippins." A Country Tale by Maxwell Gray. (London: Harper Brothers Price 6s.)
(3) "Rough Justice." By M. E. Braddon. (London: Simpkin, Marshall, & Co. Price 6s.)
(4) "Many Memories of Many People." (By M. C. M. Simpson. London: Edward Arnold.)

impels him to commit murder, is a far cry. Miss Braddon need not have made her philanthropic murderer an atheist in order to persuade you of his existence, since there are so many Christian paradoxes of the kind on record. A philanthropist, like John Howard, who was a savage to his own children and to the children of Christ's Hospital, is no more uncommon than a misanthropist, like Swift, who was the fastest of friends and the most tender-hearted and charitable of human beings. On the whole, Miss Braddon has succeeded in making her atheistic humanitarian interesting and probable both from the novelist's and the psychologist's point of view, while the other characters and incidents of "Rough Justice" (3) show no falling off in this veteran novelist's power of holding her numberless readers enthralled.

Of more interest to you than the most interesting novel will be Mrs. Simpson's "Many Memories of Many People" (4), a perfectly delightful book of gossip about men and women of historical importance. Within the first couple of pages you come upon this cynical retort of Count d'Orsay and this little anecdote of the Queen in her childhood:—

"What a charming pensive expression Lady Harriet has!" said some one to the Count of his wife, who replied, "She owes that to me." "In those very early days we often met Princess Victoria and her mother in Kensington Gardens. She used to take great notice of my brother, whom she called 'her little favourite'; and I remember our dogs, which we had taken to the Serpentine for a swim, shaking themselves over the dress of her Royal Highness, to her great amusement."

Here are two significant admissions by statesmen of the little wisdom which goes to the government of States:—

"It is wonderful," says Lord Lansdowne, "how imagination, and invention, and courage, and knowledge, and diligence—all the qualities that seem to make an orator, and even a statesman—may be neutralised by the want of a sound, overruling judgment. Gladstone's faculties are like an army without a general, or a jury without a judge. They are always at variance. Sometimes one gets the better, sometimes another, and the feeling that rules for the time carries him away. I am astonished how little is the practical loss which we feel in the absence from our councils of two or three of the acutest and brightest intellects in England."

"I believe," said John Bright, "that if you were to take the first ten men you could catch in the Strand, they would be a much better set than any Cabinet that I have ever seen."

"As respects our diplomatists," said Lord Aberdeen, "I am not sure that I do not agree with you."

"You would like, then," I said to Bright, "to revert to the old Greek mode of choosing your Government by lot from the mass of the people. Aristotle considers a government that is elected an aristocracy. He confines the term democracy to one that is caught by chance."

"It must be a very unlucky chance," said Bright, "that would catch for you so bad a minister as the Duke of Wellington. He cared nothing for the people. He thought only of the King, or the Queen, or the House of Lords. And he did nothing but harm to both."

These are but specimens of the kind and degree of interest with which this charming book abounds.—Believe me, my dear Mr. Wyndham, ever yours very sincerely,

DESMOND B. O'BRIEN.

GIRLS' GOSSIP.

DEAREST AMY,—I have been reading in some magazine the replies of some well-known people as to what they would do if they were millionaires, and have been settling in my own mind what I would do in similar circumstances. To begin with, I should not care to be a millionaire. After a certain figure, money ceases to be a pleasure and becomes a burden. And even if the best and kindest use is made of wealth, this is such a curiously constructed world that it is very difficult to do a little good without at the same time working a tremendous amount of harm. It is as though any individual effort only serves to throw the balance of general affairs out of gear.

But there are one or two little things I should dearly love to do if I were a millionaire. One would be to provide comfortable homes for every old couple who have worked hard as long as they are able, and who are unable to work any longer owing to old age and infirmities. It seems a cruel thing that such as these should have no better provision than the workhouse after lives of honest toil. Fancy the feelings of some of them who have prided themselves on respectable associations, having to be companions with all the queer characters who find their way to the workhouse. If you go over it all in your mind you will find an enormous amount of pathos in it.

And another thing I should like to do would be to get a law made to fine every Bishop or Archbishop who passes over elderly clergymen to give promotion to young ones. A big fine, too, I should like it to be. It is so abominably unfair. I know now of a clergyman in a terribly poor London parish who has slaved there for twenty years, and seems to have no chance of preferment. He has a family of delicate girls, who would flourish splendidly in the country vicarage I should get for them if I were a millionaire. Think of their joy, and the thankfulness of the father after twenty years of London slums.

And I would promote motor cabs and omnibuses with all my might if I were a millionaire. I feel the keenest (and most uncomfortable) compassion for the poor horses in the London streets. There was a slight snowfall one day last week——

But no! I will not harrow your feelings by detailing any circumstances of the case; and as to what I want to do when I am a millionaire, there will be plenty of time to make a long list of things before that event arrives.

I have just read a sickening paragraph in a weekly paper, stating that blouses made entirely of feathers are coming into fashion. "Rare tropical feathers, ordered by specialists from abroad," are specified as the ones most likely to be in demand. Poor birds of the tropics! Was it not enough that ye were required for hats and bonnets and boas? "Whole blouses," quotha. What an unutterably cruel, heartless creature the true woman of fashion is! Hopelessly beyond the reach of reason, too.

I see that the Sandringham Club, at 13, Old Bond-street, of which I wrote you some time since, is to be opened on Wednesday evening of every week for suppers, to be served from 10 o'clock to midnight. This is a new departure for a ladies' club, is it not? I should think it would be a boon to many who would not care for the ordinary restaurant; and the club is so central as to make it all the more convenient.

Since the return of Mr. Wyndham and the re-dressing of the very agreeable party of naughty fibsters in "The Liars," there have been crowded houses at the Criterion. The costumes express the very latest note of fashion, and you may imagine with what eagerness they are studied by the numerous women who live for dress, devoting five-sixths of their time, thought, and affections to it. Seeing gowns on the stage like this is ever so much better than seeing them in even the most imposing of West End establishments for the sale of chiffons. Graceful as are the figures and lovely the faces of the choice selected girls who don the wares to show them off to customers, they cannot sit and walk and flirt and flutter about in them like the ladies on the stage, who are at least equally graceful and pretty. All that is permitted to the shop-lady is to solemnly peacock up and down in a sort of sentry-go, with countenance set to a sort of respectful decorum. It is so much more useful to see the fashions on lively people who sorrow for the consequences of their fibs in them and rejoice in the temporary success of their crimes.

I have picked out six of the dresses to tell you about. The first is a cream-coloured satin dinner gown worn by Miss Mary Moore in the first act. It fits very closely indeed from the waist downward, but there is plenty of fulness from where a deep flounce of cream coloured gauze begins, embroidered with silver sequins and beaded with jewelled passementerie. This flounce rises slightly in the centre of the front, and a line of the passementerie is carried up from that point to the waist, also forming a belt. The bodice has a berthe of the silver gauze and jewelled passementerie. The sleeves are a fold or two of turquoise velvet with shaped epaulettes of the gauze above them, edged with the blue velvet. The arms are veiled, from wrists to just above the elbows, with mittens made of the sequined gauze, sewn with turquoises as well, and finished at the top with a roll of the blue velvet. Quite a new idea this; and there is also novelty in the way that a pointed piece of the mitten falls over the back of the hand. Miss Moore flirts deliciously in this gown. In fact, it is just the gown for a wicked, daring little flirt to wear; and I am certain that her diamond-and-turquoise comb is quite an assistance to her in her scene with her husband. There is so much that is inspiring and reassuring in the conviction of being well dressed down to the smallest particular. Another sweet dinner-gown is worn by Miss Brunton. It is rose-pink figured silk, forming bodice and deep panier over a plain, flounce-edged under-skirt. The tablier is bordered with three pink chiffon flounces, and the short sleeves are finished in the same way. An immense bow of black tulle, strewn thickly with silver sequins, is fastened on the left side of the bodice, a drapery of the same passing across the left arm and thence to the waist, from where it falls in double ends over the skirt. A black feather and pink rose crown the coiffure.

Hunting.—An elegant and graceful up-to-date figure is created by the easy and perfect fit of the ingenious and appropriate Stays built by Mesdames Sykes, Josephine, & Co., The Celebrated Anatomical Corsetières, 280, Regent-st., Oxford-circus, London, W.

Miss Moore's river dress in the second act consists of a white serge skirt, plain and close-fitting, above a deep flounce, which is put on rather full and begins at the sides, the front being quite plain. The flounce is beaded with white ribbon. Over a full bodice of the serge there is a very novel and elaborate little zouave, completely covered with a running design in pale blue ruched chiffon. There are blue revers with appliques of lace. They are edged with white cord, and so are the jockey-shaped caps of the sleeves of this lovely zouave. An immense bow of white tulle is tied at the neck. With this is worn a toque made of chinchilla, with blue velvet drawn round the crown and forming a rosette at the left side, caught with a diamond buckle, from which rise curled white quills. With two pink roses and a knot of black velvet these complete the trimming.

Miss Brunton's river dress is pale yellow cashmere as to the skirt, with rows of white ribbon round the lower part. The white jacket bodice is thickly braided in gold, and has revers of striped black and white over an under-bodice of white satin crossed in folds. The large white tulle hat has red feathers in front and long plumes floating above it. Wallflowers make a cache-peigne at the back.

In the third act Miss Mary Moore realises her folly, and dolefully makes friends with her husband in an anything but penitential pink silk gown, veiled with white embroidered muslin, on which inappropriate (to the play) true lovers' knots are conspicuous. The top of the bodice forms a rounded yoke in rucked muslin, outlined by a frill of pink silk. The sleeves are in the rucked white muslin, most elaborate, and requiring heaps of infinitesimal stitches to do, but a very great feature in this season's dress. The sweet hat is made of mauve hyacinths, with three white feathers, all of which are couchant, according to the latest dictum, not rampant, as they have been of late. The stems of these feathers are studded with Rhine stones. Two red roses droop over the hair at the left side.

One more gown—Miss Brunton's in the drawing-room scene. It is turquoise silk, vandyked all round the lower part of the skirt with four or five rows of rucked blue chiffon. Lines of creamy lace trim the skirt from the waist downwards at the sides and back. The bodice has folds of the silk going round the figure, and a chemisette of white folded muslin, braces of creamy lace hiding the point of junction of the two. The tight sleeves of blue chiffon lined with blue silk are quite plain, and are finished on the shoulders with cap-shaped epaulettes of the cream-coloured lace.

These gowns are full of information to the experienced as to the modes of the day after to-morrow.

In "A White Knight" Kate Rorke embellishes her gowns, as she always does. In the first act she wears a blue serge dress with black braid, closely fitting, which she rapidly changes for a sombre black, about which there is nothing remarkable. She looks best in the second act wearing mauve, also with black braid, and a charming toque of the same stuff, with, I believe, a couple of feathers. In the third, her gown is a very soft pale-grey, which suits her figure to perfection. Esmé Beringer is seen first in grey (commonplace), then in a putty-coloured dress with various touches of green at neck, wrists, and in hat; then in green again. In the third act she comes in wearing a very handsome cloak or mantle (crimson, I fancy) lined with yellow.

Evelyn went yesterday to see Mr. Cecil Crofton's collection of old paste ornaments and old-fashioned jewellery, which is now the most fashionable thing in the world. Everyone is introducing to the light of day the long-hidden contents of the far-back corners of their jewel cases, and those who had no grandmothers are ransacking curiosity shops to find something fresh and charming in antiques. Mr. Crofton has been collecting for some time, and Evelyn is quite eloquent about the lovely old paste she saw there. In fact, she bought an old marquise ring, which is one of the most becoming I have ever seen. The centre is in dark blue enamel, slightly raised above the oval of paste diamonds, and on it reposes a spray of forget-me-not. The workmanship is quite exquisite, and so, says Evelyn, is that of many of the old-world brooches, crosses, and earrings. These last can be utilised by setting each in the centre of a modern gold lace-pin. There are several of the quaint old "comet" brooches in the collection at Elizabeth-street, Eaton-square, and there is one brooch in the shape of a miniature basket of fruit, with golden grapes hanging over one side and the centre heaped with coloured stones as apples. A pansy brooch had the flower deftly imitated in petals of topaz and amethyst. We are going some day soon to have a look at all these pretties.

On Tuesday of this week began a course of evening lectures in connection with the Royal School of Art Needlework, delivered by Mr. Aymer Vallance, F.S.A., author of "The Art of William Morris." The subject of these discourses is the application of ornamental form to textile design. Tuesday's dealt with architectural, next Tuesday's is to be on animal, the following week on floral, and the ultimate lecture on designs in the abstract. A number of magic-lantern slides have been prepared to illustrate the remarks.

International marriages seem to be becoming more frequent. English women are in demand among all civilised nations, including Sweden, whose daughters are so tall and fair and full of charm. Miss Kate Morgan Pritchard, the elder daughter of Mr. W. Pritchard-Morgan, M.P., is soon to be married to Count Eric Piper, second son of the late Count Eric Piper, of Snögeholm, Sweden. I wonder if that word means "snug home"?

Christabel writes from Paris:—

Some smart dresses and bodices have been made for some ladies of the Russian court by a large firm in the Rue de la Paix, and I send you a description of a few, mentioning beforehand that what I stated a few weeks back still holds good, and that the skirts are now made so close and tight round the hips and at the back, that a deep flounce is added to give sufficient width or play at the base.

One dress is pale water-green surah, entirely covered with white spotted muslin, the spots being alternately white and green; this has two rows of real Mechlin insertion let in in the front in apron fashion. The bodice also is green covered with muslin and insertion, and open in front over a fulling of very handsome Mechlin lace: the green Liberty sash has long ends falling at the back, and there is a neck band of green silk and lace. The top of the long sleeves are slightly puffed with muslin and insertion, and are furnished with small revers of green silk at the wrist. This gown was so much admired that it was copied for another lady in pink.

"The Sunny South."—Messrs. Redfern have designed some becoming Costumes for wear along the Riviera, and which are now on view in their Showroom. Very moderate in price. Inspection invited.—Redfern, 26, Conduit-street, London, W.

Another gown had a plain skirt of mauve satin, with a crossway flounce at the bottom, sewn on the edge to give width; the front opened over coral-pink velvet. The mauve satin bodice was plain, with a jabot, and small straps of coral-pink velvet across, and in the centre of each a handsome button of coloured enamel. The long sleeves had folds of velvet at the top, the rest being in mauve satin, with waistband and neckband of coral velvet, the latter being enhanced with a rich lace, wired to make it stand up and out.

A lovely ball-dress was of turquoise-blue velvet, made plain and close at the top of the skirt, and a crossway flounce round the foot, sewn on to the edge. This flounce is beautifully embroidered with turquoises and pearls. The low bodice is embroidered to match, with a berthe of valuable old Duchesse lace, and on the left side a Louis XV. velvet bow. A sash scarf of the same handsome lace falls on the skirt, and the sleeves are also of the same lace, with little tabs of embroidered velvet.

A very dressy blouse bodice of white silk had a plain back with three rows of gold-spangled galon round the upper part, and coming round to the front, which was slightly open over a plastron of pleated white silk muslin, and on each side of this a very tiny pleating of the same with small loops of narrow black velvet on the pleating. The belt and neckband were white silk, the latter spangled. The sleeves had three folds at the top and three at the wrist.

A white silk ball dress was covered with green silk muslin. This was trimmed in what is called the Greek pattern, formed with green lace insertion edged with a very narrow green Valenciennes gathered. (I consider dyeing and colouring lace very wrong in art.) Lodged in the various corners and angles of the Greek pattern were little loops of green velvet ribbon. The low bodice was cut square and ornamented with a spray of white moss roses and foliage. The Greek design was carried out on the short sleeves and furnished with the Valenciennes edging. A green silk waistbelt, with sash ends on the left side, finished the costume.

Clare sends me the following from Dublin:—

Dearest Madge,—March evidently took compassion on the unsnowed snows and hoarded up frosts of winter and allowed them, though in modified form, to accompany his lion-like entry. Last week we had more frost and snow than the entire winter produced, or, at least, it showed and felt more. We were reminded of the fact—not in evidence during the mild weather—that we had bones, and that these possessions were very capable of having pains and aches. Don't you know the chill, penetrating cold, which neither one's own skin, nor any other, can keep out, which goes through the flesh, right into the bones, like a Röntgen ray? I think it was Sydney Smith who, in very hot weather, longed to be able to sit in his bones; in very cold, one rather longs to be able to sit out of them. It is only in these days when rheumatism, following the spirit of the age, has ceased to be exclusive, and includes the young as well as the old in its rackings, that one can confess to bones without incriminating one's self. In society one cannot afford to grow old, it is such an old fashion and should only be followed in domesticity, and by one's own fireside.

Last week, after the week's interval, the Dublin Castle season again resumed its course. Besides the dinners and dances usually given, there was a concert to which over five hundred were invited; an entertainment designed to suit the elderly and serious in the Lenten season. That it did suit the latter with regard to being—well, not too festive, need hardly be said. No form of evening entertainment seems to thaw and "mix" an English-speaking assemblage but a dance. At private houses, no doubt, a little music promotes conversation, but that cannot be in a great hall where people are ranged in formal rows opposite a platform of performers. There is nothing for it, under the circumstances, but to grin and bear—the music, no matter what its intrinsic merits may be, for they do not enter into the matter at all. On Wednesday night a small and very select dance was given in the Throne Room after a dinner party. The invitations were not sent out by the Chamberlain; as to the other dances, the aide-de-camps were allowed to give them. All the women wore pretty frocks, and there was ample space for dancing. There were a great many girls amongst the Viceregal "house party," Lady Duncannon's two daughters, Miss B. Forbes, Miss Norah Dawnay and Miss Faith Dawnay. The pretty faces, girlish as well as matronly, were all more or less familiar. Lady Annesley and Lady Kilmorey wore striking costumes, as usual; the jewels of the former were very brilliant. The hair dressing adopted by many, though not universally, is rather untidy looking, especially when very full and fluffy over the ears. I like what may be called a well-groomed, high-bred looking head, with no hair out of place, but not stiffly arranged for all that. The popularity of the "Geisha" is, perhaps, accountable for some of the fashions of hair dressing. On Friday night the entertainment was a ball, not merely a dance, and took place in St. Patrick's Hall, which has a beautiful springy dancing floor, much appreciated by dancers, when, as on that night, the room is not too crowded. Lord Cadogan, one would think, not being a dancing man, must get bored by all the dancing he has to look on at from his throne seat under the canopy at the top of St. Patrick's Hall. Lady Cadogan seems to have untiring energy in society, and never looks tired or bored. She might well look tired, for the position of mistress of Dublin Castle is not an idle one, but entails a good deal of real work—in fact, there is no busier woman in the country than her Excellency, day and night.

The Castle had not a monopoly of the ball giving, though no one gives a dance on the same night as a Viceregal one. It is etiquette to consider a Viceregal invitation a command; on receiving one, the invited guest is supposed to cancel any other engagement. So, naturally, no other host or hostess enters into rivalry with the Castle. The elect of society were all at Colonel and Mrs. Knox's ball, at the house they have taken for the season in Merrion-square, on Monday night. It was beautifully got up in every way—the house decorated in a fashion worthy of the great capital across the water. On Thursday Lady Musgrave and Lady Keane gave a ball together at the Rotunda, which was a brilliant one also, the invited guests including Lady Granard and the pretty Ladies Forbes, Lady Mowbray and Stourton and two fair daughters, Lady Ashbourne and her daughters, Lady Roberts Lord and Lady Lurgan, in fact, every one who is any one, just now in Dublin. One of the joint hostesses, Lady Keane, was, unable to be present owing to the death of a relative.—Yours ever,

Clare.

Frances writes from Brighton:—

Dearest Madge,—We shall all be quite dull when the Ice Rink closes in April, for there is always something attractive going on at it. A prize competition for lady skaters, who have learned at the Brighton Ice Rink this season, took place on Wednesday afternoon (March 2) and was most amusing. It was a pity so few competed for the valuable prizes Sir William Call gave, only four being left in the list when the time came. The attendance, as the reporters say, "was large and fashionable," the corridor being so crowded that chairs and tea-tables were alike difficult to secure. The competition was admirably managed; Mr. Hull Saye, an efficient and critical judge, decided, by points, on the merits of the respective competitors. The highest number of points attainable was ninety-nine. Miss Gaskell, with sixty points, won the first prize (a lovely diamond and sapphire twenty-five guinea bracelet); Miss L. Eliot James, with fifty-seven points, the second prize (a season ticket for the Rink); and Miss Rowe, with fifty-four points, the third prize (a half season ticket). Miss Dora Pepys scored fifty-two. The waltzing competition which followed was also interesting. The prize for this contest was a Columbia bicycle, given by Mr. Hulton Moss, of gymkhana fame, for the best lady waltzer (Brighton resident). Mrs. Hulton Moss, being the winner, passed on the bicycle to Miss Dora Pepys, who was second. The afternoon's entertainment finished up with one of the hockey matches, for which the Brighton Skating Club is making itself quite a name.

And now for a few things culinary:—Fillets of trout dressed in this way are excellent for a dinner party:—

Trim the fillets of 2 small trout; divide each in halves, trim them neatly, and sautez the fillets quickly in butter over a hot stove. Arrange them on a thin border of forcemeat, pour the sauce over them, and garnish the centre with small quenelles and

One Hundred Pieces for £1. 1s.—Send a postcard to the Pearson Pottery Co., Hanley, Staffs., for particulars of the most wonderful package of crockery the world has ever seen. Sold all the world over.

Mortlock's (Oxford-st.), Estd. A.D. 1746.—The collection of China and Glass now on view in their Galleries fully maintains the high reputation and pre-eminence enjoyed by "Mortlock's" for the last century and a half, and well repays a visit of inspection.

button mushrooms. To make the sauce, stew the bones of the fish in weak stock for 2 hours, strain and reduce the liquor. Mix a tablespoonful of flour with 1 oz. of dissolved butter in a stewpan, add the fish liquor, stir until it boils, simmer it 20 minutes and strain it. Warm the sauce, adding the yolk of an egg, a little cream, a teaspoonful of chili and tarragon vinegar mixed together, and a teaspoonful of lobster spawn, previously pounded and rubbed through a hair sieve. The forcemeat is made by pounding the flesh of a whiting, adding 2 oz. of butter, 2 tablespoonsful of cold white sauce, one yolk and one whole egg, working it thoroughly together with salt and pepper to taste, and rubbing it through a hair sieve.

This "parfait" is really lovely:—

Put the yolks of 6 eggs, with 2 tablespoonsful of water, into an egg-bowl, and whisk it over a saucepan of boiling-water until thick. Add 2 oz. of blanched and pounded almonds, and continue whisking until cold. Mix the stiffly-whipped whites of 5 eggs with a gill of boiling syrup, add it, when cold, to the custard with 1½ gills of whipped cream, flavour with a few drops of noyeau, freeze it in the ice-machine, mould and imbed it in ice and salt for an hour in the usual way.

You will like these cakes for afternoon tea:—

Boil 8 oz. of good loaf sugar in half a pint of water until it will turn white when rubbed on the side of the stewpan. Then mix in very quickly the stiffly-whipped whites of 4 fresh eggs. Press the mixture through a forcing bag, into finger-shaped pieces, on to a sheet of wafer paper, that is placed on another sheet of oiled paper on a baking sheet. Sprinkle them thickly with desiccated cocoanut, dust them over with pounded sugar and bake them about an hour in a cool oven, or until they are quite dry and a pretty fawn colour.

These "cream cakes," too, are an original novelty and are really delicious:—

Beat 4 oz. of butter and fine sugar together until white, add the yolks of 2 eggs, a few drops of cochineal, and the whipped whites of 3 eggs, in alternate spoonfuls, with 4 oz. of flour, spread on a greased baking sheet, and bake 20 minutes in a moderate oven. Now beat 4 oz. of butter and sugar in the same way as before, add the yolks of 2 eggs and 2 oz. of grated chocolate Menier, then mix in very lightly the whipped whites of 3 eggs and 4 oz. of flour, bake on a greased baking sheet, and turn on to a paper to cool. When the cakes are quite cold, beat 2 oz. of fresh butter and 4 oz. of sifted icing sugar together until white, add a few drops of essence of vanilla and spread between the pink and brown cakes. Cut into crescent-shaped pieces Dissolve 2 oz. of chocolate with a very little water, mix in about 4 oz. of icing sugar, and stir until just warm. Coat the pink side of the cakes with the icing, and sprinkle them with blanched and chopped pistachios.

Ever, dear, your loving cousin, MADGE.

DIAMONDS OR OLD SILVER
For PRESENTS.
SPINK & SON

SPOONS AND FORKS 2/11 oz. BELOW STORE PRICES.
17 & 18, Piccadilly, W.
AND AT
1 AND 2, GRACECHURCH STREET, CORNHILL, E.C. Est. 1772.

"SANITAS EMBROCATION."
For Aches, Pains, Sprains, Strains, Bruises, Stiffness, Neuralgia, Lumbago, Rheumatism, and for Veterinary purposes.

"I have little doubt that 'Sanitas Embrocation' will come into prominent favour as a stable requisite and for various other purposes, human and veterinary." (Prof.) WOODROFFE HILL, F.R.C.V.S.

In Bottles, 8d., 1s., and 2s. 6d. Of all Chemists, Stores, and
THE SANITAS CO., LIMITED, BETHNAL GREEN, E.

THE MANUFACTURING
GOLDSMITHS' & SILVERSMITHS' COMPANY,
SHOW ROOMS: 112, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W. (Adjoining Stereoscopic Company)
INVITE INSPECTION OF THEIR UNRIVALLED STOCK OF DIAMOND AND GEM ORNAMENTS.

Fine Pearl and Diamond Brooches, from £5 to £1,000.

PEARL NECKLACES FROM £10 TO £10,000.
Illustrated Catalogue Post Free.
GOODS FORWARDED ON APPROVAL.
GOLDSMITHS' COMPANY, 112, REGENT STREET, W.

THE ANCIENT WRITING PAPER OF THE PRIESTS.
NOTE PAPER, 5 Quires, 1s. COURT ENVELOPES, 1s. per 100. MOURNING ENVELOPES, 1s. 6d. per 100. THIN, FOR FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE, 5 Quires, 1s. MOURNING NOTE, 5 Quires, 1s. 6d
HIERATICA (Regd).
Every Sheet and Envelope Watermarked HIERATICA. Reject Imitations. Any difficulty in obtaining, send stamps to Hieratica Works, 68, Upper Thames Street, London. Samples Free. Parcels Carriage Paid.

A Feature of the Metropolis. SPIERS & POND's
CRITERION RESTAURANT, Piccadilly Circus, London, W.
EAST ROOM. Finest Cuisine, unsurpassed by the most renowned Parisian Restaurants. Luncheons, Dinners, and Suppers, à la carte and prix fixe. Viennese Band.
GRAND HALL. Musical Dinner 3/6 per head. Accompanied by the Imperial Austrian Band.
WEST ROOM. Academy Luncheon 2/6 Diner Parisien 5/-, during both of which the renowned Mandolin Quartette performs.
BUFFET & GRILL ROOM. Quick service à la carte and moderate prices. Joints in each room fresh from the Spit every half-hour.
AMERICAN BAR. Service of special American Dishes, Grills, &c.
Splendid Suites of Rooms for Military and other Dinners.

TRELOAR'S ORIENTAL CARPETS

TURKEY, PERSIAN, & INDIAN CARPETS, DAGHESTAN RUGS, &c., ANTIQUE CARPETS AND RUGS.

Illustrations of Turkey Carpets sent free on Application.

TURKEY CARPETS have lately been supplied by

TRELOAR & SONS

to the following Institutions, &c.:—

The CONSERVATIVE CLUB, St. James's Street.
The UNITED SERVICE CLUB, Pall Mall.
The ROYAL MARINES, Chatham.
The FRENCH HOSPITAL, Victoria Park.
The LAW SOCIETY CLUB, Chancery Lane.
The ROYAL MARINES, Devonport.
The 2nd ROYAL WILTS REGIMENT, Portsmouth.
The 4th BATTALION KING'S ROYAL RIFLES, Aldershot.
The ROYAL MARINE ARTILLERY, Eastney.
The ROYAL MARINES, Gosport.

If favoured with inquiries we will quote price and forward on approbation any Carpets or Rugs upon receipt of reference or remittance.

TRELOAR & SONS,
68, 69, & 70, LUDGATE HILL, LONDON, E.C.

USERS OF THE

ELECTRIC LIGHT

SHOULD SEE THAT THEIR

ELECTRIC LAMPS

BEAR THE WORLD-RENOWNED TRADE MARK

EDISWAN

EFFICIENCY ECONOMY

The Best and Cheapest in the End.
Sold by the Principal Contractors, Stores, &c.
Head Office: Ediswan-buildings, Queen-street, E.C.

THE HAIR, TEETH, AND SKIN,

Preserved and Beautified by using ROWLANDS' TOILET ARTICLES.

ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL

Is Nature's Real Restorer & Nourisher of the Hair. Without it the hair becomes dry and weak; it feeds the hair, removes scurf and harshness, and produces a strong and healthy growth; it is the best tonic and dressing for ladies' hair, and should always be used for children. Also sold in golden colour for fair and golden-haired ladies and children, and for those whose hair has become grey. Sizes, 3s. 6d., 7s., 10s. 6d.

ROWLAND'S ODONTO

is the finest dentifrice; removes all impurities from the teeth, imparts to them a brilliant polish, prevents and arrests decay, and gives a pleasing fragrance to the breath. 2s. 9d.

ROWLANDS' KALYDOR allays all irritability of the skin, removes sunburn, freckles, tan, redness, roughness, &c., cures and heals all cutaneous eruptions, imparts a matchless beauty to the complexion, and a softness and whiteness to the neck, hands, and arms unattainable by any other means. Sizes, 2s. 3d. and 4s. 6d.

Ask Stores and Chemists for Rowlands' Articles.

HAMPTON & SONS

ANTIQUE GALLERIES, PALL MALL EAST.

Old Furniture. | Old Porcelain.
Old Tapestries. | Old Sheffield Plate.
Old Embroideries. | Old Silver.

HAMPTON & SONS,
Limited.

FOOT'S PATENT TRUNKS

THE TRAVELLERS' DELIGHT.

EVERYTHING AT HAND WHEN WANTED.

A perfected system of sliding drawers, which renders every part of Trunk equally accessible, and enables any article to be instantly removed without disturbing remainder of contents. Avoids confusion, saves time, prevents articles being crushed. Drawers divided and made any depth to suit requirements.

Made various sizes in Compressed Cane, Wood Fibre, &c.

Prices from 40s.

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE POST FREE.

T. J. FOOT & SON, 171, New Bond St., London, W.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

NOTICE.

No Member of the Stock Exchange is allowed to advertise for business purposes, or to issue circulars to persons other than his own principals.

Persons who advertise as Brokers or Share Dealers are not Members of the Stock Exchange, or under the control of the Committee.

A List of Members of the Stock Exchange who are Stock and Share Brokers may be seen at the Bartholomew-lane Entrance to the Bank of England, or obtained on application to

EDWARD SATTERTHWAITE,
Secretary to the Committee of the Stock Exchange.
Committee Room, The Stock Exchange, London, E.C.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS

AT ALL LIBRARIES AND BOOKSELLERS'.

M. ZOLA'S New Book, PARIS

Translated by E. A. VIZETELLY, is Now Ready.

Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

"The book is strong in conception, and strong in execution. It is informed with an immense pity for the woes of humanity, with a virile sincerity and a rugged and appealing eloquence."—Daily News.

"The book is a distinct achievement, and deserves general reading."—Daily Mail.

"It is written with splendid force and absolute sincerity."—Daily Chronicle.

"'Paris,' we believe, will bring M. Zola new admirers and new friends, for it shows him to be not only a great writer, but a man of noble aspirations and splendid courage."—Pall Mall Gazette.

Also, uniform, crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

ROME.	THE DREAM.	FAT AND THIN.
LOURDES.	DR. PASCAL.	HIS EXCELLENCY.
THE DOWNFALL.	MONEY.	THE DRAM-SHOP.

THE DISASTER. By PAUL and VICTOR MARGUERITTE. Translated by FREDERIC LEES.

Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

"This powerful picture of the fate of the Army of the Rhine, by the sons of one of the Generals who did their duty, is among the finest descriptions of war that have been penned."—Athenæum.

"An enthralling picture. . . . This is one of the most convincing descriptions of war in existence. The glory and the horror of it burn and shudder in every page. It is more terrible than M. Zola's 'Downfall'; it flashes here and there more vividly than Mr. Stephen Crane's episodes."—Star.

"This singularly impressive and, indeed, fascinating book . . . full of skilfully drawn characters."—Daily Telegraph.

"A strong, a remarkable book."—Speaker.

G. A. HENTY'S NEW NOVEL,

COLONEL THORNDYKE'S SECRET

IS NOW READY. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

THROUGH THE GOLD-FIELDS OF ALASKA TO BERING STRAITS. By HARRY DE WINDT. With a Map and 33 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, cloth, 16s.

"Our extracts give but a slight idea of the wonderfully fresh and vivid character of as interesting a book of travels as has been written these many years. It is done in a manly unaffected style, and the illustrations are of the greatest interest."—Academy.

"The story of his rescue at half-past the eleventh hour by a belated whaler is one of the most dramatic and thrilling bits of romance in real life I have read for some time."—Pall Mall Gazette.

THE LIFE OF NAPOLEON III.

By ARCHIBALD FORBES. With 37 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, cloth, 12s.

"The admirable volume. . . . It would be poor and insufficient praise to say that the book is more interesting than any romance. . . . Mr. Forbes is a master of dramatic effect and of a flowing style; in addition, he saw with his own eyes many of the greatest scenes in the career of his subject; and his book is accordingly full of breathless interest from its first page to its last."—T. P. O'CONNOR in the Graphic.

RECORDS OF OLD TIMES: Historical, Social, Political Sporting, and Agricultural. By J. K. FOWLER ("Rusticus"). Demy 8vo, cloth, with 9 Illustrations, 10s. 6d.

"Readers who have made the acquaintance of the books about old country life by Mr. Fowler will be glad to welcome another volume of recollections from the same entertaining pen."—Daily News.

"The book is racy of the soil, and its comments on men and manners are often diverting."—Leeds Mercury.

WAS SHE JUSTIFIED? By FRANK BARRETT, Author of "Folly Morrison," &c. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

TALES OF TRAIL AND TOWN. By BRET HARTE. With a Frontispiece. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

MISS BALMAINE'S PAST. By B. M. CROKER, Author of "Beyond the Pale," &c. Crown 8vo, cloth, gilt top, 6s.

"A very enchanting story. . . . Written with vivacity, all the characters developed most clearly, and with never a dull page in the book, 'Miss Balmaine's Past' is a very delightful novel."—Vanity Fair.

"Rosamund Balmaine undoubtedly makes a fascinating heroine. . . . While yet the 'Wild Rose of Horton,' she may challenge comparison with some of the most winning creations of the novelist's fancy."—Morning Post.

"A lively story. . . . The heroine is a charming girl."—Guardian.

A WOMAN TEMPTED HIM. By WILLIAM WESTALL, Author of "With the Red Eagle," &c. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

"As a story of domestic intrigue and financial vicissitude it is skilfully planned and alluringly unrolled."—Daily Mail.

TRUE BLUE; or, "The Lass that Loved a Sailor." By HERBERT RUSSELL. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

"A remarkably spirited narrative."—Echo.

TALES IN PROSE AND VERSE. By D. CHRISTIE MURRAY, Author of "Joseph's Coat." Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

"We doubt whether so finely wrought a picture of the human waif is to be found in all fact-built fiction as that of Moses Lowenstein."—World.

THIS LITTLE WORLD. By D. CHRISTIE MURRAY. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

"Mr. Murray has never done anything better than this fine story."—Birmingham Post.

THE CHRONICLES OF MICHAEL DANEVITCH, OF THE RUSSIAN SECRET SERVICE. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.; cloth limp, 2s. 6d.

"Some excellent puzzles and mysteries. . . . As a sequel he gives us a longer story, 'The Clue of the Dead Hand,' which is exceptionally strong."—Speaker.

THE ENGLISHMAN'S HOUSE: A Practical Guide for Selecting or Building a House. By C. J. RICHARDSON. With Coloured Frontispiece and 534 Illustrations. Cheaper Issue. Crown 8vo, cloth 3s. 6d.

WALFORD'S COUNTY FAMILIES OF THE UNITED KINGDOM (1898). Containing Notices of the Descent, Birth, Marriage, Education, &c., of more than 12,000 distinguished Heads of Families, their Heirs Apparent or Presumptive, the Offices they hold or have held, their Town and Country Addresses, Clubs, &c. Royal 8vo, cloth gilt, 50s.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

MR. HEINEMANN'S NEW BOOKS.

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE:

A CRITICAL STUDY.

By GEORGE BRANDES.

2 vols., Roxburghe gilt top or buckram uncut, demy 8vo, 24s. net.

The Times.—"An admirable piece of work. It is based on facts and not on fancies; it takes into account the historical conditions under which the plays were written, which it illustrates with remarkable fulness of knowledge. Dr. Brandes's learning is sound."

PETER THE GREAT.

By K. WALISZEWSKI. Translated by Lady MARY LOYD.

With Portrait. New Edition, 1 vol., 6s. Library Edition, 2 vols., 28s.

The St. James's Gazette.—"In every way a brilliant piece of work—succinct, lucid, well-arranged, clear-sighted, and judicial. The author of this biography recalls something of the qualities of Carlyle."

LITERATURES OF THE WORLD. Vol. IV. Crown 8vo, 6s.

A HISTORY OF ITALIAN LITERATURE. By RICHARD GARNETT, C.B., LL.D., Keeper of Printed Books in the British Museum.

The Daily Mail.—"Breadth of view, culture, and thoroughness without pedantary characterise this history. We see Italian Literature not merely in its local proportions, but as an influence spreading wide over the literatures of other nations, and most conspicuously, perhaps, over our own."

NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

THE WAR OF THE WORLDS.

By H. G. WELLS,

Author of "The Time Machine."

The Spectator.—"As a writer of scientific romance, Mr. Wells has never been surpassed. Even when he is most awful there is always something human about his characters. Both Poe and Mr. Wells are followers of Swift, but Mr. Wells keeps nearest to the human side of the author of Gulliver."

THE MINISTER OF STATE.

By J. A. STEUART.

The Daily Mail.—"A brilliantly clever novel, charged with intellectuality and worldly knowledge, written with uncommon literary finish, pulsating with human nature."

THE FOURTH NAPOLEON.

By CHARLES BENHAM.

The Academy.—"It is a fine piece of work, with enough wit and style and knowledge of life to set up half-a-dozen ordinary novels."

THE SCOURGE-STICK.

By Mrs. CAMPBELL PRAED.

THE BETH BOOK.

By SARAH GRAND, Author of "The Heavenly Twins."

Punch.—"The heroine is one of Sarah Grand's most fascinating creations. The story is absorbing; the truth to nature in the characters every reader will recognise."

THE TRIUMPH OF DEATH.

By GABRIELE D'ANNUNZIO.

The Pall Mall Gazette.—"A masterpiece. The story holds and haunts one. . . . A great prose poem that cannot be surpassed. The work of a master—a master whose genius is beyond dispute."

THE BROOM OF THE WAR-GOD.

By H. N. BRAILSFORD.

Truth.—"All go from the first to the last page. A singularly vivid narrative in the form of a novel of the Græco-Turkish war; every line bears the impress of absolute truthfulness."

CLEO THE MAGNIFICENT.

By Z. Z., Author of "A Drama in Dutch."

The Daily Mail.—"A strong piece of work: more than commonly clever conscientious, and sound."

GOD'S FOUNDLING.

By A. J. DAWSON, Author of "In the Bight of Benin."

The Daily Telegraph.—"The dénouement of this brilliant and powerful romance is every whit as satisfactory as its literary quality."

THE NIGGER of the 'NARCISSUS.'

By JOSEPH CONRAD.

A. T. QUILLER-COUCH.—"Mr. Conrad knows the life he is writing about and he knows his seamen too. By consequence, the crew of the "Narcissus" are the most plausibly life-like set of rascals that ever sailed through the pages of fiction."

London: WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford-street, W.C.

MESSRS. METHUEN'S NEW BOOKS.

THREE YEARS IN SAVAGE AFRICA.

By LIONEL DECLE. With an Introduction by H. M. Stanley, M.P. With 100 Illustrations and Five Maps. Demy 8vo, 21s. [March 10th.

A FRONTIER CAMPAIGN.

By Viscount FINCASTLE, V.C., and Lieut. P. C. ELIOTT-LOCKHART. With a Map and 16 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, 6s.

A narrative of the recent operations of the field forces on the North-West frontier of India.

CAMPAIGNING ON THE UPPER NILE AND NIGER.

By Lieut. SEYMOUR VANDELEUR. With an Introduction by SIR G. GOLDIE, K.C.M.G. With Maps and Illustrations. Large crown 8vo, 10s. 6d.

A narrative of service (1) on the Upper Nile in 1895 and 1896; and (2) under Sir George Goldie in the Niger Campaign in January, 1897, describing the capture of Bida and Ilorin, and the French occupation of Boussa. The book thus deals with the two districts of Africa where now the French and English stand face to face.

THE NIGER SOURCES.

By Colonel J. TROTTER, R.A., with a Map and Illustrations. Crown 8vo, 5s.

"Replete with important information. The map is really excellent."—Athenæum.

"A very valuable narrative."—Pall Mall Gazette.

A HISTORY OF THE GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY 1845-95

By CHARLES H. GRINLING. With Maps and Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d.

"The only adequate history of a great English Railway that has yet appeared."—The Times.

"An excellent history, full of valuable information."—Glasgow Herald.

"Admirably written, and crammed with interesting facts."—Daily Mail.

"Told with extraordinary skill and charm."—Yorkshire Post.

THE CHURCHMAN'S LIBRARY.

SOME NEW TESTAMENT PROBLEMS.

By ARTHUR WRIGHT, Fellow and Tutor of Queen's College, Cambridge. Crown 8vo, 6s.

This book deals with a number of important problems from the standpoint of the "Higher Criticism."

LEADERS OF RELIGION.

THOMAS CRANMER.

By A. J. MASON, D.D., Canon of Canterbury. With a Portrait. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

THE LIBRARY OF DEVOTION.

THE CONFESSIONS OF ST. AUGUSTINE.

Newly translated, with an Introduction and Notes, by C. BIGG, D.D., late Student of Christ Church. Post 8vo, 2s. Leather, 3s.

FICTION.

THE FIRST LARGE EDITION HAVING BEEN EXHAUSTED, THE SECOND IS IN THE PRESS.

SIMON DALE.

By ANTHONY HOPE. Illustrated. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"A brilliant novel."—Athenæum.

"The style is virile and distinguished, and the whole tale most entertaining reading."—St. James's Gazette.

"The dialogue is so alert, the spirit of the actors so indomitable, and all so charmingly told."—World.

"The dialogue is witty and brilliant. The picture of Nell Gwynne is full of life and colour."—Westminster Gazette.

A VOYAGE OF CONSOLATION.

By SARA JEANNETTE DUNCAN, Author of "An American Girl in London." Illustrated. Crown 8vo, 6s.

THE VINTAGE.

By E. F. BENSON, Author of "Dodo." Illustrated by G. P. Jacomb-Hood. Crown 8vo, 6s. [Second Edition.

"The love story is told with charm and delicacy."—Westminster Gazette.

"An excellent piece of romantic literature; a very graceful and moving story."—Saturday Review.

"The book is full of vivid detail."—Daily Telegraph.

"A notable achievement."—Standard.

TRAITS AND CONFIDENCES.

By the Hon. EMILY LAWLESS, Author of "Hurrish," "Maelcho," &c. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Not lacking in the characteristic excellencies of Miss Lawless's more elaborate works."—Scotsman.

"Full of delicate spirit."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"Singularly clever."—Truth.

THE KLOOF BRIDE.

By ERNEST GLANVILLE, Author of the "Fossicker." Illustrated. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

JOSIAH'S WIFE.

By NORMA LORIMER. Crown 8vo, 6s

"A witty and interesting book. Josiah is a noble character, and Camela is bewitching."—The Queen.

"Written in a bright and witty style."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"Has literary finish and deep feeling."—Daily Mail.

"A well-told story."—Daily Chronicle.

Messrs. Methuen's Catalogue and New Book Gazette sent to any address.

METHUEN & CO., 36, Essex-street, Strand, W.C.

SMITH, ELDER, & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

Now ready.—With a Map, post 8vo, 6s.

EGYPT IN THE NINETEENTH CENTURY; or, Mehemet Ali and his Successors until the British Occupation in 1882.

By DONALD A. CAMERON, H.B.M.'s Consul at Port Said.

THE CORRESPONDENCE OF A DISTINGUISHED IRISHMAN.

Ready this day.—With a Portrait, demy 8vo, 12s. 6d.

MR. GREGORY'S LETTER-BOX, 1813-30.

Edited By LADY GREGORY.

"Lady Gregory. . . . has placed all students of Irish History under obligations which should not be forgotten."—Daily Chronicle.

THE TRAGEDY OF THE KOROSKO

By A. CONAN DOYLE, Author of "The White Company," "Rodney Stone," "Uncle Bernac," &c. With 40 Full-page Illustrations, crown 8vo, 6s.

From PUNCH.—"A story of breathless interest, lightened by many touches of character, and framed in the carefully studied atmosphere of the Nubian desert."

FOR THE RELIGION: Being the Records of Blaise de Bernauld.

By HAMILTON DRUMMOND. Crown 8vo, 6s.

From the ACADEMY.—"We have no hesitation in awarding 'For the Religion' a place in the first rank of the historical novels of the day. It has blood, it has movement, the men are real, and the style has clarity, gravity. Altogether a very excellent book."

DEBORAH OF TOD'S.

By Mrs. HENRY DE LA PASTURE, Author of "A Toy Tragedy," "The Little Squire," &c. THIRD EDITION. Crown 8vo, 6s.

BOOKMAN.—"A strong and refreshing book, and the author is to be sincerely congratulated on having produced a novel which, from first to last, will hold the attention of the most jaded reader."

London: SMITH, ELDER, & CO., 15, Waterloo-place, S.W.

NOW READY.

V.R.I. 1837-97.

THE ROYAL HOUSEHOLD 1837-97.

By W. A. LINDSAY, Q.C.

WINDSOR HERALD.

Demy 4to, net, 25s.

This unique work contains a complete list of all those persons who, during the sixty years of the Queen's reign, have had the honour of being in personal attendance upon Her Majesty, giving the dates of their service, together with a series of official notices, and, in the case of principal officers, short biographies. It is thoroughly authentic and accurate, and the reproductions of the medals which are to adorn the limited edition have been made with Her Majesty's express consent.

Price 6s.

With an Introduction by C. KEGAN PAUL.

THE CATHEDRAL.

By J. K. HUYSMANS.

Translated by CLARA BELL.

Crown 8vo, 6s.

"We know that the finest imaginative work can be built only of the primary emotions. Here, then, is a novelist who has obtained complete mastery over one of the primary emotions, precisely because it has obtained complete mastery over his own soul—the emotion of faith."—Mr. ARTHUR SYMONS in the Saturday Review.

LONDON:

KEGAN PAUL, TRENCH, TRUBNER, & CO., Limited,

Paternoster House, Charing Cross Road, W.C.

HURST & BLACKETT'S NEW NOVELS.

MERESIA.

By Winifred Graham, Author of "A Strange Solution," &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo, 6s.

[Ready Friday next, March 11th.

THE CAPRICE OF JULIA.

By Lewis Sergeant. In 1 vol. crown 8vo, 6s.

A STORM-RENT SKY.

Scenes of Love and Revolution. By M. Betham-Edwards, Author of "Kitty," "Dr. Jacob," &c. In 1 vol. crown 8vo, 6s.

[Second Edition now ready.

A LOW-BORN LASS.

By Mrs. Herbert Martin, Author of "Gentleman George," "Britomart," &c. In 1 vol. crown 8vo, 6s.

HURST & BLACKETT, Ltd., 13, Great Marlborough-street.

WM. BLACKWOOD & SONS' NEW BOOKS.

RUSSIAN PROGRESS IN THE FAR EAST.

AT ALL LIBRARIES.

SIDE-LIGHTS ON SIBERIA. Some Account of the Great Siberian Railroad; the Prisons and Exile System. By J. Y. Simpson, M.A., B.Sc. With numerous Illustrations and a Map. Demy 8vo, 16s.

"A most important and excellent book, which contains an invaluable mass of first hand facts and conclusions upon the whole question of Siberia and the political."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"At length we have a readable and trustworthy book about the great Asiatic province of Russia."—Daily Chronicle.

"A volume which will be read far and wide."—Daily News.

TWO NEW NOVELS.

By D. GERARD (Madame Longard de Longgarde).

A FORGOTTEN SIN.

A FORGOTTEN SIN.

A FORGOTTEN SIN.

By M. H. DZIEWICKI.

ENTOMBED IN FLESH.

"For sheer fantasticness takes a lot of beating."—Pall Mall Gazette.

ENTOMBED IN FLESH.

"Cleverly conceived . . . not less cleverly told."—Scotsman.

ENTOMBED IN FLESH.

"Vividly interesting."—Daily Mail.

A SOUVENIR OF MILLAIS.

MILLAIS AND HIS WORKS By M. H. Spielmann, Author of "History of Punch." With 28 full-page Illustrations. Paper, 1s. Cloth, 2s. 6d.

"Filled with useful facts, anecdotes, and brief criticisms."—Times.

"At once interesting and instructive."—Punch.

"Deeply interesting little volume."—Daily Graphic.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS: Edinburgh and London.

Messrs. SKEFFINGTON'S New Novels.

THIS DAY, crown 8vo, cloth, price 6s.

Ernest G. Henham's New Novel 'Tenebrae.'

N.B.—The Third Edition of Mr. Henham's 'MENOTAH,' is now on Sale, price 6s.

THIS DAY, crown 8vo, cloth, price 3s. 6d.

Fergus Hume's New Novel 'Hagar of the Pawnshop.'

THIS DAY, crown 8vo, cloth, price 3s. 6d., Frontispiece by John Williamson.

Under One Cover.

An entirely New Collection of really striking Stories (including Three long Stories by RICHARD MARSH, Author of 'The Beetle: a Mystery!' and Two Stories by ERNEST G. HENHAM), many of them specially written for this Work by S. BARING-GOULD, FERGUS HUME, RICHARD MARSH, ERNEST G. HENHAM, A. ST. JOHN ADCOCK, ANDREW MERRY.

THIS DAY, crown 8vo, cloth, price 3s. 6d., with Frontispiece by Hal Ludlow.

A. St. John Adcock's New Novel 'The Consecration of Hetty Fleet.'

A New Novel by the Author of 'East-End Idylls.'

THIS DAY, crown 8vo, cloth, price 3s. 6d.

Athol Forbes's New Book 'Cassock and Comedy.'

The Humourous Side of Clerical Life.

A Series of most Amusing, Interesting, and Original Anecdotes and Records of the Author's Personal Experiences of Clerical Life and Work. Among the Chapters are—

Babies and Baptism. The Humours of Marriage. The Humours of Funerals. The Humours of the Sunday School. The Humours of Preachers and Preaching. Our Organists. New Curates and their Faults.

THIS DAY, crown 8vo, cloth, price 3s. 6d.

Charles H. Eden's New Book 'Bunthorne: the Story of a Fool.'

London: SKEFFINGTON & SON, 163, Piccadilly, W.

Publishers to H.M. the Queen and to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales.

ON THE STŒCHIOLOGICAL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION,

ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, AND LUNG COMPLAINTS.

By JOHN FRANCIS CHURCHILL, M.D.

One Shilling, Post Free.

T. BURLEIGH, late David Stott, 370, Oxford Street.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

For the CIRCULATION and SALE of all the BEST

ENGLISH, FRENCH, GERMAN, ITALIAN, RUSSIAN, & SPANISH BOOKS

TOWN SUBSCRIPTIONS from ONE GUINEA per annum.

LONDON BOOK SOCIETY (for weekly exchange of Books at the Houses of Subscribers) from TWO GUINEAS per annum.

COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTIONS from TWO GUINEAS per annum.

N.B.—Two or Three Friends may UNITE IN ONE SUBSCRIPTION, and thus lessen the Cost of Carriage.

SURPLUS LIBRARY BOOKS NOW OFFERED AT GREATLY REDUCED PRICES.

A NEW CLEARANCE LIST (100 PAGES) SENT GRATIS AND POST FREE TO ANY ADDRESS.

The List contains Popular Works in Travel, Sport, History, Biography, Science, and Fiction. Also New and Surplus Copies of French, German, Italian, and Spanish Books.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY, LIMITED,

30—34, NEW OXFORD ST.; 241, BROMPTON ROAD, S.W.; 48, QUEEN VICTORIA ST., E.C. LONDON; AND AT BARTON ARCADE, MANCHESTER.

NOTICE.

A SECOND EDITION of THE TWO DUCHESSES, Edited by Vere Foster, with 17 Photogravure Illustrations, demy 8vo, cloth, price 16s., will be ready IMMEDIATELY.

London: BLACKIE & SON, Limited, 50, Old Bailey.

SECOND EDITION NOW READY.

W. E. NORRIS'S NEW NOVEL.

Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

THE FIGHT FOR THE CROWN.

By W. E. NORRIS, Author of "The Dancer in Yellow," "Matrimony," &c.

"Mr. Norris contrives to sustain the interest of the story very cleverly. It is bright and incisive."—St. James's Gazette.

"Light and withal very well written. Mr. Norris has introduced us to the most delightful character we have met for quite a month."—Black and White.

"Lady Virginia is the most taking figure of a lively novel."—Morning Post.

"Fresh, lively, and true to life. We recommend the reader to get this book."—Westminster Gazette.

London: SEELEY & CO., Ltd., 38, Great Russell-street.

READY, MARCH 11th. Price 3s. 6d.

GUY BOOTHBY'S NEW BOOK,

BILLY BINKS—HERO

W. & R. CHAMBERS, LTD., LONDON AND EDINBURGH.

NEW SERIES. PRICE ONE SHILLING.

THE ARGOSY

For MARCH contains:—

Colonel Fane's Secret. By SYDNEY HODGES. Chaps. X.—XII.—Booksellers and Literature.—By G. STANLEY ELLIS.—Titian Vercelli.—My Heart's Haven. By ALICE MACKAY.—Mrs. Rashleigh's Mistake. By Lady VIRGINIA SANDARS.—By Mistake. By C. E. MEETKERKE.—In the Night-Watches. By CHARLES W. WOOD, F.R.G.S.—Lame Lizbeth. By T. W. SPEIGHT.—The Prophecy of Music. By P. W. ROOSE.—A Disconsolate Dragoon.—Out of Season.—Anno Domini. By F. ROCHAT. &c., &c., &c. Profusely and beautifully illustrated.

LONDON: R. BENTLEY & SON, 8, NEW BURLINGTON-STREET, W.

STERILITY IN WOMEN: Its Causes and Curative Treatment. An Illustrated treatise based on the special practise and observation of the last 15 years. Price 3s. 6d.; post free, 3s. 8d.
London: HENRY RENSHAW, 356, Strand.

Eighth Edition, Revised, Cloth. 1s. 6d.; Paper, 1s.

THE DIETETIC CURE OF OBESITY (FOODS FOR THE FAT.) By N. E. YORKE DAVIES, L.R.Coll.Phys.Lond., &c. CONTENTS:—Part I.—What Constitutes Robust Health?: Dangerous Conditions due to Corpulency: Weak Heart and Congestive Diseases of the Corpulent: Diet—the only Safe and Permanent Cure: Diet—Safe at any age: Quack Medicines, Drugs and Purgatives, Permanently Injurious or Fatal for this purpose: Foods of Energy and of Heat—their use and ultimate elimination: Errors of Diet—Evils consequent on Food in its Relation to Work: Stimulants and Liquids in Obesity. Part II.—Dietetics of Obesity.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS:—"This work deserves careful study."—Queen. "The only safe and permanent cure of obesity."—Western Gazette. "This is the very best book on Corpulency that has ever been written."—The Lady.
London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

A REMARKABLE PIPE! Why? Because

The "MASTA" Pipe

Absolutely carries out what is claimed for it—viz., Simplicity of Construction, Perfect Freedom from Nicotine, No Choking, Cool, Dry, Sweet, Clean, & Healthful Smoking.

Prices from 1/6, 2/6, 3/6. Your Tobacconist will supply it. If any delay, write The "Masta" Patent Pipe Co., 153, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

What Smokers say:—L. T. SCHOLES, 131, Sudell-road, Darwen, Oct. 11th 1897, writes—"I have used your 'Masta' Pipe over six months, and have given it a severe trial, being a very heavy smoker. I am very pleased with the pipe. I find it very cool and dry, and that it consumes all the tobacco."

THE BELGRAVE LADIES' AGENCY,
83, EBURY STREET, S.W.
For Furnished Houses, Flats, Upper Parts, and Apartments.

	Bedrooms.	Bathroom.	Reception.	Rent. Gns.
Wilton-street	7	1	3	10
Sloane-terrace	5	—	3	6
Lower Belgrave-st. (upper part Electric Light)	4	1	2	6
West Eaton-place	8	1	4	20
Eccleston-square	8	1	4	12
Chester-square	9	—	4	18
Eaton-terrace	9	—	4	15
Beaufort-gardens	7	1	3	12
Curzon-street	6	1	3	300 season
Cadogan-place	8	—	3	12
Eccleston Houses	7	1	3	12

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN, in all parts, receiving RESIDENT PATIENTS sent gratis, with full particulars. Schools also recommended.—Medical, &c., Association, Ltd., 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C. Tel. Add., "Triform, London." Telephone No. 1,854 (Gerrard).

GREAT NORTHERN CENTRAL HOSPITAL, Holloway.
UNENDOWED and VERY POOR.
PATIENTS ADMITTED FREE, sickness and poverty the only passports to relief.
£10,000 needed annually to support the work of relieving 1,400 in-patients, and 25,000 out-patients.
LEWIS H. GLENTON KERR, Secretary.

FOR KLONDIKE,

Passengers should book to Vancouver City, terminus of the CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY. The arrival platform is the departure wharf of all Klondike steamers. Complete outfits can be purchased in Vancouver City cheaper than in the United States. Purchasers save not only in first cost, but escape all Customs duties. Remember Klondike is in Canada. All outfits purchased elsewhere pay an average duty of 30 per cent. Steamers leave Vancouver City regularly direct for the Klondike.—Apply, CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY OFFICES, 67 and 68, King William-street, London Bridge, E.C.; 30, Cockspur-street, Trafalgar-square, W.C.; or ALLAN BROTHERS & CO., Liverpool.

Vancouver Board of Trade,
W. GODFREY, President.

TEN-GUINEA ROME TOUR.

Organised by Dr. Lunn and Mr. Perowne.

Extensions: NAPLES, FLORENCE, VENICE, RIVIERA.

Lectures by Dean Farrar. Dover-Calais Route.

SECRETARY, 5, Endsleigh Gardens, London, N.W.

JAPAN, CHINA, AUSTRALIA, HONOLULU, FIJI, NEW ZEALAND. and ROUND THE WORLD.
CANADIAN PACIFIC ROUTE,
For berths or descriptive pamphlets, apply CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY, 67 and 68, King William-street, London Bridge, or 30, Cockspur-street, Trafalgar-square, S.W.

YACHTING CRUISE TO THE MEDITERRANEAN.

The well-known
S. Y. VICTORIA
sails from TILBURY, APRIL 27th,
For Forty-one days Pleasure Cruise.
The only modern pleasure cruiser with large airy cabins. Comparison specially invited.
Apply, MANAGER, 4, Regent-street, London, S.W.; GRINDLAY & CO., 55, Parliament-street, London, S.W.; or any of THOS. COOK & SONS' Offices.

CARTER 6A NEW CAVENDISH ST. PORTLAND PLACE, LONDON.

ONLY ADDRESS OF ORIGINAL CARTER

LITERARY MACHINE.

For holding book, lamp, meals, &c., in any position over an easychair, bed, or sofa. Deliciously luxurious. A most useful gift. Prices from 17/6

INVALID FURNITURE.
ADJUSTABLE COUCHES and BEDS from £1. 10/-

Bed Lift £3. 10/-
Reclining Boards, 25/-
Walking Machines
Portable W.C.'s.
Electric Bells,
Urinals, &c.
Air & Water Beds.

Bed Rests 7/6
Leg Rests 10/-
Crutches 10/6
Bed Baths 12/6
Commodes, £1. 5/-

Carrying Chairs from £1.
Breakfast in Bed Tables from 30/-
Self-Propelling Chairs from £2

BATH CHAIRS
FROM
£1. 5/-

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES POST-FREE.

JOHN CARTER, 6a, NEW CAVENDISH ST. Portland-pl. London, W.

"TRUTH" HOTEL LIST.

BATH.—LANSDOWN GROVE HOTEL.—Desirable residence, in beautifully wooded grounds, 400 feet above sea level, facing south, and protected from north and east. Air dry and bracing. Assembly and Pump Rooms within easy distance. Omnibus free to and from Hot Mineral Baths. Billiards, Tennis Lawn

BONCHURCH HOTEL, Bonchurch, Isle of Wight, one mile from Ventnor Station.
A comfortable, quiet, and most beautifully-situated Hotel. Pretty garden. Good sea view.
H. RIBBANDS, Proprietor.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HOTEL MONT DORE.—South aspect. 150 rooms, electric light throughout, passenger lift, first-class cuisine, winter garden and lounge, covered tennis court. Turkish, sea-water, and medicated Baths. The Hotel is within two minutes' walk of the Golf Links.—For tariff, address W. KNEESE, Manager.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HIGHCLIFFE HOTEL. Unrivalled position, West Cliff, full south. Splendid sea view. Table d'hôte (separate tables). Supplies from Alderney Dairy Farm. Telephone 27.—J. KILNER, Proprietor.

BRIGHTON.—BEDFORD HOTEL.—Old-established. Unequalled in situation; opposite West Pier. Spacious coffee and reading rooms; sea-water service; unequalled cuisine; great variety of excellent wines. Moderate tariff. Electric light in all rooms. Passenger lift to all the floors.
GEO. HECKFORD, Manager.

BRIGHTON.—GRAND HOTEL.
Centre of Sea Front. Electric Light throughout. Lift to all floors. Bicycle room. INCLUSIVE TERMS IF DESIRED from 10s. 6d. to 15s. per day. For particulars apply to A. D. HOOK, Manager.

CARBIS BAY HOTEL, Cornwall. The very spot to obtain rest and quietude. Overlooking the finest bay in England. Mild yet bracing climate. Within easy distance of London by G. W. R. Splendid Golf Links. "A more beautiful spot for residence could hardly be imagined." —Truth.

FOLKESTONE.—BATES' HOTEL, West Cliff Gardens, and LONGFORD PRIVATE HOTEL, The Lees. Oldest established and most select Family Hotels in Folkestone. Reduced terms during Winter and Spring months. Pension (new Coffee-room) at Bates' Hotel.—G. L. HART, Proprietor. Sanitation Certified.

FOLKESTONE.—The LEAS HOTEL.—Situated in private grounds. Adjoining fashionable promenade. Sea views. Refurnished throughout. Passenger lift. Certified sanitation. Excellent cuisine. Moderate tariff. Good golf links and tennis court.

GRAND CANARY.—The Newest and Best Hotel is The METROPOLE. Facing the sea. Delightful position. Terms most moderate.
Agents, ELDER, DEMPSTER & CO., 14, Castle-street, Liverpool, and 4, St. Mary Axe, London, E.C.

JERSEY.—GRAND HOTEL.—Beautifully situated, facing the sea, full south, and sheltered from the north-easterly winds, with all modern comforts and liberal management. Reduced winter terms from October 15th.
D. DE LEIDI, Manager.

MALVERN—The IMPERIAL HOTEL occupies the best position, and receives visitors en pension. The golf-links (18 holes) are one of the best in England. Capital stabling for hunters. Droitwich Brine, Turkish and large Swimming Bath in separate buildings.—For tariff, apply to the Proprietor, F. MOERSCHELL.

SANDGATE.—ROYAL KENT HOTEL, a favourite resort of Ruskin. An ideal summer and winter residence, delightfully situated in its own grounds, facing the sea. Redecorated and refurnished. New Coffee-room, Smoking-room, and Conservatory have recently been added Fifteen minutes from Folkestone. Omnibus meets all trains Sandgate Station.—J. E. TANARE, Prop.

TORQUAY.—IMPERIAL HOTEL—Under entirely New Management. New sanitary arrangements throughout. It is the largest and best-situated Hotel in Torquay, and the best winter residence on the South Coast. Visitors received en pension or à la carte. Terms moderate.
F. FISCHER Manager.

BUXTON DERBYSHIRE.

Highest Town in England.
On the Mountain Limestone.
1,000 feet above sea level.

Centre of the picturesque Peak District. Pure Air. Charming Scenery.

HOT MINERAL-WATER BATHS FOR GOUT, RHEUMATISM, SCIATICA, &c.

NATURAL TEMPERATURE 82° FAHRENHEIT.

Finest Public Gardens at any Health Resort in Europe, with Pavilion, Theatre, Concert-Hall, Tennis, Bowls, etc. Golf Links (18 holes).

For ILLUSTRATED GUIDE, with Tariffs of the leading Hotels, Hydropathics, Boarding and Lodging Houses, send postage-stamp to THE CLERK, COUNCIL OFFICES, TOWN HALL, BUXTON, DERBYSHIRE.

A FINE HOTEL] DOVER [IN DOVER BAY

Accommodates 400 guests. Is superbly appointed, with all the comforts of a well-arranged mansion, at moderate cost. Perfect cuisine. The Dover Golf Links for use of Hotel Burlington visitors. The finest coast hotel in England. Brochure and Tariff free.

Facing the Pleasure Pier and in centre of Dover Bay.

HOTEL BURLINGTON

THE INTERNATIONAL PALACE HOTELS.

CAIRO ..... Shepheard's.
CAIRO ..... Ghezireh Palace.
NICE ..... Riviera Palace.
LISBON ..... Avenida Palace.

London Office, 14, Cockspur-street, S.W.

ILFRACOMBE.

A Charming WINTER RESORT, climate mild and equable.

The ILFRACOMBE HOTEL,

First-class Return Tickets issued from London (Waterloo), L. & S. W. R., from November to March, including seven days' bed, board, and attendance, at the Ilfracombe Hotel, £5. 5s. each, available for one month. Ask for Hotel tickets, available by all trains. H. R. GROVER, Manager.

HASTINGS. Due South, Facing Sea.

QUEEN'S HOTEL,

LARGEST AND BEST APPOINTED.
Sunny, and most sheltered position in Hastings and St. Leonards.
ELECTRIC LIGHT. PASSENGER ELEVATOR.
Moderate Tariff. Hotel Flys attend the trains.
WILLIAM GLADE, Manager.

PALACE HOTEL. HASTINGS

Modern Sanitary Arrangements. Lounge, Elevators. Electric Light throughout.
SPIERS & POND, (Proprietors).

INFLUENZA.—GRANVILLE, RAMSGATE.—As recommended by the Faculty, the best of all South-coast resorts to recuperate after the epidemic. Home comforts, combined with all advantages of First-class Hotel. Ozone and Turkish bath establishment, under the supervision of highly-qualified medical man. Terms, apply MANAGER, Granville, Ramsgate.

BATH. The Queen of Spas.

FAMOUS HOT MINERAL WATERS.

Most complete Bathing Establishment in Europe

NEW CONCERT HALL AND PUMP ROOM.

LATEST SCIENTIFIC APPLIANCES, including the Nauheim (Thermalsoolbad).

BATH is only two hours from London.

GOOD HOTELS. CHARMING SCENERY. BAND DAILY.

AMUSEMENTS.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.
Sole Lessee, Mr. Frederick Harrison.
Managers, Mr. Frederick Harrison and Mr. Cyril Maude.
EVERY EVENING, at 8.30, THE LITTLE MINISTER, by J. M. Barrie.
Miss WINIFRED EMERY and Mr. CYRIL MAUDE.
MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY and SATURDAY, at 2.30.

QUEEN'S HALL.
SUNDAY AFTERNOON CONCERTS.
EVERY SUNDAY, at 3.30.
Conductor, Mr. Henry J. Wood.
The Queen's Hall Grand Orchestra.
Admission free. Reserved seats, 2s., 3s., 1s., and 6d.

SATURDAY CONCERT.—CRYSTAL PALACE,—The First of the SECOND HALF of the 42nd SERIES will take place on SATURDAY NEXT, March 12, at 3. Vocalist, Madame Alva. Violinist Dr. Joseph Joachim. The Crystal Palace Orchestra. Conductor, Mr. August Manns. Seats 1s. to 4s. Prospectus of Manager, Crystal Palace, S.E.

"ECCE HOMO!" Munkacsy's Sacred Masterpiece. This famous Work, containing over 70 figures, is NOW ON VIEW for the first time in London at the DOWDESWELL GALLERIES, 160, New Bond-street. Admission One Shilling 315,000 people inspected the Picture during its exhibition at Budapest, often at the rate of 7,000 daily.

NEW NIAGARA. SKATING.
Morning, 9 30 to 1; Evening, 8 to 11, 3/-
Afternoon, 3 to 6.30, 5/-
Non-Skaters (Afternoon), 2/6.
SEASON and HALF-SEASON TICKETS ISSUED.

BRIGHTON ICE RINK. SKATING.
Morning, 9:30 to 1 Evening, 8 to 11, 2/6
Afternoon, 3 to 6.30, 4/- Non-Skaters, in the Afternoon, 2/-
Monthly Tickets, £2 10s.
SEASON and HALF-SEASON TICKETS issued.

NATIONAL SKATING PALACE (Hengler's), 7, Argyll-street, Regent-street, W.
REAL ICE. OPEN DAILY, 10.30 a.m. to 11 p.m. Admission 3s.
GRAND FANCY DRESS CARNIVAL, ST. PATRICK'S DAY, 17th March. Tickets, to include Supper, 25s. Valuable Prizes for the best Fancy Costumes.

OLYMPIA.
BARNUM AND BAILEY.
GREATEST SHOW ON EARTH.
LAST FOUR WEEKS.
Positively closing the London Engagement on Saturday, April 2.
Touring the Provinces on 70 American Railway Cars, and Exhibiting the Undivided Show under 12 Mammoth Canvas Pavilions, Seating nearly 15,000 persons.

3 Circus Companies in 3 Rings.
2 Olympian Stages, 1 Huge Race-track.
2 Complete Menageries, 3 Herds of Elephants.
Museum of Living Freaks and Curiosities.
20 Funniest Clowns on Earth.
70 Horses Performing in One Ring.
400 Horses, 2 Droves Camels, Hosts of Queer Animals.
1,001 Marvellous Sights and Wonderful Objects.

TWO GRAND EXHIBITIONS DAILY,
at 2.0 and 8.0 p.m.
Doors open at 12.30 and 6.30.

Early Gates open (Hammersmith-road) at 12.0 noon and 6.0 p.m. for 3s. seats and upwards. Early entrance fee, 6d. extra.

Owing to the stupendously large show, and the general magnitude of the Exhibitions, necessitating great preparations, the Menageries, Freak, and Horse Fair Departments can only be open from 12.0 to 4.15 p.m., and from 6.0 to 10.30 p.m.

No Promenade Tickets sold. Every ticket entitling holder to a reserved numbered seat, and admitting to all advertised departments without extra charge.

Prices.—Amphitheatre, 1s. and 2s.; Arena seats, 2s., 3s., and 4s.; Balcony seats, 3s.; Stalls, 5s., 7s. 6d.; Private Boxes, 5 and 6 seats, £3 3s.; Single box seats, 10s. 6d. Special prices for Royal Box when not engaged. Children between 4 and 10 years of age half-price to all except 1s. and 2s. seats. Box-office open from 9.0 a.m. to 9.30 p.m.; 1s. and 2s. seats on sale only after doors open. All other seats may be booked in advance at box-office and at usual libraries.

THEATRE TICKETS.—Boxes, Stalls, Balcony, and Upper Circle Seats in the best positions can be had at any office of the DISTRICT MESSENGERS' COMPANY.—Letters and telegrams, 193, Piccadilly.—Seats for every theatre. If you ever want a MESSENGER FOR ANY PURPOSE, to go any distance, at home or abroad, ask for a "DISTRICT MESSENGER." Offices in all parts of London, open Day and Night. Electric call boxes, to summon messengers, are in every first-class club, hotel, and house.

OLLVAAN DIAMONDS

Pendant Charm, 27/6 post free.

(Rgd.) are all mounted in SOLID GOLD and SILVER, but that is not the point. The point is that these stones are in themselves the Only Rivals of real Diamonds, of which they are an exact representation.

Book of Illustrations post free for the asking. Address:

OLLVAAN, Rgd., 227, Regent St.

AMUSEMENTS.

DRURY LANE THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing Director, ARTHUR COLLINS.—THE ONLY WEST-END PANTOMIME, THE BABES IN THE WOOD. Every Evening, at 7.30, and Wednesdays and Saturdays, at 1.30.—For full particulars see daily papers. Box Office open all day.

LYCEUM.—THE MERCHANT OF VENICE, Matinées Wednesdays and Saturdays, at 2; also Every Thursday and Friday Nights, and Monday and Tuesday, 21st and 22nd, at 8. Henry Irving, Miss Ellen Terry.
WATERLOO and THE BELLS, Every Wednesday and Saturday night, at 8, Henry Irving.
MADAME SANS GENE, Next Monday and Tuesday Nights, at 8. Henry Irving, Miss Ellen Terry.
Box office (Mr. J. Hurst) 10 to 5, and 7.30 to 10. Seats also booked by letter or telegram.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.
Proprietor and Manager, Mr. HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE.
TO-NIGHT and EVERY EVENING, at 8.
JULIUS CÆSAR.
MATINEES EVERY WEDNESDAY and SATURDAY, at 2.
Box-office open 10 to 10. Seats booked from 2s. HER MAJESTY'S.

ADELPHI. A. & S. GATTI,
Sole Proprietors and Managers.
EVERY EVENING, at 8.30,
THE LADY OF LYONS.
Preceded, at 8, by a Favourite Farce.
Mrs. Brown-Potter as Pauline.
Mr. Kyrle Bellew as Claude Melnotte.
MATINEE of THE LADY OF LYONS,
Wednesday Next, at 2.30.

PRINCESS'S.—Mr. ALBERT GILMER, Sole Manager.
ENORMOUS SUCCESS OF THE NEW MELODRAMA.
EVERY EVENING, at 8 o'clock,
HOW LONDON LIVES,
By Martyn Field and Arthur Shirley,
For which Mr. CHARLES WARNER is specially engaged,
Miss Kate Tyndall, Miss Geraldine Olliffe, Mr. Oscar Adye, Mr. Charles Garry, &c.

ST. JAMES'S.—Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER,
Sole Lessee and Manager.
EVERY EVENING, at 8, Shakespeare's Comedy of
MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING.
MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY and SATURDAY, at 2.
Box-office open 10 to 10. ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.

GARRICK.—Lessee, H. T. BRICKWELL.
EVERY EVENING, at 9, and Saturdays, at 3,
22A, CURZON ST.
By Brandon Thomas and John Edwards.
Lottie Venne, Arthur Bourchier, Fanny Brough, and Powerful Company.
Preceded, at 8.20, by THE NETTLE. Doors open at 8.

COMEDY THEATRE, Panton-street, Haymarket.
Sole Manager, Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY.
EVERY EVENING, at 8.15, a New Play, in Four Acts, entitled
THE SEA FLOWER, by Arthur Law.
Messrs. John Beauchamp, Arthur Playfair, Cosmo Stuart, W. T. Lovell, Wilfred Draycott, A. E. Matthews, Frederick Volpé, Henry Ford, and Charles Groves; Miss Lena Ashwell, Miss Gladys Homfrey (by kind permission of Geo. Edwardes, Esq.), Miss Eva Moore.
Box-office open 10 to 10. COMEDY THEATRE.

DALY'S THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. AUGUSTIN DALY.—EVERY EVENING, and SATURDAY MATINEE. Mr. George Edwardes's Company in THE GEISHA. The book by Owen Hall. Lyrics by Harry Greenbank. Music by Sydney Jones.

COURT THEATRE, Sloane Square.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH.—TO-NIGHT, at 8.30, TRELAWNY OF THE "WELLS," by A. W. Pinero. Doors 8. Commence 8.30. Box-office now open, 10 to 10. Telephone No. 3,031. MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY, at 2.30.

VAUDEVILLE.
Sole Lessees and Managers, A. & S. GATTI.
EVERY EVENING, at 8.20,
MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY, at 2.30,
THE FRENCH MAID,
With New Songs, Dances, and Dresses.
The very successful Musical Comedy by Basil Wood and Walter Slaughter.
Box-office open 10 to 10.

CRITERION THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. CHARLES WYNDHAM.—EVERY EVENING, at 8.15, THE LIARS, by Henry Arthur Jones. Mr. CHARLES WYNDHAM, Miss MARY MOORE, and Company. MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY, at 2.30.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—EVERY EVENING, New Ballet, THE PRESS, and Sporting Sketch, THE RACE. Grand VARIETIES. Doors open at 7.45.

TIVOLI, Strand, London.—The Greatest Combination of Talent in London.—Open EVERY EVENING, at 7.30, and SATURDAY MATINEE, at 2.30, with a STAR PROGRAMME, embracing every Artiste of note.—Manager, Mr. VERNON DOWSETT.

PALACE, Shaftesbury-avenue.—The HANDSOMEST THEATRE in EUROPE. The finest Variety Entertainment in London. Full Licence. Prices from 6d. Doors open 8.—Manager, Mr. CHARLES MORTON.

LONDON PAVILION.—Signor Pepi, Charles Godfrey, Florrie Forde, Tom Costello, Slade Murray, Chas. E. Edwards, Lily Lena, George Lashwood, and many others, including Mark Melford's Sketch, MY WIFE WON'T LET ME. Prices 1s. to £3 3s.—Manager, Mr. FRANK GLENISTER.

MADAME TUSSAUD'S EXHIBITION, Baker-street Station.—Relics of H.M. Queen Victoria. Beautiful Copper-plate Etchings executed by H.M. The Queen and the late Prince Consort.—Admission 1s. Children under Twelve, 6d. Extra rooms, 6d.

THOMAS WALLIS & CO. LTD.

HOLBORN CIRCUS, LONDON, E.C.

Have purchased the Whole of the Stock of

CHAS. GASK & COMPANY, Ltd.

122 to 132, Oxford Street, W.

Amounting to £19,967 12s. 4d. At a Large Discount for Cash.

The Goods have been removed to their own premises at Holborn Circus, and will be ready for Sale on MONDAY NEXT, MARCH 14th, and following days.

Below is an Abstract of the Stock; and as the Goods will be sold at THE VERY CLOSEST MARGIN OF PROFIT the Public will have an opportunity such as very rarely occurs of securing SPLENDID BARGAINS in every Department named.

Ladies' Mantles, Capes, Mackintoshes, and Furs	£2,257	17	0
Furnishing Drapery. Curtains, Quilts, Blankets, Table Covers, Carpets, Rugs, Cretonnes, Chintain Materials, Art Muslins, &c.	2,143	16	10
Black and Coloured Silks, Satins, and Velvets	2,092	0	9
Household Linens. Table Cloths, Damasks, Serviettes, Sheets and Sheeting, Towels and Towelling, Pillow Cases, Toilet Covers, Flannels, &c.	1,867	3	5
Black and Grey Dress Fabrics. Black and Grey Material and Silk Costumes and Underskirts	1,752	1	1
Lace Goods, Ladies' Shirts, Aprons, Collars, Cuffs, &c.	1,683	2	5
Coloured Costumes. Evening and Dinner Dresses, &c. ...	1,421	6	4
Carried forward ...	£13,217	7	10

Brought forward ...	£13,217	7	10
Hosiery, Gloves, and Blouses	1,374	9	6
Haberdashery and Trimmings, Umbrellas, Sunshades, &c....	1,323	1	3
Ladies' & Children's Boots & Shoes	1,133	5	1
Ladies' Underclothing. Tea and Dressing Gowns, Corsets, Children's Garments, &c.	962	14	11
Coloured Dress Fabrics. Velveteens, Cotton Goods, Sateens, &c.	962	7	0
Ribbons, Flowers, Feathers, and Fans	732	12	10
Millinery, Hats and Bonnets, Untrimmed Straws, and Felts, Ladies' and Servants' Caps, &c.	261	13	11
	£19,967	12	4

THOS. WALLIS & CO. Ltd. Holborn Circus, London, E.C.

For Longhand, Shorthand, Pen-and-Ink Drawing, Music-Writing, indeed, whenever a Pen is necessary, use only

Adds immeasurably to Celerity and Comfort in writing. Of all Pens most famous.

Made in 3 sizes only at

10s. 6d.
16s. 6d.
25s.
UP TO £18 18s.
POST FREE.

MABIE, TODD & BARD,

93, Cheapside, London, E.C.

95a, RECENT ST., W., and 3, EXCHANGE ST., MANCHESTER.

The Public Benefactor.

HOVIS

BREAD

DISTRIBUTES HEALTH.

No loaf genuine unless stamped HOVIS.

All good class Bakers make and sell Hovis.

Hovis Flour and Biscuits can be obtained from all leading Bakers and Grocers, or 6d. and 1s. samples will be sent on receipt of stamps by—

S. FITTON & SON, Hovis Mills, Macclesfield.

BITING EAST WINDS.

"Vinolia" Soap.

EXQUISITELY PERFUMED.

4d 4d

FOR DELICATE, SENSITIVE, IRRITABLE SKINS.

KEEPS THE SKIN SOFT, SMOOTH, AND CLEAR.

4d 4d

"Vinolia Shaving Soap"

FOR SENSITIVE FACES. YIELDS A CREAMY LATHER OF CHOICE FRAGRANCE.

6d 6d

CAUSES NO BLOTCHES UNDER THE CHIN.

DOES NOT DRY, EAT INTO, OR IRRITATE THE SKIN.

6d 6d

VINOLIA CREAM, for Chaps, Itching, Face Spots, &c., 1/1½ & 1/9 VINOLIA POWDER, for Redness, Roughness, Toilet, &c., 1/- & 1/9

INFLUENZA.
INFLUENZA.

GUARD against an ATTACK by the use of

MELLIN'S COD LIVER OIL EMULSION

MELLIN'S COD-LIVER OIL EMULSION is such an invigorating and easily assimilated nutrient that it fortifies the constitution against disease.

MELLIN'S COD-LIVER OIL EMULSION is the finest Strengthener and Restorative after illness, and prevents the development of after disease.

Sample free on receipt of 2d. for postage from MELLIN'S EMULSION CO., LTD., PECKHAM, LONDON, S.E.

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER

Prevents the Hair from falling off.
Restores Grey or White Hair to its ORIGINAL COLOUR.
Being delicately perfumed it leaves no unpleasant odour.
IS NOT a dye, and therefore does not stain the skin or even white linen.
Should be in every house where a HAIR RENEWER is needed.
Ask your Chemist or Hairdresser for

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Price 3s. 6d. per large Bottle.

Prepared only by the
ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG COMPANY, Ltd.,
33. FARRINGDON ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

FLORILINE

FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH.

IS THE BEST LIQUID DENTIFRICE IN THE WORLD.

Prevents the Decay of Teeth.
Renders the Teeth Pearly White.
Is perfectly Harmless and Delicious to the Taste.

Of all Chemists and Perfumers throughout the World
2s. 6d. per Bottle.

FLORILINE TOOTH POWDER

Put up in Glass Jars, price 1s.

CORN EXTERMINATOR. NEVER FAILS.
Ingenious instrument. Anyone can use. Highest surgical testimonials. Post free, 13 stamps. Bunion and Chilblain Ointment absolutely cures Tender Feet, Soft Corns, Enlarged Joints, &c., 15 stamps.
Mr. GARDNER, Chiropodist, Specialité Nails. 85, Regent Street, W.

"FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE."

CLARKE'S
WORLD-FAMED
BLOOD MIXTURE

Warranted to cleanse the blood from all impurities from whatever cause arising. For Scrofula, Scurvy, Eczema, Bad Legs, Skin and Blood Diseases, Pimples and Sores of all kinds, its effects are marvellous. It is the only real specific for Gout and Rheumatic Pains, for it removes the cause from the blood and bones. Thousands of Wonderful Cures have been effected by it. In bottles, 2s. 9d. and 11s. each, of Chemists everywhere.

BEWARE OF WORTHLESS IMITATIONS.

The Best CHAINLESS Cycle!

THE BANTAM.

With Registered "Alpha" Frame.

Simple, Compact, Durable, Speedy. Thoroughly tested for four years, and greatly improved for 1898. Send for Price List and "Notes on the Bantam;" also particulars of the Crypto Safety and other patterns

CRYPTO WORKS CO., LTD.,
29, Clerkenwell Road, London, E.C.

THE LATE EARL OF BEACONSFIELD,
SIR MORELL MACKENZIE,
OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES,
MISS EMILY FAITHFUL,
THE LATE GEN. W. T. SHERMAN,

and many other persons of distinction, have testified to the remarkable efficacy of Himrod's Cure for Asthma.

Established over a Quarter of a Century.

Prescribed by the Medical Faculty throughout the world. It is used as an Inhalation and without any after bad effects. A free Sample and detailed testimonials free by post. In tins, 4s. 3d. British Depôt—46, Holborn Viaduct, London; also of NEWBERY & SONS, BARCLAY & SONS, LYNCH & CO., J. SANGER & SONS, W. EDWARDS & SON, MAY, ROBERTS, & CO., BUTLER & CRISPE, JOHN THOMPSON, Liverpool, and all wholesale Houses.

CLARKE'S "CRICKLITE" LAMPS

For burning Clarke's Patent Double Wick Wax Lights.

The Cricklite Lamp and Light Co.

Respectfully invite the attention of Visitors to London to the beautiful

EXHIBIT OF THEIR NEW "CRICKLITE" LAMPS

AT 75, Regent Street (Next door to St. James's Hall)

now attracting so much attention as the Light of the Future for Decoratively Lighting Dining and Drawing Rooms.

SILK SHADES IN GREAT VARIETY.

Specially adapted for Country Houses.

CLARKE'S New Patent Double-Wick WAX LIGHTS

Specially for burning in the "CRICKLITE" LAMPS

1/- per Box of 12 Lights. Burn 5 hours each.

Always the same height, and absolutely safe. Lamps from 2/6 to 10 guineas each.

Trade Mark: "CRICKLITE."

Specially adapted for Country Houses.

CLARKE'S New Patent WAX LIGHTS With Double Wicks

Made specially for burning in the "CRICKLITE" LAMPS

12 Lights in a Box. Burn 5 hours each. 1/- per Box

Always the same height, and absolutely safe. Lamps from 2/6 to 10 guineas each.

Trade Mark: "CRICKLITE."

Two to Seven Lamps on One Standard, 18 in. high, in richly cut Glass or Silver-plated, with beautiful Silk Shades. No trouble in trimming. They are absolutely safe, may be left burning without any attention the whole time, are very economical in use, and take up very little space on the table.

All Letters should be addressed to 75, Regent St., W., or the Manufacturers,

CLARKE'S PYRAMID AND FAIRY LIGHT COMPANY, LTD.
CRICKLEWOOD, LONDON, N.W.

Notice. A Supplementary Show Room is Open until the end of October at 156, Regent St. (corner of Beak St.)

N.B.—SPECIALLY ADAPTED FOR USE IN COUNTRY HOUSES AND ABROAD.

WATER ABSOLUTELY FREE FROM DISEASE GERMS, BY USING THE

BERKEFELD FILTER.

FOR THE PRIVATE HOUSE, OFFICE, FACTORY, HOTELS RESTAURANTS, CLUBS, &c. &c.

Can be Easily and Cheaply Fixed to the Service-Pipe of any HOUSE having ordinary pressure.

Supplied to H.R.H. the PRINCE OF WALES, DUKE OF WESTMINSTER, K.G., and others too numerous to mention; THE HOUSE OF LORDS, and THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Glass and Earthenware Table Filters, price from 8s. 9d. each.
In use in all the Principal Hotels. Simple in Construction. Most easily cleaned.
PRICE FOR FILTER AS ABOVE, 42s.
SMALLER SIZE, 25s.
For other prices see price-lists.
Offices and Showrooms:—
The BERKEFELD FILTER Co. Ltd.
121 Oxford St., London, W.

NOTE.—Joseph Lunt, B.Sc., F.C.S., British Institute of Preventive Medicine, in his report on the Berkefeld Filter, says: "Exhaustive experiments showed that with London tap-water strongly infected artificially WITH THE TYPHOID BACILLUS, not a single typhoid bacillus was detected IN THE FILTERED WATER for a period of 26 days."

No Country House Should Be Without One.

City Depot: W. SCHACHT & CO., 26, Finsbury Pavement, E.C.

FARADAY & SON's

Electric Light Fittings

New Designs (in Classic and Renaissance) for Season '98

2 & 3 BERNERS ST. LONDON W

Buy the 4711 Eau de Cologne

IT IS THE BEST, GENUINE, STRONGEST, MOST LASTING, MOST REFRESHING AND INVIGORATING.

Insist upon the "4711" Brand.

REFUSE ALL SUBSTITUTES.

Of most Dealers in First-class Perfumes. Case of 6 Bottles, carriage paid, for 12/6; or Sample Bottle, 2/3 post free.

THE 4711 DEPOT, 62, NEW BOND ST., LONDON, W.

"The Old Favourite."

MAX GREGER'S

CARLOWITZ

SAFEST,
SOUNDEST

Dinner Wine.

PURE
HUNGARIAN
BURGUNDY.

From 15/- per doz.

Of all Wine Merchants and Grocers.

See that every cork bears the brand "Max Greger." Without it the wine is not genuine.

THE PATENT "RIGID-CURVE" STROP.

An English Gentleman, J.P., F.R.S., M.I.C.E., &c., writes:—"I have tried your Razor Strop, and have pleasure in sending you this Testimonial:—It is a simple and sure means in the hands of any novice of securing a proper cutting-edge upon a Razor, and I am surprised that such an improvement has been so long delayed."

Price 3s. 6d., carriage paid. A month's free trial allowed in actual use. Full money returned with pleasure if not approved.

A. HOWARTH, 53, Penn-road, Wolverhampton.

'ONE PIECE' STUDS

PATENTED Unbreakable.

Beautifully Formed. AVOID IMITATIONS.

No one who appreciates a nice Stud wears any other.

None Genuine Unless Stamped Patent.

Sold by all Leading Jewellers.

WHOLESALE ONLY, SAUNDERS & SHEPHERD, LONDON.

LIQUEURS OF THE GRANDE CHARTREUSE.

These delicious Liqueurs, which have come so much into public favour on account of their wonderful properties of aiding Digestion and preventing Dyspepsia, can now be had of all the principal Wine and Spirit Merchants, and all good Hotels and Restaurants throughout the Kingdom.

Sole Consignee: W. DOYLE, 35, Crutched Friars, London, E.C

ASK YOUR DOCTOR

Which is the Best Saddle for Cycling?
He will at once reply—THE 'OSOEZI'

And Why?

It is at once hygienic, anatomically correct, and pressure upon the perineum is avoided. No Saddle-Soreness, even after the hardest and most continuous riding.

21/- post free. Suitable for Ladies or Gentlemen.

Easily adaptable to any machine

A. W. GAMAGE, Ltd., 126 to 129, Holborn, E.C.

HAVE YOU TRIED . . .

CEPHALIA

For HAY FEVER, NEURALGIC PAINS, & COLDS in the HEAD, &c.?

If not, send 13½d. for a Box to

REECE & CO., Medical Hall, Piccadilly, London.

EFFECT SIMPLY MIRACULOUS.

Toilet "Lanoline" For Delicate and Sensitive Skins. 6d. and 1s.

"LANOLINE" Toilet Preparations "LANOLINE"

Darling Brand. from all Chemists.

Wholesale Depôt:—67 HOLBORN VIADUCT, LONDON.

"Lanoline" Toilet Soap For Health and Beauty of the Skin. 6d. per tablet. 3 in a box 1s. 6d.

Best is Cheapest. Fixed prices.

TRADE MARK

PROTECTION FROM CHILL.

Jaeger

PURE WOOL

Underwear, Hose, Pyjamas, Rugs, Blankets. Cashmere Sheets, Dressing Gowns, Shawls, Corsets, Cycling Outfits, Boots & Shoes, Hats and Caps, &c., &c.

"Health Culture" and Jaeger Price List Free.

3 and 4, PRINCES-STREET, CAVENDISH-SQUARE (near Regent-circus).
126, REGENT-STREET (near the Quadrant).
30, SLOANE-STREET (adjoining McPherson's Gymnasium).
456, STRAND (near Trafalgar-square).
85 and 86, CHEAPSIDE (near King-street).

TAILORING (only):—
42, CONDUIT-STREET, NEW BOND-STREET, W.

USE ONLY

BLAISDELL PENCILS

SELF-POINTING.

ALL COLOURS. ALL GRADES.
NO WASTE. BEST LEADS.

Black Lead 1d. & 2d. Coloured Crayons 2d. & 3d.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

Sample Box of 5 Pencils 1s., Free by Post in the U.K.

BLAISDELL PENCILS, Ltd., 46, Holborn Viaduct, London, E.C.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

Clarke's "Pyramid" and "Fairy" Light Co., Ltd., Cricklewood, London, N.W.

The Subscription List opened on Tuesday, March 8th, and will close on or before Wednesday, March 9th, for both Town and Country.

ALBERT BAKER & CO., Limited, the Purchasers of the business and assets of

A. BAKER & CO., Limited (the Up-to-date Tobacconists).

Incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1893.

CAPITAL, £200,000, in 200,000 SHARES of £1 each. PRESENT ISSUE of 150,000 SHARES of £1 each (Of which the Vendor Company takes 50,000 Shares in part payment). Payable 2s. 6d. on Application; 7s. 6d. on Allotment and 10s. on the 1st May, 1898.

DIRECTORS.—Maurice de Meza, 65, Holloway-road, N.; Nathaniel de Meza, 65, Holloway-rd., N.; Hungerford Eardley-Wilmot, Colonial Broker, 27, Mincing-lane, E.C. (A Fourth Director will be appointed by the Company in General Meeting). BANKERS.—The London and County Banking Co., Ltd., Lombard-st., 181 and 182, Shoreditch, and their other Branches. SOLICITOR.—Walter B. Styer, LL.B., 2, Threadneedle-st., E.C. BROKERS.—Lumsden & Myers, 18, Finch-lane, E.C.; and the Stock Exchange, E.C. AUDITORS.—Tilly & Co., 37, Queen Victoria-st., E.C. SECRETARY (pro tem.).—P. E. Hooper. OFFICES.—65, Holloway-rd.

PROSPECTUS.

This Company has been formed for the purpose of purchasing the business of Manufacturing and Retail Tobacconists (together with the goodwill, trade marks, &c.) carried on by A. Baker & Co., Ltd., at 65, Holloway-road, N., and branches in many of the most important thoroughfares in the metropolis and suburbs. The Founders of the Vendor Company, who were originally manufacturers of tobacco, and were established in the year 1864, decided in the year 1895 to open a further number of retail shops, thereby putting themselves in direct contact with the buying public, and eliminating the middlemen; for that purpose the Vendor Company was formed and commenced business at 99, Tottenham Court-road, and at seven branch establishments, which number it has since increased to twenty-two. The Vendor Company, by adopting the most thorough and up-to-date method of trading, and by giving the public the full benefit of the advantages gained by purchasing on an extensive scale, succeeded in a comparatively short space of time in creating a retail business which stands easily first in popularity and reputation with the vast smoking population.

The positions of the various retail branches have been selected with great judgment and discrimination, and many of them rank as the choicest business points in London, being situated in streets thronged daily by business men. Future competition in these streets is little to be feared, as the Company hold the most attractive and commanding positions. The establishments of the Vendor Company to be acquired by this Company are situated as under:—

Chief Offices, Warehouses, and Factory:—65, Holloway-road, N.

BRANCHES.

136, Fenchurch-street, E.C., corner of Cullum-street, E.C.
16, Liverpool-street, E.C., corner of New Broad-street.
12, Bridge-street, Westminster, facing the Houses of Parliament.
112, Cheapside, E.C., opposite Bow Church.
1, Ludgate-circus, E.C.
Charles-street, Farringdon-street, next Farringdon-street Station.
1, Railway-place, Fenchurch-street, next Fenchurch-street Station.
159, Bishopsgate-street Without, next Great Eastern Railway Station.
66, Woodgrange-road, E. facing Forest Gate Station.
99, Tottenham Court-road, W.
Railway Approach, S.W., outside Clapham Junction Station.
18 and 20, Oxford-street, W., next the Oxford Music Hall.
122, Holborn, E.C., opposite Wallis'.
1, Euston-road, N.W., facing Great Northern Railway, King's Cross.
2, Seven Sisters'-road, N., next the "Nag's Head."
36, Bishopsgate-street Within, corner of Great St. Helen's.
423 & 424, Strand, W., corner Bedford-st.
58, High Holborn, W.C.
16A, Liverpool-street, opposite Liverpool-street Station.
*2, Pentonville-rd, N., next the "Angel."
*63, Holloway-road, N.
*Finsbury Circus-bldgs, Eldon-st., E.C.

The shops marked by an asterisk are not yet opened, but the Vendor Company covenants to pay for the fixtures and fittings now being completed.

Out of the turnover for the year ending 31st December, 1897, £135,918 9s. 1d. were the retail cash sales of their several branches, and it must be remembered that this result has been obtained without resort to the expense of advertisement.

The Directors have received the following certificate as to the profits of the Vendor Company from the Company's Auditors:—

37, Queen Victoria-street, E.C., February 28th, 1898.

Messrs. A. Baker & Co., Ltd., 65, Holloway-road, N.

Gentlemen,—As Auditors of your Company, since its formation in July, 1895, we have examined your books each half-year to the present time, and beg to certify that the progress and profitable development of your business has been most remarkable, and that the present net profits of the business, according to the terms stated in the Prospectus, are sufficient to pay a substantial dividend on the present issue of £150,000, and we feel assured that the opening of new shops with the additional capital will, as it has done in the past, add largely to the net results.—We are, Gentlemen, yours faithfully,

TILLY & Co., Chartered Accountants, per J. H. TILLY, F.C.A.

The Directors consider that the true interest of the Company would not be served by giving publicity to further details of the working of the business.

The Company has secured the services, as Managing Directors, of Messrs. Maurice and Nathaniel de Meza, two Directors of the Vendor Company, for a period of at least six years. These gentlemen, who were instrumental in making the Vendor Company the phenomenal success it has become, have every confidence of achieving similar results for this Company. As showing their belief in its success, they have agreed not to receive remuneration for their services in any year should less than 7 per cent. on the issued capital of the Company be earned for that year. The purchase price to be paid to the Vendor Company is £125,000, payable as to £50,000 in Shares and the balance in cash.

The Company will take over the business as a going concern as from the 1st January, 1898, according to the Balance Sheet prepared by Messrs. Tilly & Co., subject to its debts and liabilities at that date (except as to certain liabilities set out in the Agreement for sale to be discharged by the Vendor Company), together with all the assets of the Vendor Co. and accrued profits from that date.

It is proposed to use the £25,000 additional Capital in opening new branches whenever desirable positions can be acquired, and the Directors have every confidence that, by the continued exercise of the same happy judgment in the choice of them the profits of the Company will be materially increased. It is intended to place the unissued Capital of £50,000, so soon as the Directors are of opinion that it can be advantageously used for the further development of the Company.

The Company has ample facilities for the continuous expansion of its manufacturing business and also for the enlargement of its stores to meet every increase of business, for in addition to its factory and warehouse at 65, Holloway-road, N., it holds the premises adjoining, No. 63, Holloway-road; it has also acquired manufacturing premises (at present sub-let) at No. 2, Allen-street, N., at the rear of its present factory. By the Company's Articles of Association no Preference Shares, Debentures or Debenture Stock can be issued without the consent of three-fourths of the Shareholders.

The Contract made between the Vendor Company of the first part, Messrs. Maurice and Nathaniel de Meza of the second part, and the new Company of the third part, and dated 4th March, 1898, for the purchase of the business and the engagement of the Managing Directors; also the Leases and other documents of Title can be inspected at the offices of the Solicitor of the Company. Beyond the above contract there are numerous trade agreements relating to the carrying on of the business, and also agreements with reference to the promotion and the subscription of the Capital of the Company, to none of which the Company is a party. Applicants for Shares shall be deemed to have had notice of all these agreements, and to have waived their right to be supplied with particulars thereof under section 38 of the Companies Act, 1867, and subscriptions are received on this condition only. The Vendor Company, who are selling at a profit, will pay all expenses up to allotment. Messrs. Maurice and Nathaniel de Meza, as large Shareholders in the Vendor Company, are interested in the profits arising from such sale. A settlement and quotation on the London Stock Exchange will be applied for in due course. Applications for Shares should be made on the form accompanying the Prospectus, and sent with the deposit to the Company's Bankers. If no allotment is made, the deposit will be returned in full; and if less Shares are allotted than those applied for, the deposit will be credited towards the amount due on allotment. Prospectuses and Forms of Application can be obtained of the Bankers, Brokers, and Solicitor, and at the offices of the Company or any of its Branches. March 4th, 1898.

PRUDENTIAL ASSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.

Chief Office: HOLBORN BARS, LONDON.

Summary of the Report presented at the Forty-ninth Annual Meeting held on 3rd March, 1898.

ORDINARY BRANCH.—The number of Policies issued during the year was 65,893 assuring the sum of £6,698,755, and producing a New Annual Premium Income of £365,996.

The Premiums received during the year were £2,774,264, being an increase of £231,002 over the year 1896.

The Claims of the year amounted to £707,643. The number of deaths was 5,038, and 656 Endowment Assurances matured.

The number of Policies in force at the end of the year was 497,327.

INDUSTRIAL BRANCH.—The Premiums received during the year were £4,793,591, being an increase of £214,798.

The Claims of the year amounted to £1,823,338. The number of deaths was 192,359, and 1,876 Endowment Assurances matured.

The number of Free Policies granted during the year to those Policy-holders of five years' standing, who desired to discontinue their payments, was 60,848, the number in force being 549,889. The number of Free Policies which became Claims during the year was 10,716.

The total number of Policies in force at the end of the year was 12,546,132: their average duration exceeds eight and a quarter years.

The Assets of the Company, in both branches, as shown in the Balance Sheet, are £30,438,337, being an increase of £3,379,226 over those of 1896. A supplement showing in detail the various investments is published with this report.

Having regard to the growth of the Company, and also with a view to afford relief to the Managers and Secretary, the Directors have made certain re-arrangements and alterations in the Chief Office Staff. Messrs. Dewey, Hughes, & Fisher will in future be Joint General Managers, and certain duties of administration have been entrusted to a number of senior officials, whose long and intimate acquaintance with the management has qualified them for promotion. The Directors believe that the traditions of management which have produced such successful results in the past will thus be continued in the future.

GENERAL BALANCE SHEET OF THE PRUDENTIAL ASSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED, ON THE 31ST DECEMBER, 1897.

LIABILITIES.

	£	s.	d.
Shareholders' capital	1,000,000	0	0
Ordinary Branch funds	15,134,804	10	3
Industrial Branch fund	13,568,033	14	10
Reserve fund	600,000	0	0
Claims under life policies admitted ...	135,499	4	7
	£30,438,337	9	8

ASSETS.

	£	s.	d.
British Government Securities (£3,000,000 Consols)	2,982,232	16	11
Indian & Colonial Government Securities	2,814,523	18	3
Railway and other Debentures and Debenture Stocks	2,159,273	7	5
Loans on County Council, Municipal, and other rates	5,992,665	1	10
Freehold ground-rents & Scotch feu duties	2,628,268	9	6
Freehold and leasehold property	1,882,662	5	6
Mortgages	3,155,015	1	3
Railway, gas, and water Stocks	4,963,189	13	5
Suez Canal Shares	168,489	5	8
Telegraph and other Shares...	26,025	11	7
Metropolitan Consolidated Stock and City of London Bonds	363,420	13	6
Bank of England Stock	200,559	18	6
Foreign Government Securities	692,757	9	2
Reversions and Life Interests	473,705	9	5
Loans on the Company's Policies	578,520	8	3
Rent charges	153,077	17	4
Outstanding premiums	402,094	18	1
Cash in hands of Superintendents & Agents' balances	49,911	6	5
Outstanding interest and rents	231,677	18	7
Cash—On deposit, on current accounts, and in hand	520,265	19	1
	£30,438,337	9	8

THOS. C. DEWEY, WILLIAM HUGHES, FREDERICK FISHER, } Joint General Managers.
W. J. LANCASTER, Secretary.
EDGAR HORNE, Chairman.
HENRY HARBEN, ROBERT BARNES, } Directors.

We have examined the Cash transactions, Receipts, and Payments affecting the accounts of the Assets and Investments for the year ended December 31st, 1897, and we find the same in good order and properly vouched. We have also examined the Deeds and Securities, Certificates, &c., representing the Assets and Investments set out in the above account, and we certify that they were in possession and safe custody as on December 31st, 1897.

February 15th, 1898. DELOITTE, DEVER, GRIFFITHS, & CO.

HITCHINGS' BABY STORES.

The Premier Manufacturers of HIGH-GRADE BABY CARRIAGES in the World, have extensive Showrooms at

198, OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W. (Near Peter Robinson's.)

23, 21, & 19, LUDGATE HILL, LONDON, E.C.

(Works: LUDGATE SQUARE.)

28, KNIGHTSBRIDGE, S.W. (St. George's Place, near Hyde Park Corner.)

HITCHINGS, LIMITED, have recently had the honour of building the Baby Carriage for the Baby Prince Edward of York, having previously executed orders for H.M. the Queen, H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh, H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, H.R.H. Princess Henry of Battenberg, H.R.H. the Duchess of Fife, H.R.H. Princess Henry of Prussia, &c. Also the Royal and Imperial families of Russia, Germany, Denmark, Portugal, and Sweden.

Hitchings' Baby Carriages from 2 to 25 Guineas, and Baby Cars from 15/6 to 10 Guineas, are not only the Best, but also 25 per cent. cheaper than those sold by dealers and stores. A carriage should always be purchased from the actual manufacturer. Enquiries receive prompt and courteous attention. Illustrations free. Correspondence solicited. 300 varieties in stock.

Bankers: Capital & Counties Bank and City Bank. Telegram Address: "Hitchings, London."
Liverpool House, 74, Bold Street. Boston (U.S.A.) Agency: 92, Washington Street.

HITCHINGS' "PRINCESS MAY" BABY CARRIAGE IS MOST SUITABLE FOR A CHRISTENING PRESENT, BEING RECHERCHE & UNPROCURABLE ELSEWHERE.

Before going elsewhere send for Hitchings' Pictorial Price Book free on mentioning "TRUTH."

THE "TROUVILLE" BABY-CAR.

Is equally adapted for use as a Sleeping Car for a young baby, or a Mail Car for an older child.

1. New registered design.
2. Runs on four silent wheels.
3. Small light front wheels.
4. Very safe, centre of gravity being very low.
5. Hitchings' Patent Cee Springs. Very easy.
6. Occupies small space.
7. Has deep well for legs and feet. No cramping.
8. Hitchings' Patent "Any Position Hood."
9. Half the weight of a wood body. Fine wicker and grass.
10. Cool in summer.
11. Artistically painted.
12. Beautifully upholstered in pale blue or art green.

Price as drawn £4. 4s. nett.

Genuine Old Welch Dressers

(Inlaid and Carved Oak), from £6. 10s.

ILLUSTRATED PRICED CATALOGUES POST FREE.
ALL GOODS CARRIAGE PAID TO ANY STATION IN GREAT BRITAIN.

HEWETSONS,

TOTTENHAM COURT ROAD, London, W.

Established] [1784.

Old Bushmills

PURE MALT WHISKEY.

A. H. ALLEN, F.I.C., Public Analyst, in his evidence before the Select Committee of the House of Commons on the Bonding of Spirits, remarked:—

"Bushmills Whiskey is entirely a Pot Still Whiskey, and is Distilled wholly from Malt."

PERFECT PURITY GUARANTEED.

Orders will be executed from either of the undermentioned Offices, or from the accredited agents in all parts of the world.

The Old Bushmills Distillery Co., Ltd., Hill Street, Belfast.
The Old Bushmills Distillery Co., Ltd., 42, Norfolk-st., Strand, W.C.

Old Liqueur, 51s. per doz. * * * (Three Stars), 45s. per doz.

Carriage Paid. Packages Free. Net Cash.

ATKINSON'S EAU DE COLOGNE

Is absolutely the finest made.

More fragrant, more lasting, and very much more refreshing than all others.

USE ONLY ATKINSON'S!

ONCE USED, ALWAYS USED.

Single Bottle 2/3 post free,
Case of 6 Bottles 11s. Carriage Paid.
OF ALL DEALERS.

J. & E. ATKINSON, Limited, 24, Old Bond Street, London,

INVENTORS OF THE CELEBRATED

"WHITE ROSE" PERFUME.

"A Charming Scent."—H.R.H. The Duchess of York.

This Announcement

entitles you to a Dainty Sample Tin of DR. TIBBLES' VI-COCOA FREE (subject to this paper being mentioned). We, the Dr. Tibbles' Vi-Cocoa, Ltd., of Suffolk House, Cannon-street, London, E.C., hereby promise to send FREE on receipt of your name and address (a postcard will do) a Dainty Sample Tin of Dr. Tibbles' Vi-Cocoa, so that you can test its merits free of charge. Not a medicine, but a wonderful food beverage. Such is Dr. Tibbles' Vi-Cocoa. As a concentrated form of nourishment and vitality it is invaluable. Pleasant and palatable, and embodying the numerous principles contained in Malt, Hops, Kola, and Cocoa, it imparts nourishment and builds up strength. Sold in 6d. packets and 9d. and 1s. 6d. tins. This unprecedented offer of a free sample is made as a means of introducing so palatable and invigorative a preparation into every home. A postcard will do. P.S.—It is absolutely necessary that the name of this paper should be mentioned when accepting the above offer.

DR. TIBBLES' VI-COCOA

Address: DR. TIBBLES' VI-COCOA, LTD., 60, 61, & 62, Bunhill Row, London, E.C.

£20 TOBACCONISTS COMMENCING. Illd. guide (259 pgs.), 3d., "How to open respectably £20 to £2,000." Tobacconists' Outfitting Co., Euston-rd., Ldn. Hairdressers fitted.—H. MYERS.

JUNO CYCLES ARE THE VERY BEST

Any JUNO Twelve Monthly Payments.
JUNO Lady's or Gent's Safety, £12 12s., 21/- monthly; £14 14s., 24/6 monthly. JUNOS from £10, 16/8 monthly. Write for New Season's List of JUNO Cycles & Accessories, sent post free. Standard Cyclometers, 10,000 miles, 2/3. Juno Riding School.

METROPOLITAN MACHINISTS CO., LTD., 75, 76, Bishopsgate Without, E.C.; & at Piccadilly Circus, London, W.

OUR PUZZLES.

CONDENSED RULES.

All answers to the current Puzzle must be sent in on or before the morning of the Monday week following the date of that Puzzle's publication, to the PUZZLE EDITOR, TRUTH Buildings, Carteret-street, Queen Anne's-gate, London, S.W. The answers must be signed by a nom de plume of not more than twelve letters, and must not be sent on post-cards, nor by telegraph, nor by hand; whilst in the case of new competitors the real name and address must be forwarded with the first reply sent.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 993.

I hope to be able to give a still further selection of the "Trilby" verses, and shall, therefore, delay for the present the announcement of the Prize-winner's name.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 994.

The Prize in this competition has been awarded to VOX, whose stanza will be found in TRUTH for March 3.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 998.

The usual Prize of Two Guineas is offered this week for

THE BEST DEFINITION IN AS BRIEF AND EPIGRAMMATIC A FORM AS POSSIBLE OF "SMART SOCIETY."

All answers must reach me, at the latest, by the morning of Monday, March 21 next.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

 The real name, with the address, of OOM PAUL, winner of a half of Prize No. 992, is R. E. Eeles, Esq., 30, Handen-road, Lee, S.E.

 The real name, with the address, of DANDELION, winner of Prize No. 991, is J. W. Baines, Esq., 1, Ash-terrace, Cricklewood, N.W.

 The real name, with the address, of ETAK, winner of a half of Prize, No. 992, is Mrs. Hodgson, 21, Shooters Hill-road, Blackheath, S.E.

M. J. C.—No nom de plume must exceed twelve letters in length, so I have abbreviated yours to Lady S.

ETAK.—The omission of the two stanzas had not been overlooked by me. Parodies, however, are not necessarily of exactly the same length as their originals, and I considered it fair to divide the prize.

HERMIT and ULIS.—Your answers to Puzzle No. 994 arrived too late to be printed with the others.

H. S. H.—I will substitute your amended version of the stanzas.

ORLANDO.—The ambiguity is to be regretted. I certainly meant that any succession of consonants might be used. The misprint of "will" for "wilt" in your "Trilby" verses is obvious, as you say.

GEORGINA.—Your suggestion is quite a new one, and I am much obliged to you for it.

SYDNEY.—Thanks for your note.

SURGEON.—Your name was unintentionally omitted.

MONA.—A paragraph usually contains more than one sentence. A sentence, I take to be a number of words grammatically joined so as to make a complete sense, and containing only one full stop.

M. L.—Thanks for your letter.

D. C. L.—I have read your courteous criticism with much interest; and must admit that there is some force in what you say. I will spare you my defence.

R MARTIN.—The misprints did not invalidate your chance; but the inclusion of so large a total of "Chinamen" tended to make the sense of your stanza somewhat obscure.

THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE NO. 995.—ASSORTED SPECIMENS—GOOD AND OTHERWISE.

COMPLETION OF SKELETON STANZAS PUBLISHED IN "TRUTH" FOR FEBRUARY 17.

 The skeleton stanzas which had to be completed ran thus:—

Down — — — her name — traced
— the — — sand;
The — — jealous — —
— kissed it — — —.

I breathed — — — — breeze
That — — — sea;
And lo! — dawn — — —
Whispered — — to —.

Subjoined will be found a few of the numerous completions received:—

Down on the shore her name I traced
On the soft, yellow sand;
The waves with jealous envy raced,
And kissed it off the strand.

I breathed a wish upon the breeze
That swept across the sea;
And lo! at dawn the distant trees
Whispered it back to me. Rex.

Down by the tide her name I traced
Upon the smooth, white sand;
The waves in jealous tumult raced,
And kissed it from the strand.

I breathed it to the evening breeze
That wooed the moonlit sea;
And lo! at dawn the wind-tossed trees
Whispered it back to me. Creran.

Down by the port her name I traced
Upon the wan, grey sand;
The tide with jealous ripples raced,
And kissed it 'neath my hand.

I breathed, "Oh, waft me swiftly, breeze,
That treasure: spare her, sea!"
And lo! as dawn was breaking there
Whispered "She comes!" to me. R. M. T.

Down by the sea her name I traced
Upon the smooth, white sand;
The waves with jealous hurry raced,
And kissed it from my hand.

I breathed it to the evening breeze
That wandered o'er the sea;
And lo! the dawn, o'er silent leas,
Whispered it back to me. Gluck.

Down on the shore her name I traced
Upon the smooth, white sand;
The waves with jealous lips effaced,
And kissed it from the strand.

I breathed it on the evening breeze,
That wandered from the sea;
And lo! at dawn, the gossip trees
Whispered it back to me. Beaumont.

Down on my knees her name I traced
Upon the soft, wet sand;
The waves, half jealous, shoreward raced,
But kissed it 'neath my hand.

I breathed it to the evening breeze
That sped beyond the sea;
And lo! the dawn from far countries
Whispered it back to me. Nell.

Down dropped a rose: her name he traced
Upon the late-washed sand;
The rose the jealous youth replaced,
And kissed it in his hand.

I breathe thy name upon the breeze
That whispers to the sea;
And lo! the dawn, broke thro' the trees,
Whispered "My love to thee!" Malignant.

Down by the sea her name I traced
Upon the fair, white sand;
The tide with jealous waves embraced,
And kissed it from the strand.

I breathed her name upon the breeze
That crisped the sun-set sea;
And lo! at dawn the eastern trees
Whispered it back to me. Oceania.

Down by the sea her name I traced
Upon the firm, white sand;
The waves in jealous ardour raced,
And kissed it from the land.

I breathed her name unto the breeze
That rippled o'er the sea;
And lo! at dawn the rustling trees
Whispered it back to me. Manipur.

Down on the beach her name I traced
Upon the soft, white sand;
The sea was jealous—first embraced,
Then kissed it off the strand.

I breathed her name upon the breeze
That murmured by the sea;
And lo! at dawn the quivering trees
Whispered it back to me. Esperanza.

Down by the sea her name I traced
On the smooth, shining sand;
The waves, with jealous eager haste,
Soon kissed it off the strand.

I breathed her name upon the breeze,
That blew across the sea;
And lo! at dawn the rustling trees
Whispered it back to me. Excelsior.

Down by the sea her name I traced
On the soft, virgin sand;
The waves in jealous ripples raced,
And kissed it 'neath my hand.

I breathed her name upon the breeze
That stole across the sea;
And lo! red dawn from distant leas
Whispered it back to me. Bridge.

Down by the shore her name I traced
Upon the brown sea-sand;
The waves in jealous ripples raced,
And kissed it from the strand.

I breathed it to the evening breeze,
That murmured o'er the sea;
And lo! at dawn the breaking seas
Whispered it back to me. Burgage.

Down by the sea her name I traced
Upon the soft, bright sand;
The waves in jealous anger raced,
And kissed it from the land.

I breathed her name upon the breeze
That travelled o'er the sea;
And lo! at dawn the love-sick trees
Whispered it back to me. Vox.

Down by the shore her name she traced
In the soft, untrodden sand;
The waves in jealous love embraced,
And kissed it from the strand.

I breathed a prayer to every breeze
That swept across the sea;
And lo! at dawn the bending trees
Whispered her name to me. Whig.

Down at my feet her name I traced
Upon the smooth sea sand;
The waves, in jealous, angry haste,
Have kissed it from the strand.

I breathed my story to the breeze
That came across the sea;
And lo! at dawn the forest trees
Whispered it back to me. Lady H. S.

Down at her feet her name I traced
Upon the smooth sea sand;
The ring in jealous ardour placed,
And kissed it on her hand.

I breathed my love with every breeze
That floated from the sea;
And lo! at dawn, "Your income, please?"
Whispered the maid to me. Josephine.

Down by the sea her name I traced
In the glistening, yellow sand;
The waves in jealous madness raced,
And kissed it from the land.

I breathed her name upon the breeze
That told the listening sea;
And lo! at dawn the wakening trees
Whispered it back to me. Scissors.

Down by the shore her name I traced
Upon the bright sea sand;
The wild waves, jealous, forward raced,
And kissed it from the strand.

I breathed it to the midnight breeze
That came across the sea;
And lo! at dawn the rustling trees
Whispered it back to me. Orlando.

Down on the beach her name I traced
Upon the red sea sand;
The tide, so jealous, it erased,
And kissed it from the strand.

I breathed her name upon the breeze
That wafted it to sea;
And lo! at dawn the rustling trees
Whispered it back to me. Jemima.

Down 'neath the rocks her name I traced
Upon the shell-strewn sand;
The waves were jealous, so effaced
And kissed it from the land.

I breathed her name in ev'ry breeze
That blew towards the sea;
And lo! at dawn the waving trees
Whispered it back to me. Cæsar's Corner.

Down by the sea her name I traced
Upon the warm, bright sand;
The tide with jealous arms embraced,
And kissed it from the land.

I breathed her name unto the breeze
That carried it to sea;
And lo! at dawn the rustling trees
Whispered it back to me. Eoo es.

Down by the sea her name I traced
Upon the cool, wet sand;
The flow of jealous ripples raced,
And kissed it from the strand.

I breathed her name unto the breeze
That hush'd the evening sea;
And lo! the dawn thro' murm'ring trees,
Whispered it back to me. Larose.

Down by the shore her name I traced
In the twilight's darkening sand;
The grey waves, jealous, softly chased,
And kissed it from the strand.

I breathed a prayer: the kindly breeze
That pitied, swept the sea;
And lo! at dawn, the bending trees
Whispered, "Love, come to me."
Nodding Violet.

Down by the shore her name I traced
Upon the soft sea sand;
The waves, ah! jealous rivals, raced,
And kissed it from my strand.

I breathed it to the evening breeze
That sighed adown the sea;
And lo! at dawn my linden trees
Whispered it back to me. Musafir.

Down on the beach her name I traced
Upon the firm, brown sand;
That name, the jealous wave effaced,
And kissed it from the strand.

I breathed her dear name to the breeze
That floated out to sea;
And lo, at dawn the rustling trees
Whispered it back to me Gygne.

Down by the sea her name I traced
Upon the yielding sand;
The tide with jealous hurry raced,
And kissed it from the strand.

I breathed my vows upon the breeze
That fanned the evening sea;
And lo! at dawn, my sweet Louise
Whispered them back to me. Homnis.

Down on the beach her name I traced
Upon the brown-ribbed sand;
The sea with jealous wave effaced,
And kissed it from the strand.

I breathed a sigh unto the breeze
That fanned the moonlit sea;
And lo! when dawn appeared, the trees
Whispered it back to me.
Waynflete.

Down by the sea her name I traced
Upon the tide-swept sand;
The wild waves, jealous, madly raced,
And kissed it, as I planned.

I breathed "'Tis she" to sunset breeze
That wooed the languorous sea;
And lo, damp dawn in stifled sneeze,
Whispered "'Tis she" to me.
Robert Martin.

Down by the sea her name I traced
On the sparkling, yellow sand;
The sea with jealous lover's haste
Soon kissed it from the land.

I breathed her name unto the breeze
That gently kissed the sea;
And lo! at dawn the rustling trees
Whispered that name to me. La Plata.

Down on my knees her name I traced
Upon the yielding sand;
The name the jealous tide effaced,
But kiss'd it like a hand.

I breathed her name upon the breeze
That wanton'd with the sea:
And lo! at dawn my sweet Louise
Whispered her love to me.
J. McGrigor Allan.

Down by the sea her name I traced,
In the shifting, yellow sand;
The waves with jealous billows raced
And kissed it from the strand.

I breathed a secret in the breeze
That floated o'er the sea;
And lo! at dawn the faithless trees
Whispered it back to me. Fury.

Down on the shore her name I traced
On the smooth, plastic sand,
The waves were jealous—they effaced
And kissed it from the strand.

I breathed it to the evening breeze
That swept the sunset sea;
And lo! the dawn, more kind than these,
Whispered it back to me. Pemmie.

Down on the ground her name was traced,
Upon the soft, white sand,
The man was jealous and disgraced,
But kissed it on the strand.

I breathed once more the kindly breeze
That fluttered o'er the sea,
And lo! the dawn behind the Lees
Whispered her name to me. Crock.

Down by the sea her name she traced
Upon the bright, smooth sand;
The swift waves jealous me outpaced,
And kissed it from the land.

I breathed a sigh into the breeze
That passed across the sea;
And, lo! at dawn her name—Louise,
Whispered it back to me. Quantock.

A BEDLAMITE.

Down in the mouth her name I traced
Upon the cracked sea sand;
The tide with jealous spuming haste
Soon kissed it off the strand.

I breathed my wish upon the breeze
That cross'd that moonstruck sea;
And lo! by dawn, for answer, Spes
Whispered, "She's mad to be—."
Physician.

Down by the sea her name I traced
Upon the shining, silvery sand;
The waves with jealous swiftness raced,
And kissed it from the strand.

I breathed her name upon the breeze
That wafted it to sea;
And lo! at dawn, an answering breeze
Whispered it back to me. Floré.

Down by the sea her name she traced
On the shifting silver sand;
The waves in jealous ripples raced
And kissed it from the strand.

I breathed all night the balmy breeze
That wafted from the sea;
And lo! the dawn by slow degrees
Whispered that name to me.
Rien de Trop.

Down by the shore her name I traced
In the yellow, golden sand;
The waves in jealous mood embraced,
And kissed it from the strand.

I breathed it to the evening breeze
That woo'd the summer sea,
And lo! at dawn the drowsy bees
Whispered it back to me. Scorpio.

Down 'mid the rocks her name I traced
On the soft fickle sand;
The bright tide, jealous, swiftly raced,
And kissed it from the strand.

I breathed my sorrow to the breeze
That herald from the sea;
And lo, the dawn-wind's rustling trees
Whispered her name to me.
Inamorato.

Answers have been received from:—Peromnia Perro, Crock, Alf, Etak, Clericus, Quantock, Nosetub, Busy Bee, Ellart, Avis, J. Brown, Bullyduff, Ivy Leaves, Irene, Advena, Chica, Sophrosyne, Qu'Appelle, Manx Cat, Huntsman, Gifford Vale, Scotia, Nesclo Quid, Desire, Martlet, Mushroom, Rag, Gug, Wildcat, Freda, The Snark, Malabar, Bad Luck, Malda, J. McGrigor Allan, Fury, Reseek, Grip, Nin Nin, Pretoria, Rex, Mrs. Thomas, Bel Demonio, Creran, Felicité, R. M. T., C. F. Reid, A Daft Scot, Gluck, Aston Villa, Beaumont, Bathampton, O. E. M., Urquhart, Gwilt Gwalea, Nell, W. Gossmann, A. W., Myrah, May S., Physician, Erin, Cavalier, Sang Froid, Borris, Malignant, Bureau, Wyndene, Janet, Sceptic, Bishop O., Wig and Gown, Merle, Rats, Corollary, Suum Cuique, Relwof, Orchid, Blackboard, Anno Dominl, Oceanla, Manipur, Esperanza, Excelsior, Gulidmus, Bridge, Culpepper, Eblana, Leander, Burgage, Vox, Gib, Heathfield, Whig, Grouse, A M. T., Cromwell, Miss Hyde, Bag, Red Rowan, Nin Nin, Lady Hester Stanhope, Mr. Tiger, Wrotthurst, R. B. G., Westbrook, Cis, Josephine, Mona, Prepyshowle, Newnham, Ann, Sissy, Connie, Scissors, Georgina, Nurse, Scudran, Simmondi, Krassatow, Mumarcts, Orlando, Number Nine, Save, Cross, Risk, Jemima, Castlecomer, Venatrix, Miss E. Leith, S. Pup, Prak, Chutney, Bardo, Kedogo, Wayland Smith, Viper, Scorpio, The Hen, Rien de trop, Menar, Ellerig, Roy, Rose, Edwin, Busy Bee, Floré, Aidye, Esmeralda, Myra, Aidee, Sheila, Wandering Jew, Glenrosa, Ukadoo, Sissie, Pendragon, Candide, Cæsar's Corner, Psycho, Carima, Courage, Moonshine, Verax, Fir Tree, Rowna, Felsberg, Betty Malachi, Miss Jackson, Miss R. Chapman, Esser, Francescan, Miss Middleton, Larose, Viggy Pudden, Richman, A. Vichnu, Shadows, Mrs. Nora Gellebrand, Mos, Pemmie, Nodding Violet, Dan, Rover, Musafir, Cygne, Nora, Homnis, Railway Car, Yolande, Pie-repone-te, Epoh, The Fam, Waynflete, Brenda, Robert Martin, Xuihps, Shamus, May Jeune, Kappa, Invicta, Mona, La Plata, Pumphia, Thirty-six, Louise, Trablig, Gollywog, Engineer, Zeta, St. Ives, Blunderbuss, Scrivener, Felix, Stowan, Laddie, M. M., Jinko, Heatner Bell, Cygnet, Rule, Peter, Hircling, Woodlands, and Barratt Hall

ALDRIDGE'S

WILLESDEN PADDOCKS, HENDON.—Instructed by Mr. W. Balding (whose lease of the above has expired and the farm having been let), Messrs. W. & S. FREEMAN will SELL by AUCTION, without reserve, on the PREMISES, next TUESDAY, MARCH 15, at 11.30 o'clock prompt,

His entire STUD of SEVENTY-FIVE HORSES, including four high-class stallions, also match pair of carriage horses, single harness horses, teamers, trappers, and hunters, seven unbroken colts, twelve carriages, harness, farm plant, and stack of prime meadow hay. On view.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

Candles always remain same height, no waste, no dirt, no smell.

Candles cannot gutter, shades cannot take fire.

They fit in any candlestick, and exactly resemble wax candles when in use.

The saving in candles, &c., more than pays for the cost of lamps in a few weeks.

PRICE, from 4/- each, COMPLETE.

Illustrated Price List and Catalogue of Latest Novelties of Table Decoration and Lighting FREE.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

Or can be seen in great variety at the Show Rooms of THE

ARCTIC LIGHT CO.,

179, REGENT ST., LONDON, W.

(Nearly opposite Liberty's).

Wholesale Offices: 49, HATTON-GARDEN, E.C

"COOPER" CYCLES.

From £5 10. Competition Defied.

Latest design Frame, large Weldless Steel Tubes, Ball Bearings, Tangent Wheels, Brake, and Mud-guards, Cushion Tyres, £5 10; Pneumatic £7 10; Ladies', with Dress and Gear Guards, from £6. Twelve months' warranty. Lists free. AGENTS WANTED

Wm. Cooper, 753, Old Kent Rd., London, S.E.

PRUDENTIAL ASSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.—Holborn Bars, London.

EVERY DESCRIPTION OF LIFE ASSURANCE AND ANNUITY BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
REVERSIONS PURCHASED.

Invested Funds, £30,000,000.

The last Annual Report can be obtained on application to the Secretary.

SUN INSURANCE OFFICE

63, Threadneedle-street, London, E.C.

THE OLDEST PURELY FIRE OFFICE IN THE WORLD

SUN FIRE OFFICE FOUNDED 1710

SUM INSURED IN 1896 - £388 952,800.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE INSURERS.

THE IMPERIAL INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED. FIRE. Est. 1803, 1, Old Broad-st., E.C., & 22, Pall Mall, S.W. Subd. Capital, £1,200,000. Paid-up, £300,000. Total funds, over £1,500,000.—E. COZENS SMITH, Gen. Man.

BIRKBECK BANK (Estab. 1851), Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane, London. Two and a-half per cent. interest allowed on deposits, repayable on demand. Two per cent. on current accounts, on the minimum monthly balances when not below £100.
The BIRKBECK ALMANACK with particulars, post free.
FRANCIS RAVENSCROFT, Manager.

LONDON AND COUNTY ADVANCE AND DISCOUNT COMPANY, Limited.—Cash advanced from £10 to £500, without preliminary fees or deductions for interest, for short or long periods, repayable by easy instalments, at moderate rates, upon approved security. Bills Discounted. Forms free. Offices, 57 and 58, Chancery-lane, W.C.—JOHN STONE, Secretary.

LIPTON'S TEAS

DIRECT FROM THE GARDENS

NOTE THE PRICES.

FINEST THE WORLD CAN PRODUCE

Per 1/7 lb.

NO HIGHER PRICE.

RICH, PURE, AND FRAGRANT,

Per 1/- and 1/4 Lb.

Millions of people are daily drinking and enjoying these delicious Teas, fresh from the sweet-scented Island of Ceylon. Lipton is sole owner of some of the most famous estates in Ceylon, which cover thousands of acres of the best tea-growing land.

Ceylon Offices and Shipping Warehouses: Prince Street, and Maddema Mills, Cinnamon Gardens, Colombo.

Visitors to this beautiful Island are cordially invited to call and see over Lipton's Tea and Coffee Warehouses, Maddema Mills, Cinnamon Gardens, Colombo. Those desirous of going up country are also welcome to visit Lipton's Tea, Coffee, and Cocoa Estates, situate high in the hills, where some of the finest Tea can be seen growing at an altitude of about 7,000 feet above sea level.

BUY FROM THE GROWER.

TEA MERCHANT

BY SPECIAL APPOINTMENT TO HER MAJESTY

THE QUEEN.

THE LARGEST SALE IN THE WORLD.

£50,513 11 5

represents Duty on over 1,300 Tons of Tea, and is the amount of

THE WORLD'S RECORD DUTY CHEQUE

For TEA, Paid to Her Majesty's Customs, London, By LIPTON,

FOR HIS WEEK'S CLEARANCE.

This speaks for itself, and represents considerably more than half the entire quantity of Tea used per week in the whole of Great Britain.

Indian Offices and Shipping Warehouses: HARE STREET, CALCUTTA.

LIPTON TEA, COFFEE, AND COCOA PLANTER, CEYLON.

BRANCHES AND AGENCIES THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.

Chief Offices: CITY ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

THERE IS ONLY ONE Pill to a dose of

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

AND THERE IS ONLY ONE GENUINE PACKAGE.

It is EXACTLY like this, only the wrapper is printed in blue on white.

The vial contains forty pills, and costs 1s. 1½d. at the Chemist's. This is cheaper than pennyworths of doubtfully compounded pills. It is but a trifle over a farthing a dose, or ONE PILL IS A DOSE, though they are so small that FORTY-NINE of them only measure one inch square.

Cure TORPID LIVER WITHOUT FAIL. SICK HEADACHE, MALAISE, DISTRESS FROM EATING, and SALLOW COMPLEXION promptly done away with.

BRITISH DEPOT FOR CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS 46, HOLBORN VIADUCT, LONDON, E.C.

"BUT BE SURE THEY ARE CARTER'S."

1898

MAPLE & CO

1898

LONDON PARIS

THE LARGEST AND MOST CONVENIENT

Furnishing Establishment

IN THE WORLD

Decorating Specialists
Sanitary Engineers

REHABILITATION
OF
TOWN AND COUNTRY RESIDENCES

Free Consultations with Experts

MAPLE & CO'S Decorating and Furnishing Experts can be consulted Free of Charge in Town or Country; while having practical men engaged in Sanitary and Electrical Engineering, Plain Painting, Plumbing, Artistic Decorating, and other work in the COUNTRY as well as on the CONTINENT, are able to take plans or carry out such orders without the expense of sending plant specially from London. Further particulars on application.

MAPLE & CO (LTD)

SPECIAL SHOWROOMS
FOR BATHS CLOSETS
Model Bath-Rooms
CABINET LAVATORIES CHIMNEY-PIECES
PARQUET FLOORING
DADOES PANELLINGS
OVERDOORS and ARCHES
RANGES and GRATES

See "DC" Catalogue sent "DC" post-free

MAPLE & CO invite all about building or rearranging their residences, as well as Architects, Builders, and others, to visit their New Show-rooms and inspect the latest models and patents. Most favourable terms are offered, while much loss of time and trouble will be saved. See also the new "DC" Catalogue, sent post-free.

RESTORING FURNITURE
REMAKING BEDDING

MAPLE & CO have large departments especially devoted to the RESTORATION of FURNITURE, including repairing, recovering, repolishing, remaking of bedding, alteration or renovation of curtains, carpets and other descriptions of work, all of which are done in the most thorough manner, at very moderate prices. Estimates free.

Decorations Decorations Decorations Decorations Decorations Decorations Decorations Decorations Decorations Decorations

Sanitation Sanitation Sanitation Sanitation Sanitation Sanitation Sanitation Sanitation Sanitation Sanitation

MAPLE & CO
LONDON
Established Half-a-Century

MAPLE & CO
LONDON
Established Half-a-Century

Printed for the Proprietor by LOVE & WYMAN, Limited, Great Queen-st. W.C. and published at 10, Bolt-ct. Fleet-st. E.C. in the Parish of St. Dunstan's-in-the-West, in the City of London. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to REGINALD E. BOOKER. "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-st. Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

· TRUTH ·

"Cultores Veritatis Fraudis Inimici."—Cicero.

No. 1107. Vol. XLIII. Thursday, March 17, 1898. Price Sixpence.

NOTICE.

The terms of Subscription to Truth, which are payable in advance, are as follows:—To any address in the United Kingdom, for 3 months, 7s.; 6 months, 14s.; and for 12 months, 28s. The Thin Paper Edition is forwarded to countries within the Postal Union for 3 months for 7s. 8d.; 6 months, 15s. 4d.; and 12 months, 30s. 8d. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to the Manager, Truth, "Truth Building," Carteret-street, S.W.

ENTRE NOUS.

THE reckless and idiotic sensation-mongering of news-agencies and enterprising journals caused a pretty scare last week about the Queen's health. The "anxiety" alleged to exist at Court by a romancing morning paper on the subject of her Majesty's health was purely imaginative. The Queen's "slight indisposition" was simply nothing whatever, and she had neither a cold nor a bilious attack. The fact is that the Queen has been in really wonderfully good health ever since her return from the Riviera nearly twelve months ago, and in the last year she has never been unwell for a single day, except for one slight cold and occasional twinges from the rheumatism which has troubled her for the last twelve years.

The St. James's Gazette has been printing some nonsensical fiction about the Queen's eyesight, stating that "it cannot be denied that no improvement has taken place since an oculist was last consulted." Did ever any one hear of an improvement taking place in the eyesight of a person who is nearly seventy-nine? As a matter of fact, an oculist sees the Queen every few weeks, and it is difficult to understand how ever an evening paper can endeavour to get up an alarm because her Majesty uses glasses for reading and writing! As to the Queen leaving her ordinary reading to the Maids of Honour, this has been her custom to a great extent for the last thirty years. The Queen has used glasses for reading and writing for more than twenty years. Very few women of the Queen's age have such good eyesight.

It is reported at Berlin that after the Queen returns to Windsor Castle, Princess Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein, elder daughter of Prince and Princess Christian, will be betrothed to the Grand Duke Alexis Alexandrovitch of Russia, uncle of the Emperor Nicholas. The Grand Duke Alexis, who was born in January, 1850, is Lord High Admiral of the Russian Navy. Princess Victoria is just twenty years the junior of the Grand Duke Alexis, who has hitherto resisted all the numerous attempts of his Imperial relatives to induce him to change his condition.

There is to be a great gathering of Royal personages at Cannes at Easter, for the celebration on April 14 of the eightieth birthday of Queen Marie of Hanover, who is expected there shortly on a visit to the Duke and Duchess of Cumberland.

The Duke of Connaught is going to Dresden about April 20 for a few days, to represent the Queen at the Court fêtes in celebration of King Albert's seventieth birthday. The late Prince Consort was a Duke of Saxony, a distinction which his sons have inherited. When the Prince of Wales was born he was gazetted "Duke of Saxony," and much offence was given because this title had precedence in the official announcement over the various British titles. The Prince of Wales quarters the arms of Saxony with the Royal arms of England, in accordance with the advice of the Privy Council. Sir Robert Peel and Sir James Graham were responsible for this advice, but the arrangement was not carried out without vigorous opposition from the Earl Marshal.

Empress Frederick also has the Saxon arms, but her armorial bearings were given to her by the Queen by warrant in December, 1840. It is expected that the Queen will confer the first class (G.C.V.O.) of the Royal Victorian order upon the King of Saxony, who was made a Knight of the Garter in 1882, when the Duke of Fife went on a special mission to Dresden to invest his Majesty with the ribbon and insignia.

The Duke of Cambridge, who is staying at Cannes, will return to England early next month in time to spend Easter at Kew, after which H.R.H. goes to Newmarket for the Craven Meeting, and he is to be the guest of the Prince of Wales at Sandringham from April 15 to 18, on which day he is to arrive at Gloucester House for the season.

The Crown Prince and Crown Princess of Greece are about to leave Athens, and they will be away for a year. The Crown Prince and Crown Princess are to divide the period of their absence between Germany and Denmark.

There was a very small attendance at the Drawing Room, both in the entrée, and of the general company. It would have been much better to postpone the second Drawing Room until May, but the Queen refused to do so. There are to be only two Drawing Rooms after Easter, with 200 presentations at each, in addition to those from the entrée.

A daily paper, in an account of the Drawing Room, states that some of the company "were back again in their own houses soon after three." They must have been very clever people indeed, seeing that the Princess of Wales did not enter the Throne Room until several minutes after three, and fully half an hour elapsed before any carriage drove away from the Palace. The best got-up of the equipages were those of the Russian Ambassador, the Duchess of Buccleuch, and Lady Lansdowne. The Ladies Scott were not "granted the entrée," but they are entitled to that privilege while unmarried as the daughters of the Mistress of the Robes. The Queen granted the entrée for this function to Lady Waterford, who was presented, on her marriage, by her mother, Lady Lansdowne.

Lord Tweeddale declined again to undertake the office of Lord High Commissioner to the Church of Scotland, which he has held several times, and he is to be succeeded by Lord Leven and Melville. The Lord High Commissioner resides for a fortnight in May at Holyrood House, presides over the daily sittings of the Assembly, takes part in all sorts of public functions, and gives an immense dinner every night to the clerical and lay members of the Assembly, besides holding a Levee and giving two or three huge receptions. The Lord High Commissioner receives £2,000, but this sum is considerably below the outlay, if the hospitalities are on a generous scale, and if everything is thoroughly well done. Lord and Lady Tweeddale were both very popular, and their hospitalities were sumptuous.

Last week Lord Cadogan paid one of his flying visits to London, though the Castle was full of guests. Lord Cadogan goes through changes of character so rapid that they must puzzle even himself. He leaves Kingstown a Viceroy, with all the privileges and precedence of the position. At a point in the Channel, however, a certain number of miles from the shore, his privileges and precedence vanish; without even a change of costume, he lapses into a plain English nobleman and Cabinet Minister. At this point too, no doubt, his mind, till then neutral and loftily free of Party feeling, assumes the Conservative tinge suitable for the Council the attendance at which is the object of his journey.

Lord and Lady Cadogan, with a large Viceregal party, were present at the opening of the annual exhibition of the Royal Hibernian Academy last week, and were received by the President, Sir T. Farrell, Mr. Walter Osborne, Mr. Duffy, and other members of the Committee. Some excellent work is exhibited by Messrs. Osborne, Moynan, and B. McGuinness, Miss Purser, and many others. In addition to the exhibition some pictures of Messrs. Orchardson and Sargent have been lent.

Lord Arran, who is to receive the ribbon of St. Patrick vacant owing to the death of Lord Carlingford, is better known in England than in Ireland, though of late he has lived a good deal at his picturesque residence near Foxford, where Lady Arran has been active in promoting home industries. Lord Arran is head of the family of Gore, one of whose members, the Duchess of Inverness, was the wife of the Queen's uncle, the Duke of Sussex. One of his daughters is married to Lord Salisbury's eldest son. Lady Arran was well known in Dublin society, and as a débutante was one of the beauties at Dublin Castle. Her father, Mr. John Reilly, was an official at the Four Courts, and married the daughter of the Chancellor, Lord St. Leonards.

Lord HolmPatrick was very well known in Irish society. He was a constant resident at Abbotstown, which is only five miles distant from Dublin. He was personally popular with every class being courteous and amiable. Politically he belonged to the old Irish Conservative school, of which Protestant ascendancy is the leading doctrine. All shades of politicians, however, attended his funeral, at which Lady HolmPatrick and all his children were present. Lord HolmPatrick was moderately wealthy; and his successor, now only ten years old, will be a rich man when he comes of age. Lady HolmPatrick is a god-daughter of the Queen and sister to the present Duke of Wellington.

The Dowager Lady Elgin, who died last week at Broomhall, Fifeshire, had lived in complete retirement since her husband's death in 1863. She was a very clever woman, and a charming hostess, and much distinguished for her high intellectual culture. Lady Elgin was greatly beloved in the neighbourhood of Broomhall, and her kindness to the poor was untiring. Lady Elgin accompanied her father, Lord Durham, to Canada before her marriage, and when she returned thither with Lord Elgin her knowledge of the country and its parties was of great service to her husband. Both at Ottawa and at Calcutta Lady Elgin was a perfect hostess and leader of society, and her success was the more remarkable, inasmuch as her disposition was naturally very retiring. She was an immense favourite with Dean Stanley, who married her sister-in-law, Lady Augusta Bruce, and he often visited her at Broomhall.

Parties will be entertained next week for Liverpool races, by the Duke and Duchess of Westminster at Eaton Hall, and by Lord Stanley and Lady Alice Stanley at Knowsley Park.

For the TRUTH HOTEL LIST, see page 684 in the present issue.
For HOSPITALS and APPEALS, see page 682.
For AMUSEMENTS, see page 683.
For OUR PUZZLES, see page 693.

The Duke and Duchess of Westminster have returned to Eaton Hall from Torquay, and will stay there until after the Easter holidays. The Duke's health has been much benefited by his stay at Torquay, and he is so charmed with the place that he will probably take a villa there for next winter.

Kind-hearted ladies and gentlemen are continually inviting me to bring about some amendment of the law which will put a stop to the cruelty perpetrated on goats at seaside towns, Brighton chief among them. I have a great deal of sympathy with the goats, but I also sympathise with the children, who derive much enjoyment from goat-carriage exercise. Although it is true we do not allow dogs to be used for draught purposes in this country, there seems no reason why goats should not be allowed to draw reasonable weights. What is required is that the local authorities should take steps to see that goat carriages are not overloaded, and that the boys in charge do not ill-treat the animals. Most of the cruelty of this kind that has come under my personal observation seems due to a mistaken idea on the part of the boys that a goat is able to draw his load better if at the same time his conductor is endeavouring to pull his head off.

A matinée will be given at the Comedy Theatre on Tuesday next in aid of various societies for the benefit of animals, including the R.S.P.C.A., the Home of Rest for Horses, the Society for the Protection of Birds, the Metropolitan Drinking Fountain and Cattle Trough Association, and others. The proceeds will be distributed among the societies from which the tickets are purchased.

I have thought it my duty to intercept the following question, addressed to my valued contributor, "Madge." It is a case where I think a man can advise better than any woman.

Supposing a young man is thrown daily into the society of a young and pretty girl, living in the same house, in fact; and suppose that they are very good friends, but are nothing more, and don't want to be as at present advised—(1) Is there any reason why he should not give her a birthday present of some value? (2) May he ask her for her photograph?

Oh, my dear young friend, why cannot you leave well alone? If at present you and she are very good friends, and as at present advised—very well advised, I should say—do not want to be anything more, there is every reason in the world why you should not give her a birthday present, and why you should not ask her for her photograph. Even granting that you yourself have made up your mind that you do not want to be anything more than friends, how on earth do you know that she has? Read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest a few reports of breach of promise cases.

Many reasons besides the true one have been given for the failure of the Imperial Institute. The latest that has come under my notice is the extravagant prices of the refreshment tariff. A gentleman told me the other day that, having joined the Imperial Institute merely as a convenient West End club, he withdrew because he found that he could not get a decent lunch there at a reasonable price. There may be something in this; but it does not explain the withdrawal of the Colonial Governments, and I doubt if it altogether explains the defection of the subscribers.

A friend of whom I expected better things has, I am sorry to say, fallen a victim to Klene & Co., of biographical notoriety. He is a gentleman well known in the musical world, and having been misled into the belief that he was contributing to an authoritative biographical publication, he supplied Klene & Co. with the necessary particulars for his own memoirs, and agreed to pay £2 10s. for a copy of the volume. When the book came out, it appeared that both his christian name and surname were misspelt, the compiler having adopted two methods of spelling the surname, and used both of them alternately with engaging impartiality. Thinking that a work compiled on these principles could not be worth much, my friend returned the book, and declined to pay for it. He is now being pressed by a debt-collecting firm for his £2 10s. I hope he may get out of the bargain, but in any case, his experience should serve as a warning to others.

The Sporting Times published the other day notices to the effect that the advertisements of turf tipsters, money-lenders, and massage establishments will in future be excluded from its blushing columns. If my chastened contemporary could see the vast pile of letters calling attention to this announcement that have reached Truth office from all parts of Europe, he would feel indeed that he has his reward. Seriously, the Sporting Times deserves the thanks of all decent-minded people for taking this step. Hitherto the great difficulty of making any reference to the massage evil has been that, in doing so one necessarily directed attention to the advertisements of such places. I have learned by experience, that owing to this reason, more harm than good was done by discussing the subject. Let the advertisements once be systematically boycotted in the Press, and we may hope soon to see the end of all such abominations.

There seems to be a wave of respectability flowing over the Press all round. Another class of advertisements against which I have long waged war formed the subject of an action last week between the proprietors of a certain patent medicine and a firm of advertising agents. The action arose in consequence of the new proprietors of another weekly journal, Pick-Me-Up, having decided to exclude such advertisements from their columns. The evidence given in the case showed what I have always contended—viz., that advertisements of this particular class are not only immoral, but fraudulent. One of the defendants stated in the course of the trial that similar advertisements "appear in any number of respectable papers," and "are scattered broadcast through the Press." This also is true, and I recommend the proprietors of the respectable journals which still publish such garbage to study the summing up of Mr. Justice Darling in the Pick-Me-Up case, and the evidence of Dr. Allfield in the witness-box. The Weekly Times and Echo still remains unpurified.

A Beautiful Hotel at Bournemouth.—The "Royal Bath." "Hôtel de Luxe of the South." Sea frontage, 1,000 ft.; grounds, 5 acres. Due south. Only Hotel on East Cliff. Moderate fixed tariff.

It is proposed at Cambridge to appoint a Reader in Surgery for five years, the General Board of Studies recommending the suppression of a Professorship for a further period of five years. The arrangement is regarded with much disapproval, as not a step has so far been gained towards getting rid of the difficulties in connection with the matter which have been a constant subject of discussion during the last five years. The University cannot expect to obtain the services of a really eminent surgeon unless he has charge of the beds in Addenbrooke's Hospital, and it seems that this cannot be arranged without an Act of Parliament, followed by extensive changes in the constitution of this establishment.

Archdeacon Salmon, who was recently appointed by Bishop Kennion to the Archdeaconry of Wells, in the place of Archdeacon Fitzgerald, has resigned the important living of Weston-super-Mare, where he succeeded Canon Buckle. This benefice is worth about £500 a year, with residence, and is in the gift of the Bishop of Bath and Wells. Archdeacon Salmon has presented himself to the Vicarage of Brent Knoll, of which he is patron in right of his office as Archdeacon of Wells. This living is worth about £450 a year, with residence, and it is within a few miles of Weston, being the next parish to East Brent, where Archdeacon Denison was incumbent for nearly half a century.

Here is a case which has an obvious bearing on the question whether the present revenues of the Church are sufficient for the proper maintenance of the clergy. The living of Fishley in Norfolk is worth £125 a year and a house. The village contains three houses besides the parsonage. The parsonage is a good house, recently rebuilt at a cost of £1,200. A gentleman, who calls my attention to this case, mentions as others of the same class within his own knowledge a Devonshire parish containing three houses, and another in Buckinghamshire with nine houses, the parson's income in each case being over £200 a year. Dozens of other cases equally scandalous might easily be found.

The appeal just issued on behalf of the Queen Victoria Clergy Fund stated that there are now 5,907 parishes in England, of which the nominal value ranges from £30 to £200. This statement is devoid of all significance unless supplemented by full information as to the exact amount of duty attached to each benefice. The truth is that the system of parochial endowments involves a waste of thousands upon thousands of pounds per annum. The object of the Queen Victoria Clergy Fund is said to be to raise the income of every beneficed clergyman to £200 per annum. The idea of paying a man £200 a year for looking after the spiritual needs of a parish containing three—or, for the matter of that, thirty—houses is preposterous. Any other religious or secular organisation which squandered its funds in this manner would be held up to ridicule and opprobrium, and it is outrageous that urgent appeals should be sent out to increase the incomes of the clergy, while no effort is made to properly husband and apportion the existing resources of the Church.

A clergyman, who was long on intimate terms with the late Bishop of Bedford, takes exception to an observation in TRUTH that "he began his ministry as a very Low Churchman." "Depend upon it," observes my correspondent, "Billing was never what I should call a very Low Churchman, i.e., one who ignores or is utterly indifferent to Church order, or to the decency, dignity, and reverence which every clergyman is bound by his ordination vows and instructions to maintain in public worship." No doubt, the accepted view of the difference between High and Low Church varies with each generation, much as does that between a Liberal and a Tory. I am old enough to remember when the outward sign of a High Churchman was preaching in a surplice; this was deemed by Low Churchmen to be equivalent to being on the high road to what was then called a Roman. But now, I take it, most clergy preach in their surplices without any of their congregations objecting.

A singular little exposition of bigotry has been given by the members of a voluntary Parochial Church Council at Colchester. Owing to complaints of the annoyance caused by "the sound of the church-going bell," including some from the congregation, the clergyman, himself a liberal-minded man, proposed that the time of the tolling should be shortened from a quarter of an hour to five minutes before each service; but the Council disapproved of the change, one of the objections mentioned being that Nonconformists would be gratified by such a concession. In other words, the bell is to be kept ringing for the full quarter of an hour, not because so long a spell of the noise is agreeable to Churchmen, but because it annoys Dissenters.

I am asked to state that the address of the London Depot of Greek Industries is 39, Marloes-road, Kensington, W.; the Hon. Secretary's address is 2, Kensington Park-gardens, W.; and that large additions to the stock are pouring in from different parts of Greece. The goods, which sold well while housed in the crypt of the Greek-Church, Moscow-road, should go off still better now that they have their own roof over their heads.

BELLIS'S world-famed real TURTLE SOUP, more strengthening than any beef fluid. Glass flaçons 7/-, tins. 5/-.—Obtainable everywhere, or direct, postfree. T. K BELLIS, 6, Jeffrey's-square, London

It will, no doubt, interest many of my readers to know that Mr. Arnold Forster's recent letters to the Times on the Condition of the Army have been republished in a handy volume, as have also Sir Charles Dilke's on the same subject. The former volume is published by Mr. Edward Arnold, and the latter by Messrs. Service & Paton. I do not see eye to eye with either writer, and in particular there is much in Mr. Arnold Forster's criticism which seems to me entirely wide of the mark, even assuming the accuracy of the facts · but unquestionably his letters form one of the most serious indictments of the War Office that have ever been published, and that is saying a good deal.

The whole basis of Sir Charles Dilke's arguments appears to be that we should be ready, not merely to resist an attack, but also to deliver what he terms a "counter-stroke." This I understand to mean that we must be in a position to invade the territory of either France, Germany, or Russia. There is only one Army reform which will put us in a position to do this, and that is conscription. Either we must rely on our insular position to save us from the militarism which now dominates the Continent, or we must adopt the Continental military system en bloc. My contention has always been that the latter alternative is the one towards which our present military advisers are, consciously or unconsciously, tending, and Sir Charles Dilke's arguments seem to prove it.

While the idea of our undertaking military operations on the Continent under modern conditions is chimerical, no one can doubt the necessity of being prepared to repel an invasion in the event of a naval disaster. For this we should rely upon our Auxiliary Forces, stiffened by a small infusion of regular troops. That, at any rate, is my view, and for that reason I call attention to the following passage from Sir Charles Dilke's book, which, to my thinking, contains the most serious charge that can be made against our present military administrators :—

> Our insular position would enable us to resist invasion with a comparatively small Army—less than our present number of men with muskets—if that Army were well organised and commanded. But at the present moment the Volunteer battalions are of extraordinarily unequal merit; they are terribly short of officers; their command is not, as a rule, so provided for as to make us feel that they would be handled in the best way; and they are entirely unsupplied with a well-trained field artillery, which is specially required by young troops. The Militia, I may add, are also wholly without field artillery, and the Regular Army itself has a smaller proportional supply of field artillery than has any other army in the world.

It is reported that a committee, composed of the Financial Secretary and representatives of both the combatant and the medical branches of the War Office, is now at work on the long-expected Medical Warrant. If there is any truth in this, Lord Lansdowne would be well advised if he at once strengthened the committee by adding to it some representative administrative Medical Officer on full pay, not connected with the War Office. There is a strong feeling throughout the Army Medical Staff that no good thing can ever come out of 18, Victoria-street, and this feeling is fully justified by past experience.

If any competent judge of the facts doubts the justice of all that has appeared in Truth in criticism of the Tirah operations, let him study the article on the Tirah Campaign in the current number of the Fortnightly Review. That article is written by an eye-witness who has been through the campaign. Every point in the Truth criticisms is repeated and confirmed — the delay in the advance, the breakdown of the transport, the excessive quantity of baggage carried, largely owing to the crowd of superfluous Staff officers, the inefficiency of many of the Staff, the inaptitude of the operations at Dargai, and the shortcomings of Sir Richard Udny. Above all, the writer insists that in what he says he is only expressing "the con ensus of opinion among the officers of the Tirah Field Force." I have myself heard enough of the opinion of officers with the Force to know that he is right in this. What, becomes, then, of the foolish and futile telegram transmitted home the other day in answer to Truth by a Reuter's representative at Peshawur?

Perhaps the most interesting passage of the Fortnightly Review article is that describing the second attack on Dargai. The great point which it brings out is that the failure of the Gurkhas, Derbys, and Dorsets to carry the position in the earlier part of the day was due far less to any lack of pluck and go on the part of the men, than to the way in which the attacking force was handled. After describing the successive futile rushes made in "driblets" by these regiments, the writer says :

> Gradually a hesitation arose as to the orders of the General —a hesitation fatally infectious—aggravated by every second's delay; aggravated by the sight of the dead and dying. Were they not to wait till the batteries, by a concentrated fire, had beaten down the rain of bullets from above?—or were they to rush forward now?—would a man survive?—then what would bethe use? Was it not too much to ask of men, many hungry and tired, many more mere boys, poisoned with disease? Couldn't the General give some clear order? Where was his Brigadier?
>
> The General lay on a native bed in the village below, covered with a blanket, wracked with dysentery. Below, too, was his Brigadier. . . . .

There are one or two important questions which ought not to be lost sight of in connection with the deplorable illness and death of Major-General Yeatman Biggs. Sir William Lockhart has put it on record in his own despatches that he himself believed the General to be unfit for active service from the outset of the campaign, and did not agree with the opinion of the Medical Officer who had pronounced him fit. As a matter of fact, it was well known before he went on active service that General Yeatman Biggs was in extremely bad health. I believe that he had been recommended to leave India, and his friends anticipated the worst results from his going on active service. It therefore becomes of great public importance to know: (1) Whether the deceased officer was examined by a Medical Board in the usual course before his promotion to Major-General; (2) whether he was examined as to his physical fitness before he proceeded on active service; and (3) who were the Medical Officers, if any, who passed him on either or both of these occasions? One would also like to know the name of the Medical Officer referred to in Sir William Lockhart's dispatch who pronounced Major-General Biggs fit to remain in the field. The decisions of Medical Boards and Medical Officers in the case of officers of high rank have often been falsified by the event, but there has rarely been a more striking example of their fallibility than this.

Type-writers and Cycles, all makes, for Sale, Hire, or Exchange, at half makers' prices. MS. Type-written.—Taylor's 74, Chancery-lane, London. Established 1884.

Apart from the question of the responsibility of Medical Officers, it is impossible altogether to absolve Sir William Lockhart. If, as he himself declares, he did not agree with the decision of the Medical Officer who declared Major-General Yeatman Biggs fit to remain in the field, it was surely open to him to have himself ordered a fresh Medical Board to report upon the officer's physical condition. It is beyond question that for a week before the battle of Dargai General Yeatman Biggs had been virtually incapacitated for the efficient discharge of his duties. Every one must sympathise with the devotion of an officer who could stick to his post in the face of such difficulties. That it may not be expedient, however, to allow him to do so, is pretty evident from the Fortnightly Review account of the second attack on Dargai.

Not only is the TRUTH criticism of Sir Richard Udny's handling of the Frontier outbreak in its earliest stage confirmed by the Fortnightly Review's "Eyewitness," but it seems to have been anticipated in the Civil and Military Gazette. I have just received an extract from that paper which condemns Sir Richard Udny's abandonment of the Khaiber in terms seldom applied to prominent officials in responsible newspapers. It is pointed out that the coming attack on the Khaiber was known a week beforehand, and that it was open to the Commissioner either to garrison the forts with British troops, or to make arrangements to relieve them when attacked, or to withdraw the garrisons from the forts. Sir Richard Udny chose a fourth course. He first recalled Captain Barton, the Commandant of the Khaiber Rifles, from Lundi Kotal, and he then sent the following telegram to the Punjab Government:—

> As there is now no officer in the Khaiber whom it would be necessary to succour if Lundi Kotal and the post are attacked, it will not be necessary to do anything from this side, or to force the pass. General Elles agrees in this.

The result was that the Khaiber Rifles were left to their fate, and the forts captured, with all the arms, ammunition, and property contained in them.

It would be difficult, indeed, to speak too strongly of this incident. Sir Richard Udny, and apparently General Elles with him, calmly advocate the abandonment of a body of native troops in British pay on the cynical ground that there was no officer with them whom it was necessary to rescue. Even if the abandonment of the pass and forts had been desirable for strategical or technical reasons, nothing could justify this treatment of the garrisons, especially when it is remembered that there was no reason whatever why they should not have been withdrawn at the time when their Commandant was ordered to Jamrud. It is inconceivable how, after this exploit, Sir Richard Udny could have been appointed Political Agent with the Tirah Field Force, and, still more, how he could be rewarded, as he has since been, with additional honours in commemoration of his services. There has actually been some talk in India of his appointment to the post of Frontier Commissioner, which, it is understood, is likely to be created. If so, it may be necessary to say something even stronger than anything which has appeared at present.

A good deal of hostile comment has been made in India on the appointment of Colonel J. W. Otley to the Tirah Field Force, with the rank of Brigadier-General. I believe I am right in saying that this officer served continuously on irrigation works under the Public Works Department from January, 1870, until August, 1896, when he was retired from the Department on attaining the age of 55. In January, 1898, he is given an important command upon a force in the field at a most critical juncture. Could there be a better illustration of everything that has been said in condemnation of the reckless jobbery which marks the Simla administration?

There is a story told by one of the American humourists —I forget which—illustrative of the phenomenal stinginess of the inhabitants of some spot—I forget where. The gist of it is that a workman was blown up in an explosion so far that he disappeared entirely out of sight. His comrades had given him up, and almost forgotten all about him, when a speck was seen far away in the empyrean, which grew larger and larger, until the missing man dropped on his feet just where he had gone up. He had his pickaxe still in his hand, and at once went to work again with all his might to make up for lost time. But when the pay time came, he was docked of ten minutes' pay for absence without leave. Judging by the case of Colour-Sergeant Walker, of the Royal Scots Fusiliers, this is precisely the principle on which the War Office deals with our soldiers.

Colour-Sergeant Walker's story has already been told in these columns. He was sent with a small party to hold a certain point, and keep the enemy in check while his battalion was retiring. They were apparently forgotten, and were most of them killed or wounded in attempting to overtake the retreating force. Walker was shot, and taken prisoner by the Afridis, who kept him as a hostage for some weeks, and then released him. On rejoining his battalion, he was brought before a court of inquiry for absence without leave and deprived of his pay for the time of his absence. Mr. Brodrick explains that this is the usual course, as duly provided by the Queen's Regulations and the Royal Warrant, although the Secretary of State is accustomed to exercise a benevolent discretion under such circumstances, and restore the man's pay—I suppose some time "in the coming by-and-by." This is like the unspeakable clemency of the Crown, which grants a "free pardon" to an innocent man when it is shown that he has been wrongfully convicted. As such rules make the Queen's Regulations and the Royal Warrant look idiotic and contemptible in the eyes of every rational being, Mr. Brodrick would do well to get them amended promptly.

HEERING'S COPENHAGEN CHERRY BRANDY. The most delicious Liqueur. Established 1818. Of all respectable Wine Merchants.

One of my readers in the rank and file, who is also a student of Kipling, sends the following verses, inspired by the story of the Scots Fusiliers' Colour-Sergeant:—

A CASE OF "WALKER!"

As long as fightin's to be done they talks us fair enough,
We're "a thin red line of 'eroes" an' all that sort o' stuff.
The Colonel sez he's proud of us, and 'ow we're just the men
To charge them durned Afridis—yus! it's all soft sawder then.

Yus, it's Tommy this an' Tommy that,
An' Tommy make 'em run!
But they're down on us poor Tommies
When we've got the fightin' done.
When we've got the fightin' done, my boys,
When we've got the fightin' done—
It's quite another pair o' boots
When we've got the fightin' done.

For if so be in chargin' 'ome you should get a bit too far,
Why, if they knocks you on the 'ed and kills you—there you are!
But, 'spose you're only wounded, and is made a pris'ner—phew!
It's a Gawd-forsaken future that is then stored up for you.

For, say the crafty enemy
You manage to deceive,
They'll try you when you reach your camp
For absence without leave!
For absence without leave, my boys,
For absence without leave—
They'll try you by court-marshil
For absence without leave!

You may 'ave 'ad an awful time, what with dust an' thirst an' flies,
Your wounds they may 'ave fester'd and the glare 'ave spoilt your eyes;
You may 'ave risked your life an' all in boltin' for the plains;
But if you expect a welcome—you're a juggins for your pains!

'Strewth, you'll just catch it jolly 'ot
For gettin' clean away;
They'll try you by court-marshil
And they'll stop your bloomin' pay.
They'll stop your bloomin' pay, my boys,
They'll stop your bloomin' pay,
For bein' "absent without leave,"
They'll stop your bloomin' pay!

"It is in the Regilations," that's the answer wot we've got;
But if that's the Regilations, why, I call 'em tommy rot.
If for doin' of your duty, and for stickin' to the same,
You get kicks instead of ha'pence, it's a strite-down bloomin' shame!

An' the next time that our Colonel
Tries his complimints so pat,
And reminds us we're 'is 'eroes,
An' sich gushin' things as that,
Why, it oughtn't to surprise him
If, by way of our reply,
All us Tommies shouted "Walker!"
And just winked the other eye.

If a statement just sent to me is to be trusted, the experiences of the 3rd Battalion Rifle Brigade with the Tochi Field Force were even more calamitous than has yet appeared. A Service reader tells me that the battalion marched out, a splendid body of men, over 900 strong. All that returned to India were some ten officers and 260 fever-stricken men. The rest were either buried, in hospital, or invalided home. The remnant of the Battalion has since been sent to some health resort to recuperate. The same informant tells me that there are officers now in London who have had ample experience of the plague-stricken spot where the Rifle Brigade were encamped, in defiance of the advice and remonstrances of their Medical Officer. It is said that a brigade was encamped near the same place with very similar results about twelve years ago. There was not the slighest stategical reason for the choice of this site, as the position could have been commanded had the battalion been encamped two, or even three, miles off. If the military authorities dispute these allegations, let them hold a proper inquiry into the experiences of the Tochi Field Force, and let the public hear the evidence.

Why should not India have a Staff College of its own? The question seems opportune at present, when we have been hearing so much of the shortcomings on the Frontier, and the paucity of Staff College officers on the Indian Staff. I hear from officers of the Staff Corps, past and present, that they are seriously handicapped in qualifying for Staff appointments by the expense of going through the Staff College course in England. To an officer in the British Service the Staff College course involves no loss of pay, but it does to a Staff Corps officer, who is put on English rates of pay during the time he is in this country, at the same time that he incurs numerous extra incidental expenses. As a rule, the private means of Staff Corps officers are, I believe, less than those of their comrades in the Home service, those who select the Staff Corps generally doing so chiefly on account of the higher pay. It is therefore unfair to them, and not in the interest of the Indian Service, that they should be at any disadvantage in acquiring the Staff

Gillow & Company.—The largest Stock of Furniture, of exclusively the best quality, although widely varying in cost. Designs and estimates free of cost.—406, Oxford-street, London, W.

College qualification. In other matters the Indian Army already has its own schools of instruction, and no one questions their efficiency. Why not, then, let it train its own Staff officers?

Since writing the foregoing, I have discovered a new argument for an Indian Staff College in a letter from an officer now in India. Referring to the recent remarks in TRUTH on the dearth of Staff College officers on the Indian Staff, he writes:—

> The Indian Army does not want Staff College officers. Whenever a vacancy on the Staff occurs, a hope is universally expressed that it will not be filled by one of them.
>
> The Indian Army finds from bitter experience that Staff College officers are, as a rule, so engrossed in themselves and their theories that they are less efficient and do not serve the Army as well as officers who have not graduated at the Staff College.

Possibly the fact of the Staff College being an English Institution does as much as anything else to create the feeling here described.

It has been pointed out to me that I ought not to have bracketed warrant with non-commissioned officers in the remarks that appeared in TRUTH a fortnight ago respecting the necessity for some definite age of retirement, the age limit for warrant officers being already clearly laid down. This is true, and it rather strengthens the case as regards N.C.O's. If an age limit is laid down for warrant officers, it should apply to the lower ranks as well.

Here is another criticism bearing on the same point:—

> You say that much good can be got out of N.C.O.s after forty years of age, and that a man may have completed twenty-one years' service before attaining that age. This I admit, but, assuming that a man enlists at twenty-five years of age, which is the limit, he would be forty-six on completing twenty-one years' service.

Very well. Then fix the limit at forty-six. This is about the period at which I should say a man's usefulness becomes in most cases doubtful, and if the limit were fixed here it would give to every N.C.O. a chance of completing twenty-one years' service before retirement.

Having, I regret to say, passed the critical age of forty-five myself, I confess to some sympathy with the feelings of those who object to being laid on the shelf at that point in their existence. Although the age limit is of more consequence in military than in civil life, we yet admit that a man over forty-five may be good for active service in the Army by allowing Generals and Field-Marshals to remain at their posts long beyond that period. The exigencies of promotion no doubt necessitate the present system of superannuation; but what I cannot understand is why some attempt is not made to utilise in the Auxiliary Forces the services of the commissioned and warrant officers who are now every year leaving the Army almost in the prime of life. On the one hand, we have it admitted that the Militia and the Volunteers are most inadequately and insufficiently officered; on the other, we are burdened with an enormous "non-effective list" of officers, who might be rendering most useful service in one or other of these Forces. Why we should keep a man for years in absolute idleness on a pension or half-pay, when we could make good use of him at a small additional expenditure, I cannot understand.

Non-commissioned officers of No. 4 Mountain Battery, R.A., have lately had a disagreeable experience of the erratic manner in which promotion is occasionally awarded as between different corps. When the battery went out to Malta last year, three N.C.O.s were brought in from garrison companies to replace men found unfit for foreign service. While it was at Malta, a draft of three N.C.O.s and 100 men were sent out to India. The three vacancies were not filled up at the time, and on the return of the battery to England it is discovered that three more N.C.O.s attached to it at Newport for garrison duty are to be brought in. Thus six vacancies arising in the battery within little more than a year are filled up from outside. Such a course can only have the effect of utterly disgusting all the more promising and efficient men who are waiting for their promotion, and will not improbably cause them to leave the Service at the earliest possible opportunity.

I had a very plausible letter the other day from a non-commissioned officer respecting the regulation which makes it a condition of a sergeant's pension that the qualifying service must have been continuous. Is it just that a single offence, which leads to a man's reduction in rank for a brief period in his military career, should, in addition to that punishment, carry with it the life-long loss of pension, earned, but for this one fault, by years of good service? Take one case that I have had before me. A sergeant of fourteen years' service, ten years as an N.C.O., commits an indiscretion which leads to his reduction. He retrieves his character, and recovers his former rank, and again puts in four years' service in the rank of sergeant. This man, at the time of his discharge, has served in the aggregate fourteen years as a sergeant, but he has forfeited his sergeant's pension; whereas a man who has served a continuous twelve years as sergeant, whatever the crimes he may have committed during his first nine years' service, obtains a full pension; and even a man who has served for fourteen years as sergeant, and has been reduced in his first two years, would still save his pension. This state of things is anomalous, and to my mind unjust. A pension should be earned by so many years' service, and should only be forfeited for some serious offence, such as would involve imprisonment or expulsion from the Army.

The new regulations with regard to the rejoining of Reservists have naturally created some dissatisfaction among N.C.O.s and men still serving with the colours, and I have had two or three letters on the subject. The chief grievance, of course, is that N.C.O.s coming back with their former rank stand in the way of men waiting for promotion, and the result may be that some of them will lose their chance of pension. A similar grievance is created by married men returning to the strength, and thus standing in the way of others who are waiting to get married, or for a chance of coming on the strength. I am bound to say that I do not altogether see how such hardships are to be avoided, and if the new regulations are maintained permanently, the only comfort I can offer to men who suffer is that they, in their turn, may some day have the privilege of rejoining the colours to the prejudice of their juniors. There is no reason, however, why special privileges should be granted to men rejoining which are not extended to those who have never left the colours.

MAJOR HOWE & CO.—Fashionable BOOTS and SHOES.—16, Coventry-st., W.; 60, Strand, W.C.; 81, Gracechurch-st.; and 13, Queen Victoria-st., London. "Note Addresses." (Repairs.)

I understand that for a whole year one of the Metropolitan Rifle Corps has been virtually without a sergeant-major, owing to the fact that the excellent officer filling that place had the misfortune, more than a year ago, to lose one of his legs in consequence of an accident. Twelve months have apparently not sufficed for the War Office to pension the sergeant-major off and appoint a successor in his place. It would be interesting to know how much correspondence has passed upon the subject during that time.

Soldiers and sailors who have earned medals on active service show a lamentable lack of regard for the cares and labours of officials at home. I have just been asked to censure exalted functionaries in Whitehall because the Benin medal, which Mr. Goschen last Session promised should be issued in about three months, has not yet made its appearance. Why, it is only a year or so since Benin was captured, and the men who served in Chitral three years ago have hardly yet got their medals. I hear that the first instalment of Chitral medals was issued quite recently —a most gratifying piece of intelligence, by the way. At this rate the heroes of Benin will be lucky if they get attended before the end of the century.

Compliments have been paid in these columns to the great solicitude which many officers in these days manifest in regard to the domestic welfare of their men. But never has a more striking proof of this interest come to light than in certain orders now in force at Fort Westmoreland, Spike Island. It is there notified that a certain lady, being properly qualified to assist Mrs. Atkins at those periods when she is making an "addition to the strength," the Officer Commanding troops directs that no one else is to be employed on those critical occasions without his permission. The order even lays down the fees to be paid to the lady for her services in the case of staff-sergeants and sergeants, corporals and bombardiers, privates and gunners respectively, together with the number of days she is to remain in attendance. The C.O. has evidently the very strongest faith in the qualifications of the lady of his choice, for it appears that a soldier (a single man) has been going round the married quarters with a book, obtaining the signatures of the married women to the order, as evidence, I suppose, that they bind themselves to employ the lady in question. The little "Tommies" of this garrison will almost be born swaddled in red-tape.

Strange to say, the C.O. at this station is a single man. Too much praise cannot be bestowed upon him for the pains which he must have taken, doubtless at some sacrifice of his own feelings, to ascertain the qualifications of the lady in question. It is painful to have to add, however, that his judgment in this matter is not implicitly accepted by all the husbands and wives under his command, and that more than one Mrs. Atkins has a strong opinion that she ought to be allowed to arrange this delicate business for herself. The worst of grandmotherly government, whether in military or civil affairs, is that people so often kick against it, even when it is for their own benefit. I really think that the C.O. at Fort Westmoreland would do well to countenance a second Mrs. Gamp, even if he entertains private misgivings as to her qualifications.

It is contrary to my practice to insert anything in the nature of an advertisement in this column, but having said so much as to the difficulty experienced by old soldiers in finding civil employment, I am persuaded for once to make an exception to the rule. I do so at the request of a retired military officer, who wishes to engage an ex-soldier (or sailor) and his wife, as gardener and cook respectively. It will, I trust, be understood that this is to be regarded as an exception, and that applications must be addressed, not to Truth, but to "Lagopa," Coverack, Helston, Cornwall.

A member of the Malta Sporting and Jockey Club states that the soldiers supplied as waiters on the occasion of the club race meetings are paid for through the president of the Officers' Mess, who in due course sends in an account to the honorary secretary to the Jockey Club. This is in reference to a paragraph which appeared in Truth of February 24, airing a complaint of some of the waiters that they had not been paid. It would seem, therefore, that the proper person to look into this complaint is the president of the Officers' Mess.

I have received from a soldier serving in the Soudan with the Nile Expeditionary Force, a comparative table of the canteen prices at Cairo and at the front respectively. It seems that in the case of many necessaries—such as butter, cheese, jam, milk, not to mention luxuries such as tobacco, tinned salmon, and notepaper—the prices at the front are on the average more than doubled. Is it not very hard on the defender of his country that when he is sent to the front the cost of living should be increased in this way? And is there any justification for it when goods can be sent up by a Government railway?

Ernest, Ltd., 185, Regent-street.—The handsome new Salons, where fancy Tailor-made Gowns and Coats are always on view. Send for the new Spring Illustrated Price List.

Duysen Pianos are the most superb of all modern Instruments. They stand absolutely unrivalled for beauty of tone, touch, & finish. A consummate success in small grands.—Lloyd's, 24, Mount-street, Grosvenor-square, W.

The N.C.O. who lately complained of the victualling arrangements on board the hired transport Spartan must, I fancy, have been a rather fastidious person—at any rate, I have now received letters from several other N.C.O.s expressing their satisfaction with the food supplied. It is true one of them gives a somewhat guarded certificate of character to the bread, "but even that," he says, "was often better than ration bread on shore in barracks." As to the dry canteen, it is asserted that all articles were sold at the regulation prices, and that an officer of the ship was always present to prevent any irregularities.

There seem to have been some extraordinary occurrences on board one of the troopships which left England for the East shortly before Christmas. My information on the subject comes from a private letter written by a man in the North Lancashire Regiment, and sent to me by a gentleman who vouches for the truthfulness and general good character of the writer. A draft of the North Lancashire went out by the ship, but what the ship was I am not able to say. The man states that in consequence of the inferior quality of the food, which principally consisted of ship's biscuit, a number of the soldiers one night broke into the bread locker and seized about 300 loaves. The baker arrived on the scene, and was attacked by the men, who threatened to throw him overboard. The ship's crew were turned out, and fired on the rioters with blank cartridge. A number of men were put in confinement in a lock-up at the bottom of the ship, which is stated to have been swarming with rats. The writer states that so incensed were the soldiers at their treatment, that if the prisoners could have broken out there would probably have been a general mutiny. This is a very ugly story, and there ought to be some further inquiry into the facts.

The authorities will, I presume, have no difficulty in identifying the ship to which the above statement refers. Was it by any chance the Shanghai? If so, there is a special significance about a complaint which I have myself received from one of the men who went out by this ship. The Shanghai left England in November with drafts and detachments of various corps for the East. It is stated that after passing Gibraltar, the meat rations were very short in quantity, and of the worst possible quality, so bad, indeed, that the men threw overboard a great part of what was issued. Another curious statement is that numbers of soldiers were regularly employed in scrubbing paint, swabbing the decks, &c., which is surely not the usual practice on board troop ships, where soldiers are virtually in the position of passengers. The grievance in this case was heightened by the excessive amount of guard duty, as many as twenty-four men being put on this duty every morning. If the disturbance referred to in the previous paragraph did occur on the Shanghai, these facts would go some way towards explaining it.

Surplice Shirts for evening wear, with pique fronts, 9/6, 10/6 each, made to measure.—Sampson & Co., Shirt Tailors, 268, 270, Oxford-street, London, W. Price lists forwarded.

It is a pity that the Royal National Lifeboat Institution could not have got over its annual meeting without a display of silly and vindictive animosity against those who have criticised the management of the Institution. The Duke of Leeds, after referring to the criticism of the Institution as "braggadocio" and "spite," delivered himself of the following strange sentiment:—

> I may, however, say that while slanders and unfounded charges when brought against individuals are cruel enough, when brought against a noble charity they are ten times as cruel.

In the name of common sense, why? Is any human being the worse for any one of the charges which have been made against the National Lifeboat Institution? One would really think that when a body of gentlemen get into a room, and form themselves into a committee to manage a charity, they acquire a sacrosanct character, and that any reflection upon their omniscience is like an outrage upon the anointed person of a German Emperor. In my time, I have criticised a good many public institutions, and some of them have well deserved criticism. But I never yet indicted any body of men in this position without being denounced as a wrecker, animated by no motive but that of upsetting a glorious work and defaming virtuous men whose time and money were devoted to the benefit of their fellow-creatures.

In the case of the National Lifeboat Institution, a great deal of the criticism it incurred was well deserved. The worst charges made against it were made by the Secretary of Lloyd's, in error, as the event proved, but on what he had every reason to consider good information. The criticism for which I was personally responsible was chiefly directed to the manner in which the accounts were presented, and every word that I have said on that subject stands fully justified. If it is to be held a crime to criticise, even wrongly, the management of any public charitable undertaking like the National Lifeboat Institution, then I will never cease to agitate until such institutions are abolished, and their work handed over to the State. Thank goodness we are still free to criticise the action of public departments, and are likely to continue so. Unless public institutions are open to criticism, the public have no security whatever for their honest and capable management.

I have received a letter from the Central Executive Committee of the Indian Famine Relief Fund, in reply to a note in these columns, explaining that they were powerless to insist upon the payment of interest on the money placed in the hands of the Bank of Bengal. The Committee had no discretion in the selection of bankers to the fund, the Bank of Bengal having been virtually nominated by the Government of India and accepted at a public meeting in Calcutta before the Committee was formed. The question of interest was raised at an early period, but the Committee were informed that it was not the practice of the Bank to allow interest on floating deposits, and the directors could not be induced to make an exception in this very special case, nor did the Bank, as a corporation, subscribe to the fund. The explanation exonerates the Committee, but shows up the conduct of the Bank in anything but a creditable light. Nor does it speak highly for the intelligence of the Government.

Fresh proof of the ineptitude of the present Indian administration is afforded by the riots at Bombay. Nothing could be clearer or more significant than the account of the origin of the outbreak furnished by Reuter. A Mohammedan woman was lying ill. A plague party endeavoured to investigate for themselves the nature of the illness. Permission to examine the woman was refused; a crowd gathered; the plague party were stoned; armed police arrived to assist the plague party in effecting their object; police, magistrates, and plague officers were stoned; and in a very few minutes a formidable riot was in progress, which quickly spread to other parts of the city.

Compare this with the causes which immediately provoked the Indian Mutiny, and many other similar incidents of more recent date, and it would really seem that the Indian authorities learn nothing by experience. Domiciliary visits, such as that described above, and the inspection of sick women by European officials, and even soldiers, are indignities which the natives would rather die than submit to. To force such humiliation upon them, however legitimate the object may appear to European minds, is the rankest folly, and folly which imperils the whole stability of British rule in India. I question myself very much whether any of these plague precautions, which cause so much disturbance and trouble, are of any practical value. At any rate, it is certain that the medical authorities in India, up to the present time, have failed signally to deal effectually with the epidemic. But, however that may be, it is absolutely essential that in any precautions or remedial measures which are adopted by public authorities, the susceptibilities and prejudices of the natives should be scrupulously observed. If that cannot be done, it would almost be better that the plague should be left to take its course.

On March 9, Lord George Hamilton read to the House of Commons a telegram from the Governor of Bombay to this effect: "In case of rumours of serious unrest among Mohammedans at Bombay, they are untrue." Within twenty-four hours came the rumours of the rioting and consequent loss of life. If the facts had been less notorious, and the information telegraphed home less complete, we should probably have been told, on the authority of this telegram from the Governor of Bombay, that the news was false. The Governor of Bombay has made himself look remarkably foolish, and it is to be hoped that his example will deter other exalted Indian officials from forwarding contradictions in advance of the facts.

Londoners have often had occasion to abuse the Metropolitan Asylums Board for its failure to cope with outbreaks of infectious disease; but it appears that some of the provincial towns are not always perfect in that respect. A resident in Huddersfield recently had a servant taken ill with diphtheria. On applying to the medical officer for her removal to the isolation hospital, he was informed that there was at present no ward for such cases. The consequence was that the hapless householder had to vacate his residence, to engage two trained nurses, and to practically turn his house into a hospital for about five weeks, not to mention the subsequent process of disinfection, paperhanging, and overhauling of drainage, the total cost imposed upon him being something over £50. It should be stated in fairness to him that the diphtheria was not bred on the premises, the patient having been taken ill only two days after arriving. Considering that the borough rate at Huddersfield is 5s. 9d. in the pound, and that that is supposed to include the provision of an infectious diseases hospital, the ratepayer in this case has certainly cause to doubt whether he is receiving value for his money.

London is suffering from a serious epidemic of measles, and in some districts it has been considered advisable to close the schools to prevent the spread of the disease. Singularly enough, neither whooping cough nor measles are included in the list of maladies compulsorily notifiable under the Public Health Act; consequently, an outbreak of either becomes thoroughly established before the attention of the authorities can be directed to it. Seeing how admirably the law of notification has worked in the case of the more serious of the zymotic diseases, it is a question well worth consideration whether it is not desirable to add measles and whooping-cough to the compulsory list, so as to check their progress from the very outset. For the sake of our American visitors, it is satisfactory to know that medical evidence entirely contradicts the malicious rumour that Barnum's Show at Olympia is responsible for the present epidemic.

Does the law empower sanitary officers to make domiciliary inspections wherever and whenever they please? According to a Liverpool paper, two officers of the Liverpool Corporation demanded admission, late one night, to a house occupied jointly by a man named Francis Mackenzie and his father-in-law. Their object, they explained, was "to count the number of people in the house," and Mackenzie, supposing that they had a legal right to do this, allowed them to enter, whereupon they searched the premises with the utmost closeness, even flashing a lantern on to the bed where the man's sick wife was lying. A protest against the conduct of the intruders was sent to the Liverpool Health Committee, and in reply the Town Clerk is said to have written a letter to the effect that Section 92 of the Public Health Act of 1875, "not only empowers a local authority to make the inspection in question, but imposes an absolute duty on them to do so."

The Famed "Adelphi" Turtle forwarded from the Adelphi Hotel, Liverpool, to all parts of the country. Per quart jar, 18s.; per pint jar, 9s. 6d., carriage paid. Speciality for Invalids.

This statement will come as a surprise to a good many citizens, who have fondly imagined that any such violation of the sanctity of the home was entirely at variance with the law of the land. Everybody is aware, of course, that sanitary inspectors have a right to visit registered common lodging-houses; but this was not a common lodging-house. It was a private residence, and if the officers of the Liverpool Corporation had power to enter it in this unceremonious manner to see whether there was any overcrowding, then the officers of other local authorities throughout the country must also have power to make similar nocturnal inspections, and any night I may be, I suppose, aroused from my slumbers by an emissary of the Westminster Vestry or the London County Council bent upon searching my humble dwelling. If this be the law, then the good old principle that an Englishman's house is his castle has indeed received a final knock-out blow. But is it really a fact that the municipal authorities are invested with such a drastic and objectionable power, enabling them to do at their own sweet will what even the police cannot do without first showing good cause for the issue of a search warrant? Perhaps some of my legal readers will be able to throw further light upon the subject.

Bumble appears to be under the impression that he is entitled to look on unconcernedly at the suffering and starvation of any applicant for relief who declines to enter the workhouse. At Peckham the other day an inquest was held on the body of a poor old woman named Pope. For a couple of years she and her husband, both over seventy, were allowed outdoor relief, but this was stopped, and they were offered "the house" or nothing. Like many of the poor—often, too, the most respectable and deserving of the poor—they had an invincible repugnance to the workhouse; and so the old couple lived or lingered on in the most awful poverty until the woman died of starvation. A second case of the same kind has happened lately at St. Day in the Redruth Union. There also a woman was allowed to starve to death because she had "refused the house," and the Coroner states that the representations respecting her condition were made in vain both to a member of the Board of Guardians and to the relieving officer.

The Local Government Board encourages Guardians to dispense as far as possible with outdoor relief; but, needless to say, it strongly disapproves of its policy in this direction being carried to the callous and inhuman extreme revealed in the above cases. Last week, Mr. Chaplin, replying to a question about the death of Mrs. Pope, said:—

> We consider that when admission to the workhouse is offered and refused, the case should be watched by the Relieving Officer, with a view of giving relief in kind if it should appear to him to be requisite. It is very greatly to be regretted that this course was not adopted in the case in question, and the Board have informed the Guardians accordingly.

These remarks will, I hope, be taken to heart by Guardians throughout the country, for the cases at Peckham and Redruth are but typical of many that occur.

From the proceedings at an inquest at Belfast last week, it would seem that the inhabitants of that city are compelled to offer up a heavy sacrifice of human lives to the parsimony and negligence of the Harbour Commissioners. Hundreds of deaths by drowning have occurred, it was stated, in consequence of the unguarded condition of the docks; but though repeated representations have been made to the Commissioners, they refuse to provide protective posts and chains or do anything whatever for the safety of the public. The coroner expressed regret that the Commissioners could not be placed in the dock, for if not legally, morally, at any rate, they were guilty of causing many deaths. He did not say whether he meant one of their own docks or the dock of a criminal court, but either would be equally effectual.

A number of the inhabitants of Hythe, Kent, have lately petitioned the Local Government Board for an inquiry into the borough finances, which seem to have been scandalously muddled and mismanaged for years past. The accounts have been kept in a most loose and slipshod manner, and ratepayers experience great difficulty in getting at all the facts; but sufficient is known to show that the Town Council has played the part of a spendthrift, contracting loans at extravagant interest, and paying for large overdrafts at the bank, while keeping the rates too low to meet the expenditure, and allowing their collection to fall into hopeless arrear and confusion. Latterly some attempt has been made to bring the collection a little more up to date; but even now it is fifteen months behind, the rate just demanded being for the half-year ending August 28, 1897. This rate is one of 5s. in the £, an increase upon the previous rate which was only obtained by making it retrospectively in January last! The system of holding the rates over for so long has resulted, of course, in almost inextricable confusion and inevitable loss, and the ratepayers will probably have to suffer for past indulgence by paying the equivalent of three half-yearly rates during the present year. The inquiry for which they ask certainly seems to be needed.

Wembley is another place where many of the ratepayers are up in arms against the local governing authority—an Urban District Council formed under the Act of 1894. The indictment of the Council is a lengthy one, but the principal count seems to be that since this body was constituted it has spent most of its time and energy in quarrelling with every neighbouring authority and every individual brought into relationship with it; the result being a constant waste of the ratepayers' money in needless litigation and other law expenses. Its critics assert, indeed, that beyond the accumulation of lawyers' bills there is practically nothing to show for the existence of the Council; and a short time since a meeting of 400 or 500 of the aggrieved inhabitants passed a resolution calling upon the whole of the members to resign. The members, however, stick to their seats; and apparently the only thing the ratepayers can do is to grin and bear the present state of affairs until the elections give them an opportunity of changing the composition of the Council.

The luxury of a bath is incomplete without the addition of Scrubb's Cloudy Fluid Ammonia, which refreshes and invigorates. Sold everywhere, but avoid injurious imitations.

The disclosures in a case at the Exeter County-court last week must be somewhat disquieting to the ratepayers of Exmouth, who have before them the prospect of a large expenditure on a drainage scheme. It seems that the Exmouth District Council undertook to effect an alteration in the drainage at a private house, but did the work so badly that the owner had to have the drains taken up again and relaid. When complaint was made to the Council, they replied that they were "perfectly satisfied that the work had been properly carried out." The Judge of the County-court, on the contrary, was perfectly satisfied that the work had been done in a negligent and improper manner, and as the result of the action brought by the householder he gave a verdict against the Council for £33 8s. 4d. damages, with costs. If the extensive works which have yet to be tackled are executed in the same "perfectly satisfactory" way as this little job, it will be a cheerful business for the unfortunate ratepayers.

My remarks the other day on the Irish Grand Juries have brought me an interesting letter from a correspondent, who declares that what happened in County Clare really gives but a poor idea of the way in which public offices have been filled and local affairs managed by these bodies. He instances another county, where for sixty years past practically every post of value and importance has been treated as the exclusive preserve of one particular family, who between them "run the whole show." There seems indeed little doubt that many of the Grand Juries have been what somebody has picturesquely described as "nests of nepotism and jungles of jobbery." Seeing, however, that these anomalous institutions are to be swept away by the new Local Government Bill, it would be hardly worth while to devote any further attention to them—unless, of course, the Ministry should lose the courage of their convictions and drop or emasculate the measure.

It may interest those who have followed the discussion in Truth of the question whether the right to deduct landlord's income-tax from rent is lost if the deduction is not made at the next payment of rent after the payment of the tax, to know that the law appears to have been laid down in a Scottish appeal case in the same sense as that given by the English authorities. I have this from a barrister, who states that the authority is to be found in the Law Reports (England) Consolidated Digest for 1896, No. 21, pp. 202, 203.

Concerning the mean and impudent trick which Truman Press played upon the proprietor of a new paper at Barnet, a barrister tells me that Press's registration of the advertised title gave him no legal claim to it, nor did his issue of one copy of a paper bearing that title. This will be seen on reference to the case of the Licensed Victuallers' Newspaper Company v. Bingham (38 Ch. D., 139). The only way in which an exclusive right to a title can be acquired is by use and reputation; and my correspondent thinks that in the case at Barnet an injunction could probably be obtained to restrain Press from using the title which had been made known by advertisement as the intended title of the new journal.

Here is another example of the cost of legal red tape. On the death of a testator who had appointed one sole executor of his will it was found that the executor had become insane, and was confined in an asylum. The whole of the real and personal estate was left by the will to two sons, who were responsible men of middle age. They applied for administration, but before they could get it had to produce affidavits from two officers at the asylum, proving the insanity of the executor, at a cost of £4 14s. 6d.; and after this the administration granted is limited to the life of the insane executor. This means that on the death of the lunatic the two sons will have to go through the process of taking out administration over again, at a further outlay in fees and solicitor's costs. Is it not a monstrous thing that in such a case the Court cannot dispose of the job once for all?

It was somewhat cold comfort which the Lord Chancellor gave last week to the deputation of newspaper proprietors and journalists who besought his assistance in securing an amendment of the libel laws. Lord Halsbury seems to think that the Press does not suffer any special hardship from the bringing of baseless actions by impecunious persons, inasmuch as all subjects of the Queen are liable to the same hardship. It is true enough, of course, that in theory everybody stands to be shot at in this way; but it is also true—and the Lord Chancellor must be singularly ill-informed if he does not know it—that in practice, newspapers are harassed to an exceptional extent by the unjustifiable attacks of litigious sharpshooters. To the suggestion that plaintiffs should be required, under certain conditions, to give security for costs, his lordship raised the usual objection that the Queen's Courts must not be closed to a person who happens to be poor. Nobody proposes that a man should be debarred by poverty from seeking redress for a bonâ fide injury. What is proposed is that security for costs should be ordered when, and only when, it can be shown to the satisfaction of a Judge in Chambers that the action is of an essentially frivolous and vexatious character. The Judges might surely be trusted to see that the order is not made in any case where a poor plaintiff has a genuine wrong to complain of.

For Truth, and all other Newspapers, Magazines, and Periodicals, send your Subscriptions to Wm. Dawson & Sons, Ltd., Cannon House, Bream's-bldngs., London. (Estab. 1809.) Catalogue gratis.

On the question of the consolidation of actions the Lord Chancellor was more sympathetic. He agreed that there should be greater facilities for dealing in this manner with repetitions of actions for the same libel; and, in this connection, he threw out a hint that causeless and frivolous actions brought by the same solicitor should be the subject of an application of a summary character against the solicitor himself. It would, indeed, be a gain if some process could be devised for calling to account the Dodsons and Foggs who take advantage of the present state of the law of libel for the institution of what are practically blackmailing actions against newspapers. But how this is to be done Lord Halsbury omitted to explain, and such a proceeding, even if it were practicable, would only touch the fringe of the question. As we have seen from several recent cases, it is not merely from the pettifogging attorney who takes up a case as a speculation that newspapers suffer. Actions quite as frivolous and vexatious are often brought by solicitors whose professional standing and "respectability" would make hopeless any attempt to impugn their conduct. One can only hope, therefore, that the more effectual remedies for prevalent abuses of the law which are embodied in Sir John Willox's Bill will be received with less qualified approval in Parliament than at the hands of the Lord Chancellor. Meanwhile, whatever the fate of the Bill may be, it is encouraging to note, from what happened last week in the case of that very touchy gentleman, Mr. Fox, the Registrar of the Croydon County Court, that the Court of Appeal is ready to back up Judges and juries who make short work of childish and trumpery claims against newspapers.

In Christchurch justice is carried on under strange conditions. A lady recently bought a house there. She had a French cook on the job, and a man-servant who looked after her husband, who was paralysed. The cook did not like the man-servant. She accused him (apparently without the slightest ground) of having stolen money from her purse, and she went about the house shouting "thief," in the end sending for a constable to arrest him. The lady explained to the constable that the man was thoroughly honest. The war culminated in the cook rushing at the man with a poker, and, in the scuffle that ensued, the cook got a black eye. For this she went to the police office to have him punished. The Druitts, it would appear, are the ruling dynasty at Christchurch: the father Druitt is a magistrate, and was then the magistrate's clerk, one son is the town clerk, and the other sons are the leading solicitors. The cook obtained a warrant against the man-servant. This seems to have been drawn up by the town clerk, acting in his father's place as magistrate's clerk, and it was signed by the magistrate's clerk acting as a magistrate. On this the man was arrested, and taken through the town in custody. On hearing of the arrest, the lady went to the police office; explained how matters were, and offered any amount of bail. This was refused, and the man, after passing the night in confinement, was brought before the magistrates the next morning. He was discharged because he had been arrested for wounding, and there was no wound. The cook then applied for a summons for assault. On this the man was a week or two later brought up, and was fined £1. On both occasions Mr. Druitt, the magistrate's clerk, sat as a magistrate.

The case was then taken by the mistress of the man before the Divisional Court of the High Court of Justice, with the object of quashing the conviction, on the ground that Mr. Druitt had sat on the Bench when the conviction took place, although disqualified by being the magistrate's clerk. The defence seems to have been that this was no disqualification, and that, as a matter of fact, Mr. Druitt had only taken the salary as magistrate's clerk, but had allowed his son to perform the duties. The Chief Justice decided that there was no legal disqualification, but that it was a public scandal that a magistrate should be also the magistrate's clerk. Most undoubtedly it is, nor do I see how taking the salary, and not fulfilling the duties of the clerkship, lessens the scandal. This legal point being settled, it seems to me that the man-servant should bring an action for damages against Mr. Druitt in view of his imprisonment. Here is a respectable man arrested and kept in prison for a night, for wounding a cook, when the next day it is admitted that there was no wound; bail refused when the mistress of the man offers to give it; and finally a fine is imposed on him for defending himself against the assault of an enraged cook armed with a poker. Was he to have waited until his head had been staved in with this lethal weapon?

There are, in different parts of the country, several ancient local courts of law whose procedure has escaped recent legal reforms, with the result that those who are compulsorily taken before them have to pay costs far in excess of what would be incurred in a County Court. A case in point is to be found at Preston, where there is a local Court of Record, in which the pleading is conducted on the old system. A defendant brought before this or any other similar court, although he may appear in person to the writ, is bound to employ a solicitor after that point in order to file the technical pleadings. If he does not he is in danger of a judgment against him by default, followed by a summary execution. It is high time that all such tribunals were reformed. They only succeed in competing with the County Courts, owing to the fact that they offer a speedier and more effectual machinery for the recovery of small debts. No doubt it is to the interest of the community that just debts should be collected as expeditiously as possible, but the debtors ought not to have to pay for special facilities offered to creditors.

BEAUTIFUL TORQUAY.—The Imperial Hotel has the best position, and is the leading hotel in Torquay. Grand climate. Cool in summer, warm in winter, and well known as the "Queen of Watering Places."

Mrs. Druce is the daughter-in-law of Mr. Thomas Druce, and she has a son. Her father-in-law appears to have had a furniture establishment in Baker-street. In 1864 he was by way of dying, and being buried. But, according to Mrs. Druce, he did not die, and was not buried. For several years after 1864, he lived at Richmond as Dr. Harmer, practised homœopathy, and married a second wife, and varied his domestic life by an occasional visit to a lunatic asylum. Then he died or disappeared. So far the matter is clear. But it would seem, according to Mrs. Druce, that her father-in-law was really a Duke now dead, who, when not engaged in ducal functions, was a furniture dealer, a homœopathic doctor, the husband successively of two wives, and occasionally a patient in a lunatic asylum. For all this, whether the departed Druce is in the vault that his Druce relatives provided for him or not, I should require a great deal of evidence.

I believe that far more blackmailing goes on in London than is supposed, and many a blackmailer lives comfortably on having discovered something that another would not have made public. Last week there was a trial of blackmailers, when it came out in evidence that for several years there had been a gang acting together in this peculiar industry, and sharing the profits. Mr. Bernard Abrahams incidentally stated that he was a trustee to pay one of the gang £100 per annum. This, it would seem, was the amount that was being paid by one individual for the man's silence.

I have always thought that the law ought to be so altered, that a blackmailer may be tried, and, if the charge against him be proved, sentenced to penal servitude, without the name of his victim, or the grounds of the blackmail, being made public.

Some one sends me the trustee's accounts in the bankruptcy of a Mr. James Smith, who has just been through the Bradford County Court. It seems that Mr. Smith's estate realised £218 13s. 10d., and that £103 16s. 11d. was due to his landlord for rent. The landlord, of course, got his £103 16s. 11d., the Board of Trade, the lawyers, the trustee, and the other eagles who gather together on such occasions, got the rest of the assets, and the creditors, other than the landlord, got nothing. Among the items is £21 17s. 4d., the trustee's percentage on the assets realised. As the trustee got no other remuneration in this case, he probably was not overpaid. It strikes me, however, that in many cases of this class the result would be more satisfactory to the creditors if the trustee were paid by a percentage on the dividend instead of by a percentage on the assets.

The judgment of Mr. Justice Bruce in the case of Knight v. the North Metropolitan Tramways Company turned on a nice point as to the liability of the defendant company for the act of one of its servants. A conductor, acting with the approval of a ticket-inspector, gave the plaintiff in charge of the police for passing a sixpence which was alleged to be bad in payment of his fare. It was found that the coin was in reality a good one, and the magistrate accordingly dismissed the charge against the plaintiff, who thereupon sued the company for damages for false imprisonment and malicious prosecution. The jury considered that the defendant had the authority of the company to act as he did, and they gave a verdict for the plaintiff with £60 damages.

The defence was that the conductor was not acting within the scope of his authority in giving into custody and prosecuting the plaintiff, and, after considering the facts and the cases bearing on the question, Mr. Justice Bruce has come to the same conclusion, and entered judgment for the defendants. His lordship said that if the charge against the plaintiff had been that he had attempted to avoid payment of his fare, or any charge of a like nature, within Section 51 of the Tramways Act, 1870, a very different result would have been arrived at; but there was nothing to show that any officer of the defendant company had authority from the company, express or implied, to give a passenger into custody for passing counterfeit coin. This is a distinction which will hardly be appreciated by the non-legal mind, for if an officer has authority to give into custody a person refusing to pay his fare, one would think this would naturally imply authority to take the same course with a person paying his fare with counterfeit coin. For the present, of course, Mr. Justice Bruce's exposition of the law must be accepted as correct; but, if it is not altered on appeal, then it is to be hoped some amendment will be made in the law to meet such cases.

The re-establishment of slavery in Cape Colony proceeds apace. At the Kimberley Criminal Sessions on February 5, before Mr. Justice Lange, a native boy named August, twelve years of age, was found guilty of being concerned with another native in stealing some goats belonging to Joel Schermin, a farmer, for whom August worked. "His lordship," says the report in the Diamond Fields Advertiser, "sentenced August to be apprenticed to Mr. Schermin until twenty-one years of age, and to receive ten cuts with the cane." No doubt "apprenticeship" has a prettier sound to English ears than "slavery"; but it is nine years' slavery to which the little black boy has been condemned, all the same. It would be hard to devise a system of dealing with offenders more repugnant to all our notions of justice, and more conducive to cruelty and oppression.

"Truth" will be sent weekly to any address in the United Kingdom for 7s. for 3 months; 14s. for 6 months; or 28s. for 12 months. The subscription for all Countries included in the Postal Union is, 3 months, 7s. 8d.; 6 months, 15s. 4d.; 12 months, £1 10s. 8d. All subscriptions are payable in advance, and cheques and P.O.O.'s should be made payable to the Manager, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-street, S.W.

In my Legal Pillory this week I give the usual illustrations of magisterial clemency in dealing with offences of violence and cruelty. For savage and cowardly assaults on men and women, the penalties, it will be seen, range from 10s. to 40s., and are even more glaringly inadequate than those imposed for ill-treating dumb animals. Among the cases on the other side of the list I would particularly call attention to the harsh and asinine action of the Warrington Bench who sentence boys of thirteen to three days' confinement in the police-cells for the crime of playing at pitch and toss; and to the stupid pranks of the judicial humourists at Burnley, Brixham, and Ellesmere, who go through the farcical form of offering the option of a fine to persons convicted of sleeping out and having "no visible means of subsistence." With reference to the case from Auckland, I am somewhat loth to take exception to a merciful straining of the law in favour of a first offender. The fact that the prisoner was "well off," however, aggravated his offence, and I shall be curious to see whether the Auckland Bench is equally indulgent to the next needy wretch who comes before them for stealing a loaf of bread or a piece of meat to assuage his hunger. Meanwhile the decision at Auckland may be usefully compared with that given in the case of another first offender at Plymouth :—

Bolton Borough Police-court. Before Dr. Livy and Messrs. Nicholson and Hough. Robert Daniels, convicted of assaulting his wife, who said he kicked and struck her, knocking several of her teeth out. The Bench considered the assault both brutal and savage. Fined 10s. and costs.

Crockernell Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. C. G. Hayter-Hames and J. Stevens-Neck, and Commander E. S. Evans. Daniel Jarvis charged with cruelty to a horse. Because the animal could not move its load, defendant held some burning straw under its belly. The horse was very severely burnt, and must have suffered great pain. Fined £5.

Wigan Police-court. G. F. Martlen, charged with assaulting his wife. Complainant appeared to have been severely maltreated. The Bench granted a separation order, and for the assault, which they said was of a very aggravated character, the defendant was fined 40s. and costs.

Batley Police-court. George Henry Ryan charged with assaulting George Wm. Ridsdale. Defendant kicked the complainant so savagely that he was confined to his bed for some time and was afterwards compelled to use a pair of crutches. Fined 10s. and costs.

Southampton Borough Police-Court. Before Messrs. G. P. Perkins, R. Chipperfield, and M. Emanuel. Cornelius Adam, convicted of assaulting Alex. Augustus, a man of colour. Defendant knocked complainant down and kicked him, his head being cut open. Fined £1 and costs.

Liverpool County Police-court. Before Messrs. G. Cannington and J. Jowett. Richard Croft, William Austin, and Henry Fairclough, charged with trespassing in pursuit of game. Croft and Austin fined 10s. each and costs; Fairclough 40s. and costs.

Birmingham Quarter Sessions. Emma Norris pleaded guilty to stealing fifteen yards of cotton shirting. Nine months.

Chelmsford Petty Sessions. Before Mr. T. Kemble and other magistrates. George Coe charged with stealing a pair of child's shoes from a shop. Twenty-one days.

Long Ashton Police-court. Before Mr. E. J. Swann and Major Thorne. Edwin Poole, summoned for trespassing in search of rabbits. Fined 40s. and costs or one month.

John Bobbett, charged with absconding from the workhouse. Fourteen days.

Burnley County Police-court. Before Messrs. T. Thornber and J. Kay. Alfred Stevenson charged with sleeping out and having no visible means of subsistence. Fined 10s. or seven days.

East Harling Petty Sessions. Before Mr. H. T. Partridge, Major Keppel, and Mr. A. N. C. Hemsworth. Edwd. Reeve, labourer, charged with stealing a whip. Fourteen days.

Wrexham County Police-court. Before Captain Griffith Boscawen and other magistrates. John Henry Edwards, farmer, charged with cruelty to a mare. The mare fell down in an exhausted state, and the defendant, who was drunk, beat her about the head and body, first with a whip, and then with a pitchfork, which he used so violently that it was broken in three places. After he had further ill-treated the mare, another man shot her in the head, but failed to kill her, and defendant then filled her mouth with turf, and so caused her death. An examination of the carcase showed that a rib had been broken and other bones pulverised. Fined £3 11s. 6d., including costs.

Newport (Mon.) Police-court. John Jones convicted of assaulting his wife. He dragged her out of the house, twisted her hair, threw her down, knelt upon her, and then poured some water over her. She had been repeatedly assaulted. Fined 21s.

Condover Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. E. Corbett, R. Ll. Purcell-Llewellin, and R. Blakeway-Phillips. Harry H. Cave, land-agent, charged with cruelty to a mare by causing her to be worked whilst in an unfit condition. The mare was suffering from a large raw wound on the shoulder, which was being rubbed by the collar. The Bench considered the case an exceedingly bad one. Fined £1, and 18s. costs.

Framlingham Petty Sessions. Before Mr. G. E. Jeaffreson and other justices. Walter Page, charged with killing game without a licence. Fined £3 12s. 6d.

Warrington Police - court. John Seddon, John Green, John Quinn, and Wm. Rudge, boys about thirteen years old, charged with playing pitch and toss in the street. They were sent to the police cells for three days each.

Plymouth Police-Court. Before Messrs. J. Pillman and J. Wills. Charles Joiner, carman, charged with stealing 1 lb. of butter. Nothing was said against his previous character. Three months.

Okehampton Petty Sessions Before Messrs. W. Holley, C. Green, S. Newcombe, and T. Jessop. Wm. Mudge and John Kemp, charged with trespassing in pursuit of rabbits. Fined 10s. and 16s. 6d.

Ellesmere Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. H. D. Chapman, C. Morrall, and C. F. K. Mainwaring. Charles Williams, charged with sleeping in a farm outbuilding and having no visible means of subsistence. Fined 5s.

Brixham Petty Sessions. John Peeke, mason, charged with sleeping out. Defendant, who was out of work, was fined 10s. A builder paid the fine and promised to give defendant some work.

Auckland Police-court. Before Councillor Lingford and Dr. Mackay. John Hammond, charged with breaking and entering a grocer's shop for an unlawful purpose. Money having been missed from the till, a constable watched in the shop, and at 5.30 a.m. the prisoner entered and went straight to the till, when he was arrested. He had a key which fitted the door, and carried a lamp. It was stated that he bore a good character, and that he was well off. The Bench altered the charge, dealing with the prisoner under the Vagrancy Act for "being on premises for an unlawful purpose," and fined him £10 and costs.

The rule against the interrogation of accused persons seems to have been momentarily forgotten by the magistrate at Marylebone Police-court the other day, when a baker's boy was charged with embezzling eighteenpence. The magistrate appears from the report to have first asked the prisoner if that was all he had pocketed, and then, on receiving a reply in the negative, to have further asked him how much more money he had taken. The lad told the truth, and, so far as he is concerned, the questions did no harm to the interests of justice. All the same, such questions are irregular, and an irregularity of this kind on the part of a stipendiary sets a very bad example to the Great Unpaid, who may be led to follow it with unfortunate results.

I am sorry to hear that the man Kempe, of Cathedral Offices, 41, St. Andrew's-hill, Doctors' Commons, E.C., is still finding victims. It may be remembered that this rascal is one of the many who prey upon the deaf. His modus operandi is of the simplest character. He gets into correspondence with deaf people by means of advertisements, professes to make a diagnosis of their cases, and recommends a certain treatment, for which he charges any sum which he thinks likely to suit the victim's purse. Having got the money, he does nothing more; letters addressed to him remain unanswered; and visitors to his office find that it is a sort of cupboard with a letter-box on the door, where Kempe only attends at brief intervals for the purpose of collecting his correspondence. All this was pointed out in TRUTH many months ago, and it is much to be regretted that none of those who have been taken in has set the police in motion against Kempe. Still more regrettable is it that professedly respectable newspapers should continue to publish his advertisements. The last victim I have come across was caught through the medium of the Illustrated Church News.

---

Subscriptions greatly needed by The Royal Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.—6,929 convictions this year; 7,320 last year. Address complaints of cruelty, contributions, letters, &c., to Secretary, 105, Jermyn-st., London.

A most successful minor swindle is carried on by parties who send out circulars inviting orders for the supply of newspapers and magazines, and then, after scooping in the subscriptions, suddenly disappear with their plunder. A correspondent of mine in Jamaica complains that he has been defrauded in this way by a "firm" at Manchester, to whom he forwarded 8s. for twelve months' numbers of a sixpenny magazine; and from inquiries I have made I have little doubt that the individual constituting this "firm" has obtained many other victims in the West Indies. On the ground, doubtless, that distance lends safety to such a scheme, this man specially addressed himself to residents in that part of the world, but bolder knaves often practise the same trick nearer home. People are often warned against forwarding cash to these unknown touting "firms," but warnings do not seem to have much effect on the business, too many individuals preferring to pay for the teaching of experience.

A new practitioner in the usury trade has recently made his appearance at 159, Cannon-street. From that address he issues circulars signed "Charles Jones and Co., Ltd." Jones appears to cater specially for impecunious medicos, for he commences his circular with the statement that it has been brought to his knowledge "that there are a great number of medical gentlemen who at times require an extra amount of ready cash"—a statement which, unless the medical profession differs very greatly from others with which I am acquainted, is probably true. It may interest medical gentlemen to know that no company bearing the name of "Charles Jones & Co., Ltd." appears on the register at Somerset House, and the probability is that the term "Limited" has as little meaning as the term "Co." It would be a pity that any one should do business with Jones, who is probably a mere tout, under the impression that he is dealing with a joint-stock company.

Among the impudent trick advertisements by which numerous tradesmen live is that of Dorey, Lester & Co., 8, Kenilworth-road, Kilburn, which was some time back noticed in TRUTH. These people, I find, are still sending out their coupon in the form of a cheque, entitling the bearer to an 18-carat gold-plated chronograph stop-watch, "same as advertised at £4," on payment of 11s. 6d. before the date named in the coupon. The covering letter states that only a limited number of these watches are being offered to the public as an advertisement, and that no further coupons will be issued at this special price. In point of fact, Dorey, Lester & Co. have been circulating the same advertisement, and the same coupons, for about twelve months past, and no doubt intend to keep on at it as long as the game pays. To all appearance the supply of fools is far from being exhausted.

The warning given in last week's TRUTH respecting Coleman & Co., the home employment agents of 33, Old Queen-street, Westminster, may with advantage be extended to W. Johnson & Co., in the adjoining thoroughfare, Dartmouth-street. As a matter of fact, Johnson & Co. and Coleman & Co. are identical, and I have a case before me in which one of Johnson & Co.'s customers had a precisely similar experience to that of the lady whose case was described last week. She paid her 5s. for registry of her name and the supply of materials, earned a few pence by some work done before Christmas, and then received notification that Johnson & Co. could take no more work until after Christmas. Since then she has been unable to get her money back, or obtain any answer to her letters. All those who have suffered in this way—and doubtless there are many—would do well to follow the example I have already quoted, and put their cases in the hands of a business-like solicitor.

I have been interested to learn that the Rev. Robert Macmillan is pursuing his career of mendicancy in Westminster. While he is in the neighbourhood, I trust he will not omit TRUTH office from his visiting list. There are so many questions I should like to put to him. I should be pleased to know, for instance, how he has expended the farthing damages which a jury awarded him for my previous comments upon his career. Particulars, too, of the present position of his "sustentation" fund would be full of edification alike to the elect and the graceless, for, according to all accounts, he flourishes as the green bay tree. A clerical coat, an oily smile, an unctuous trick of speech, and a gospel shop in the suburbs, are apparently an ample stock-in-trade for a humbug, however much discredited. At all events, there can be no question that Macmillan waxes fat upon these modest endowments.

A gentleman well known in the Committee Rooms of the House of Commons has asked me to use my influence to get him a cup of tea or coffee with his mid-day sandwich. He puts it on the ground that the reform of Private Bill procedure is once more being ventilated, and that this is the most simple and practical reform called for in that direction. There are said to be dozens of hard-working men in the Committee Rooms forced to drink whisky or sherry as the only alternative to cold water of questionable quality. Such a state of things calls loudly for the attention of my friend Sir Wilfrid Lawson.

Some verses on the use of the Phonograph as a substitute for the political speaker which appeared in TRUTH recently, have moved a correspondent of mine to make some further metrical suggestions on the subject. I agree with him that there is an almost unlimited future for Mr. Edison's ingenious machine, and therefore print his communication with pleasure:—

MORE PHONOGRAPHIC POSSIBILITIES.

How excellent a plan 'twould be,
  Wherever talk is most effusive,
To henceforth make the Phonograph,
  To verbal reticence conducive;
To let it check the tides of words,
  Which now, to our annoyance, stream on;
And, in effect, to exorcise
  The rampant Talky-talky demon!

Think what the Phonograph might do
  At our perennial public dinners,
Where, against syntax and its laws,
  So many are such hardened sinners;
Think how the never-failing flow
  Of washy speakers 'twould diminish—
Speakers so eager to commence
  The sentences they never finish.

Think what a treat 'twould be to hear
  The toasts responded to succinctly
By cylinders which could not fail
  To utter what they said distinctly;
And which, in case they spoke too long,
  Or rashly dwelt on topics burning,
Could in a moment silenced be,
  A simple little tap by turning.

Then, in the pulpit what a boon
  Would be the phonographic sermon,
Falling upon the hearer's ears
  As gratefully as dew on Hermon!
For if the phonogram evinced
  The least intention of digressing,
It always could be stopped at once
  By merely on a button pressing.

Even on the domestic hearth
  'Twould cause a pleasant variation,
If Darby could with Joan exchange
  A phonographic conversation;
If, 'stead of Mr. Caudle's grunts,
  And Mrs. C.'s eternal nagging,
A pair of wit-charged cylinders
  Could keep the interest from flagging.

May-meetings, too, might be reformed,
  And blows more trenchant dealt at error;
The wedding-breakfast might be robbed
  Of most of its remaining terror.
At dinners, too, where one pairs off
  Too often with a fair disheart'ner,
How charming it would be to get
  A sprightly phonogram as partner!

By all means, then, "Vive Edison
  And his remarkable invention!"
And may its use extended be,
  In ways too numerous to mention,
For, aided by the Phonograph,
  We may succeed ere long in baulking
The widely-spreading itch and craze
  For loose and unconsidered talking!

SAVOY HOTEL, Savoy Restaurant, London. Large reception-rooms for fashionable réunions. Orchestra plays daily during dinner and opera supper.

A year or two ago a question was raised in reference to a sum of several thousand pounds which appeared in the Civil Service Estimates as grants to certain County Court officers in Ireland for clerical assistance. It was pointed out that no details were given, and no guarantee obtained that this money was actually expended in the payment of clerks. In the Estimates for the present year a sum of £8,500 is set down in the same form, and beyond the fact that each official participating in the grant has to give a receipt for the amount allotted to him, there is still apparently no check upon the expenditure of the money. Whether a Registrar or other functionary spends upon clerical assistance all the cash he gets for that purpose, or whether he retains some of it in his own pocket, is left entirely to his own honour and honesty. No doubt all these officers are honest and honourable men; but, nevertheless, this is not a satisfactory way of dealing with public money. In every such case a full account of the actual disbursement of the grant ought to be insisted upon.

In the Financial Reformer of February there is a curious tabular statement of the distribution of the net amount of real and personal property in the United Kingdom, based on the Report of the Inland Revenue Department, in regard to death dues. The number of persons possessing above £1,000,000 is 293; of those possessing between £500,000 and £1,000,000, 1,171; between £250,000 and £500,000, 2,410. The number of those having above £100,000 is 14,751. The total population of the United Kingdom in 1896 amounted to 39,464,582; of these 3,001,065 will have to pay death duties when they die, against 36,463,517 persons who, having either nothing, or, if anything less than £100, will not have to pay them. The net value of all personal and real estate is £12,672,846,988. Of this those having above £100,000 possess £3,511,328,967, or 27·71 per cent.; those having between £10,000 and £100,000, £5,367,840,560, or 42·35 per cent.; those having between £100 and £1,000, £3,754,637,983, or 20·63 per cent.

The evidence given by Sir George Lewis before the Money-lending Committee is extremely valuable, for, by reason of his professional experience, no man can speak with greater authority on the subject of the inquiry. Nothing could be more complete and emphatic than his testimony to the disastrous effects of usurious money-lending. To put an end to what he rightly characterised as a national scandal, he proposed (1) that money-lenders should be licensed and compelled to trade in their own names, the issue of false and misleading advertisements and circulars (such, for instance, as those of Gordon, Kirkwood, and Shuckburgh) being made a misdemeanour; and (2) that Judges, including the Judges of the County Courts, should be empowered to fix a fair rate of interest according to the circumstances of the cases brought before them. It is to be hoped that the Committee will see their way to recommend legislation on these lines. At present the law is wholly in favour of Shylock, and the result is seen in the evils laid bare at this inquiry.

MESSRS. H. L. SAVORY & CO., of 59, Piccadilly, wish again to caution the public against the close imitations of their scarlet cigarette boxes. Each genuine box bears their special warrants of appointment to his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, his Royal Highness the Duke of Saxe Coburg and Gotha, his Highness the Duke of Teck, and also the appointment which they solely hold to the House of Lords and Commons.

The mere fact of one man lending another money at a high rate of interest is not in itself evidence of swindling-for the interest must depend to a certain extent on the risk. The business becomes illegitimate when unfair terms have been exacted from a person owing to his inexperience, or owing to his already embarrassed circumstances. I confess, however, that I have very little sympathy with the young man who borrows at high interest from a money-lender, and spends the proceeds of the loan on ladies and horses. He is not, as a rule, the innocent fool he would have the world believe when the moment comes for repayment. But the poor curate who borrows at 50 per cent. some trifle, which to him is large, or the struggling man who is tempted to give a bill of sale on all his goods in order to tide over some difficulty not of his own creation, and then finds all his possessions sold up at a quarter of their value, has the sympathy of every right-minded person.

A dead set is being made against Sir Cuthbert Quilter by some of the more truculent Tories in his constituency, the chief charge against him being that while subscribing to the funds of the Conservative Association, he also assists the Liberals with their registration work. Mr. Wrightson, late Conservative agent for the division, has taken the leading part in the revolt, and has issued a circular in which he describes it as "the most grotesque and anomalous political proceeding ever perpetrated, that a man should be assisting out of one pocket the Conservative Association, the object of which is to keep Home Rulers and Radicals off the register, while out of the other pocket he is paying so much per annum to put them on." It appears from this that Sir Cuthbert Quilter retains too much of his former Liberalism to be acceptable to his Tory allies. To a Liberal, the only legitimate object of a Registration Association should be to secure votes to all persons, whatever their opinions, lawfully entitled to them. The Tory idea appears to be that the object should be to disfranchise as many opponents as possible.

Perhaps the most curious question that ever was put down on the House of Commons notice paper was that of Colonel Duncan, asking whether the Government were prepared to lend the British fleet to the United States in case the latter country went to war with Spain. As the question was never asked, I presume that it must have been put down as a joke. What our quid pro quo was to have been I do not know. Presumably, the United States would have been required to pay for the Navy thus lent during the period of operations against Spain, just as we paid the wretched German Princes who supplied us with soldiers to fight the Americans during the War of Independence. Clearly the loan would have been an act of war against Spain, which would have endeavoured to capture our merchant ships. The bill for this, too, would, I suppose, have been met by the United States, had the offer been really made and accepted. I am partial to the United States, but I confess that my partiality does not go to the lengths of Colonel Duncan's.

It is surpassing strange how the Times and the Standard shriek for war, as though it were a thing above all to be desired. The latter newspaper seems to have looked up all its denunciations of Mr. Gladstone in order to hurl them at Lord Salisbury. A few days ago it was France with which we were ordered to go to war. Now it is Russia. But what for? She has asked China to give her a port as the terminus of her Siberian railway in Manchuria, and to allow the railway to be extended to that port. This Lord Salisbury stated at the commencement of the Session that he regarded as a reasonable demand on the part of Russia. We asked Russia to agree to make the port an open one to the commerce of all nations. To this she has assented. Where then does the casus belli come in?

China consists of eighteen provinces. This is China proper. To the north of it is Manchuria, a State under the rule of the Chinese Emperor, but not China. We have very little commerce with this State, and it is far behind China in civilisation. If we secure free trade in China, in accordance with our treaties, we have the market for our goods that up to now has satisfied us; whilst if we wish to extend that market to Manchuria, we are not precluded by Russia having a port there. No one has either directly or indirectly contested our treaties with China, and surely it will be time to cry out when some one does. Heaven knows that I am not at one with Lord Salisbury in domestic politics. But I do not find fault with him in declining to drag us into war at the bidding of Jingo journalism, and in order to suit the personal aspirations of one of his colleagues.

The main complaint against Lord Salisbury by the Jingo Press is, that he is a weak man. They contend that he should have insisted upon France and Russia yielding in regard to West Africa and Manchuria, because otherwise those Powers will make further demands, counting on the Premier's weakness. This, the Jingo journals tell us, is the real way to secure peace. But supposing that France and Russia had not been compliant, we should have found ourselves engaged in a war with them. This war would, on a mild estimate, cost us 100 millions, the lives of thousands of Englishmen, and in all probability it would end by leaving matters precisely where they were when it began.

Mr. Gladstone was a Little Englander, according to the Jingo papers. Lord Salisbury is one according to them. Sir Robert Peel, who prophetically protested against Jingoism, was a poor narrow-minded fool, according to them. Mr. Chamberlain is their divinity. Now, with all respect to the latter, and to the editors of these newspapers, I am rather inclined to think that these three Statesmen are better guides to follow than either Mr. Chamberlain or these journalistic braggarts.

I respect a man who really fights himself. But I thoroughly despise that cheap form of courage which takes the form of shouting to others to fight, without the remotest intention of personally taking part in the fray. Yet this sort of bluster is regarded at present as "courageous patriotism." It may be seen in its most aggravated form in the Editor of the Globe, who was once a Lieutenant, I believe, in some branch or other of the Service. Not having a stomach for salt-water, or preferring a well-paid easy-chair at home to the chance of getting knocked about in his country's service abroad, he has exchanged the sword for the goose-quill. Armed with this more congenial weapon, he advertises his valour and "patriotism" by urging us to quarrel with half the universe, and reviling as "traitors" all who are less eager than himself to spill their countrymen's blood.

THE DOWNFALL OF THE DAMES.

Then there were the cohorts of Belgravian Dames who penetrated into the courts and slums of Stepney to canvass for Major Gordon.—Daily Paper.

The Belgravians drove down on the Radical fold,
And their landaus were gleaming with purple and gold,
And "Jeames" on the box was a picture to see
As he sniffed in his pride through the streets of Step-nee.

Like the leaves of the forest when Epping is green,
These dames ere the day of the polling were seen.
Like the leaves of the forest when Autumn has come,
Their leaflets be-littered each alley and slum.

How they walked, how they talked, how they coaxed and cajoled!
And oh! with what zest tarradiddles they told,
Not only the Unionist cause to abet,
But because the "dear Major" was one of their set.

But oh! what a shock when the news came at last
That the Major, alack! at the poll had been pass'd;
What a blow for the ladies who toil not nor spin,
When they heard that "that Steadman" had managed to win!

Back, back to the West in high dudgeon they rolled,
Possessed by a wrath that was quite uncontrolled;
And pierced in their pride by a passionate pain
To feel they had thus "stooped to conquer" in vain.

To know that in vain, for the "dear Major's" sake,
They had gone where their poodles they'd trembled to take!
Oh! it filled them with grief it was hard to dispel;
And some feminine "D.'s" were o'erheard in Pall Mall.

And the Dames of the Primrose were loud in their wail,
And the sobs of the Standard were borne on the gale,
To think that the East 'gainst the West should have scored,
And have thus put to rout the Belgravian horde!

SCRUTATOR.

RADICALS AND THE N.L.F.

THE Report of the Executive Committee of the National Liberal Federation, which is to be submitted to the Council on March 22, will be the last dying speech and confession of the Federation, unless the Council takes matters into its hands, and acts with energy and determination. The Federation was originally formed to control Liberal officialdom. It was for several years absolutely independent of it. But after the Liberal Unionist secession, Officialdom captured it. Its officers and those of Officialdom became one and the same, and it was lodged in Officialdom's headquarters. With its independence its vitality disappeared. At present the only reason for its being is to whip Radicals into the official fold.

The Federation is made up of Associations which are affiliated to it. It has a Council, a General Committee, and an Executive Committee.

Council.—This is elected by the Associations. Each may elect one representative for every thousand Parliamentary electors in the district covered by it, without regard to the number of members belonging to the Association, or to its importance in the district. This Council meets once a year. Its functions are limited to saying aye or nay to certain cut-and-dried resolutions that are submitted to it by the Executive Committee, and to adopting the report of that Committee.

General Committee.—Each affiliated Association has the right to elect three members. It generally meets once a year in some provincial town. Its functions are (a) to elect officers and the Executive Committee; (b) to pass political resolutions, which are in no way binding on the Federation.

The Executive Committee.—In this body all power resides. It makes a report each year, which, together with resolutions that it has elaborated, are submitted to the Council at its annual meeting. In regard to the latter, no amendments are allowed, nor is any member of the Council permitted to move a new resolution.

The Council and the General Committee are permeated with officialism. Many of the members of both are paid agents. In many cases they are gentlemen who have undertaken to attend the two annual meetings of the Federation at their own expense. The members are often elected in some little hole-in-a-corner meeting of the Association that they are by way of representing, which itself is often a very hole-in-the-corner one. Thus the officials of the Federation and the Executive Committee have had it pretty well their own way at the annual Federation meetings, except last year, when things had reached such a point that a good many of the affiliated Associations sent delegates bent on reform. One of these reforms, and a most reasonable one if the Executive is to represent the real views of the affiliated Associations, was that the members of the Executive Committee should be elected by voting papers sent round to the Associations, instead of its being, as now, elected by those who may happen to attend the meeting of the General Committee.

The working of the system is thus described and defended in the report of the Executive Committee, just issued :—

The Council of the Federation meets once a year in some provincial centre to receive the annual report of the Executive Committee and appoint a treasurer and a president. It is customary at these gatherings to pass certain resolutions which are believed to express the wishes of the great majority of the Liberal Party upon the leading questions of the day. These resolutions are prepared by the Executive Committee after consultation with all the federated Associations, and after taking into full consideration any resolutions which may have been passed by the General Committee of the Federation, or at local conferences held under its auspices. These resolutions are intended to inform the party leaders of the subjects, in dealing with which they may rely on the support of the party as a whole. The Federation does not interfere with the time or order in which questions should be taken up. That is the province of the leaders of the party. There can be dissension at the annual Council meeting, but the resolutions must be accepted or rejected, not amended. They are the expression of a united desire.

Now, the Liberal Party consists of a vast majority of Radicals eager to march forward on the democratic path, and of a small section by no means prepared to keep pace with them. If the Party is to do nothing unless there be a "united desire" to do something, it is obvious that this small section can regulate the pace. Thus the minority has the whip hand over the majority. But even this is not deemed sufficient by the gentlemen controlling the Federation. The time and order in which reforms for which there is a "united desire" are to be brought forward are, they insist, matters to be determined by the Leaders of the Party. Any reform, consequently, for which the Party expresses a "united desire," if not approved of by Officialdom, may be put off until Doomsday. And this is laid down as a cardinal article of Liberalism!

The Report pronounces against all programmes. It would seem that it is a mistake to suppose that there ever was a Newcastle Programme. What is called the Newcastle Programme was only a collection of pious opinions. Unfortunately, Mr. Gladstone, who spoke at the Federation meeting at Newcastle, had these pious opinions placed in his hands. He, imagining them to be reforms to which the Federation was pledged, expressed his approval of them, greatly to the horror of the Federation, which had expected him to confine his remarks to Irish Home Rule. Anything more pitiable than this endeavour to shift the responsibility of the Newcastle Programme from the Federation on to the shoulders of Mr. Gladstone never came under my notice. Mr. Gladstone thought that he was dealing with men who meant what they said. He was asked to speak at a meeting of the Federation. He was given the resolutions passed by the Federation. How possibly could he be aware that he was expected to ignore them? If this had been intended, the Executive Committee should have said to him, "Mr. Gladstone, all these resolutions that we place in your hands are merely dirt thrown in the eyes of the electorate. We entreat you carefully to avoid expressing your approval of them." But had the Executive taken this course, I think it highly probable that Mr. Gladstone would have shaken the Federation dust from his shoes, and have declined to have anything to do with such a crew of humbugs.

After this explanation by the Executive Committee of the value that it attaches to his own resolutions, it is almost waste of time to criticise those that it proposes to submit to the Council of the Federation on March 22. With the exception of one, they are mere vague aspirations. This one is a demand to be entrusted with cash in order to organise the Liberal Party. Organise for what? To leave everything in the hands of the Leaders of the Party. But who are the Leaders? The Executive would have done well to publish their names. I believe that the doctrine of the Federation is, that we have no Leader, and that to appoint one would be to trench on the prerogative of the Crown. The selection of our Leader, according to the creed of the Federation, is to be left to the Sovereign, who will proclaim it so soon as the Party secures a majority in the House of Commons, and it then will become the duty of every Liberal humbly and submissively to bow down and worship him. In the meantime, we are to regard as our Leaders the noblemen and gentlemen who were members of the last Liberal Ministry, and we are to await to know for what we have to fight until they have agreed amongst themselves what it is to be. If they cannot decide before the General Election, the Election is to turn on the question of placing these Humpty Dumpties again on the wall, in the hope and expectation that then, at least, they will be able to make up their minds what they will do.

'Tis like the Spanish fleet, I ween,
If I read matters right;
The Liberal programme can't be seen
Because it's out of sight.

A programme containing all the reforms to which Radicals aspire is one thing. An electoral programme is another. The latter should be limited to one or two important reforms. In regard to their character, and the form in which they are to be carried, there should be nothing ambiguous, for if a majority be returned to Parliament in favour of them, there should be no doubt as to the country having expressed its approval of them They should be in the nature of a mandate. In this sense I hold that the Liberal Party should have a programme. If we are to fight, we must be assured that victory will secure us something more valuable than the privilege of seeing our Leaders enjoying the honour of being Ministers of the Crown, and ploughing the sands of the seashore. At the last General Election we had no electoral programme. Untaught by experience, are we again to commit the same fault? Conservatives want no changes. Theirs is merely a war of defence. Liberals, if they hope to win, must always wage a war of offence. If our plan of campaign is only to be confidence in our Front Bench, and a confiding faith that, if placed in power, they will do something to our advantage, the campaign will end disastrously.

I take the question of the Lords as an instance of what I mean. The Executive Committee asks the Council of the Federation to declare its belief that Parliament will never be representative until the House of Lords is deprived of its present power of nullifying the decisions of the popular and representative branch. This is self-evident. It is a truism to which even Conservatives could not refuse assent, for it is obvious that if one branch of a Parliament consists of hereditary members, the Parliament cannot collectively be called representative. What is needed is a distinct resolution, that any Bill that has passed in the Commons House in two consecutive Sessions shall become law, and that no Executive is worthy of the confidence of the Party that is not prepared to carry, on being placed in office, such an alteration in the Constitution by all means known to the Constitution. Such a resolution would be an irreducible minimum, and our leaders would be notified of the condition under which we are prepared to recognise them as leaders.

Artificial Teeth can be Cleaned by using "Dentakon." It keeps them bright, sweet, and good colour. In boxes, 1s. 6d., through Chemists, or post free.—C. Lowe & Co., Surbiton, S.W.

At the meeting of the Council last year, the following resolution was carried :—

> That this Council respectfully urges the Executive Committee to take the amendments amendments which would have gone far to make the Federation a popular reality], proposed by the Kingston Division of Surrey Liberal Association into careful consideration during the next twelve months and report thereon at the next General Meeting.

Clearly the Council would not have passed such a resolution had it not been in favour of amendments in the sense of those proposed by the Kingston Association. What is the reply of the Executive Committee?

> The Executive Committee, in pursuance of the instruction at the last annual meeting that they should report upon the subject, now beg to state that they are unanimously opposed to the question being reopened at present.

In defence of this non possumus the Executive states in its Report that it sent a circular to all the affiliated Associations, asking them carefully to consider the matter, and that more than three quarters of them did not trouble themselves to send a reply. Surely this ought to open the eyes of these gentlemen to the fact, that the vast majority of the affiliated Associations are so utterly disgusted with the way in which the Federation is managed, that they consign communications from it to the waste-paper basket. Yet they actually cite this as a proof of the confidence that the Associations have in them! A Member of the House of Commons who, on moving a resolution, is counted out, might as well insist on this as evidence of the interest taken by the House in him and his resolution.

The Council, at the meeting of March 22, should refuse to receive the report of the Executive Committee, and it should decline to agree to the political Resolutions submitted to it, on the two grounds (1), that they are goody-goody twaddle rather fitted for a tea-party of old women than as a declaration of policy by a great Party; (2) that the Council declines to be dragged to Leicester to vote on resolutions in the making of which they have had no hand, without being allowed even to move amendments to them. The affiliated Associations should elect members of the General Committee of independence and of energy, and thus be able to secure on the Executive Council men who will make the Federation a real, living, popular force, not cohabiting with Officialdom, but dictating to Officialdom the popular will. We are now under Conservative rule. This I regard with equanimity, because it is a mere passing episode. What is more important is, that the Radicals should not only be in the majority in the Liberal Party, but that—being the majority—they should control it. Until they do this, Party warfare will be little more than a struggle between two gangs of office-holders, the one a little more Liberal than the other, but both equally opposed to any real advance on the Democratic path. Radicals must realise that the Liberal Party in the last few years has become less, rather than more, Radical, so far as definite action is concerned. In its ranks there are many who rejoice at this, and who, with Radical professions on their lips, are little better than Tories. If we are not careful, watchful, and energetic, we shall go back to the days of Palmerston, when a so-called Liberal Ministry was in office, whose main aim it was to shelve all really Radical measures.

THE RISE AND PROGRESS OF CHUBB JACKSON.

The name of Chubb Jackson is a comparatively new one in the annals of philanthropic enterprise. The owner of the name, however, is a remarkable man, who, in the space of less than three years, has achieved a surprising amount of success. Having watched him carefully during the period of his germination and early growth, I have come to the conclusion that the world ought now to know more of him.

The present seat of Chubb Jackson's charitable efforts is the village of Hadlow in Kent, a few miles from Tonbridge. He has recently opened a branch establishment at No. 6, George-street, Ryde. At these premises he carries on "Children's Country and Seaside Homes." The work done in this direction is, by his own account, very considerable. Here is his own account, indited specially for my benefit in a letter dated January 24, 1898:—

> I have had altogether at the two Homes up to the end of last year between 600 and 700 children, some of them staying as long as six months, and previous to the Jubilee I paid all their railway fares to and from London, and in no case did I have any pay whatever from the parents. Since the Jubilee the children that have come to the Homes have paid their railway fares only.
>
> You may ask, how did I get the children? In some cases I have visited the slums myself, but in most cases I gave the letters to well-known missions in London. In two instances I took cases from the London Police-courts, and in both cases I kept the children six months, receiving no pay whatever. In addition to these agencies I have been in touch with several visiting ladies of very poor districts in London. . . . .

Even more remarkable than the proportions which Chubb Jackson's work has reached is the extremely small expenditure which has sufficed to maintain it. In the letter quoted above he tells me that "since he first opened the Hadlow Home in 1895 up, he has received considerably under £500." I should say that I had applied to him for information as to his finances, and this statement was what I got in reply. That two Homes should have been furnished and opened, and maintained, one for two and a half years the other for about six months, and that between 600 and 700 should have been taken in, some of them for periods of six months, and all this for an expenditure "considerably under £500," is one of the most astonishing feats performed since the age of miracles came to an end. Now a word as to the history of this worker of miracles.

Chubb Jackson seems to have been originally in the refreshment-contracting and picnic-catering line of business, and indeed he was still pursuing this particular line in the summer of 1895, when he opened the Home at Hadlow. I have one of his trade circulars—a highly attractive document—in which "S. A. Chubb Jackson begs to thank those persons who kindly patronised him during last season, and to inform Superintendents of Sunday Schools and Bands of Hope, Cyclists, Ramblers, Cricket Clubs, Mothers' Meetings, &c., &c., that he is again catering for the requirements of such parties at this delightful spot." The "delightful spot" is "The Retreat, Bushey Heath, Herts," and S. A. Chubb Jackson describes himself as its proprietor. Under the influence of his rural surroundings, he develops a poetic vein :—

At my Stanmore Retreat
There is plenty to eat,
Served up by attendants, quick, civil, and neat.

So without more delay
Send your orders this way,
That is, if you'd spend an enjoyable day.

* * * * *

It is I who aspire
To meet the desire
Of the child or the more epicurean sire.

And so forth. In addition to the Bushey address this document is headed in writing, "Red House, Hadlow, Kent," and "139, Alexandra-road, St. John's Wood, N.W." and at the foot appears this notification :—

Terms on application to the Proprietor—
S. A. Chubb Jackson,
Red House, Hadlow, Kent.
Mr. Jackson is also prepared to accommodate Children or Adults wishing to spend a week or two in the country on reasonable terms.

From this it will be seen that in the summer of 1895 (the date at which the Hadlow Home was started) Mr. Jackson was avowedly combining the two characters of philanthropist and refreshment contractor. This is further shown by an interesting publication dated June 1, 1895, and purporting to be No. 1, Vol. 1, of The Organ of the Hadlow Convalescent Home, and Special Work among the Children. On the front of the cover of this organ is the appropriate text "Suffer little Children to come unto Me," and on the back an advertisement of "Progressive Refreshment Contractors—Price List can be obtained from The Manager, 139, Alexandra-road, St. John's Wood, N.W., or Red House Coffee Tavern, Hadlow, near Tonbridge, Kent. P.S.—By patronising this Firm you will be greatly helping the Home."

The address, 139, Alexandra-road, St. John's Wood, is given on various documents (including the subscription form published in the Organ) as that of the "London Office" of the charity, as well as of S. A. Chubb Jackson in his capacity of a "Progressive Refreshment Contractor." Chubb Jackson's connection with these premises is one of the most instructive features in his career. The fact is that during the time it figured as the "London Office" of the Home and the refreshment business, 139, Alexandra-road was an empty house, and Chubb Jackson was established there with his family in the humble though useful capacity of a caretaker. It appears that he was put in charge of the premises upon the recommendation of a clergyman by the agents who had the house on their books. The clergyman knew Jackson as an applicant for relief, and had actually relieved him in cash at various times to the tune of about £3. Jackson seems to have used the Alexandra-road house for about eighteen months in 1894 and 1895, and kept some of the paraphernalia of the catering business there. The agents wondered, they say, why the house did not let.

A year or two back Chubb Jackson issued by post a "Special Appeal," which among other interesting statements contained the following further biographical details bearing upon the Alexandra-road period of his career :—

I am compelled to bring before your notice my pressing needs respecting the work which God has for two years enabled me to carry on.

In April, 1894, having a large tent, &c., accompanied by two earnest workers, I left London. We visited Sevenoaks and Tonbridge, finishing up with Mission Work among the Hop-pickers. That being over, I returned to London, where during the winter of 1894, which was the severest for many years, and the distress being very great, I decided to do something.

From December 1, 1894, to March 20, 1895, I had a large Soup Kitchen in the Kilburn District, where by voluntary contributions, I was enabled to give daily large quantities of Soup, Bread, and Free Dinners to School Children, &c.

The early part of June, 1895, I took the premises then and now known as the Red House, Hadlow, which, after a lot of repairs inside and out, I converted into a Holiday Home for poor London slum children, &c.

What the soup-kitchen was I do not know. Sundry facts, however, which are perfectly certain, tend to throw considerable doubt on the accuracy of the above statements. During the period referred to, Jackson was evidently in sore financial straits. He admits as much in a letter which I will give presently. He also applied for and received, about the same time, the charitable relief for his own personal benefit already referred to. The clergyman who relieved him actually gave him 30s. for the purpose of enabling him to open an eating-house. Again, in the autumn of 1895, the police of the District Railway Company had occasion to make some inquiries about Chubb Jackson, in consequence of his having arrived one night at Charing Cross station with a small party of boys, told the station inspector a story about having had his pocket picked, borrowed of that functionary the sum of 3s. 4½d., in order to pay the fares of the party to Latimer-road, and failed to repay the loan, in spite of his promises that it would be forthcoming next day. He had given as his address, the "London Office," 139, Alexandra-road, and on that house being visited and found empty, suspicions were naturally aroused. The police officer who hunted him up, made a report containing the following passage :—

I had some inquiry made at 139, Alexandra-road, St. John's-wood, and find that the house is in charge of a caretaker, who says Mr. Chubb Jackson was formerly living there. . . . On making further inquiries in the neighbourhood, I found that Chubb Jackson was well known about there, and formerly stood with a coffee stall in the street, close by the above address, where he was living as caretaker. . . .

These statements throw a striking light on Jackson's own account of his "large soup-kitchen," and the vast amount of "relief work" done by him in "the Kilburn district" during the winter of 1894-5.

There is one other little piece of evidence with which I will trouble the reader, in order to make the picture of the rise of Chubb Jackson perfectly clear. It is a letter written by Jackson on May 2, 1895, to a gentleman who had previously assisted him with cash :—

139, Alexandra-road,
St. John's Wood,
May 2, 1895.

Sir,—I trust you will pardon this liberty. I am the lame young man whom you so kindly helped about twelve months ago towards starting me in business. Your butler, who knew me when I was in Stoureliffe St., knew that I tried my hardest and I got on pretty fair, but it has been such a bad winter, and I have been laid up over two months with piles and fistula, but I am thankful to say I am a great deal better. It took all I earned last summer to get my things together, so that when I had finished I had no ready money, but I had all my things for my use. I was obliged to pledge my tents to get a little ready money to work upon for the winter, and I have not been able to redeem them; they only granted me a three months' ticket, and they have been in now nearly six months, and if I do not redeem them within the next few days they will sell them. They cost me over £20 and they are only in for £2, and the interest will be another £1. If you will kindly help me I should feel truly grateful. I have got £1 towards it. I have enclosed the ticket for you to see. If you will kindly help me this once I will never apply to you again. I have every prospect of plenty of work this summer. Thanking you for your past kindness, I beg to remain, sir, your humble servant,

Sydney C. Jackson.

The reader will note for himself the singular contrast between the account of his condition during the winter of 1894-5 given by Jackson in this letter, and that contained in the "Special Appeal" quoted above, wherein he describes his work at the large Soup Kitchen carried on by him in the Kilburn District during the same period.

Without going into further facts, of which I have a plentiful store on hand, I think enough has been said to furnish material for a pretty accurate estimate of this worthy. In 1894-5 we have him in the character of a struggling refreshment contractor appealing to charity, and getting a roof temporarily over his head by means of a job as caretaker of an empty house. While there, he supplements his income by keeping a coffee-stall in a neighbouring street. In May, 1895, he is appealing for cash to get his tents out of pawn. In June of the same year he has managed to take the house at Hadlow, formerly a coffee-shop, and again run by him on that basis. He then has a business circular out offering to receive children and adults as boarders for a week or two, apparently at Hadlow. A further inspiration occurs to him, and we have The Organ of the Hadlow Convalescent Home, with the alluring motto, "Suffer Little Children to come unto Me," the fly-leaf subscription form inside, and the "Progressive Refreshment Contractors'" advertisement on the back. The empty house in Alexandra-road, of which he was nominally the caretaker, blossoms forth into the London Office of the Convalescent Home and the "Special Work among the Children." Once embarked in the philanthropic line, Chubb Jackson prospers. The Hadlow house is run as a coffee tavern, and a few children are brought down in batches from time to time during the summer. An inspection of the premises which I caused to be made in the autumn of 1895 showed that there were four rooms available for the accommodation of children, the rooms containing nineteen beds. According to Mrs. Jackson's statement then, sixty-five children had been down during the summer. The 1895 season was then over. Last spring, in his Jubilee appeal, Jackson was asserting that up to that time he had admitted "over three hundred children" to the Home, for periods ranging from a fortnight to three months, and this notwithstanding the fact that for eight months eight out of the nineteen beds had been closed for want of funds. However, there have been a certain number of children there, no doubt—the usual charity-monger's stock-in-trade. To keep the place going money has been collected far and wide by itinerant collectors. At one time there was a collector at work on the beach at Eastbourne. The "work" was next pushed into Hampshire and the Isle of Wight, where Jackson has had two or three local agents and collectors for some time past. The business speedily grew so flourishing that the second "Home" was opened at Ryde—also with a coffee and refreshment room attached to it. Appeals were issued by post of the character indicated above. There was also, as a matter of course, a Jubilee Appeal, in which Jackson strove to enlist all loyal and patriotic subjects of the Queen in a "commemoration effort" of a complicated character, the essential feature being that £1,000 was to be placed at Chubb Jackson's disposal by the end of September. This appeal contains an imposing account of Jackson's past work and future plans, together with sample "cases" illustrating the practical results of Jackson's philanthropic activity. It shows that in the space of two years the humble beggar of a few shillings had blossomed forth into a thorough-going, accomplished charity-monger, who would ask for a thousand pounds at one stroke, and knew well the most likely way to get it.

During all this time there has not been even a pretence that there was anybody but Chubb Jackson, late coffee-stall keeper and house agent's caretaker, in the management of the concern. He does not even take the trouble to advertise a committee, a treasurer, or any of the usual appurtenances of a charitable organisation. He publishes no accounts, not even a subscription list. You send your money to "Chubb Jackson, Founder," and leave Chubb Jackson to do what he pleases with it. In this Jubilee Appeal, which seems to have been issued about May last, he made the following announcement:—

A Balance Sheet is in course of preparation, and will be ready at the anniversary services; this will contain a full report from the commencement of all money received, how it has been spent, together with a list of subscribers. A Balance Sheet of this special appeal will be issued at the end of the season.

Having had many inquiries about the Jubilee Appeal, and having seen nothing of either of the promised balance-sheets, I myself wrote to Chubb Jackson, as mentioned earlier in this article, asking him to kindly forward me the two accounts, in order that I might be in a position to reply to such inquiries. This was on January 14 of the present year. I have already quoted one passage of his reply, in which he endeavoured to stagger me with a recital of the magnitude of his work and the smallness of his receipts. Here is the only portion of his letter which had any direct bearing upon the request that I had made:—

Respecting my balance sheet the end of 1895 I published a small magazine containing a balance sheet this I intended to keep up every six months, but I found I had to give them away, and they cost too much to print, and I thought the money would be better spent in feeding the children, another reason is I have had to depend greatly upon voluntary labour, not being in a position to pay a secretary.

But in October last I thoroughly reorganised the whole thing and my books from that date will be kept by a secretary and I shall be prepared to produce them any time I am called upon to do so. Respecting the money I received in 1896 and 1897, those of my friends who supplied the most of it are I believe thoroughly satisfied in the way which it was spent, otherwise they would not give again and again.

I am preparing a balance-sheet from January, 1896, to September, 1897, to the best of my ability if people are not satisfied with that it will be for them to prove that the money has not been spent for the purpose for which it has been asked.

For the future I shall issue a balance-sheet every six months, which will be properly audited. You may ask do I take any salary each summer I have earned in a separate way entirely enough to keep me my wife and those of my family have had their food nothing else thus saving expenses for labour that otherwise would have been incurred.

All monies received since January '96 is entered in our collecting books, and most of it in the subscribers' handwriting.

Directly I have the balance-sheet ready and I have funds to have it printed which I trust will be by the end of febuary, I will forward you one, but I wish you to thoroughly understand this is the last correspondence I can hold on the subject in fact I have gone a great deal further than I was advised.

I shall be pleased to forward you letters of admission any time should you require them.

Trusting that you will feel satisfied with this explanation.—I beg to remain, sir, your obedient servant

CHUBB JACKSON.

To the Editor of TRUTH.

It will be seen that the balance-sheet which last May was in course of preparation, and was to be issued at the "anniversary services" (then fixed for June 17) is still, in January, 1898, in course of preparation. The balance-sheet dealing with the results of the Jubilee Appeal, which was promised at the end of last season, never seems to have appeared, and there is nothing in Jackson's letter to me indicating that it is ever likely to do so. In expressing the hope that this reply will be satisfactory to me, Jackson can only have been writing with his tongue in his cheek. As for the impudent remark that it is for those who are not satisfied with his balance-sheet (when it appears) to prove that the money has not been properly expended, I will only say that on Chubb Jackson's own statements, coupled with the other plain facts of the case, I should think there would be but little difficulty in proving it.

How much cash this individual really has extracted from the pockets of the confiding public during the last three years it is of course impossible to say. His own statement that the total amount is under £500 is entirely inconsistent with his own statements about his work, and although his statements about his work are manifestly fanciful, that does not lend additional credibility to his statements about his receipts. The fact is clear that for three years the quondam coffee-stall keeper and house agent's caretaker has lived with his family in a fair amount of comfort, either at Hadlow or Ryde, that he has managed to establish for himself a couple of coffee-house businesses which probably in themselves yield a respectable income, and that in addition to this he has been scooping in money in all directions by means of collectors and postal circulars. For those who have parted with their money in this way, I confess I have not much sympathy. They deserve to lose it. There is little genuine charity about the process of disbursing cash, without consideration or inquiry, to any plausible soi-disant philanthropist, who comes round with an imposing account of his own performances, and an appeal plentifully garnished with scriptural cant. The practice of throwing about money indiscriminately under the name of charity is the chief cause of the existence of the vast army of philanthropic quacks and impostors, who bring discredit upon the whole business of public charity. I have gone into the case of Chubb Jackson in detail, not so much because the man himself, at any rate at his present stage, is a practitioner on a very large scale, but because his case conveys such a conspicuous warning to all those who give away money in response to ad captandum appeals to their benevolence. I trust that the warning will have its due effect upon those who have hitherto been supporting Mr. Chubb Jackson, and that in giving this account of his rise and progress I shall dispose of him once and for all.

AN EDITOR ON "COMPETITION" TRICKS.

In reply to the article on newspaper competition tricks in last week's TRUTH, I have received a long communication from Mr. Langton Bayly, editor of Hearth and Home. It seems to me that what Mr. Bayly has to say might have been put into about a quarter of the space which his letter fills, and as my own space is extremely limited, I must ask to be allowed to condense his remarks for him. He begins by pointing out that he has never dissembled the fact that his "Scholarship" competition was intended as an advertisement. This is really immaterial; for no one has objected to the thing on the ground that it was an advertisement. I do not think, however, that if the editor had in so many words offered the prize to the young lady who should sell the largest number of copies of his paper for him, or obtain him the largest number of annual subscribers, he would have met with a very hearty response; and I took the liberty of pointing out to the young ladies who were competing for scholarships the precise nature of the undertaking in which they were engaged. Having got over this point, Mr. Bayly deals thus with the objections to his competition which I formulated:—

First, you say the girl with the longest purse and the largest number of relations with long purses has evidently the best chance of winning the £50. May I ask whether this can be considered an objection to the scholarship scheme, and, if so, on what grounds? I fancy that nearly all benevolent institutions are run on the principle of giving votes to those people who subscribe to the objects of the institution. We have distinctly stated that ours is not a purely philanthropic venture; but, at the same time, it is necessary in giving away a sum of £80 for the sake of advertising ourselves to take precautions to ensure that only readers of the paper are allowed to vote; and, in so doing, we are following the usual practice.

Secondly, you say that this contest may easily resolve itself into a mere blind gamble, conducted on very much the same principle as the game of "poker." May I ask you in what particular our scholarship scheme can come under the category of a gamble? To every person who pays a yearly subscription full value is given for the money, and the same applies to everybody who buys a single copy, and thus obtains one vote. Therefore, I shall be glad to hear your definition of the word "gamble." It is quite apparent to the meanest intelligence—and we have particularly drawn attention to the fact in the opening announcement—that everybody cannot win.

I do not wish to be offensive, but really this is a very twaddling line of argument. If I were to run a gambling competition in TRUTH, to limit it to purchasers of the paper, and to notify those who took part in it that they could not all win, I do not see how either the limitation or the notice would relieve it of the character of a gamble. As to the gambling nature of Mr. Bayly's competition, my article clearly explained why it was a gamble, and I really do not see any necessity to give the explanation over again. The opportunity was given to all the competitors to bid blindfold against one another week by week for a chance of the prize. Any girl, by putting in a 15s. subscription on her own account, or getting her friends to do it for her, could raise her score by seventy points, and if the girl who came out second in the final list had only spent 17s. 6d. more in the last week, she would have been the winner of £50. I really do not see that it is necessary to give a definition of the word "gamble" in order to prove that such a competition is essentially of a gambling character. If it is not, then the popular game of poker is not gambling either. Mr. Bayly goes on to say that "there is no necessity for a candidate to do more than get her friends to vote for her; there is no compulsion, as you imply, to make her invest her own money." I did not say or imply that there was compulsion; I said that there was a strong inducement. Considering that seventy votes could be purchased for 15s., and that seventy votes would go far towards turning the scale in a close finish, it is obvious that each girl must have been under the strongest inducement to buy votes out of her own pocket. Mr. Bayly continues:—

> Thirdly, you say that "by way of stimulating his young lady readers to further sterling efforts in the same direction, the editor awards two extra £5 prizes to the fourth, fifth, and sixth competitors, and then expresses a pious hope that any of those who have not been successful in this competition will try again, and not be put off by one failure." Doubtless you have made a clerical error here. We certainly did give extra prizes—not two, but three prizes of £5. I think your description is hardly fair, as we obviously cannot stimulate people to further efforts after the competition is over.

Why cannot you stimulate people to further efforts after the competition is over? As pointed out in TRUTH, the hope was expressed in so many words that those who had not been successful in the competition would try again and not be put off by one failure. What is this but stimulating them to further efforts? and what on earth does Mr. Bayly mean in the face of this invitation to the unsuccessful to compete again by saying now that he "obviously cannot stimulate people to further efforts after the competition is over"? There is only one other point in his letter. He answers my statement that the total amount of business done for the paper by the scholarship competition was £637 3s., by pointing out that "every person who contributed towards that £637 3s. has had full value for her money." This is really childish. When I say that so much business was done for the paper, I mean that the paper was sold to that extent. Of course, the people who bought it got what they paid for. The question at issue is the legitimacy of the means adopted for inducing them to buy.

I shall, perhaps, be charged with unfairness to Mr. Bayly if I do not publish his concluding hit:—

> I do not wish to embark on a tu quoque argument, but I gather that the fact of your running this series of articles against various papers and people is only your way of advertising your paper, and of gaining fresh readers and subscribers. I think personally that my way is the less objectionable of the two, and that at any rate it does not merit the designation which you give it of "a piece of delusive humbug."

Mr. Bayly is quite at liberty to embark on a tu quoque argument whenever he finds an opening for it. But I am not running any "series of articles against various papers," and, if I were, it is absurd to suppose that the ordinary contents of a newspaper can be described as an advertisement. In my last article I gave Mr. Bayly the credit of every argument which can be drawn from the legitimate business of newspaper proprietors and editors. We are all, as I said, anxious to enlarge our circulation, and to gain fresh subscribers. We are all doing our best in that direction according to our lights. Some of us, however, confine ourselves to the ordinary and legitimate business of journalism; others endeavour to increase the attractions of their papers by tacking on to them lotteries, competitions, prize distributions, and a dozen other features which stand in precisely the same relation to the literary portion of the publication as the big drum outside a booth at a fair does to the show inside. With this I do not quarrel. It is one of the results of trade competition, and I rather sympathise with Mr. Langton Bayly in his ingenious effort to keep abreast of the enterprise of his rivals. When, however, these adventitious aids to journalistic success take forms which seem objectionable on public grounds, then I feel it part of my legitimate business as a journalist to point these objections out.

While on this subject, let me call attention to another example of the unsatisfactory manner in which too many newspaper prize competitions are conducted. A weekly paper called the Sunday Companion offers £100 in prizes for what it calls a "Bible-searching examination." A certain number of anagrams on Biblical names or words are given each week, and £5 notes up to the number of twenty are to be given to the parties solving the whole number of names successfully. In the case in question six competitors were announced as having been successful, and, according to the published award, received a £5 note each. Now, it so happened in this case that six readers of the paper at Bethnal Green had combined together and sent in identical lists, keeping copies of them. Their answers corresponded exactly with those in the published prize list. None of the names, however, of these six competitors appeared in the award. Complaint was made to the editor, and he replied that after having made a careful search, he was unable to find any trace of the answers of these competitors having been received. He did not question the complainants' veracity, but he took his stand firmly on the ground that although the lists might have been posted, they did not come to hand. The complaint having been brought to me, I communicated with the editor of the Sunday Companion, but he can only give me the same answer as he originally gave the complainants.

There seems no room for doubt in this case that the six lists were duly sent in. Six perfectly credible witnesses are prepared to swear to it, and each can give the time and place at which the letter was posted. Which is more probable, that by an almost miraculous coincidence all these letters miscarried in the post, or that they have been overlooked in the office of the Sunday Companion? Few would hesitate to adopt the latter alternative. The editor of the paper states that "many thousands" took part in the competition. It seems pretty clear that due pains were not taken to do justice to them all. Considering that each individual among these thousands of competitors paid his or her penny, week by week, for the privilege of competing, they have every right to complain of such treatment. In calling attention to the legitimate grounds which too often exist for complaints on this score, I humbly believe that I am doing some of my contemporaries a good service. The disadvantage of the "competition" form of advertisement is that for every reader who is propitiated by the award of a prize, a dozen are apt to be annoyed at being sent empty away. And if any considerable proportion of them go away, not only empty, but cherishing the idea that they have been swindled or unfairly treated, the competition is likely to do its promoter quite as much harm as good.

NOTES FROM PARIS.

THE Russian Ambassador loses no opportunity of gaining a personal foothold. One sees him everywhere, and bearing himself as one who merely wishes to pass in a crowd, at the same time not forgetting the high place to which he has always taken with easy dignity. Be sure he will never write gushing letters to Prefects of Police, who, on the principle that he who hides knows where to find, discover Nihilist plots in the Forest of Bondy — of all places! Prince Ouroussoff, Russians tell me, would have preferred Rome to Paris as a diplomatic post. In Rome he would have had opportunities to add to his cabinet d'antiquités. He has a passion for Italian art of the great epochs, and especially Etruscan and Græco-Roman art. One can understand a cultivated Russian, not used to government by talk, preferring quiet old Rome to feverish Paris. After all, it is such a loss of time to have to witness constant battles between Parliamentary kites and crows. Princess Ouroussoff is in no apparent haste to come here. She will not be at the Russian Embassy, it is said, before next May. The absence of an Ambassadress is really of no consequence. I can think of no more popular Ambassador than the late Lord Lyons. Who could have been more useful in helping Bismarck to prepare for 1870 than Count von Goltz? Lord Lyons was a bachelor, and there certainly was no Countess de Goltz when the Count was at the Rue de Lille. And Commander Nigra? The Faubourg St. Germain, which knew all about his very humble origin, pretended that a Signora Nigra was vegetating in some village near Turin, at the sign of the Barber and Phlebotomist. (The Faubourg St. Germain, fifteen years later, refused to see "a gentleman" in General Menabrea). If its story about the Signora were true —which I doubt—she never showed herself at the Italian Embassy. The palmy days there were in Nigra's time. Nigra had a faux air of Mario that suited the taste of the Empress and her ladies. His figure was tall, and naturally took graceful curves as he bowed, kissed hands, stooped to catch some light saying that flew from a beauteous mouth, or to recite verses meant to hold an Imperial ear. He obtained by his graces everything Victor Emmanuel wanted, save the evacuation of Rome. And he all but obtained that in 1868. Queen Isabella that year consented to take over the military task of protecting the Pope. The substitution of Spain for France was to have been "the beginning of the end." But the secret of her consent got out, and Bismarck, Prim, and the Duc de Montpensier drove her into exile. Nigra, however, remained a power at the Court of the Tuileries. It was he who, with the help of Prince Metternich, hurried the Empress out of the Tuileries and thrust her into a fiacre. This done, he telegraphed to Florence: — "The Roman question practically solved. Madame fled, and en route for England. Particular route unknown." Madame was the conventional name for the Empress.

Diplomatic ladies are, it seems to me, very often undiplomatic. They seldom perceive where power really lies. The power of the day, however tottering, seems to them eternal. Directly it falls it is cold-shouldered. The fallen who rise again, remember who snubbed them, and try to pay back. Then often they have their small prejudices. The Princess Metternich, after the war, made her husband impossible by calling Mme. Thiers un paquet. She took her off in the salon of Mme. de Rainneville. Mme. Thiers rose at five in the morning to prepare the chocolate of M. Thiers. She was apt to go to sleep in the evening as she received company. Her slumbers were noisy—a feature that did not escape the Austrian Ambassadress. The latter had the sort of gouailleur genius for low comedy that Milly Meyer shows in singing. Thiers resented it when his wife was the object or the subject. And thus Prince Metternich lost a post he greatly wished to keep.

England has had reason to be satisfied with her Ambassadresses. Lady Cowley was a very clever woman, and excellent. Lady Lytton was sweet and gracious, and so ornamental. She never gave offence to the most sensitive. Nobody could be more considerate and kind, when kindness and consideration were called for. Aristocratic she certainly was; but she was free from the prejudices of her caste. How could she be otherwise? She admired Lord Lytton's freedom from starch, his originality, and his refreshing independence of thought and speech that showed he truly belonged to the Republic of Letters. Lady Lytton, remaining in love with him to the end, was bitten by his literary "Republicanism." It did so well in Paris, where English affectations are hated. Her successor, Lady Dufferin, was quite unaffected. She came in an evil time. The French resented her second title, of Ava. But, helped by the more than feminine charm of Lord Dufferin's mind, she overcame hostility.

Every one says how anxious the Prince must be to please the French. The "anxiety" is deduced from a small fact which tailors and dandies will think a great event. H.R.H. wore—as Frenchmen wear—an evening coat the other day at a morning ceremony. But he took from the black and white solemnity of full dress by adding the Grand Cordon of the Legion of Honour. The occasion was the laying of the foundation stone of the Prince of Wales's pier at Cannes. It must have pleased him to find he is as popular as ever there. The Grand Duke Michael Michailovitch and the Countess Torby were the only Russians present of great distinction. The Russian hymn was played in their honour as the doxology is sung in church. "God Save the Queen" announced the Prince's arrival, and the rousing strains of the "Marseillaise" immediately followed. The Prince must feel what great changes have taken place at Cannes since he began to go there. Prince de Sagan, with the Princesse, figure, to be sure, in the Strangers' Guide; but he is no longer himself—only the mere bodily survival. The new generation, however, will not, if it can help it, let H.R.H. realise to what a degree the other has passed away.

King Leopold I. dreaded, after the death of his eldest son, giving fresh hostages to fortune. He wanted to declare his nephew Augustus his heir, and to persuade Queen Louise to take the vows of a lay Carmelite.

Augustus could marry her sister Clémentine, and thus reconcile Louis Philippe to the idea of Leopold and Louise dying childless. Leopold was haunted with the idea that an evil fate must pursue his posterity. There may not have been rational grounds for the presentiment, although time really justifies it. The hand of destiny has pressed heavily on the daughter and other posterity of Leopold I. His very promising grandson, the Duc de Brabant, suddenly seemed struck with a blight, and rapidly followed his grandfather to the tomb. Charlotte's fate exceeds, in tragical horror, everything the Greek dramatists imagined. Ill-luck has tracked the daughters of Leopold II. Stéphanie lost a husband and a prospective crown in the Meyerling tragedy. She is now a stranger in the country over which she was to have reigned. The Princesse Clémentine of Belgium has never been herself since she saw her governess burned to death in the fire that consumed Laeken Palace. The Comte de Flandre lost his handsome son Prince Baldwin. The surviving son has endless good qualities, but he is unfortunate in his appearance and health. Leopold, notwithstanding, leads a merry life. They say he is angling to become King of Egypt, in which case France or Germany might take Belgium, and welcome. However, he is creating for himself an earthly paradise at Villa Franca. He has let his palace in the Ardennes to the International Company of Hotels. It will be a northern Gizereh Palace hotel.

LETTER FROM THE LINKMAN.

SYDNEY SMITH once wrote, dear Lady Betty: "I have got into all my London feelings, which come on me immediately I pass Hyde Park Corner. I am heartless, selfish, insolent, worldly, and frivolous. Pardon the vices inevitable in the greatest of cities."

The following letter, which has been addressed to me, is probably intended to be a philosophical defence of those "London vices":—

"Sir,—A conversation which I had a day or two ago with a friend of mine has made so great an impression on me that I venture to send you an account of it. My friend happened to mention the name of a man who is known to us both, and I described him as a 'villainous creature.' My companion, who is much older than I am, and an especially shrewd and experienced man of the world, eyed me curiously for an instant, and then asked:

"'Do you imagine that you possess a monopoly of knowledge of character?'

"'Certainly not,' I replied.

"'My boy,' he continued, 'we most of us know the precise value of each other, but the better trained we are, and the wiser we are in our generation, the less often do we express the bad opinion which we have of our neighbour—that is, so long as he can either render us a service or can cause us an injury.'

"Myself: 'That is the very custom which I consider to be so contemptible. Why not have the courage of your dislikes?'

"He: 'An admirable sentiment; but that which is admirable in theory is often mischievous in practice. We are living in the world an artificial life, which we endeavour by self-restraint and by the exercise of judgment to render as smooth and as agreeable as we can both for ourselves and for others—those others, of course, whose condition will react upon our own. . . . .

"Myself (interrupting): 'You stifle individuality to acquire comfort.'

"He: 'It is just such men as yourself who are the centres of immeasurable irritation and mischief. You perceive, as we do, that A. is a villainous creature, and you say so. In an instant you cause contention. The supporters of A. on the one hand, and the men like yourself on the other, commence to abuse each other, and a vast amount of ill-feeling is created which has far-spreading consequences. I am fully aware that A. is a despicable creature, but so long as he can give me a dinner, or can defend himself, I pronounce him to be excellent. Believe me, that you do much more harm by your honesty than we do by our deceit.'

"Myself: 'Then honesty is not the best policy?'

"He: 'Honesty is no policy; it is a principle. Worldliness is expediency.'

"Yours faithfully, "Piccadilly."

* * * * *

"Who's Who?" is a book of reference which contains much personal information, but in the present condition of London society what is more needed is a work which will tell us "Who's Somebody Else." Nearly every man and woman who is well known is now interested in some shop, is on the stage, or leads a double life under another name. "Who's Somebody Else?" would tell us, for instance, that Lady Lerwick is "Celandine," the florist; that Cecilia Chateris is "Reinette," the milliner; that "Isidore," the restaurant keeper, is FitzFoodle; that "Naaman," the art dealer, is Lord Redruth; and that "Candide," the sprightly contributor to Clap-Trap, is Fridoline Frisk, who has never been nearer to Court than the Divorce Court.

* * * * *

The death of Sir Richard Quain removes one of the last of the medical giants of the later Victorian Era, and as no new giants seem to be growing up to replace those who have gone, in art, oratory, statesmanship, and literature, so no new ones seem to be prepared to rule over the medical world. Twenty years ago the great names in the latter were Sir William Jenner, Sir William Gull, Sir Richard Quain, Sir Andrew Clark, Sir James Paget, Sir Oscar Clayton, Sir Spencer Wells, and one or two others, and of these how few have not been removed! Most of them were not only eminent in their profession, but had attained social popularity through their conversational powers. They were experienced men of the world, who exercised much influence behind the scenes, and had established for themselves household names.

. . . . .

The latter remarks apply especially to the late Sir Richard Quain. He knew his world well; he had been behind the scenes in many interesting events; he told the best of good stories; he possessed the best of good spirits; and his generosity knew absolutely no limits. It is not patients that he has left behind, but friends.

* * * * *

An accident occurred last week in Piccadilly which happily had comparatively slight consequences, but should nevertheless act as a warning against the practice of cycling in the crowded streets. A man on a cycle turned into Piccadilly from Half Moon-street, was run into by a cab, thrown in front of an omnibus, and in a second both horses of the latter vehicle fell upon him. The majority of reasonable people are beginning to recognise the value of the advice which has been frequently given in these columns—to wit, that it is the utmost folly to cycle in the streets. The cycle is not a toy; it is a machine which is of great use for going from one place to another in ordinary circumstances. But to cycle in a crowded thoroughfare is as ridiculous as it would be to play polo in Piccadilly Circus. Believe me to be, very truly yours,

MARMADUKE.

For Mosquito Bites nothing allays the irritation so quickly as Scrubb's Cloudy Fluid Ammonia, and it is an immediate remedy for Wasp or Bee Stings.

SPORTING NOTES.

THE late Lord Bradford owned racehorses for more than forty years, his Turf career having commenced (when he was Lord Newport) in 1853; but for some years previously he had taken considerable interest in this branch of sport, his intimate friend, Lord Wilton, and his brother-in-law, General Anson, both having a large number of horses in training. Lord Bradford's colours were always very popular, and his horses had usually been bred by himself. He trained with Wadlow, whose gallops are over downs closely adjacent to Weston Park, Lord Bradford's place in Shropshire. His brother-in-law, the late Colonel Forester, was the manager of the stud. His favourite meetings were Ascot and Goodwood. Lord and Lady Bradford were invariably included in the Goodwood house party during the race week for more than thirty years. Lord Bradford was exceedingly fond of hunting, and he was an admirable rider. No obstacle stopped him, and, like his friend Lord Wilton (whom he often visited at Melton), he had a keen eye for the best place in a fence, and rode with as much judgment as pluck. Lord Bradford was a most genial, generous, and hospitable man, and on his estates he was greatly beloved and esteemed. He had large and valuable estates in Shropshire, Staffordshire, and Lancashire. Lord Bradford sat in Parliament for twenty-three years before he succeeded to the title in 1865, and he was twice Vice-Chamberlain of the Household, and afterwards Lord Chamberlain under his great friend Lord Derby. Lord Bradford was on very intimate terms with Lord Beaconsfield, who made him Master of the Horse in 1874, and he also filled that office in Lord Salisbury's first Government. He was for many years Lord-Lieutenant of Shropshire, but resigned about two years ago. He had been a member of the Jockey Club for about thirty-four years, and in a quiet way he exercised considerable influence at Newmarket.

I have several times expressed the opinion that Hermiston will win either the City and Suburban or the Kempton Park Jubilee Handicap, whichever race he may go for, and it will be interesting to see how the Kingsclere colt gets on when he meets Cyllene at even weights in the Newmarket Stakes. Hermiston has grown into a grand colt, and Mr. Low must deeply deplore his omission from the Derby entry. If Hermiston does well for his spring engagements, I fancy he will probably be entered for the Queen's Vase at Ascot, as he will have no extra weight to carry in that race, unless he should happen to win the Newmarket Stakes.

The addleheads who have been so infatuated as to back Ormathwaite for the Derby may look upon their money as lost, for there is not the least chance that the Prince of Wales's colt will stand training. The supporters of Ormathwaite do not deserve a particle of sympathy, for it was utterly idiotic to back the colt after the Prince had sold his dam (Marguerite) out of the Sandringham stud for such a paltry sum as 300 gs. This was a plain tip that Ormathwaite was not expected by his owner to distinguish himself in any remarkable manner as a three-year-old.

A vigorous attempt is being made in certain quarters to write up Dunlop, the colt being for sale. Dunlop is the colt by Ayrshire out of Fortuna, for which Mr. Rucker paid 5,000 gs. to the Prince of Wales in the autumn of 1896, and there have been constant outbursts of trumpeting about his alleged merits. Dunlop has grown into a nice colt, but he is never likely to be of much use over any longer distance than six furlongs, and he has not the most remote chance of winning either the Two Thousand or the Derby.

Lord Derby will probably have a good candidate for the Molyneux Stakes at Liverpool in Arsenal, by St. Angelo out of Spud, who is a remarkably nice colt, and he is believed to be very smart.

The Prince of Wales will not win the Brocklesby Stakes with Rosamunde, as that animal has been well beaten in a trial at Newmarket, in which gallop several more of the Egerton Lodge two-year-olds failed to distinguish themselves.

I hear that Mr. Larnach's Jeddah, by Janissary out of Pilgrimage (dam of Canterbury Pilgrim), will probably represent the Egerton Lodge stable in the Two Thousand, Diendonné being reserved for the Derby. As I have before stated, the Duke of Devonshire's colt will be admirably suited by the Epsom gradients, whereas Jeddah (a big slashing colt) would show to more advantage at Newmarket. Jeddah was so backward last season that his two-year-old form need not be regarded. Mr. Larnach's colt will very likely be started for the Craven Stakes, in which race he has a 5-lb. maiden allowance, and there is nothing in the entry (fifty-nine) which appears to have a chance of beating him if he is all right.

The Duke of Portland went to Newmarket last Thursday to gallop his two-year-olds that are engaged at Lincoln. The pair which did best in the trials (of which there were two) are Arrowroot, by Morion out of Semolina, and Dismay, by St. Simon out of Ismay, and whichever of these represents Heath House in the Brocklesby Stakes is certain to run well.

There is no foundation for the statement that Lord Dunraven's Desmond, by St. Simon out of L'Abbesse de Jouarre, has broken down, and how this report originated it is difficult to understand, for the mishap to this splendid colt was a mere trifle, which has left no bad effects. If Desmond runs at Lincoln he will probably secure the Brocklesby Stakes, as he is not likely to start unless he has won a good trial.

I have seen some high-flown eulogies of the merits of Baden, a colt by St. Serf out of Florence, who, however, was beaten in a trial last week. Baden wants time, and if he is judiciously managed he will very likely turn out a useful colt, but if Mr. Hammond is so foolish as to race him during the early part of the season he will probably prove an utter failure.

The Duke of Westminster is hopeful of winning the Chester Cup with Labrador, and the horse is undergoing a special preparation for that race. Labrador was all to pieces during the greater part of last year, but it is believed that he has now returned to his best form.

Mr. Gubbins intends to start Galtee More for the March Stakes at Newmarket, a race which is run on the day after the Two Thousand, and over the same course. Galtee More will carry the extreme penalty of 14 lb., but this is not likely to stop him if he is in his best form. I should fancy, however, that the wiser policy would have been to keep this horse for the Ascot Cup. If Galtee More is defeated at Ascot it will be by either Cyllene or The Baker.

It is quite on the cards that Ninus will not be ready for the Two Thousand, as Prince Soltykoff's horse wants a lot of work, and up to the present time he has done very little. If Ninus should miss the Two Thousand, or if he should be beaten in that race for lack of condition, he will no doubt be reserved for the Grand Prix de Paris, and then he has several nice engagements (including the Prince of Wales's Stakes and the St. James's Palace Stakes) at Ascot, which is his owner's favourite meeting.

Mr. James Lowther will have a dangerous candidate for the Brocklesby Stakes in Chief Warden, by Janissary out of Warden Belle, who has won a good trial over five furlongs. Chief Warden is tolerably certain to win a race in the course of the first month of the season. This colt was bought by Mr. Lowther for 360 gs. at Newmarket last July, out of the Howbury Stud team.

The Lincolnshire Handicap betting has been all fiddle-faddle, and the market is certain to be revolutionised before the flag falls. Sensible people will leave this race alone until the day of running arrives, for it is a veritable leap in the dark to back any horse whatever at the opening of the season until its form has been tested by a satisfactory trial. Every year we find animals whose "splendid gallops" have thrown all beholders into paroxysms of enthusiasm, collapsing most ignominiously when it comes to racing in earnest. Besides, at Lincoln not half the horses that run are ever properly fit. Even the most feather-brained of backers must have a dismally distinct recollection of Diakka, who ran nowhere last year with 7 st. 7 lb. on his back, the impulsive and credulous public having been gulled into backing him down to 7 to 1. Of course, Diakka would have won by a dozen lengths if he had been trained properly, but his ridiculously backward condition was obvious to every rational creature who beheld him at Lincoln.

Chelandry was to have been reserved for the City and Suburban, but Lord Rosebery may have come to the conclusion that the Epsom event will take more winning than next Tuesday's race. I do not fancy the mare, as it seems to me that the Lincoln course will not quite suit her. The Bedford Lodge stable does not appear likely to be dangerous with either Melange or Golden Rule, of which pair I now prefer the latter. Beato is a horse that will certainly win a handicap in the course of the season, but it is said that M. Ephrussi's steed will not be wanted at Lincoln. High Treasurer is not good enough for this race, and no boy can do justice to Kyoto. Merle is a doubtful starter, and the same may be said of St Cloud, who has been backed for as much money as anything in the race, but not, I fancy, by the stable. Sardis is a horse that is always going to win a big handicap, and he must have cost his supporters a pretty penny. I shall be vastly surprised if Ravensdale wins. Mack Briggs will probably be tried this week, but he seems scarcely class enough, nor do I expect to see Not Much win for Lord Durham, although this horse is greatly fancied by some of the best judges at Newmarket. Voter has not done much work, but he is the sort of horse to show his best form after a light course of training. Voter has gone well in his gallops, and he evidently has fine speed, while his American form proves him to be a really good horse over a mile. If he runs I shall expect him to win if he can beat Prince Barcaldine, and I would be content to give a plumper for Mr. W. M. Clarke's steed in the absence of the American horse. I do not believe any one at present knows for certain whether Mr. Keene's horse will run, but if he does start fit and well I shall predict that Voter will finish first, and that Prince Barcaldine will be second.

A correspondent has sent me a cutting from the Cambridge Review, which deplores what it is pleased to call my attack on the Trinity Hall Boat Club. It was not my intention to refer again to the dispute which recently occurred in Cambridge rowing circles, when, owing to the conduct of a few men, the fair name of a college and of the University were dragged in the mire. I did say, and I repeat, that if the T.H.B.C. is in the hands of men who try to prevent their members from rowing for the University, and who plot against the constitution of the C.U.B.C. for their own ends, then parents would, and should, hesitate to send their sons to such a college. Rowing men, says Mr. Andrew Lang, are the salt of a college, and if the salt has lost its savour, that college is in a bad way. I pointed out that these few individuals did not represent the real feelings of Hall men, past and present, and the College, by its action in a general meeting, practically repudiated the conduct of this minority, which included a gentleman who was old enough to know how to behave and how to fight his own quarrels. The Review says: "Did parents know how the gentleman, to whom the Hall owes its prominence on the river, had used his influence to promote the moral well-being of the crews he has coached, they would not, as the writer in TRUTH seems to imply, be unwilling to send their sons to that college." The gentleman to whom both the Review and myself were referring is Mr. Trevor-Jones. Nineteen years ago he took a second class in the Classical Tripos and rowed in the Hall second May boat. He has since taken pupils for the Little-go and General, and been very energetic in coaching on the river. He was eleven years ago given his first boat colours as a reward for the zeal he had shown in the not very pleasant task of coaching and teaching freshmen the elements of rowing, and in that respect he has undoubtedly done the college great service. Since then he has gradually obtained an extraordinary ascendency in Cambridge rowing, which has been disastrous to the success of the University. He has coached the trials and the University crews, and the unfortunate results of his efforts are known to all the world. At the same time his great use as a preparatory coach is shown by the success of the Hall in the clinkers.

This is the gentleman to whom the Hall owes its rowing prominence and its oarsmen their moral well-being. I will admit, for the sake of argument, that the assertions of the Review are correct. To this gentleman then is due a pre-eminence, the price of which has been the peace and prosperity of the C.U.B.C. Men have been passed over who ought to have rowed, and others who ought not to have rowed have been included in the University crew. It is singularly unfortunate that this pre-eminence has been coincident with a long list of Cambridge defeats. It is not a pre-eminence from which the University has gained any advantage. It has cost too much. But we are told that parents are to trust their sons to this gentleman because of his moral influence. I have no doubt that Mr. Trevor Jones's morals are excellent, and I believe he has a perfect horror of strong language. But to suggest that the morals of Hall men require his chaperonage is an insult to the College. The Review remarks that the fault it has to find with the Hall is that some of the members of its boat club have taken too restricted a view of their duty to the University. This is a very nasty charge written very mildly. And I do not think that any one would care to be inculcated with a code of morals the fruits of which are actions that deserve such strictures. I should certainly not have referred to the matter again if this attempt had not been made to whitewash the conduct of which certain Hall men have been guilty. It is true they have been forgiven, but their conduct cannot and should not be forgotten. Peace has not for the first time been declared, and I sincerely trust that this time it will be kept, but it would be the height of folly to allow the offenders to have another opportunity of repeating their old tactics. I believe all the proceedings of the now historic meeting at the University Boat Club were recorded. A copy should be sent to every boat club, to be preserved in the college records, that future generations of undergraduates may know what they owe to a gentleman whose paramount influence at one College has been synchronous with a period of trouble and disaster without parallel in the annals of University rowing.

Both the crews have done trials over the full course. The circumstances under which each rowed were so different that, as a relative test of their merits, they were worth little. It is sufficient to say that the performance of both crews stamped them as being good eights. Very satisfactory indeed was that of the Cambridge men, who, if public sympathy avails anything, have that to its full extent. Bell has surprised everybody, and probably no one more than himself, by his brilliant success at stroke. He took the crew over the course splendidly, and now that Beale and Brown are getting fit, the crew will be a powerful one. Of course, it was very hard lines on Steele to lose his Blue. Better luck next time. But for a young fellow there is no more bitter disappointment, and everybody is sorry for him.

An Old Malvern Boy is wrong in saying that I have run down Old Boys' teams that play Association football. On the contrary, I have always pointed to their success with pleasure, and it is because I regard them as being the backbone of genuine amateurism that one notes with regret the fact that, except in Cup ties, they do not turn out full strength. Naturally, the decadence of a club like the Old Etonians is to be deplored. And as naturally, the advent of a club like the Old Malvernians is to be hailed with satisfaction, and having already expressed a vain hope that they would win the Amateur Cup, one can scarcely be expected to say more in their favour. But my correspondent is not satisfied. He is young, enthusiastic, and energetic. He need not be afraid that one will belittle the efforts of his team, whose record for its first season is one of which any older club might be proud. They have worked their way into the semi-final of the Amateur Cup, and have scored thirty-four goals to seven, while on a Christmas tour they played every day for a week, and Eastbourne alone beat them. Unfortunately, Uxbridge has beaten them in the semi final.

The gentlemen who protested that League clubs do not require payment when amateurs are transferred, admits that a Second Division club in the south has done so. I do not expect that the others have a less keen eye to business, for the fact that such a thing is not known in the First Division clubs is probably due to the absence of amateurs and consequently the case has never arisen.

For the seventh time the Military Racquet Championship has been played and for the sixth time Captains Eastwood and Crawley have carried off the Cup. Their opponents were Captain King and Mr. Foster, R.A., Aldershot. The play was a class better than that shown in the earlier rounds and the pair was too fast for Captain King to be able to give his partner as much help as he would otherwise have done, though he played steadily. Crawley's services and smashes were very good and it was some time before either Foster or King could do anything with them.

It would be difficult to imagine a more pleasant meeting than that which was held at Fenner's between the London Athletic Club and Cambridge University Athletic Club. The London team consisted chiefly of old Oxford and Cambridge blues. Harrison, a fourth-year man won both the sprints for the University. In the quarter he went right away at the beginning, and Fitzherbert, the old blue, had not had enough training to catch him in the straight. Carter, the president, was not in his best form, as he has only been able to do very light work, owing to an injured instep, but he was running very strongly at the finish of the quarter, and he will no doubt be quite fit by the date of the sports. Hunter, a freshman, is a first-class miler; he made a mistake in letting Lutyens get too far away from him at the beginning, and the ex-President held his opponent well in hand from start to finish. Hunter made a grand attempt to get up in the last 150 yards, and he was only beaten by three yards. Workman, another freshman, shows some promise as a three-miler, but he should not try to run a race in new shoes. Considering that he tumbled in the middle he did not do badly. Davie, the L.A.C. man, ran in beautifully light and easy style, and won as he pleased, getting a splendid reception. Maundrel has undoubtedly improved over the hurdles, and if he can conquer his nervousness before racing, should stand a good chance of winning. The high jump was disappointing, and Gardiner, the old Oxford blue, who had not had a shoe on since this meeting was held last year, had no difficulty in winning this event. He cleared 5 feet 7 inches. The hammer was won by Lawrence, the oldest and smallest of the competitors, a pigmy and a veteran compared with the Cambridge giants. In 1881 he won this event for Oxford against Cambridge. Then, as now, he threw with one hand, and he cleared over 111 feet. Then came Robertson, another old Oxford blue, and the Cantab comfortably lost, Bulloch's erratic throwing threatening the spectators with sudden death. Young of the L.A.C. won the weight, but the visitors could do nothing with the long jump, which Bevan won. He does not tuck his feet away and shoot them out, as well as he might. Taking a line through the Oxford sports, the quarter and mile are the only certainties for Cambridge. The hundred is open, but Thomas ought to win. Garnier will win the hurdles, Fremantle the three miles, Adair the high jump, and Crossley the hammer. This gives Oxford four events, and though the weight and long jump are open, Cambridge can scarcely hope to win both events. It looks therefore at present as though Oxford would win the sports.

Mr. Newton Digby, the official time-keeper to the C.U.A.C., has compiled a useful little volume containing a list of old blues and their performances, the club meetings with Oxford and the L.A.C., and other details. An opportunity should be given for the book to be on sale on the day of the sports, as many old blues will find it interesting.

The International Rugby Union match between Scotland and England was a very hard game, and there is little doubt but that the changes in the English team since Ireland was met were very advantageous. The team, as selected, was supposed to be strong in attack and weak in defence. But it proved remarkably strong in defence, especially when it is remembered that Unwin, one of the half backs, had to leave the field for a time and was not able subsequently to do much. Byrne, Royds, and Bunting played a strong game. The English pack lasted well. The Scotch outsides, especially Smith, were disappointing. Their forwards hack at the ball instead of dribbling, and this lost them the game. In Association football, the Corinthians scored a brilliant win over Queen's Park, Glasgow.

MAMMON.

From MOSES MOSS to BENJAMIN BOSS.

Sunday.

MY DEAR BEN,—What shall I tell you to-day? It is not much use arguing on the merits of stocks when the swords rattle in the scabbards, and imaginative writers are already preparing to listen for the distant boom of cannon in a huge struggle of nations. The fact is that both the Stock Exchange and the public are suffering from a surfeit of war news, and so much of this fare is being dished up from day to day, and from week to week, that we get now almost regularly

Our Weekly Panic.

Just now it is the Far Eastern question, at another time the West African problem, or the coming war between the United States and Spain, or the trouble in the Transvaal. It is not for me to enter at length into these political questions, although unfortunately every one interested in stocks and shares opens the newspapers morning after morning in fear and trembling that some fresh disaster may have happened. To this extreme state of nervousness the sensational Press has very largely contributed, and it is not only in this case a question of the halfpenny papers, but even the steady-going Times, the custodian of the interests of capital, has of late adopted so menacing a tone, especially on the Far Eastern question, that it was quite surprising to hear from Mr. Curzon that Great Britain does not look upon the position in China with the apprehensions of the Thunderer, and that the British Government is keeping its head cool. But when it is not the Times it is some other highly respectable daily organ which preaches war in this or that part of the world, and I should advise my readers to take all these vapourings cum grano. Just at present it does not look as if the Chinese problem would lead to war, and from the terms of the Chinese loan, it is obvious that England has secured most effective safeguards, and a lien upon one of the most prosperous portions of the Celestial Empire. Why should she want to grab more? That the West African question will be settled peacefully between France and this country I do not doubt, and the latest Transvaal rumours of a coming insurrection are so utterly absurd that in ordinary times they would not have obtained the slightest credence. So considerable a "Bear" account has, moreover, been piled up in the Kaffir Circus, that any day may bring a squeeze. The strained relations between the United States and Spain are an unpleasant fact, which has already sent many a shiver through Wall-street, and reduced prices to panic level. I do not pretend to predict what will happen, but, according to the most respectable newspaper correspondents, there is still a prospect of war being avoided, and if so, the ursine party in the Yankee Market will have to suffer severely. The money position is somewhat doubtful, as in addition to the Chinese Loan various other Foreign Government issues will be made, and the United States are mopping up a good deal of gold. We may thus see yet greater scarcity, and possibly a 3½ per cent. Bank rate. Much, however, depends upon the action of the Imperial Bank of Germany in connection with the new Chinese Loan, as its stock of gold is large, and it could easily afford to part with a few millions. The Mining Markets have shown great weakness, which has not been confined to the Kaffir Circus; but the outlook is brightening, especially as the past disastrous account has been got over so satisfactorily. Considering the troubled times, the success of the Lipton issue has been marvellous, it having been subscribed to the extent of £30,000,000. The issue has undoubtedly been engineered with consummate skill, yet I have great misgivings as regards the Industrial department generally, in which a large "Bull" market has grown up, while the over-capitalisation of many undertakings must prove a source of weakness when pressure arises.

Home Rails—A Favourable Outlook.

Were it not for the political anxieties, we should doubtless have had an improvement in the Home Railway department, for not only is trade generally in a prosperous condition, but large sums are being spent by the Government on the Navy, and nothing could be better than the traffics of the past week. An increase is shown of £63,562 in the case of all the Companies, bringing up the gain for the nine weeks to £238,000, and this increase comes on the top of very large gains in 1897 over 1896. The returns, in fact, represent an increase of £113,000 over the 1896 figures. Some of the best traffics for the week were those of the North-Western, showing a gain of £10,588, of the Caledonian with £4,738, the Brighton with £3,475, and the South-Eastern with £2,618 increase. Prices, moreover, are moderate, and Dover "A" at their present quotation of 109 are an excellent purchase. The same can also be said of North-Western at 198, and of Great Northern Deferred at 52¼. There has been little doing in Chathams and in Great Eastern. Great Central stocks, on the other hand, have been very firm, and are being picked up by far-seeing investors, more particularly the 1894 Ordinary in the neighbourhood of 40. The North British dividend has been announced at the rate of 1¼ per cent., with £800 carried forward, which compares with the same rate last year, and £1,500 forward. This was quite as good as had been expected by the market, and North British Deferred have been well maintained at 43¼. Under ordinary circumstances, the declaration would probably have caused an improvement. Caledonian Deferred Ordinary (Coras) have firmed up to 56⅜, which is still a low figure, and at this the stock yields nearly 4 per cent. per annum, a dividend of 2 per cent. having still to be deducted. Metropolitans have been steady, and although Districts declined at one time in sympathy with Home Railway stocks generally, they are again on the up-grade. Central London Railway shares have been a steady market, the fully-paid Ordinary at 10¾, the partly-paid Ordinary at 6¾, the Preferred at 1¾, the Deferred at 4⅞. A considerable investment business is being transacted in these.

The Yankee Market—A Rally.

It is no use going into particulars of the excellent traffics and satisfactory dividend announcements which are being published as regard Yankee Rails, as the political position dominates everything. Otherwise I should have mentioned, as "Bull" factors, the declaration of the Milwaukee dividend for the half-year of 2 per cent, with a ½ per cent. bonus, thus bringing this Company on a regular 5 per cent. basis. Then, again, the Nebraska rate decision is of exceptional importance, and will greatly benefit the American railroads. At present it has been altogether passed over. A further heavy set-back has been caused in American rails by all the various rumours of a coming outbreak of war between the United States and Spain, and a very considerable "Bear" account has doubtless been piled up in Wall-street. On this side it has not been judged wise to go very heavily on the "short" side, as it is apprehended that even the outbreak of war has been discounted by the very large sales that have been effected; and there is just the chance, and a very fair chance too, of matters after all not coming to a head, and of war thus being avoided. President McKinley has so far given proof of statesmanlike qualities, and it may be hoped that he will hesitate before precipitating the United States into war, which, although it would doubtless end in the victory of the Americans, would by no means be a walk-over, and would damage the interests of the country very considerably. But it is useless to foreshadow events. If the latter shape themselves peacefully there would be a sharp revival. If not, there would be more spasms in Wall-street, and all the same finally a recovery. In fact, a rally is at the time of writing in progress. The outlook concerning the rate war between the Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific Companies has distinctly improved, as, apparently owing to severe pressure being brought to bear upon the Canadian Pacific management by the German shareholders, this Company has declared itself ready to submit the matter to arbitration. Now that the American market is in so agitated a condition, the more pacific outlook between the Canadian Companies does not help the shareholders much, as prices, after improving, are on the down grade again, Canadian Pacifics being quoted 82¾ xd., Grand Trunk First Prefs. 64½, the Guaranteed 73.

Foreigners and South Americans.

Inter-bourse securities are still under the shadow of the trouble with the coulisse, and are likely to remain dull for some time longer, although the proposals for the reform of the Bourse will probably be considerably modified by the Senate, which, moreover, will doubtless delay the matter. The other unfavourable influences have been the severe falls in Spanish and in Brazilians. All kinds of rumours have been current, but the report that the next Spanish coupon would be paid in pesetas has been officially contradicted. A great deal will, however, depend upon developments as regards the relations with the United States. Possibly the supporters of Spain amongst the haute finance in Paris will give further financial help, in which case the coupon might once again be paid in full. In the meantime, the quotation has fallen to 52⅞. As regards Brazilians, the 1889 Loan at one time touched 51, from which there has been a recovery to 55¼. It is impossible to tell yet whether there was anything in the rumours of financial difficulties; but the fact that Messrs. Rothschild bought a large block which had been hanging over the Paris Bourse would suggest the fact that trouble will be averted. In fact, it is now officially announced that the funds for the payment of the next coupon are already in hand. Argentine Government bonds have also been affected by the political unrest, the Funding Loan being quoted 87½, the 1886 Loan 88¾, Buenos Ayres Water and Drainage bonds 70¼. Argentine Railway stocks have been weak, and sales have again been effected in reduction of the "Bull" account. Buenos Ayres Great Southern Ordinary are lower at 150, Buenos Ayres and Rosario at 70½, while Central Argentine have given way to 79½, and Cordoba Central (Central Northern Section) Income Debenture stock is quoted 49. The strength of Uruguay bonds has again been the feature, and the Old Loan has risen to 46¼, the New Loan to 57½. Advices from Monte Video continue favourable. Very little change has taken place in other South American stocks, and both Perus and Mexican Sixes are steady.

The Kaffir Circus—Canards and "Bears."

The South African market has passed very creditably through the last settlement. Heavy differences had to be met, but no trouble ensued, with the exception of one small failure, that of a jobber not in a large way of business. Of course, a great deal of assistance has been given with that esprit de corps, which is one of the best characteristics of members of the Stock Exchange. After the carry-over had been completed, prices showed a tendency to rally, but the improvement was arrested, and a fresh spasm created, by a number of unfavourable cable reports from the Transvaal. The talk about an incipient insurrection in Johannesburg is, however, so utterly absurd that it is surprising that any one should credit it. Much has been made also of some utterance of President Kruger, who, when speaking in support of a scheme for the cold storage of meat, was reported to have said that troublesome times were ahead, and that they were dependent upon foreign countries for their provisions. Then again, ex-Chief Justice Kotze is sending a letter to Mr. Chamberlain, which the latter will submit to the law officers, although I fail to see why this country should interfere with the internal affairs of the Transvaal. I hear, moreover, from well-informed private sources that all the talk about a coming revolution in Johannesburg is absolutely unfounded. This is confirmed by a special cablegram received at the London office of the Johannesburg Standard and Diggers' News, to the following effect:—

Johannesburg, March 12, 6 p.m.

The town has been inundated with cables from London anxiously inquiring as to the political situation in the Transvaal. It is stated in these telegrams that rumours are abroad to the effect that another raid is imminent, that the Republic is going to war upon the subject of the suzerainty, and that either a tax is to be levied upon company dividends and the gold output, or that an aggressive resolution is about to be adopted by the First Volksraad on Monday. All these statements are the merest fabrication, evidently composed for "Bear" purposes, and have not a shadow of foundation in truth. The attitude of the Government is absolutely pacific.

That the ursine party has a great deal to do with the recent disquieting rumours that have been set about is obvious, and there has now been created so considerable a "Bear" position that the smallest budget of favourable news must act strongly upon the market. There has been a great deal of discussion of the position of a well-known South African financier, who at one time had amassed a considerable fortune, and who very recently, having made very large losses in American Rails and in South Africans, got into rather a dangerous position. As far as I can learn, he has closed his account, the various blocks of his South African shares being taken over by a leading firm, and I hear, moreover, that he has a large portion of his fortune left. The latter news has been received with much satisfaction, as he is generally popular. The chief "Bear" attack has been made upon Rand Mines, East Rands, and Consolidated Goldfields, and although the lower-priced shares have receded in sympathy, the decline has not assumed large proportions. The three first-mentioned stocks, however, happen to be connected with the most powerful groups in the South African department, and whenever the leaders consider the time ripe, they will doubtless be able to pull prices up. Recent setbacks have certainly not been justified by the position of the mining industry in the Transvaal; and although the February crushings show a decrease for the whole of the Republic of 15,339 oz. over January, this is by no means unsatisfactory, in view of the shorter working period. The total output of the Witwatersrand mines was 297,975 oz., against 313,826 oz. in January. I cannot help thinking that we must be nearly at the end of the slump, and that on the contradiction of the rumours of political trouble in the Transvaal, prices will harden again. The present is certainly an excellent time for investors to buy to a moderate extent shares in high-class mines, from the point of view of their dividend-earning capacity. Reports from the Randfontein give particulars of the rich leader, which is from 4 in. to 6 in. wide, and at times assays as high as 6 oz. 7 dwt. Other banket reefs average 5 dwt. Although, owing to the scarcity of native labour, the yields of most of the mines of this group were reduced, it is now stated that everything is progressing satisfactorily. Diamond shares have moved in sympathy with gold-mining shares, and De Beers, which have been affected by the trouble in Paris and by the death of Mr. Woolf Joel, are again lower. New Jagersfontein stand at 7⅝.

The Death of Mr. Woolf Joel.

Like a bolt from the blue came on Monday evening the news of the assassination of Mr. Woolf Joel, of Messrs. Barnato Brothers. He fell a victim to a blackmailer who shot him in his office on receiving a refusal to his demand. The occurrence is inexpressibly sad, not only because Mr. Joel was a young man who had achieved a brilliant career, and had attained the rank of millionaire at a very early age, but also from the fact that the life of his uncle, the late Mr. B. I. Barnato, not long ago came to an untimely end through drowning. In the City the melancholy intelligence was received with every expression of regret, Mr. Woolf Joel having been a very popular man. I join in expressing my heartfelt sympathy with the family, especially with Mrs. Joel, who is at present with her baby son at Cape Town, Mr. Harry Barnato, Messrs. Sol Joel and Jack Barnato. In consequence of the scare which was produced by speculators selling down the shares in which Messrs. Barnato are interested, notably Johannesburg Consolidated Investment and Barnato Consols, I have made diligent inquiry, and I am able to state on the best authority that not a share will be sold, either for the account of Messrs. Barnato Brothers or for any of the financial companies with which they are connected. Official announcements have, moreover, been sent to the Press to the effect that no change will be caused by the sad occurrence in the policy or business of Messrs. Barnato Brothers and of the various Barnato Companies. Mr. Woolf Joel's able co-operation will doubtless be missed, but the various enterprises have now reached a point at which fostering care is no longer so necessary as it was in their earlier history. Mr. Sol Joel, moreover, who has charge of the firm's South African business, is an able man and thoroughly acquainted with all the details. He will continue to act on the other side, while Mr. Harry Barnato and Mr. Jack Joel will co-operate here. I may as well mention that in the late Mr. B. I. Barnato's will a special proviso was made that no reduction in stocks and shares was to take place. This still holds good, and will be acted upon, the other members of the Barnato and Joel families merely succeeding to the estate. As regards the Johannesburg Consolidated Investment Company, it is presided over by an influential board, and managed by experienced officials, Sir W. L. Young, Bart., being general manager, and Mr. Tom Honey secretary.

Golden West Australia.

Notwithstanding a whole crop of rumours as regards difficulties that were expected, the West Australian department has passed almost unscathed through a very difficult settlement. Of course, a considerable transfer from weak to strong hands has taken place. For instance, the temporary weakness of Lake View Consols and London and Globes is attributable to the fact that 10,000 of the former and 30,000 were taken over from a firm which could carry the same no longer. Such changes, however, should really place the market into a healthier position, and I should not be surprised to see an early recovery. The following is my usual list of the week's crushings:—

—	Tons of Ore Crushed.	Oz. of Gold.	Assay of Tailings per ton.
Lake View Consols	4,583	4,485½	12 dwt.
,, ,, (Cyanide)	3,257	2,690¾	2½ dwt.
,, ,, (Concentrates)	10	220	—
East Murchison United	1,290	1,395	6½ dwt.
Sons of Gwalia	960	1,139	23 dwt.
Great Boulder Perseverance	259	769	—
,, ,, ,,	760	807	—
Wealth of Nations	270	256	—
Sherlaw's Gold	123	119	—
,, ,, (Concentrates)	—	117	—
,, ,,	330	140	—
Hannan's Virginia	400	102	—
Consolidated Murchison	308	320	—
Mount Malcolm Prop	529	474	—
Weld-Hercules	216	125	2 dwt.
Lady Loch	60	58½	9 dwt.
Menzies Lady Sherry	93	209	—

The Lake View output has, of course, been affected by the circumstance that the old battery has not been working. On the other hand, it is stated in the cablegram that the additional ten stamps are now working well. These are new stamps that have been erected, and should greatly increase the March output. The January total was 7,554 oz., the February result, as above detailed, 7,396 oz., and the March return may be expected to exceed 10,000 oz. Another dividend of 10s. per share by the Lake View Consols Company has now been declared. The Wealth of Nations is to the front with a small but satisfactory crushing. This is one of the sub-companies of the London and Globe which is to be amalgamated in the Standard Exploration Company. As I anticipated, the various Companies are now falling into line, the shareholders, by large majorities, giving acceptance to the London and Globe proposals for amalgamation, rather than entering upon reconstructions. So far, the Wealth of Nations, Hannan's Golden Group, Hannan's Golden Treasure, and Wealth of Nations Extended shareholders have passed resolutions to this effect, and there remain now to be consulted the Golden Crown, Mainland Consols, and Paddington Consols shareholders. If they act up to their own best interests they will also fall into line. Mr. Whitaker Wright, the Managing Director of the London and Globe Finance Corporation, has addressed an exhaustive circular to all the shareholders, which clearly sets forth all the objects and advantages of the amalgamation. Realisations in New Ivanhoe, in anticipation of the settlement to take place this week, have caused a temporary fall in these shares to $4\frac{3}{4}$; but I venture to predict that they will not remain for long at this very moderate level, and that purchases now made will yield good results, this being a mine in every respect equal in merit to the Lake View Consols. The W.A. Market Trust group has displayed considerable strength throughout the recent weakness, and Northern Territories have well maintained best part of their advance at $4\frac{7}{16}$. West Australian Loan and General Finance at 2, and West Australian Joint Stock Founders' shares at 1 to $1\frac{1}{8}$ are being steadily picked up by investors. It is reported that the West Australian Loan and General Finance Company has in 1897 made a profit of £192,000. Great Boulder Proprietary remain dull at 20s., but Central Boulder are firm. Hannan's Proprietary have been rather easier at 15s. 3d., but a circular has now been issued to the shareholders, informing them that negotiations have already been completed for the sale of three of the leases owned by the Company, namely, the Ironsides North, the Hidden Treasure South, and the Golden Gully North. The Ironsides North lease has been disposed of to an Australian Company, having a capital of £100,000 in shares of £1 each, and this Company receives as consideration 25,000 fully-paid shares. A condition of the sale was that £12,000 of a proposed working capital of £36,000 was provided in cash. This Company is represented on the Board of the Ironsides North Company by Mr. H. C. Callahan, as a Director, and by Mr. C. S. Stafford (the Hannan's Proprietary Company's manager) as Managing Director. The terms of sale of the Hidden Treasure South and Golden Gully North leases, comprising 25 acres, are that the Company is to receive 65,000 fully-paid shares of £1 each in a Company with an authorised capital of £150,000, of which £20,000 is to be an available cash working capital. The Directors have, according to this circular, been much influenced in making these arrangements by the consideration that each of these two sales will enable development work to be done, without cost to the Hannan's Proprietary, which will much benefit the adjoining leases. West Australian Goldfields have been dull at $1\frac{7}{8}$, and Hampton Plains have been barely steady at $\frac{13}{16}$. A cablegram from the Victoria Deep leads property of the West Australian Gold Fields is to the following effect:—"Drills timber reserve and north of same bottomed on gold." By the way, even in these bad times members of the House will have some fun, and one day last week much amusement was caused by some of the wags of the West Australian market introducing "Southern Terrors" as a new share, dealings in which became very animated between the conspirators up to $1\frac{1}{2}$. Several innocent members were caught, and one, the brother of a shrewd and popular jobber, had got a very nice book in "Southern Terrors" before he discovered that it was all a hoax. From the Field's Find property favourable news is to hand, according to which the ore is improving, and assays go from 4 to 6 oz. per ton. Lady Shenton shares have been fairly steady at $2\frac{3}{8}$, notwithstanding the general weakness, and the news from the property is in every respect satisfactory. Whenever the dulness passes away from this market, a sharp rise in these shares may be looked for. A cablegram has been received from Messrs. H. J. Saunders & Co., the agents of the Florence Gold Mine in Western Australia, which bears very favourably upon both the Lady Shenton and Florence mines, as the lode in question is the Lady Shenton Reef, which had previously been traced to the boundary of the Florence. The cablegram is to the following effect:—

> Manager reports we have struck reef 35 ft. past Shenton boundary. The width of reef is 2 ft., showing gold. Have not yet got to footwall. Will telegraph when through.

Brownhill Central are easier at $1\frac{9}{16}$, and Golden Horseshoes have reacted to $6\frac{11}{16}$, while Burbank's Birthday Gift have shown a dull tone at $1\frac{7}{16}$, notwithstanding fairly satisfactory returns. Great Boulder Main Reef have declined to $1\frac{1}{8}$, and Golden Links have been a weak market at $\frac{3}{4}$. I have all along stated that the reports concerning the last-mentioned property were greatly exaggerated. By the way, the Western Australian Bank, although a comparatively small institution, is doing an excellent business, and the net profits, including £23,360 brought forward, were for the past half-year £41,611. The large sum of £25,000 is carried to reserve, and it is nevertheless possible to pay a dividend at the rate of $17\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. per annum, and to carry forward £7,861.

Indian, Australasian, and British Columbian Mines.

Indian mines have moved irregularly, and while Ooregum, Mysore Gold, and Balaghat have risen, there have been declines in Road Blocks, Champion Reefs, Nine Reefs, Goldfields of Mysore, and several others. In Australian mines, other than West Australian, Mount Lyell are lower at $13\frac{5}{8}$; but there has been an improvement in Mount Lyell South. Amongst Charters Towers shares Lady Carrington have hardened, but Brilliant and St. George United are lower. From the New Australian Broken Hill a cablegram is to hand stating that two tons containing 5,600 ozs. of silver have been obtained, and that the prospects are decidedly encouraging. This mine, it will be remembered, gave splendid results some years ago, when all at once the lode petered out. Only small patches have since been discovered, but now they have evidently struck a very rich patch. The question is now how long this will last. In the New Zealand section Kapanga have improved, but all the other movements have been downward, declines more especially taking place in Taitapu, Hauraki, Komata Reefs, and Waihi. In British Columbian mines, movements have been rather irregular. While Hall Mines, Klondike Bonanza, New Golden Twins, and London and British Columbia Goldfields have hardened, there has been a slight setback in Klondike and British Columbia Goldfields, in New Goldfields of British Columbia, and in Fairview. British America Corporation shares have receded again to 2s. 3d. premium, but I am informed that a most important circular will shortly be issued to the shareholders, in which the Hon. C. H. Mackintosh will give particulars of the company's holdings. The news which Mr. Mackintosh has brought leaves no doubt about the great future in store for this Corporation. With reference to the Waverley and Tangier Mines, it is stated that a further shipment of ore, consisting of $17\frac{1}{4}$ tons of the estimated value of £395, was despatched to Liverpool on February 19, and that two cartloads of Waverley ore have been shipped to the smelter at Everett. In Copper mines Rio Tinto have given way, although not closing at the lowest, Paris having recovered from its nervousness. Tharsis and Cape Copper, as well as Anaconda, are, however, lower, while the heaviest setback has occurred in Mountain Coppers, which are down $\frac{3}{8}$. I have always warned my readers that this would come about. In the general foreign section Tolima "A" and "B" are lower, and St. John del Rey have also receded, but Santa Anna and Argentine Concessions have hardened.

Ristona Gold, Silver, and Lustre Metallic Paints are beautiful for decorative purposes. They are used on embossed materials, such as Lincrusta, and furniture; also greatly increasing the artistic effect of stained linen, silk, or canvas fancy work, screens, book-covers, photo-frames, &c. Bottles, 6d. & 1s.—M'Caw, Stevenson, & Orr, Ltd., 29, Cannon-st., E.C., & Belfast.

The Commemoration Syndicate Scandal.

When, in April, 1897, great efforts were being made by certain shady promoters to create a boom in Commemoration and Jubilee Syndicates, launched for the purpose of dealing in window-seats and other positions on the line of route of the Royal Procession, I used my utmost endeavours to dissuade the public from parting with their money for this purpose. In TRUTH of April 1, 1897, I specially warned my readers against joining the Commemoration Syndicate, and I drew attention at the time to the names of the Directors of this ambitious concern, and to the fact that, notwithstanding the handles to some of their names, they did not rank amongst City capitalists. I may as well repeat the names as I then gave them:—Sir William Gordon Macgregor, Bart., Dagmar House, Leyton; the Hon. A. E. Henley, Park Village West; Mr. F. E. Burnett, 11, Northumberland Park, Tottenham; and Mr. Eliot Miller, 19, Clarendon-gardens, W. I do not know whether these persons are still living at the same addresses. If so, they will probably have a hot time of it. As regards Sir William Gordon MacGregor, Bart., it was stated in TRUTH some time ago that this necessitous gentleman applied to another Baronet for assistance. A fine figurehead indeed for a board of directors! Notwithstanding my repeated warnings, and they were many and often repeated, the public subscribed nearly the whole of the capital of £10,000 to this precious Commemoration Syndicate. After the Jubilee Day I urged the shareholders to bestir themselves, and call the directors to account so as to obtain the return of some of their money. But there evidently never was any chance of a penny being returned out of this bottomless pit. The report of the Official Receiver, in whose hands the concern finally landed when there was no longer any chance of getting money returned, is a most melancholy one. The total amount subscribed to the Company was £9,904, out of a nominal capital of £10,000. The whole of this has been got rid of, and £368 more, while the assets consist merely of £136, amongst which cash figures at five pence. No proper books or accounts were kept, but it appears that the Company undertook to pay for amount of hire of sites, together with the other Companies affiliated to it, enormous sums amounting altogether to £29,025, for which only £4,896 was realised. My readers will recollect that when the promoters had succeeded in obtaining a full subscription to the first Syndicate they started the Commemoration Syndicates, Nos. 2, 3, and 4. So anxious were the foolish public to take shares in these rotten concerns that £11,794 was received for No. 2 Company, which had a capital of only £10,000, while No. 3 Company obtained £9,050, and No. 4 Company £6,031—a total of £37,679, the bulk of which has disappeared. The promoters, Tarrant and Fry, the former of whom is well-known to readers of TRUTH owing to his connection with the firm of Frank Tarrant & Co., the syndicate touts, joined the board and obtained large salaries. Both these men are at present undergoing terms of penal servitude on charges of fraud in connection with other undertakings. Mr. Jules Inger obtained £2,800 under agreements for carrying out negotiations for the purpose of the jubilee procession. Subscriptions were in May invited from the shareholders for funds to provide wines and refreshments for the seatholders, for which £2,437 more was obtained from these gullible persons. These amounts were paid into separate banking accounts, and were not devoted to the purposes for which they were obtained, but were used for the general expenses of the business, and all the comfort these foolish subscribers can obtain is to prove as general creditors in the liquidation. One of the most impudent tricks in connection with this matter was the payment of £4,000 to the London Commercial Investment Corporation for the insurance of the life of the Queen, this concern being promoted and controlled by Tarrant and Fry, but having no subscribed capital. Fry states that this sum was expended in insurance with various offices and at Lloyds, and that at the date of the procession he had insured the Queen's life for £65,000; but no proof of this statement is forthcoming. It appears that the directors drew "Bearer" cheques on each of the banking accounts, which were handed to Fry, who paid them into his own banking account. The Official Receiver makes some severe remarks upon the negligence of the directors, which seems to him to have been so gross as to amount to fraud, and it is satisfactory to find that a public examination of the promoters and directors is to be held. I should think that the directors have placed themselves in a most serious position, but nothing can now be done to get the money back for the deluded shareholders, and their chief regret must be that they did not read TRUTH, and, if they did, that they did not heed my oft-repeated and emphatic warnings.

New Enterprises and Issues.

The prospectuses of the following new enterprises and issues have been placed before the public during the week:—

Stanley Gibbons, Limited.—This Company has been formed to acquire the business of Stanley Gibbons, Limited, foreign stamp dealers and publishers, of 391, Strand. The share capital is fixed at £75,000, and 900 Five per cent. First Debentures of £50 each.

Johns, Sons, & Watts, Limited.—With a share capital of £85,000, divided into 55,000 Six per Cent. Preference and 30,000 Ordinary shares of £1 each, and £35,000 Five per Cent. debentures, which have issued in exchange for similar debentures in the old Company—this Company will acquire the business of Johns, Son, & Watts, Limited, plain and fancy box makers, &c., of City-road, E.C., and Old Ford, E.

This is a reconstruction of a Company formed as recently as 1894, and stated to be doing a large and profitable business. If such is the case, money could have been obtained by other means than reconstructing the Company.

The Crowborough District Water Company.—Issue of 2,364 Ordinary shares of £10 each, balance of the authorised share capital of £30,000.

The United Breweries of Western Australia, Limited.—Capital, £150,000, divided into 75,000 Six per Cent. Cumulative Preference shares of £1 each, and 75,000 Ordinary shares of £1 each. This Company has been formed for the purpose of acquiring as going concerns two brewery businesses in Western Australia, carried on respectively by the Stanley Brewery Company, Limited, Perth, and the Port Brewery Company, Limited, Fremantle, and it is intended to further develop and extend the same by the erection and equipment of a lager beer brewery.

My Letter Box.

The following are replies to inquiries from various correspondents:—

Government, &c., Bonds.

S. N.—Thanks; you are quite right. Uruguay bonds are almost the only stock which has weathered the panic well. I am glad you took my advice to buy the same when low down, and you have now an excellent profit. G. W. R.—The outlook as regards Brazilian bonds is at present very much involved, owing to the financial weakness in Paris.

Banks, Trusts, and Financial.

H. J. B.—I cannot reply by letter. I do not assume any responsibility with regard to the advertisements which appear in the columns of TRUTH, and should strongly advise you to deal only through members of the Stock Exchange. Situated as you are, you ought not to speculate at all. J. H., Cambridge.—Surely you cannot expect advice of this kind from me! If you subscribe to journals which disappear you have only yourself to blame. There are many mushrooms of this kind in journalism. D. V. D., Old Burlington-street.—This kind of advice is always suspicious, and I recommend you to have nothing to do with it. A. R., Oxford.—I have repeatedly expressed the opinion that the actual facts do not bear out the promises made in the prospectuses of the Provident Association of London. Least of all do they do so in the case of the proposed purchase of a house. You will do far better with a respectable building society. J. T.—What you require has been forwarded in your envelope, as requested. G. A. H.—What you require has, at your request, been forwarded in your envelope. You will have to make haste, as the firm in question seems to be in difficulties. Glen B.—1. Doubtful. 2. Yes, I think he could claim. 3. No; there is no market for this stock.

Home Rails.

Rover.—Yes, Dover "A" and Coras are good value at the present level of prices, and you might avail yourself of the depression to buy the same for investment. Neptune.—I should think that you could not do better than put the money into Great Central 1894 Ordinary stock, which is a very promising lock-up. So are, by the way, Districts. I explained the position of both Companies in last week's issue under "Home Rails."

American and Foreign Rails.

Lachasse.—Yes, I think that the proposed investment in Reading General Mortgage bonds, Illinois Central Gold bonds, and in Central London Railway Ordinary shares, is a suitable one, especially if you buy on a smart reaction, but you can no longer buy Central London fully-paid Ordinary at 10⅛. The price is now 10⅞, at which they are still cheap. I published some remarks concerning the Central London Railway in last week's issue under "Home Rails." Great Western stock at the present price of 171, and on the basis of the last year's dividend, yields 3½ per cent. per annum. A. R. P.—The proposal made by the New York Central Company is a good one, and the gold bonds offered are gilt-edged. It is really a question for you to decide as to whether you will keep the Lake Shores or to take the New York Central bonds, but in the present state of the American market the latter are safer, while No. 3 are also, to some extent, risky. Puzzled.—After the heavy fall in Central Argentine I should not advise you to sell. The position of the Company will greatly improve with the better traffics. What I have repeatedly explained is that the price went higher than the actual position warranted, although prospects are good. Waterloo.—I have repeatedly stated that it was not advisable to buy Cordoba Central (Central Northern Section) Income Debenture stock until the traffics improved. The latter have, unfortunately, gone from bad to worse, and the stock has dropped to 48. There is no immediate chance of an improvement, and the best thing you can do is to wait. Ex non com.—Yes, it would be difficult to deal with any advantage in less than ten shares. This applies to both buying and selling. You can, of course, buy a smaller quantity, but you will find it more difficult to sell them again. John Gilpin.—The position is very doubtful at present and I should not advise a purchase. Katherine.—You should hold your American Rails. There might be another spasm, but the position is more settled.

Mining Shares.

Sol.—This is not a mine, but a South African finance Company, which should do pretty well, and the shares are not dear. Avonmore.—1. I have done my very best to rouse the shareholders of the Umtoli Gold Reefs to combine against the Directors and vendors, but have unfortunately met with great indifference on their part. 2. Reconstructed, and in a good way. I do not advise purchase of Nos. 3 to 6. Enaf.—A fair West Australian finance shares, but just at present things are very flat, and I would not advise a purchase now. Lem.—1. I should not advise sale of London and Globes now. 2. No doubt a further dividend will be paid for the past year. Doreen.—1. A fair Deep Level share. 2. Just reconstructed, and promising. 3 and 4. I do not like these New Zealand shares. 5. Cheap now, and a fair lock-up. I am glad to find that my remarks on the amalgamation scheme meet with your approval. Disappointed.—1. I do not recommend a sale of S. A. Gold Trusts now. 2. Yes, De Beers are recovering now. 3. I would not buy just now. 4. Yes, they should be kept. F. F. F.—1. Yes, there is reason for stating that Hannan's Props. have been taken in hand by a leading group, and the price will doubtless improve again. 2. Impossible to say. If you have a good profit to take you should secure it. Success.—I am indeed glad to hear that my advice has proved in every instance a success, but unfortunately it is not possible to be always successful. 1. I think West Australian Market Trusts and West Australian Joint Stock Trust Founders the most promising amongst the shares mentioned by you. Quadrant.—No option but to hold until the present depression in the South African market has passed away. Duphir.—Yes, I think East Rands and Johnnies are at present a very promising purchase. Bombay.—After the recent setback I should certainly advise you to keep your London and Globes and Ivanhoes. W. A. S.—I do not think much of the West Australian mines mentioned, Nos. 1 and 2. Sell if you can. Colne.—1. January 10,163 oz., February 9,081 oz. 2. Yes. 3. Certainly hold Simmer and Jack. Ben Slioch.—There is no option but to hold the shares Nos. 1 and 2 for the present. They may come round again, although they are not particularly promising. Spero.—I think you had better hold these shares until the meeting of shareholders has taken place, when no doubt some statements will be made which will put the price better, and enable you to sell at a higher level. Ibex.—You should hold your South African shares, as when the market generally recovers they will also improve. H. T. H.—Central Boulder are likely to improve, as the news from the property is favourable. Certainly hold. Okota.—The decline in London and Globes (1) is due to exceptional circumstances, and you should hold. Also keep Nos. 2 to 5, amongst which Florence (4) and British America Corporation (5) are very promising. Turner.—The Company you inquire about is still in existence as a trading concern, but I am afraid it is not doing well. Tharsis Copper shares stand at 7⅛. F. T. G. — The Peak Hill Goldfields is a promising Company, but as you have doubtless a large profit you had better clear the same. These are not the times to wait for excessive profits. Ajax-Minerva.—1. The Achilles Goldfields are ever in the market with fresh reconstructions, and I do not advise supplying further capital. 2. I do not approve of this Yukon concern. R. W. G.—A fair Indian mining risk, but no catch. Stair.—1. A fair mining risk, they may improve again. 2. London and Western Australian Exploration shares should certainly be held for a rise. Opinion.—No option but to hold all your mining shares Nos. 1 to 10, amongst which Nos. 1, 2, 5, 6, and 10 are very promising. You might add the following to your holding: — Ivanhoe, Lady Shenton, Florence, Hannan's Props., and W.A. Joint Stock Trust Founders. Lee.—1. You should hold London and Globes now. 2. There appears to be no option but to join this reconstruction and sell after. Grass.—Certainly hold Consolidated Murchison (1), Florence (2), and London and Globe (3). Grantham.—1. Yes, you should average London and Globes now. 2. No; you had better take a further interest in the new undertaking, the Standard Exploration Company. 3. Hannan's Props. are in a very promising position, and they should be held. A. B. C.—No reason to sell Boulder No. 1 at present price. An Irish Ass.—I am afraid it is not yet advisable to buy more. J. McI.—The mine is apparently doing well, and I do not advise selling now. Amongst the others mentioned, the British America Corporation is the most promising, but you might also buy Ivanhoes, which are temporarily cheap. Eric.—I cannot possibly tell you when Lady Shentons will advance, but it will not probably be long. There is every prospect of your getting a good profit.

Industrial Shares.

Tennis.—I meant Bovril, Limited, as the shares which I consider will improve. After the recent occurrences I really could not tell you anything special about the other Company mentioned by you. C. B.—There is no fresh news concerning these Breweries, but they are not flourishing just now. Obviously, the present critical position must interfere with their prosperity. Jumbo.—I should think that there is sufficient security in the Savoy Hotel to render the Debenture stock altogether safe. The wholesale dismissal of employees has temporarily disturbed the market for the shares, but possibly this was in the interest of the Company. Under the circumstances, you ought not to sell your Debenture stock. Scotia.—1. There is no market for Rosbach shares. 2. Local concern, and no information available here. Reader T. M.—Cable property of this kind is by no means progressive. There will doubtless be great competition one of these days for the Eastern telegraph business. Shamus.—The premium is very high, and the capitalisation is equally so. I do not recommend the investment, unless you can get in at the issue price. A. R. H.—The stocks in question are fair investments; but perhaps, under the circumstances, Harrod's Stores would suit you best. Ednam.—All the shares mentioned by you are fair investments; but perhaps C is preferable to A and B. Eta.—The Debentures seem to be safe enough at present; but when a company is not in a progressive position, it is not even wise to retain the Debentures. C. D.—1. A fair investment of the kind, and no reason to sell. 2. Hudson Bays are far too speculative now, and you may just as well take your profit. 3. A fair investment of the kind, but speculative. Cerioca.—There is, no doubt, something in the point you raise; but I do not hold a favourable view of the concern. Hastings.—There is no market for Pyramidical Railway shares, and I do not think there ever will be. I warned my readers against having anything to do with this concern at the outset. The documents are returned in your envelope.

Mixed Investments.

T. S. O'C.—1. A fair Brewery investment of the kind. 2. North British Deferred look promising, but personally I prefer Coras (Caledonian Deferred). A. T.—1. The present seems to be a suitable time for buying Coras. 2. The price is now only 56½, and in due time, a rise of 4 or 5 points would be quite on the cards. 4. Yes. 5. Ivanhoe shares should improve after the special settlement, which has been fixed for the 17th inst. Bernard.—No, I do not advise a purchase of Gold Reefs of West Africa, or of the other shares mentioned by you. If you want to invest in mines, you had better select high-class shares. Jasmine.—Yes, I consider British American Corporation (1) and West Australian Market Trust (4) very promising; also West Australian Joint Stock Trust Founders at 1$\frac{1}{16}$. Instead of North British Deferred (5) you should buy Coras. Moses, Sheffield.—Hold your mining shares Nos. 1 to 4 for an advance. I have no favourable opinion of New Seddons, and have always said so. T. T.—1. No; I do not advise purchase of Luipaard's Vlei. 2. I would not advise a purchase of Fish Oil shares, as they are most dangerous. 3 There is every prospect of Hannan's Mount Ferrum improving again. Hold. Buxton.—No option but to hold the mining shares Nos. 1 and 2 for a recovery. The Tyre shares (3) are likely to improve at no distant date. Kingsborough.—1. I do not like Mountain Copper shares. 2. The Indian Government. The present price is quite high enough.

Various Investments.

The course of the Money Market naturally is at present being watched with considerable interest, and in view of the American demand for gold which has developed of late, I fully anticipate an advance in the Bank rate to 3½ per cent., not, perhaps, this week, but probably after the Chinese loan has been launched, as this issue, although not having the Government guarantee, is yet one closely connected with British interests. When the provisions upon which this loan is based come to be fully published, it will be seen that it practically mortgages a large portion of China to this country and to Germany, the latter country, however, playing second fiddle, as the financial control is in British hands. The Chinese loans, which had at one time given way on the various fables which were put about concerning Russian opposition to the new loan, have since recovered, the Six per Cent. Gold loan having rallied to 105, the Five per Cent. Gold loan to 100¼, the Seven per Cent. Silver loan to 100½. Silver does not appear to move down below 25d., and is now quoted 25$\frac{3}{16}$d., while Rupee Paper is steady at 63½. High-class investment stocks, including Consols, were at one time last week subjected to a spasm, owing to the announcement that her Majesty was, through indisposition, compelled to put off her journey to France. The quidnuncs at once jumped to the conclusion that this was merely an excuse, and that the Queen was remaining in England owing to the threatening outlook in foreign politics—as if the Queen of England would stoop to such a subterfuge! Quite a scare was, however, produced by the rumour-mongers, and Consols at one time dropped to 111⅜, from which there has been a recovery to 111¾. Declines were also forced at the time in Home Railway stocks, including the Preference stocks, of which a considerable amount has now also been dislodged owing to the fears of dearer money. In the cycle section very few changes have occurred, and, in fact, this market is quite nominal, all the old spirit having gone out of it, probably never to return. It only wants the fair sex to give up cycling to make the collapse complete, and they alone could really help this department by redoubling their efforts to increase the popularity of this pastime. Such speculative stocks as Allsopp Ordinary have naturally been affected by recent disquieting events, and the price at one time touched 151, recovering but slightly to 151½. Schweppe Deferred are quoted $\frac{9}{16}$ while Bovril Deferred have rallied to 12s. 6d., thus confirming the view which I took last week, that recent sales were by no means due to operations of insiders, but pointed merely to a shake out of weak holders. Welsbach Incandescent Gas stocks do not show any buoyancy, and quotations are merely maintained, the Ordinary at 117½, the Preferred at 101, the Deferred at 22s. 6d. The gamble in Russian Petroleum shares is going on merrily, and, after a sharp relapse, the price has firmed up to 21¼ for the Ordinary and to 11⅛ for the Preferred. The premium on Threads has fizzled away to $\frac{9}{16}$, and Coats have declined to 60. Hudson Bays have been inactive, and remain at about 20¾, while Paquin Ordinary are distinctly firmer at 1⅛, the Prefs. at 4¾, thus pointing to satisfactory trade. Electric shares have been steady but quiet, and business has been reduced to a minimum. I am told that the prospectus of the Company which is to take over the Hydraulic Joint Syndicate, Limited, will be issued within the next few days, and that this Company will be very powerfully backed. In proof of this it is perhaps sufficient to glance at the list of the principal shareholders in the above-mentioned Syndicate, which is an exceptionally strong one, and I should think that, thus powerfully backed, Mr. E. T. Hooley would be able to make the issue a success, if, as is generally believed, the invention is a very valuable one. Elsewhere I am drawing attention to the prosperous half-year which the Western Australian Bank has experienced. The Bank of Australasia has also issued its report, and is able to maintain the same rate of dividend as distributed for some time past, viz., 5 per cent., and to carry forward £18,275. This is one of the leading Australian banks which passed unscathed through the Australian banking crisis. It is always satisfactory when promises made in the prospectus of a converted Company are confirmed by actual results. For the year ended December 31 last the Maypole Company, after writing off the preliminary expenses, is able to pay dividends of 7 per cent. on the Preference, and 5 per cent. on the Ordinary shares. It was pointed out at the ordinary general meeting, held last week, that the sales for the year have nearly trebled those of 1896, which shows that the company is of a progressive character. The Secretary of the Metropolitan United Floral Company, Limited, 137, Northcote-road, Clapham Junction, S.W., is using his utmost endeavours to dispose of 100 Ordinary and 100 Preference shares of his Company. The circulars in which he recommends these shares are of the most glowing character, and are accompanied by a prospectus of the Company, which was apparently floated in June, 1897, with a capital of £15,000. He says that these shares belong to a gentleman who has just met with very heavy losses on the Stock Exchange in Americans and mining securities, being therefore compelled to realise all his holdings, and has thus to throw these shares overboard. Dividends of 16 per cent. on the Preference, and 20 per cent. on the Ordinary, shares are promised in the future, and it is intended to bring out this Company in an enlarged form with a capital of £100,000. If the position is really so good as the secretary represents it to be, it is surprising that the Directors of the Company do not take over the 200 shares themselves. I certainly should not advise any of my readers to do so. The London Co-operative Cab Company is still continuing to send out circulars and prospectuses. As I stated some time ago, I distinctly challenge the "absolute safety" which is claimed for this investment, and the "absence of risk" of which the circulars boast, and I strongly advise my readers not to put their money into this concern. Another syndicate tout has arisen under the name of Browne, Johnson, & Company, bankers and brokers, 39, Lombard-street, London, E.C. These touts boast of profits obtained in various former operations of from £66 10s. to £140 on each £10 share. Of course, the usual claptrap is employed, such as "Prudent speculation is the secret of success—American Rails our speciality." I would strongly advise my readers not to be tempted by these boastful promises. A very peculiar circumstance is that the name adopted by these syndicate touts is very similar to that of the well-known banking firm of Brown, Janson, & Company, of 32, Abchurch-lane, E.C., who are also connected with the United States. This really looks more like design than accident. It is permissible in this connection to refer to the attempts which were made some time ago by outside syndicate touts to convey the impression that they were respectable firms by adopting names similar to those of well-known City firms. Thus, Hartridge & Co., of 1, Southampton-street, Strand, W.C., adopted this name undoubtedly in order that people should think they were connected or identical with the highly-respectable firm of Messrs. W. R. Hartridge & Co., members of the Stock Exchange, of 5, Drapers'-gardens, E.C., while Algernon Borthwick & Co., of Mason's-avenue, E.C., traded under that name no doubt in order to convey the impression that they were connected with Messrs. Borthwick, Wark, & Co., 11, Copthall-court, E.C., the well-known firm of American arbitrage dealers. It is needless to say that the outside firms who traded under these names have since entirely disappeared, leaving very unpleasant traces, while Messrs. W. R. Hartridge & Co., and Messrs. Borthwick, Wark, & Co., of course still occupy a high position amongst respectable City firms.—Your affectionate uncle,

MOSES.

All Rights Reserved.

QUEER STORY.

THE DUCHESS AND THE MONEY-LENDER.

I WONDER how many people have heard of Ephraim Davis, the money-lender. Most people, perhaps, by name. Possibly, more than would care to admit it knew him by acquaintance, in the days when he moved amongst us in the flesh; for it is certain that Ephraim had an extremely large connection in the West End, and I can assert, with authority, that if all the signatures that have at one time or another lain in Ephraim's safe were divulged, quite a series of shocks would be caused in Society at the many unexpected and respectable autographs that have there reposed, in their time, awaiting maturity.

Ephraim was a typical money-lender of the smarter kind. I, myself, in the days of my youth and folly, had dealings with him; and though I knew him to be a rapacious rascal, he used rather to amuse me by his assumed tone of confidential unreserve. In the course of my then visits to him, for purposes of renewal and other, I had many chats with Ephraim, and he used to give me his opinions on borrowers in general and on myself in particular with a certain cynical candour.

"Excuse my saying so," I remember he once remarked to me, "you are a fool, you know, to be borrowing at sixty per cent. But I should be a fool if I were to accommodate you at less than sixty per cent. You offer me no security. Indeed, the fact of your applying to me at all shows that you have no security to offer. I lend you money simply on the strength of your promise. Now what is any borrower's promise worth financially? Not that," said Ephraim, snapping his fingers.

"All the same, I expect you make a good thing out of borrowers' promises," I answered, laughing.

"Yes," he admitted. "I make a good thing. But not a better thing than I ought to do, taking into account the obloquy that I incur by my profession, and the frequent unpleasantness that I have to face. My customers must pay me for that, you know, as well as for the accommodation. We money-lenders have our feelings, after all."

"Which you turn to pecuniary account," I answered, drily.

"Yes," he admitted, with a shrug of his shoulders, "to the tune of an extra twenty per cent."

"Feelings, then, are of some value after all?"

"Undoubtedly—if they are regulated on a strictly financial basis."

"I wish I could make twenty per cent. out of my feelings," I said.

"Then you must cease to spend money, borrowed at sixty per cent., on your feelings," retorted Ephraim, with a queer, meaning look at me that made me wince. I knew to what he was alluding. And, indeed, many less shrewd persons than he had detected my infatuation and rallied me about it. I was a fool, of course, to be in love with another man's wife—and that man my employer. But there! are we not all fools—when we get the chance to indulge our folly? I think I had more excuse than the majority. She was the most divine of women, and a Duchess; and she let me—nay, she encouraged me—to make love to her; of course, within proper limits.

I occupied the post of private secretary to the Duke of Z——, her husband. The Duke was considerably older than his lovely and adorable wife. He was none too well off, I believe, and he was certainly most stingy and parsimonious. His fascinating Duchess often had not so much as a cab-fare in her purse; and many, many's the time I have enjoyed the delicious privilege of paying little personal claims for her out of my own pocket. Many's the time, also, I have ventured to offer her little tokens of my loyal devotion—books and knick-knacks, and sometimes jewellery. On one occasion I gave one hundred pounds for a bracelet which I presented to her. It was a large sum for a man of my means; but I was amply repaid for the expense by the flush of pleasure which overspread her countenance when she opened the case, and by her sweet and artless exclamation—"Oh, Mr. Cordner, I—I—couldn't not have—have—accepted this from any one but you!"

The Duke, in spite of his stinginess, had certain negative virtues. He was not, in the least, suspicious or jealous. I hope I do not create a false impression by saying this, and seem to imply that he had anything to be suspicious or jealous of. He had nothing. Her Grace was an angel who would have shrunk with horror from the slightest idea of an indiscretion; and I would have cut off my right hand rather than have done anything to injure her good name. Still, there are green-eyed tyrants of husbands, who might take a different line — with the churlish idiocy characteristic of such men. It is, therefore, to the Duke's credit that he fully trusted, if he somewhat neglected, his incomparable wife.

His Grace, indeed, was almost entirely occupied with philanthropic work. He had at least fifty benevolent irons in the fire. But his pet iron was a scheme for the rehabilitation of discharged convicts, on which he spent much of the time, attention, and money, that he ought to have bestowed upon his Duchess. She, however, never complained. On the contrary, she always spoke of the Duke in tones of the most perfect wifely respect. Never once, during the long period of my acquaintance with this gracious couple, did I see her fail in any single observance that her conjugal position required of her.

I do not say that she had no little secrets from the Duke. That would be saying more than can be said for any wife in the world, and I have no desire to set up my idol upon a pedestal of impossible perfection. But I do say that all her little secrets were of the most innocent description, and that if there was one among them all to which strait-laced moralists could take exception, this one was distinctly and directly the fault of the Duke himself.

I myself was not aware of this particular secret until I had been in the gracious household for nearly two years, and I found it out by accident in the following manner. I went to Ephraim Davis's one afternoon to renew a promissory note that had fallen due. Just as I was about to enter the outer office, where the money-lender's clerk sat, the door opened and a lady came out. She was thickly veiled, and she passed me hurriedly, without looking up. Perhaps in the semi-gloom of the passage she did not recognise me. But I had recognised her, with a sudden start of surprise. It was my adorable Duchess! Before I had made up my mind whether to speak to her or not, she had vanished through the street door. I did not follow her, but passed on into Ephraim's office.

"Ha, Mr. Cordner," he said to me, as I entered. "Come to renew—eh?"

"If you are agreeable," I said.

"Oh, I'm agreeable enough. On the usual terms, of course."

"I say, Davis," I exclaimed. "I—I—didn't know that you numbered Duchesses among your customers."

"Ah! you have just met your Duchess coming out of this, have you?" replied Ephraim, with a snigger. "Was she taken aback at meeting you on my staircase?"

"I don't know whether she recognised me. She hurried past me in the semi-darkness and did not speak."

"No doubt she hoped you had not twigged her. Ah, well! She needn't mind so very much, after all. She's not the only Duchess of whose autograph I have the honour to be custodian. But you are a man of discretion, Mr. Cordner. You will not talk about this."

"You may rely upon my being enough of a gentleman to hold my tongue where a lady is concerned," I told him. And then I added, "I say, Davis — don't think me impertinent—but—but—has—has her Grace bor——does she owe you much?"

"Hem! I must really decline to answer that question," he said, drily.

"It is a shame of the Duke to drive her to this sort of thing," I exclaimed. "He scarcely lets her have a penny."

"I understand that his Grace parts rather hard," remarked Ephraim, with a grin. "Perhaps, however, he has not a superfluity of the needful to part with."

"No doubt he is badly off—for a Duke. Still, he always has plenty to give to his philanthropic schemes. His name appears in some new subscription list every week."

"Ah, my dear sir. These are his personal extravagances, you see; and it is for their personal extravagances, even more than for their necessities, that people contrive to find money, as long as, by hook or by crook, it is to be found. Haven't you noticed that a man, for instance, whose personal extravagance takes the form of good cigars, somehow always manages to pay cash for these, long after he has given up any attempt to pay his butcher or his grocer?"

"You are a philosopher, Davis."

"I am an observer of human nature, as it appears under stress of financial difficulty," he replied. "In other words, I see my fellow creatures with the paint of honour and the varnish of honesty rubbed off. Why, I would almost venture to say that there isn't a Bishop on the Bench who, if he were seriously embarrassed, wouldn't accommodate his right reverend tongue to any lie for a loan. And the merest boy from the Universities, who is as ignorant as a babe on any ordinary matter of business, will concoct the most plausible and Machiavellian falsehoods to induce us to make him an advance. However, we need not waste time in discussing such obvious truths. About this renewal, now?"

The terms of renewal were duly arranged, and I returned to my quarters in the ducal establishment. The Duchess was dining out. I did not see her again that night. But we met next day at a tête-a-tête luncheon. Before we had concluded that meal, any doubt I might have entertained as to whether her Grace had recognised me yesterday at Ephraim's was set at rest. For she, of her own initiative, though with some evident embarrassment, made an allusion to the rencontre.

"Mr. Cordner," she began, blushing and faltering, "I—I—was not aware till—till—yesterday that you—you—were a cust—that you—you—had—had—dealings with Ephraim Davis."

"You recognised me, then, Duchess?" I said.

"Could I fail to recognise you anywhere?" she murmured, with an emphasis on the you that increased my pulse by at least thirty beats a minute. "But—but—I hurried past you, without appearing to notice you, because I was so confused—so vexed—that one whose respect I value so highly should have—have—seen me—in—that place."

"Surely, your Grace," I exclaimed warmly, "you do not imagine that my esteem for you would be, in any degree, lessened because you had been driven by force of circumstances to borrow a few pounds from a Jew. More especially as I myself was in the same predicament."

"I—I—hated doing it," she said. "But—but—I could not help myself. The—the—Duke—I do not complain—but—but—he does not seem to realise that a—a—woman of my position must have ready money."

"Some one ought to give his Grace a hint," I replied. "No doubt, as you say, he simply does not realise. And if it were pointed out to him, he——"

Before I could finish my sentence, the Duchess suddenly covered her face with her hands, and began to sob.

"I'm so miserable," she groaned. "So very—very miserable. I have no one I dare tell my trouble to. May—may—I make a confidant of you?"

"I could desire no greater privilege," was my earnest response. It thrilled me with ineffable delight to think that I should be made the receptacle of this most adorable woman's secrets.

"I—I—" she told me, between her sobs, "I—did not go to b-borrow money yesterday. I went to—to—renew a bill for two—two—thousand pounds. And—and—" (here for a minute her sobs quite got the better of her)—"Ephraim wouldn't renew!"

"Ephraim wouldn't renew?" I ejaculated. "Why on earth not?"

"Be-because I couldn't pay him f-five hundred pounds for interest."

"And what will he do if this five hundred is not forthcoming?"

"He says he—he will present the bill at—at the Duke's b-bankers."

And my poor charming Duchess relapsed into a fit of sobbing more violent than before.

"Would he, do you think, take some smaller sum for a short renewal?" I suggested. "I dare say I could scrape together a hundred or so if——"

She shook her head.

"A thousand thanks, my dearest friend! But I fear it would be useless to offer it to him. He was inexorable. He declared he must have five hundred pounds, and nothing less. He—he—did, indeed, mention one alternative, but—but—it is an impossible one. It cannot be considered."

"What was it?"

"He said that with—with my position, and—and influence, I could, if I liked, bring good business to him. And that—that supposing I introduced one or two customers, out of whom money was to be made, within, say, a week from now, he—he—would let me off the five hundred pounds, and renew the bill. I—I—told him the demand was—was—outrageous, absurd. But he only laughed, and said I should probably think better of it before the week was out."

"The scoundrel!" I exclaimed, in great indignation. "The impudent scoundrel! As—as—though you could possibly debase yourself to become a usurer's jackal! I should like to go and interview the fellow with a horse-whip."

She smiled—a tearful, wintry smile.

"Thank you for that wish," she said. "And—and—if he did not hold me in his power—for I never dare let the Duke know that I have borrowed from a moneylender—I would like to see you execute it. But—but, as things are, I cannot afford to provoke Ephraim. Perhaps—perhaps, though, if you would not mind, you might go to see him for me, and try to make terms. Sh-should you" (with bewitching wistfulness) "should you mind—very much?"

"I will go with the greatest delight," I cried.

And so it was arranged.

I went to Ephraim's the same afternoon. Never, until that interview, had I fully realised what a sordid and grasping scoundrel this Hebrew was. He would not listen for an instant to any proposed abatement of his demands.

"Won't do," he said, in an off-hand manner, to my suggestion for a reasonable compromise. "Business is business, I tell you. Five hundred in cash or its equivalent in introductions. These are my terms. And I shan't budge."

"But the Duchess of Z—— cannot find five hundred pounds at this minute."

"Then she can bring me introductions."

"Really, Davis—do you expect a lady of her rank and status to act as your tout?" I could not help exclaiming.

"I expect nothing," he retorted. "But those are my terms. I have often made them before, and they have often been accepted by ladies quite as exalted as her Grace. I may inform you, indeed, that some of the most lucrative clients I have ever had have been introduced to me by a Princess. I make no secret of my practice. It is one of my regular methods of extending my business."

"I am sure the Duchess will not stoop to it," I asserted.

He shrugged his shoulders.

"Very well, then. Let her take the consequences. Unless, indeed," he added, with a meaning look at myself, for which I could have kicked him, "any of her gentlemen friends would care to get her out of the difficulty by doing for her what she is too dainty to do for herself."

I did not affect to misunderstand his insinuation.

"You propose, then, that I should take upon myself the rôle of your jackal?" I said.

"I propose nothing. I merely stated a possibility that crossed my mind. Anyhow, I must have the money, or its equivalent within the week."

I tried further persuasions. But they proved useless. He would not budge an inch from his position. And at length I had to take my leave, baffled and chafing with scarcely suppressed indignation.

When I told my Duchess how I had fared, she was deeply disappointed, though evidently not surprised.

"Thank you, my dear friend," she said, with tearful resignation; "you have done your best. But it is of no use. I suppose I shall have to d—do it myself—somehow. For if the Duke were to find out ——"

Here she burst out sobbing, and sobbed as though her gracious heart would break.

Then I took a desperate resolve. She should not be driven to degrade herself. I would take Ephraim's suggestion, I would degrade myself instead. I was well connected. I knew many good fellows of the smarter and faster type. There were two or three youngsters, in particular, whom I had in my mind's eye as promising potential victims of Ephraim Davis. And yet I—a man of honour—a Hebrew's jackal? Impossible! Impossible? Alas! frail man! How can honour weigh in the scales against love? Where is the magic of honesty in comparison with the tears of an adorable Duchess? I gave way. For her sake I laid myself out to play the miserable part. And within the week, through my skilful agency, Ephraim had thrown his toils round two fresh victims, and my sweet Duchess had obtained a renewal of her little bill.

* * * * *

I must now tell you the end of all this. There might, indeed, have been no end—at least, for many years to come—had not a sudden and unforeseen occurrence intervened. One afternoon, about a month later, I received a note, marked urgent on the outside, from the hand of a post office messenger. Hastily opening and perusing it, I found that it was dated from St. Thomas's Hospital, and the contents were to the following effect: that a gentleman, giving the name of Ephraim Davis, who was lying at the hospital in a hopeless condition, having been run over by a van in the Waterloo-road, had expressed an earnest wish that I might be sent for at once. "If," the writer added, "you wish to see him alive, you must come without delay; for his internal injuries are so severe that he cannot last many hours."

Of course, I felt it incumbent on me to obey a dying man's summons; and, inwardly wondering what could be Davis's reasons for wishing to see me, of all people, I lost no time in chartering a hansom, and driving to St. Thomas's.

I found the unfortunate money-lender lying on a bed in the accident ward, a pitiable and painful object. But he was not suffering much pain, he said; only a terrible sense of numbness and exhaustion; and his faculties were quite clear, and his voice, though weak, was distinctly audible. At a sign from the sufferer, I bent forward, with my ear close to his lips; and the nurse, who was in attendance, having considerately withdrawn a few paces, he proceeded to explain his reasons for summoning me.

"It is on account of the Duchess," he said—"the Duchess of Z——"

I nodded. No doubt, it had something to do with the money which her Grace owed him.

"I—I—you are a man of honour," he went on; "and—and—you will respect the Duchess's secret, and do your best to keep it from being made public. Will you not?"

"Certainly," I replied.

"I should have—have sent for her Grace personally," he continued, "only I—I thought it might lead to the exposure of what she herself is so anxious to keep close."

"You have shown a thoughtful consideration," I told him. "If the Duchess's transactions with you were to be made public, it would be a severe blow to her."

"There is only one way to avoid it," he said. "I have treated her Grace very hardly, and I wish now to make what reparation I can. I—I have made my will, leaving everything to—to her. The house-surgeon has written it out for me, and he and the nurse have witnessed it. I have appointed you sole executor. Will you promise to act, and—and to take immediate possession of my office and all my effects? It is for her sake."

"I promise to do so," I said. Indeed, under the circumstances, I could hardly have given any other reply.

"Then go at once," he said, in an eager whisper. "Go at once. The nurse will give you the will. Go at once!"

When I examined the deceased money-lender's papers, the whole truth about my Duchess's relations with him—a truth which, I will not deny, amazed me—was made abundantly plain. Her unhappy Grace had been in Ephraim's clutches for years. Ever since, as I discovered, an unfortunate occasion when, being in tremendous straits for money to pay a gaming debt, and being unable to obtain the large amount required on her own security, she had committed the appalling blunder of countersigning a promissory note with the Duke's name.

Ephraim discovered this; and, instead of exposing her—which was not, of course, his game—he used his knowledge as a means of putting on the screw and compelling her to tout for him among her many friends and admirers in high places. This she had been doing for upwards of three years; resorting to every conceivable device whereby she might carry out her humiliating task with the least risk of discovery. Of these, the little dodge to which I myself had been subjected may be regarded as a fair specimen.

I will add that, owing to my precautions, her Grace's secret still remains a secret; and that she still occupies her former high position in Society. You will not, however, find her among the Duchesses. I have promoted her, for my own reasons, to the highest rank. Yet I may be so far explicit as this; she is a very beautiful woman of forty, and she does not walk into dinner after the wives of Viscounts.

China and Glass. — Messrs. Goode, Artists and Designers, solicit an inspection of their collection in their recently-extended South Audley-street premises, now by far the largest and most important in Europe. Messrs. Goode guarantee the excellence of all their productions, and invite a comparison of their prices with those of any co-operative stores.

ART NOTES.

A FINE patriotic throb of emotion may be obtained just now in New Bond-street. At the Fine Art Society's Gallery is to be seen a large oil-painting of the charge of the Gordon Highlanders at Dargai by Mr. Allan Stewart. The fact that the picture is still unfinished may be taken as a proof of the eagerness of the artist to "strike while the iron is hot." It may also be considered a testimony to his national canniness, since in case any new details of the fight should arrive in belated despatches it would not be impossible to correct at leisure details that have evidently been painted in haste. Meanwhile, however, there is enough, even in the unfinished picture, to give the susceptible spectator a thrill of the very completest character. No effort has been spared by the management to make the exhibition impressive. A portion of the historical "Nelson Room" has been screened off for the picture, the frame of which is draped in a profusion of green cloth. On the floor in front of the battle piece are laid votive wreaths of entwined laurel and cypress, tied with white satin bows, on which are stamped in large gilt letters the words "Gordons," "Ghoorkhas," "Derbys," and "Dorsets." The wreaths are a little too suggestive, perhaps, of the "smart" funeral, and two of the names are rather too reminiscent of well-known brands of coal and butter to sound wholly heroic; but they are doubtless well meant. And who shall say that they will not be added to during the time that Mr. Allan Stewart's picture is on view? We know what impulsive "Imperialists" are moved to do on "Primrose Day" at the foot of Lord Beaconsfield's statue. Is it not possible, then, that excited visitors, perfervid Scots and others, may be impelled to heap the floor of the "Nelson Room" with a further supply of chaplets when they see in the picture Colonel Mathias cheering on his men, the Gordons passing through the fire zone, "with lowered heads, as if meeting a hailstorm," and Piper Findlater still raising the inspiring strains of his "braw Hieland instrument."

And this mention of Piper Findlater reminds me that I was a little premature in saying just now that "no effort has been spared by the management to make the exhibition impressive." There is one thing more that they could do. They could hire a bag-piper, and let him march about the "Nelson Room" skirling as he went. Fancy the effect of his inspirited performance of the "Cock o' the North," or "The Campbells are Coming," or "The Gordons are Going It!" or any other such exhilarating Scotch melody. It could scarcely fail to be immense, and would doubtless lead to the quick disposal of the artist's proofs and Indian prints of Mr. Allan Stewart's picture, which are to be issued shortly. It has, in fact, long been a notion of mine that music, judiciously chosen, might be made a very popular feature of the average picture exhibition. Even a piano appropriately played might do much to enhance the interest of the ordinary one-man show; and I am sure that an organ or harmonium could be made to add greatly to the drawing powers of a sacred picture exhibition. There is a fortune awaiting the picture dealer who is enterprising enough to engage the Red, White, or Blue Hungarians in connection with his next public display, and if the Royal Academicians would only be unacademic enough to give us a string band and ices and coffee in the Central Hall of Burlington House during the progress of their next summer show, I can promise them a record total of shillings taken at their turnstiles.

But this is a discursion, from which I must return again to the Fine Art Society's Gallery, where Mr. Allan Stewart's "Battle Piece" is only one of the attractions at present provided. In another room are to be seen the original drawings made for "The Martian" by the late Mr. George Du Maurier. Exceptional interest attaches to these very characteristic specimens of the pen-and-ink work of the author of "Trilby." Amongst them are to be found some of the last of the drawings he did. In the centre room is a collection of fifty-one water-colours of the Wiltshire Avon, by Mr. Hugh L. Norris. These drawings introduce us to some portions of that Wessex which Mr. Hardy has immortalised in his novels, and show us that Mr. Norris has a quick eye for the picturesque, and a pleasantly original way of his own of transferring his impressions of nature to drawing-paper.

A charmingly varied selection of works by painters of the English, French, and Dutch schools is to be seen just now at the Goupil Gallery in Waterloo-place. In a collection happily small enough for one to be able to devote to the pictures it contains the attention they assuredly deserve, there are some characteristic examples of artists as widely different in style and method as Mr. George F. Watts, R.A., and Mr. J. McNeill Whistler, Mynheer Josef Israels and Mr. H. B. Brabazon. There is a delicious Corot to be seen there, full of that silvery luminosity in which he, that wizard of the brush, was able to steep his canvases. Mathew Maris and his brother James are to be seen, also to great advantage. But the gem of the whole collection, to my mind, is a brilliant little landscape by Señor Diaz—"L'Orage." It is one of those rare pictures one cannot look at too long or too often.

MUSIC.

THE CATHEDRAL ORGANIST AT BAY.

THE cathedral organists have at last, and very properly, drafted their complaints concerning their threatened treatment by the Cathedral Commission and have even ventured to suggest a mild remedy. Both complaints and suggestions are of an extremely modest character, such, indeed, as would, I should imagine, not offend the susceptibilities of the most touchy of deans and chapters. Personally, I believe the organists would be more successful if they took a much bolder course; for in dealing with a dignitary of the Established Church, any argument but that of the mailed fist is too frequently considered a sign of weakness. It seems that in the draft schemes prepared under the authority of the Cathedral Commission, it is in almost every case suggested that the organist should either be liable to dismissal at three months' notice or should only hold office during pleasure. The Commissioners themselves do not appear to have taken any particular part in this pretty little scheme, but there is so touching a unanimity about the three months' notice business that it has, it is supposed, been inserted by, or at the instigation of, the various cathedral ecclesiastics.

It is, it appears, a part of the latter-day policy of the cathedral clergy to have the organist and choir as far as possible under their complete control. An amusing story, indeed, on this point is now going the rounds. In a certain very great cathedral last week, the organist, as an outgoing voluntary, was playing one of Bach's fugues. A canon rushed into the organ loft, in quite uncanonical haste, and to the amazement of the musician required him immediately to stop. The canon was, it seems, a delegate of the precentor. He gravely admonished the musician that "loud music" must not be played during Lent. And Samuel Sebastian Wesley would probably have replied with a sarcastic paraphrase of "The Vicar of Bray," but the musician feebly bowed his head. The great impiety of playing Bach in church during Lent I confess I do not myself understand. Nor, by the way, do the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, who annually wind up their Lent with a Festival performance of the greater part of Bach's "St. Matthew" Passion. The particular canon in question possibly preferred the "Old Hundredth" or "Put Me in My Little Bed," or some simple and unsophisticated melody of a "five o'clock tea" type. But this interference with the legitimate work of the musician is unjustifiable and destructive to art, and it would in the old days certainly have resulted either in the practical joke or a verbal explosion on the part of the organist. Indeed, some years ago a well-known organist whose precentor interfered with duties which only technically belonged to him, gave the reverend gentleman a memorable lesson. The hymn was very properly nominated by the preacher, as being a suitable commentary on the the text of his sermon; but the precentor proceeded to choose the tune, which he declared he did not wish to be "quite so lively" as one usually employed The tune selected did not agree in metre with the words, to the huge delight of the organist, who strictly obeyed orders, and gravely played the superfluous notes at the end of every line.

The Royal College of Organists Committee, of which Sir Frederick Bridge is chairman, other members being Dr. Creser of the Chapel Royal, Dr. Greenish, Dr. Jordan, and Dr. Keeton, have now prepared a report which, being of a private character, I shall of course not quote. There is, however, no harm in saying that the committee very properly propose that all cathedral organists should be placed in some such position as they occupy at St. Paul's, Canterbury, and other great cathedrals. They are perfectly ready to accept dismissal for improper conduct, incompetency, or (with a fair pension) as a result of old age. But they are not willing to be at the mercy of, for example, the rabid High Church ecclesiastic who is said the other day to have threatened his organist with dismissal if he did not come to (Protestant) "confession." At St. Paul's the organist holds his office "during good behaviour and while competent," but he can be suspended or dismissed for misconduct or incompetency by a resolution of the Dean and Chapter confirmed by the Visitor. This really is all that is wanted.

Indeed, this appeal to the bishop, or other Church dignitary with the authority of "Visitor," is highly prized by the cathedral organist. It is, it seems, quite a mistake to suppose that the bishop invariably backs up his clergy at the expense of his musicians. Such, in fact, is the infirmity of even episcopal humanity, that it is hinted a bishop, where a good case is shown, is often by no means averse to indulging in a sly dig at his dean. The Committee of the Royal College certainly do not suggest any drastic measures. They first desire to point out their wishes to cathedral chapters, secondly to "respectfully ask" that organists should be placed in a fair position; and thirdly to "watch" such legislation, as, for example, the Bill introduced by Sir Charles Dalrymple in 1896. If they went a little further, and pointed out that there are more brain-wearied bishops and dilapidated deans, precentors, and canons than played-out cathedral organists, I, for one, should not blame them.

In some comments upon the article in last week's Truth concerning the absurd "Music Teachers' Guild," whose honorary secretary is Mr. Chanot, the violin seller, the Musical News, always energetic in such matters, furnishes some further interesting and rather startling information. It says—

> In another circular which has reached us, some astonishing further particulars are given of the way these "diplomas" may be obtained. First we are told:—"Personal attention of the teacher will not, as a rule, be required, as generally the necessary information can be given by correspondence." This is almost on a par with the notable institution which dispensed diplomas without testing, though the certificate stated, Granted after examination. It would seem this could not be beaten in facility, but Mr. Chanot and partners go still one step further. We are told that "In the case of students about to enter on their professional career, and who are consequently unable to give full particulars about what successes they have been obtaining by their pupils, and to make a statutory declaration thereto if required . . . . it will be deemed sufficient if they prove that they are of good personal reputation, at least two satisfactory references to this effect being required, such as bankers', clergymen's, doctors', solicitors', &c."

Imagine a "banker's" reference as to the ability of a student to teach music. I should really like to know what the "diplomas" of this precious "Guild" are supposed to cost. Their real value can, of course, far more readily be appraised.

The Joachim Quartet party have now returned, and on Monday, at the Popular Concerts, the whole programme was devoted to them and to three quartets, viz.: the

The Greatest of all Pianofortes.—The Steinway Pianofortes. New York and London.

"posthumous" work of Beethoven in C sharp minor, Brahms' Quartet in B flat, op. 67, and one of Haydn's quartets. Last year the excellence of the Joachim party was fully established. The individual members, their famous chief excepted, may perhaps not be individually so good as those of the ordinary quartet of the Monday Pops:—or, at any rate, as the quartet as we used to know it two or three years ago. But by long association and by so frequently playing together throughout Germany during the winter, they have attained an excellence of ensemble to which our scratch quartets are strangers. On Saturday the admirable setting by Mme. Lisa Lehmann "In a Persian Garden," to Fitzgerald's translation of Omar Kayyam, was repeated, the composer herself accompanying on the piano.

The comic opera, "The King's Sweetheart," which, under the name of "Regina B.A.," has for some months past been touring the provinces, had last week a short run at the Theatre Metropole, Camberwell. The story is a pure piece of extravagance, farcical enough, and exactly, no doubt, suited to the tastes of the provinces, for which, apparently, it was specially written. Mr. J. M. Glover, who is responsible for the music, has also felt himself bound to keep in mind the limitations of a company on tour. Nevertheless, he has successfully performed his task, and, although some of his tunes may appear more or less as old friends, yet his songs, of which there are perhaps a superabundance, are melodious and taking, whilst his dances are of the brightest possible character, and the opera likewise contains one or two parodies of Sullivan and other composers, amusing alike to the amateur and musician. It is a pity that Mr. Glover does not have an opportunity of showing his talents in still more important work.

Professor Stanford's "Requiem" was duly performed by the Bach Choir last week under the composer's direction. The work will now probably, so far as London is concerned, be shelved, for it is not to be given at the Albert Hall, where the authorities recognise the distaste of the general public for compositions written to Latin words. Nevertheless, Dr. Stanford's "Requiem" contains some of his most ambitious music, and taking into consideration the limitations of the choir, due justice was, of course, done to it.

The Philharmonic Concerts also started last week, though somewhat limply, as the star, Herr Rosenthal, could not appear. Indeed, many of the audience left after the first part, and thus avoided the Symphony, which, according to the recent ridiculous practice of the Society, is now employed to play the people out. The Crystal Palace Concerts were resumed on Saturday, but with a smaller orchestra than usual. There seems no reason why the standard works should be performed by an orchestra of 100, more particularly as, when the high pitch is used, the necessity for extra strings is avoided. The Crystal Palace daily orchestra is the oldest of our London permanent Symphony Bands, and, although occasionally for modern works it must, of course, be reinforced, yet a well-trained orchestra of seventy is quite sufficient for all reasonable purposes. There were no novelties whatever in Saturday's programme, which comprised Beethoven's first Symphony, Bennett's "Paradise and Peri" overture, three dances from MacKenzie's "Little Minister" music and the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto, played by Dr. Joachim. At the Queen's Hall concert on Saturday also, except as to a new overture, "The Taming of the Shrew," by Mr. Percy Pitt, accompanist at these entertainments, the programme was devoted to familiar works, including Beethoven's Violin Concerto, played by M. Rivarde, and Mendelssohn's Scotch Symphony, which did not start till half past four. There is no need for these extravagantly long functions. Mr. Newman's audiences this season have not been so large as to warrant the assumption that plethoric programmes are popular.

Mr. Newman, it seems, had rather over-estimated the interest of the public in Wagner's "Love Feast of the Apostles." This work was tried at the Birmingham Festival twenty-two years ago. It is true its execution then exemplified the Philistinism of that arch anti-Wagnerite Sir Michael Costa himself. About ten years since the "Love Feast" was placed in rehearsal by Novello's Choir under Sir A. C. Mackenzie, but it was then dropped, as the choristers did not think it worth the trouble involved upon it. The same thing seems to have happened at Queen's Hall. The work is for male voices only, and whether the gentlemen resented the slur thus cast by Wagner upon the ladies, or whether they did not think much of music, which dates back to "Tannhäuser" times, they, at any rate, did not turn up to rehearsal. As the public did not appear to appreciate the "Love Feast," it has been knocked out of the programme of next Saturday's concert, the last of the season. It is unlikely now that it will be heard for a considerable time. Your thick and thin Wagnerite has no sort of sympathy with the compositions of the Meister's youth.

M. Paderewski is now in England, and he has promised to inaugurate the new Salle Erard on Saturday fortnight. He "opened" the same room some years ago, before it had secured a license. It is hoped that on April 2 the arrangements will be better than they were when the great Polish pianist last appeared there. Sufficient people had then been invited to crowd the room twice over, and those who really were upon business never heard M. Paderewski at all. The Salle Erard holds, I believe, about 300 people.

It will be interesting to know the reason why the Philharmonic directors so boldly announced Goldmarks's "Im Frühling" overture ac for the "first time in England." The fact that the majority of the younger school of musical critics rushed into this absurd error does not, of course, particularly signify. But the Philharmonic directors are teachers who ought to be conversant with such elementary facts. The overture, of course, was produced at the Crystal Palace in 1890, a very short time after it was first given in Germany, and in the following season it was repeated by Dr. Richter. Whether the novelty is worth much bragging about may be altogether another matter.

Now that the fair sex are, according to a (possibly malicious) rumour, by no means averse to the gentle weed, there seems no earthly reason why Sunday smoking concerts should be the monopoly of the mere man. So, at any rate, the Playgoers' Club appear to think. At any rate, next Sunday night at the Hotel Cecil they announce a "Cigarette Concert for Ladies." It will be interesting to note whether the ladies will pluck up sufficient courage to try the cigarette in public.

Music publishers are very properly taking up the question of the sale in the streets of pirated penny versions of valuable copyright songs and other pieces. They have petitioned the Government to allow a short Act to be run through Parliament giving them practically what the fine art publishers have enjoyed for a long time, viz., some sort of right to proceed against pirates in the police-courts. The printers of these pirated versions are rarely to be found, and when discovered they are not worth powder and shot, consequently the ordinary remedy by injunction is inapplicable. The hawkers who sell in the street two-shilling songs for a penny purchase their goods illicitly, generally in shady public-houses. One publisher, it is true, at considerable expense recently made a raid upon the hawkers, and managed to discover a public-house where 2,500 pirated copies of a copyright song were stored. He thereupon seized and triumphantly carried the entire stock off in a cab. He also went for some of the hawkers, and, as he had a perfect right to do, confiscated their goods. But this sort of thing is rather miserable business, and the publishers would much prefer the right to bring the real delinquents, namely, the printers of pirated songs, before a magistrate, who would deal with them summarily and equitably.

Bexhill-on-Sea.—The Mentone of England.—The Sackville Hotel, an ideal winter and spring residence. Special inclusive terms till Easter. For tariff, &c., apply to Manager.

If you want to entirely Furnish your House or select any article of Furniture or Carpet, &c., send for Hewetsons' Illustrated Priced Catalogue.—Hewetsons, Tottenham Court-road, London.

LETTERS ON BOOKS.

MY DEAR MR. WYNDHAM.—The good stories in "Social Hours with Celebrities" (1) are like the conversation of Gratiano—"two grains of wheat to a bushel of chaff"—while one of the two grains is shrivelled with age. Here is a good veteran which, though it ought to be retired as an "emeritus," you may possibly not have heard:—

> One Sunday, Bishop Samuel Wilberforce was staying in the country where Lord Palmerston formed one of the house party. As they came away from church, the day appearing fine and the carriage being crowded, Bishop Wilberforce declared he preferred to walk back, and took a start and a short cut. Half way home a shower came on just as the carriage overtook him.
>
> "How blest the man who ne'er consents
> By ill-advice to walk,"
>
> exclaimed Lord Palmerston, chaffingly,
>
> "Nor sits where men profanely talk!"
>
> rejoined the Bishop.

Of the stories which are at once old and poor, the Irish are incomparably the baldest, since even in my childhood they seemed to me forced and foolish. Of the new stories, perhaps the best—at any rate from a Protestant standpoint—is this:—

> Cardinal Wiseman used to tell of a young Spanish nobleman he once had staying with him in York-place, whom he observed one day to his surprise in an adjoining room suddenly snatch up a pair of lighted candles and rush to the window, fall on his knees, and, after making the sign of the cross, remain some moments in that devout attitude. A day or two after he inquired of his host if there were not an hospital in the neighbourhood. "Why should you think so?" asked the Cardinal. "Simply," replied the youth, "because I hear 'His Majesty' pass so often. Ha! there he is again," and he lost no time in repairing to the window to salute the Blessed Sacrament as before. The Cardinal found it difficult to maintain his gravity whilst explaining to his guest that it was not the Viaticum that was passing, but—the muffin-bell.

How the narrator, herself once a heretic, could make miscreant Protestants merry with this muffin-parody of the wafer, I cannot imagine. A little holy water, or, indeed, a wholesale exorcism would have made "The Scourge-Stick" (2) a duller but pleasanter book.

> "We writing people," says its hero, "are full of devils. Good demons and bad demons! And upon my soul I don't know whether the good or the bad ar most responsible for the best work we do. I know that w f have honestly tried to give the moral excellencies an innings, I've done my feeblest and insincerest work. And the other way on, when I've let go the brake."

Mrs. Campbell Praed has let go the brake a little, with the natural result of making her story as fast in the literary as in the moral sense. The only fault I have to find with her title and its motto,

> I have seen my little boy oft scourge his top,
> And compared myself to 't: nought made me e'er go right
> But Heaven's scourge-stick, is its misapplication. It is not God, but the heroine's passions, which have made her and the novel "hum." She marries for his money a millionaire, rather seduces, than is seduced by, his nephew and greatest enemy, and thereby foists upon her husband the son of his chief foe as the heir of his vast property. Her husband, it is true, is a very trying person; but it is no less true that he was very severely tried, and your sympathies are not as frequently and strongly as those of the author on the side of her heroine. However, upon the birth of her illegitimate child she makes a bargain with God in her misery and remorse, and keeps it, with the result that she sins no more and no worse thing happens to her—and no better. It is a very powerful and interesting story, but not quite so pleasant as it is exciting and strong. Still less pleasant is Iota's incomprehensible "Poor Max" (3), whose heroine marries first a chameleon-like kind of Skimpole, and next a man whom she knows to be the most infamous scoundrel in London. She jilts for this blackguard the man whom she worships, and who worships her, because he has but £500 a year as against his rival's millions. Why? Because one of Skimpole's children promises to be as irresponsible a butterfly as his father! In truth the book is as hysterical, or, if you like, nenrotic, as poor Max himself, and occasionally as unintelligible. "I wonder—I wonder," cries the heroine, "if God has ever quite understood Max?" And you sometimes wonder whether their creator quite understands her own creatures in this smart novel. Its very smartness is at times so strained as to be unintelligible. What, for instance, is to be said for a style of this kind?

> She turned to watch his wife, and memory came echoing up her throat so oddly that it interfered with a sharp interjection of common sense also on its way and choked it.

Iota, to use her own phrase, is always "literally pouring herself out in epigrammatic torrents of varying quality," occasionally of very good quality, as when Skimpole says:—

> "After all, in the whole wide world there's no beauty like that of a true faith in any God, while an honest God's the noblest work of man."

Mr. Bram Stoker is not given to smartness of any kind, but his "Miss Betty" (4) is a charming story which fails only in supplying its hero with an adqeuate motive for "taking to the road." He took to it so heroically that on one occasion he not only robbed but bound the coachman, guard, and all the passengers, single-handed. A Briarean feat! The little tale is prettily and quaintly told, and will pass for you a pleasant hour. I wonder, by the way, how Mr. Bram Stoker could suppose life's one sweetener—hope—an evil, and "the last evil in Pandora's box"! If Pandora's box had been emptied of evils, we should not have needed such delightful distractions as "Miss Betty" to help us to forget real life.—Believe me, my dear Mr. Wyndham, ever yours very sincerely,

DESMOND B. O'BRIEN.

(1) "Social Hours with Celebrities." Being the third and fourth volumes of "Gossip of the Century." By the late Mrs. W. Pitt Byrne. Edited by her sister, Miss R. H. Busk. With sixty-six illustrations. Two volumes. (London: Ward & Downey.) Price 32s.
(2) "The Scourge-Stick." By Mrs. Campbell Praed. (London: William Heinemann.) Price 6s.
(3) "Poor Max." By Iota. (London: Hutchinson & Co.) Price 6s.
(4) "Miss Betty." By Bram Stoker. (London: C. Arthur Pearson, Limited.) Price 2s. 6d.

GIRLS' GOSSIP.

DEAREST AMY,—We have had a wonderful week of weather in town, almost every variety having presented itself in turn between Sunday morning and Saturday night. The particular sample that turned up on Tuesday—snow, sleet, mud, slush, and bitter wind—had the effect of deterring many from going to the Drawing Room who otherwise would have attended; and afterwards, when a little improvement came, it was too late. It was a limited function in consequence. But there were some sweet gowns worn, lovely flowers accompanying them to Court. Lady Granville Gordon wore a charming gown, white satin veiled with black net, sewn with jet baskets in a Louis XV. design, and black velvet train lined with pale blue satin. One corner was turned back with an immense Louis XV. bow of black tulle. "Lady Granny" presented her daughter, Miss Armyn Gordon, who wore a very sweet satin gown and train, the former trimmed with pearl embroidery and the train ruched all round with drifting tulle. The very girlish, and therefore highly appropriate, trimming consisted of small white pompon roses. Miss Gordon's bouquet was made of white roses and lily of the valley.

The Ladies Scott had pretty gowns. They were dressed almost alike, in white satin, the front of the skirts being embroidered apron-fashion. The bodices were veiled with silver-spangled tulle, caught in at the waist with a satin sash. A cluster of forget-me-nots and gardenias on the shoulder repeated the trimming on the trains, which were cleverly differentiated from each other, though alike in style. The Countess of Wicklow went in black, gracefully and effectively relieved with white chiffon. A lovely collar of old lace trimmed the bodice. The Countess of Loudoun wore blue, a lovely shade, over white satin, the chiffon being exquisitely embroidered with azure sequins and crystal of the same hue. The blue satin train was brocaded with lilac flowers, a very up-to-date and successful combination.

FASHIONS UP TO DATE.—An elegant and svelte figure is produced by the easy and perfect-fitting anatomical corset shaped by the experts, Mesdames SYKES, JOSEPHINE, & Co., The Celebrated Anatomical Corsetières, 280, Regent-st., Oxford-circus, London, W.

Lady Binnie attended the Drawing Room in a very sweet toilette, consisting of a pearl-grey satin skirt with a silvery sheen on it, and a train of orchid-mauve terry velvet. Lovely embroideries and some rare old lace trimmed the dress, with clusters of orchids, and Lady Binnie carried a bouquet of exquisite orchids.

Lady Savile wore black and pink, carrying a bow-bouquet of deep pink roses, and presented her daughter, Miss Helyar, whose gown was exquisite, all soft tulle over gleaming satin, with a novel trimming of spangled lace roses. A picturesque pointed collar of the rose-embroidered tulle finished this lovely gown.

Another delicious frock was worn by Miss Cust. It was a real triumph. The dress itself was composed entirely of old lace, through the meshes of which a gleam of satin could be seen. The train was putty coloured satin, lined with crêpe-de-chine of the same shade, and bordered with old silver lace. The train was caught in the middle of the back with an old paste buckle.

Mrs. Wadsworth Ritchie, Mrs. Adair's daughter, had her white satin train lined with green velvet, and showered down one side with roses. The dress was white satin, over which was thrown a veil of snowy chiffon, and on it meandered lines of creamy lace. The bodice, all folds of soft chiffon and lace, was drawn in at the waist under a belt of silver and pearl.

It is not often that a decided novelty of any kind appears at a pre-Easter Drawing Room, but this year there was something new introduced at each. At the one in February the new "duchess" train made its appearance, a remarkably graceful innovation due to the genius of Mrs. Harrison; and at the March function the new "bow-bouquet" made its appearance. It is devised by Mr. Goodyear, and, for several reasons, is a great improvement upon the ordinary arrangement. It consists of a large bow of ribbon, with a loop on either side, the loops forming a background for flowers, sometimes all alike in hue and character, and sometimes quite different. For instance, the one carried by Lady "Granny" Gordon was in pale blue ribbon, with bunches of gardenias on one side, looking as though they had just been cut, and on the other side spikes of white orchids. Lady Gilmour had a lovely bow-bouquet, with white orchids on one side and tea-roses on the other. It went beautifully with her lovely gown of splendid old Brussels point, arranged over ivory satin. It fell from the waist in a deep flounce, and I could not sufficiently admire the cleverness with which the rich design was supported at the edge by quillings of chiffon, which served to display the beauty of the lace to the greatest possible advantage. The train was in geranium-pink velvet, trimmed with white flowers. Lady Gilmour's ornaments included a diamond tiara and necklet. Lady Alexander, too, had lovely Brussels point on her dress of white brocade. The train was in old rose satin, lined with a deeper shade, and trimmed all down one side with the too covetable Brussels point. But that was not all. Read on, and expire with envy. Down the centre of the train was draped a lovely shawl, also of Brussels lace.

How unfair for one person to have such quantities of adorable lace while others only have "bits." Treasured, truly, yet only "bits."

But it does not do to give way to coveting one's neighbour's goods. If we once begin we are pretty sure to go on. And, in fact, I could proceed immediately to covet Mrs. Jack Fraser's lovely old paste buckles which fastened on her train of turquoise velvet, worn over a white satin gown beautifully embroidered with paste and turquoises and lace appliqués.

Miss Dewar, of Perth, in a blaze of diamonds, wore silver-grey satin, embroidered all over most elaborately in fine steel and paste and pearls, and appliqués of lisse, with a black velvet train trimmed with tulle and diamond-studded plumes. Do you remember a picture somewhere of a young Highland chieftain drinking whiskey, and his ancestors stepping down from their frames to clutch the bottle? Well, I am sure that Miss Dewar's ancestresses would all want to come down from their frames to wear that gown and those glorious jewels.

No gown at the Drawing Room was lovelier than that worn by Lady Lansdowne, who introduced the ladies of the Diplomatic Corps in the absence of Lady Salisbury and the Duchess of Devonshire. It was white satin, violet velvet, old lace, diamonds, all commingled with deftest art, and graced by being worn by one of the prettiest and most charming women in England. Lady Lansdowne presented her daughter, the youthful Marchioness of Waterford, on her marriage. She wore her beautiful wedding gown and carried a nosegay of sweet exotics.

Lady Merrick had a lovely dress in fawn-coloured shot-satin moire, the skirt trimmed with scarves of Alençon lace, with diamonds scattered over it. Sprays of large Californian violets and ivy trimmed the bodice and the emerald velvet train.

Miss Waterlow, grand-daughter of Sir Sydney of that ilk, had a gown of sweetest whiteness, in satin veiled with chiffon embroidered in Louis XVI. knots with ruched baby ribbon, diamonds, and silver. The freshest of frills adorned the bodice, and a spray of lily-of-the-valley and ivy trimmed it, another ornamenting one corner of the satin train. Lady McGregor, over white satin, wore a pale green satin train, brocaded, with bunches of primulas and lily-of-the-valley in natural tints. Touches of primula mauve velvet on the bodice and skirt brought all into consonance. Mrs. Lowe had a lovely gown—white satin draped with creamy lace and embroidered richly with pendant jet sequins. The black satin train was lined with pink, and held back with a cluster of roses.

And I must not omit from this skimming of the cream of all the sweetest frocks Mrs. Callander's pale-grey satin, veiled with a deep lace flounce, high at the back, lower in front. Zouaves of silver trimmed the bodice, and clusters of pink and white carnations trimmed the myrtle-green velvet train, lined with pink satin. The Hon. Mrs. Kennedy's was another lovely gown, grey satin embroidered with steel, the loose bodice drawn up over pink velvet. The pink train was in the new material, fleur de velours, lined with cream-coloured satin.

Lady Clifford of Chudleigh brightened the scene with her lovely yellow satin embroidered with silver, paste, and steel. Her train was blue and silver.

One more gown and I have done. It was white satin, draped with magnificent old point d'Alençon, touches of Parma violet velvet contrasting deliciously with the mellow cream tint of the lovely lace. The train, in silver-grey brocade, was trimmed with grey tulle and sashes of the violet velvet caught back with diamond buttons. Mrs. Cordes wore this beautiful gown.

We had a little glimpse at Goodyear's of a lovely little Irish harp in silver, and inquiring about it, we were told that it was for Lady Cadogan, to carry instead of a bouquet, and that trails of shamrock were to outline it. The occasion was an Irish ball, and I have no doubt that the compliment was well appreciated by those present.

I see that there is to be a vegetarian banquet at the Holborn Restaurant on April 22, at 7.30. I think we shall go. I have always been rather attracted by vegetarianism, believing that most "Britishers" eat too much meat and far too little vegetable and fruit. I am extremely curious to know how such a considerable menu as that conveyed in the word "banquet" can be carried out without the introduction of fish, meat, poultry, or game.

We owe a debt of gratitude to Mrs. Charles Bellairs for having invented a veil fastener which is not only most useful but very ornamental. It can be fixed in a moment to any hat, and opens with a spring, the veil is then folded and the spring closed, the only outward and visible sign being a smart enamel bow studded with diamonds.

New Spring Fashions.—Messrs. Redfern have now on view in their Showrooms a unique display of Toilettes, illustrative of the latest London and Paris fashions, and to which they invite an inspection.—26, Conduit-street, London, W.

Christabel sends from Paris the following description of some evening dresses lately made for a party of rich American ladies:—

A white satin ball dress was covered with white tulle spotted with black, the spots increasing in size towards the base of the skirt, all round the lower part of which was a Greek pattern carried out in pink chrysanthemums, above this a simple row of similar flowers, then a Greek pattern again, and above it another row of flowers. The low bodice was cut away heart-shape, both back and front, and covered with spotted tulle like the skirt. The short sleeves were composed of bouillonnés of tulle, with a wreath of chrysanthemums falling on the arm.

A very striking ball dress for a matron was of yellow satin, covered with silk muslin of the same shade in sun-ray pleats. The low bodice was cut square, and covered with yellow silk muslin pleated like the skirt, and on each side was a small revers of rich white lace and a spray of mimosa on the left side. The waistband was yellow satin.

A very beautiful dress made to be worn at Mlle. Reichemberg's farewell at the Comédie Française was white satin, cut in Princess shape and entirely covered with rich Irish guipure-tinted cream colour. The low bodice was cut round in the neck, the lace arranged in flutes like a baby bodice or à la vierge, with splendid real diamonds between each fulling. A red velvet waistband, was fastened with a diamond buckle, and a large bow on the left shoulder, with ends crossing the bodice and falling to the ground, was held on the shoulder with a small bouquet of violets made of real amethysts.

An evening robe was of rich white silk with the Greek pattern woven in black as a border to the skirt, aud a pink rose, also woven or printed in each corner of the pattern. The bodice was half high with a small Greek or key pattern going round to correspond with the skirt, and very handsome lace trimmed the neck. The sleeves were also half-long, ending with a fall of lace. This very pretty dress was finished with a black velvet waistband slightly pointed at the back and front and fastening with a diamond buckle at the side.

An extremely stylish visiting dress was of Sèvres blue Liberty satin, with a pattern of white diamond-shaped lozenges, rather large at the foot and diminishing in size towards the top. The bodice to match was made blouse fashion with, three wide pleats, and slashed with white satin between the pleats. Blue velvet of the same shade formed a bolero at the back and came over the shoulder, falling in front in points. This was enhanced with a raised appliqué of white roses made in fine silk cord. The sleeves were of the modified gigot shape, slashed with white satin at the top, and finished with revers of blue velvet at the wrist. The waistband and collar were of similar velvet, the collar and sleeves revers having also white appliqué in relief like the bodice.

Clare sends me the following from Dublin:—

Dearest Madge,—The shortest season ever known at Dublin Castle is to end this week with St. Patrick's Ball. Just six weeks from beginning to end, but with the interval of one week to be subtracted and only, therefore, a five weeks' season. Though Lord and Lady Cadogan are personably agreeable and a good host and hostess, one gets the impression that they are going through duty work. They do not enter into the spirit of viceregal life in Ireland; one always has a lurking suspicion that their happiest moments in connection with the country are when they embark at Kingstown to cross the water. One has this idea, however, with many who occupy the viceregal throne. The fact is we are a great deal too near England, and above all, London, with its magnificence and overwhelming attractions, to have a comfortable viceroyalty. In India and Canada the viceroys have to take temporary root in the soil, as it were; with regard to Ireland they never go through any process of transplantation. The Viceroy does Ireland as he might Cairo or the Riviera, and rarely, if ever, misses the London season, the fashionable English race meetings, and the usual rounds of country visits. The Viceroy, to make him a really useful Irish institution, should be bound over to live in Ireland as the Viceroys do in Canada and India, to become a chief member of Irish Society and promoter of its interests, instead of a kind of spectator of the Irish social stage. This, no doubt, would seem a dreadful programme to many English noblemen, especially of the courtier class—Ireland being so out of favour at Court—but then the acceptance of the post of Viceroyalty is always a purely voluntary act. No doubt it has for many years been a fashion for Irish Viceroys to pose as martyrs to duty, but there is always a noble army of them whose services are available. Prime Ministers do not have any very serious difficulty in filling up places of high position with salaries to match. In fact, from what one hears, they suffer most from the embarrassment of a wide choice.

Last week the "house party"—which has become such an established institution of the season at Dublin Castle—consisted of the Duchess of Sutherland and Lady Cromartie, the Duchess of Manchester and Lady Alice Montagu, Lord and Lady Rathdonnell and Miss Bunbury, Count Mensdorf, Lady Huntingdon, Lady Fingall, Miss Van de Weyer, Mr. and Miss Mildmay, Mr. Heseltine, and several others. A large party, and, with the addition of the Viceregal household, enough in itself for a dinner party or dance—there generally is more or less of a dance every night at the Castle. The tiny dances, which are not chronicled in the newspapers, and to which a few, very few and select extra girls and men are invited, are highly appreciated by those who chance to be selected. They are not late entertainments, as there are some limits to what human nature—even when in pursuit of pleasure—can go through. On Tuesday a big ball was given, most of those who attended the second Drawing Room being invited. The Viceregal party make an imposing procession, entering St. Patrick's Hall to the strains of "God Save the Queen." Lady Cadogan's toilets and jewels are always remarkable, the Duchess of Sutherland and the Duchess of Manchester also glittered with diamonds; quite a bevy of prettily dressed young girls followed them, white predominating in their costumes. All Dublin society was present; a party from the Royal Hospital, Ladies Ashbourne (with two daughters), Granard (with the same), Mowbray and Stourton (with two also), Rachel-Saunderson, Musgrave, and Emily. On Friday night a big dinner preceded a small dance in the Throne Room, which was very pleasant and less crowded. Lady Cadogan very capably did the honours, all by herself, Lord Cadogan being absent, attending a Cabinet Council. By the way, his constant flittings across the Channel produce quite a grievance in Kingstown, where his arrival—if between sunrise and sunset—has to be attended by a Royal salute, which startles the inhabitants from their slumbers, as the mail steamer keeps early hours. This week the Castle festivities end with two State ceremonials, the first being the installation of Lord Arran as a Knight of St. Patrick, on Tuesday evening, in St. Patrick's Hall, when Levee dress is worn by the male guests, and the ladies wear Court dress except for the trains. Lord Roberts is the Junior Knight, the Duke of York and he being the last who were installed, and at the same time, in the Castle. The other ceremonial is the St. Patrick's Ball on the 17th inst. After it the Castle shutters will be put up until next season. Dublin Castle is evidently not popular with its owners for the time. Not even two months out of the twelve are spent there. The situation, being high, is not bad, but the surrounding localities are not inviting. A viceregal residence in the neighbourhood of the good squares and streets would be a desirable change. The old historic and the modern sanitary ideas are often in strong antagonism.—Yours ever,

Clare.

This suprême of quails is rather extravagant, but is a perfect dream of delicacy:—

Procure half-a-dozen boned quails. Pound the flesh with 2 oz. of raw veal, add 3 oz. of butter and the crumb of a French roll, previously stewed in milk until it is a stiff paste. Work in the yolks of four eggs a gill of cream, and pepper and salt to taste. When the ingredients are thoroughly amalgamated, rub them through a wire sieve, and work the forcemeat in a basin with a gill of thick cream. Steam the suprême in a timbale mould that is prettily decorated with cut truffle, without allowing it to boil. Turn the mould out on a dish, fill the centre with nicely boiled asparagus and pour the sauce round it.

To make the sauce: Stew the bones of the birds in weak stock with a little root vegetable, herbs, spices, and a slice of bacon for two hours, strain, remove the grease, and reduce the liquor to half a pint. Cook a minced shalot with an ounce of butter in a stewpan, mix in a tablespoonful of flour and the stock from the bones, stir it until it boils, simmer it for twenty minutes, and squeeze it through the tammy. Return the sauce to the stewpan to warm, adding pepper, salt, and a squeeze of lemon juice. Mix the yolk of an egg with half a gill of cream, add it to the sauce, and stir it constantly until it is quite hot, but not boiling.

Mortlock's (Oxford-st.), Estd. A.D. 1746.—The collection of China and Glass now on view in their Galleries fully maintains the high reputation and pre-eminence enjoyed by "Mortlock's" for the last century and a half, and well repays a visit of inspection.

Almond soup is almost out of date, but it is excellent for variety's sake :—

Blanch and pound 6 oz. of Valencia and ½ oz. of bitter almonds, adding a little veal broth to prevent them oiling. Soak 4 oz. of crumb of bread in boiling milk. When cold, drain the moisture from it, pound, and put the whole into a stewpan with a quart of veal stock and a blade of mace. Simmer half an hour, then rub through the tammy. Return the soup to the stewpan to warm with a little boiling milk and a pinch of cayenne pepper. At the moment of serving, add the yolks of two eggs mixed with a gill of cream, season with salt and a pinch of sugar. The soup must not boil after the eggs are added.

This dish of spinach and eggs is nice for a second course :—

Thoroughly wash and boil the spinach, rub it through a wire sieve and work it up in a stewpan with pepper and salt to taste. When the spinach is quite hot put it into a buttered, fancy, fire-proof dish ; scoop out little hollows, in which place four or five poached eggs. Pour a little good white sauce over them, sprinkle them with grated parmesan cheese and bake them a nice colour in a sharp oven.

You will find this a capital lunch sweet :—

First line a French tart tin with puff paste, and put a layer of apricot jam at the bottom. Work two eggs with 2 oz. of pounded sugar in a basin until creamy, add 1 oz. of butter, melted, and 1 oz. of crushed ratafias. Pour the mixture into the prepared tin, garnish around the edge with leaves of puff paste, sprinkle it with pounded sugar, and bake it a nice colour in a moderate oven.

Finally, this is a lovely "Iced Soufflé" and quite original :—

Put a tumbler of sherry into a stewpan with 6 oz. of sugar, pour it, when boiling, on to the beaten yolks of 5 eggs, return it to the stewpan and stir it until it thickens. Then whisk the custard until it is cold ; add a few drops of essence of vanilla, and mix lightly into it half a pint of whipped cream and the whites of the eggs whipped to a stiff froth. Put the mixture into a soufflé dish, with a band of greased paper 2 in. higher than the mould, pinned round the outside, sprinkle a few bruised ratafias on the top and freeze it in a charged ice cave in the usual way for three or four hours.

Ever, dear, your loving cousin, MADGE.

CIGARES DE JOY
(JOY'S CIGARETTES)
Immediately Relieve
ASTHMA, WHEEZING, CHRONIC BRONCHITIS
Chemists & Stores, box of 35, 2/6, or Post Free from WILCOX & Co., 83, Mortimer Street, London, W.
TRIAL SAMPLE FREE.

WHY DRINK INFERIOR TEA?
UNITED KINGDOM TEA COMPANY'S TEAS
DIRECT FROM THE GROWERS.
1/-, 1/3, 1/4, 1/6, 1/7, 1/9, & 2/- per lb., DELIVERED CARRIAGE PAID.
Write for Samples, sent free, taste them, and judge for yourselves. Amazing superiority in Quality! Great Economy in prices.
Offices: 21, MINCING LANE, LONDON, E.C.

ACCIDENT ASSURANCE.
ACCIDENT AND DISEASE ASSURANCE.
EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY ASSURANCE.
FIDELITY GUARANTEE.
RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE CO.,
Established 1849. Claims Paid £3,850,000.
64, CORNHILL, LONDON. A. VIAN, Secretary.

BEFORE INSURING YOUR LIFE write to us We shall not call on you, unless by special desire. Discount of 15 to 25 per cent. allowed off first premiums.—ARTHUR HARROLD & CO., Insurance Brokers, Wheeler Gate Nottingham.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN, in all parts, receiving RESIDENT PATIENTS sent gratis, with full particulars. Schools also recommended.—Medical, &c., Association, Ltd., 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C. Tel. Add., "Triform, London." Telephone No: 1,854 (Gerrard).

Hampton & Sons Ltd
Decorations.
Furniture.
Carpets.
Fabrics.
Fine Arts.
SPECIAL NOTICE.
THE important additions to their Galleries for Antiques having been completed, Hampton & Sons beg to announce that throughout this series of specially constructed Galleries they are now showing the MOST EXTENSIVE RANGE of GENUINE ANTIQUE FURNITURE to be seen in London.
HAVING, through the great success of their Inaugural Sale in January, cleared every Department of their House of all Surplus Stock, Hampton & Sons' Galleries now exhibit a unique display of all the latest and most tasteful productions in Decorations Furniture
Carpets Upholstery
Fabrics China and Glass
Ironmongery &c.
Works: Belvedere Road, S.E.
Pall Mall East, S.W.

A Feature of the Metropolis.
SPIERS & POND'S
CRITERION RESTAURANT, Piccadilly Circus, London, W.
EAST ROOM. Finest Cuisine, unsurpassed by the most renowned Parisian Restaurants. Luncheons, Dinners, and Suppers, à la carte and prix fixe. Viennese Band.
GRAND HALL. Musical Dinner 3/6 per head. Accompanied by the Imperial Austrian Band.
WEST ROOM. Academy Luncheon 2/6 Diner Parisien 5/-, during both of which the renowned Mandolin Quartette performs.
BUFFET & GRILL ROOM. Quick service à la carte and moderate prices. Joints in each room fresh from the Spit every half-hour.
AMERICAN BAR. Service of special American Dishes, Grills, &c.
Splendid Suites of Rooms for Military and other Dinners.

Whiskey and Health.

As is well known to the Medical Faculty the importance of age and purity in Whiskey cannot be over-estimated.

Of GEO. ROE'S Celebrated "GR" WHISKEY "The British Medical Journal" writes: "It has a soft and mellow taste, evidently produced by ageing, and altogether the 'GR' Whiskey is of excellent quality," and this statement has been endorsed by members of the Medical Profession.

This PURE POT-STILL WHISKEY may be had in Bottle, bearing the Distillers' guarantee of PURITY and AGE, SEVEN YEARS OLD, from all Wine and Spirit Merchants and Hotel Proprietors in the United Kingdom.

Price 3/6 per Bott.

In Cases of 2 Gallons (Carriage paid) 42s.

Anyone who has not already done so should write at once to the Company for a free tasting sample.

The Dublin Distillers' Co., Ltd.
Thomas Street Distillery,
Established 1757.
(GEORGE ROE & CO.) DUBLIN.

Fashionable Mourning:

Ladies should remember that

COURTAULD'S

CRAPE

is Waterproof,

and therefore is not damaged by a shower.

Kept by the leading Drapers of the World.

FOR INFANTS AND INVALIDS

MELLIN'S FOOD

When prepared is similar to Breast Milk.

SAMPLES POST FREE FROM

MELLIN'S FOOD WORKS, PECKHAM, S.E.

BENSON'S 'SPECIAL' MAKE 'LADY'S' KEYLESS LEVER

Silver Cases, £5 — 18-ct. Gold Cases, £10

Illustrated Book of Watches, Engagement Rings, Brooches, Bracelets, &c., post-free.

Three-quarter Plate LEVER Movement, Jewelled throughout, Keyless action, with Seconds Dial. In Hunting, Half-Hunting, or Crystal Glass Cases, Monogram free

18-ct. Gold, £10. Silver, £5.

Sent Free and Safe at my risk to all parts.

Selections of Watches and Jewellery sent on approval.

J. W. BENSON,
Steam Factory, Ltd.
62 & 64, LUDGATE HILL,
28, Royal Exchange, E.C., and
25, Old Bond Street, LONDON, W.

MADE BY POPE
Manufacturing Co
HARTFORD,
CONN., U.S.A.

Illustrated Catalogues, showing both Chain and Chainless Models, free from European Representatives:

MARKT & CO.,
25 and 26, SHOE LANE, E.C. West End Depôt: 21, BAKER STREET, W.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS

THROUGH THE GOLD-FIELDS OF ALASKA TO BERING STRAITS.

By Harry De Windt. With Map and 33 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, cloth, 16s.

"As interesting a book of travels as has been written these many years."—Academy.

"Mr. De Windt's book gives, for the first time, a connected and graphic account of a country to which attention must of necessity be more and more directed. . . . It is pleasantly written, and fully illustrated by reproductions of photographs taken on the spot. . . . It can hardly fail to be welcome to all who love a volume of adventurous travel."—Times.

"The story of his rescue at half-past the eleventh hour by a belated whaler is one of the most dramatic and thrilling bits of romance in real life I have read for some time."—Pall Mall Gazette.

THE LIFE OF NAPOLEON III.

By Archibald Forbes. With 37 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, cloth, 12s.

"Adds to the accuracy of an historical annal the charm of romance. . . . He has compiled a stirring narrative. With the first blast of the trumpet of war, the pluckiest, most resourceful, and most successful war correspondent of the century is at his best again. The story of the campaign is a brilliant piece of writing. It carries the reader breathless to the closing scene at Chislehurst."—Punch.

RECORDS OF OLD TIMES:

Historical, Social, Political, Sporting, and Agricultural. By J. K. Fowler ("Rusticus"). Demy 8vo, cloth, with Nine Illustrations, 10s. 6d.

"The book is racy of the soil, and its comments on men and manners are often diverting."—Leeds Mercury.

"The records of a man who has evidently taken a keen and unflagging interest in life as he has known it, and such men are always worth listening to when they fall to talking, especially when their memories travel so far back as Mr. Fowler's."—Daily Chronicle.

"He writes in the fine, bluff, John Bull style, and at the same time like a man of culture who has travelled and seen much."—Scotsman.

PARIS.

By E. Zola. Translated by E. A. Vizetelly. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

"The book is strong in conception, and strong in execution. It is informed with an immense pity for the woes of humanity, with a virile sincerity and a rugged and appealing eloquence."—Daily News.

"'Paris' will bring M. Zola new admirers and new friends, for it shows him to be not only a great writer, but a man of noble aspirations and splendid courage."—Pall Mall Gazette.

Also by E. Zola, crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

ROME.	THE DREAM.	FAT AND THIN.
LOURDES.	DR. PASCAL.	HIS EXCELLENCY.
THE DOWNFALL.	MONEY.	THE DRAM-SHOP.

THE DISASTER.

By Paul and Victor Margueritte. Translated by Frederic Lees. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

"This powerful picture . . . is among the finest descriptions of war that have been penned."—Athenæum.

"A strong, a remarkable book."—Speaker.

"An enthralling picture. . . . One of the most convincing descriptions of war in existence. The glory and the horror of it burn and shudder in every page. It is more terrible than M. Zola's 'Downfall'; it flashes here and there more vividly than Mr. Stephen Crane's episodes."—Star.

NEW SIX-SHILLING BOOKS.

COLONEL THORNDYKE'S SECRET.

By G. A. Henty.

WAS SHE JUSTIFIED?

By Frank Barrett, Author of "Folly Morrison," &c.

"As a story of strong human interest and as a study of character, the latest novel will hold rank with any that has gone before—and this is saying a great deal. . . . The story is full of incident, and the situations are effective in their strongly dramatic setting. The novel will be read with satisfaction and pleasure."—Scotsman.

MISS BALMAINE'S PAST.

By B. M. Croker, Author of "Beyond the Pale," &c.

"A very enchanting story. . . . Written with vivacity, all the characters developed most clearly, and with never a dull page in the book, 'Miss Balmaine's Past' is a very delightful novel."—Vanity Fair.

A WOMAN TEMPTED HIM.

By William Westall, Author of "With the Red Eagle," &c.

"As a story of domestic intrigue and financial vicissitude it is skilfully planned and alluringly unrolled."—Daily Mail.

THIS LITTLE WORLD.

By D. Christie Murray, Author of "A Capful o' Nails."

"Mr. Murray has never done anything better than this fine story."—Birmingham Post.

NEW THREE-AND-SIXPENNY NOVELS.

THE LAWTON GIRL.

By Harold Frederic. With Frontispiece by F. Barnard.

"'The Lawton Girl' is a strong book, by the author of that remarkable story 'Seth's Brother's Wife'. . . . It is one of the best, most pathetic, and, in the highest sense, most humorous, books which have come even from America within the last few years."—Academy.

TALES OF TRAIL AND TOWN.

By Bret Harte. With a Frontispiece by Jacomb-Hood.

"All that is necessary is to say that only the author of 'The Luck of Roaring Camp' could have written them, and to give their appetising titles."—Academy.

TRUE BLUE;

or, "The Lass that Loved a Sailor." By Herbert Russell.

"A remarkably spirited narrative."—Echo.

"A straightforward, refreshing little story of a remarkable type rarely met with nowadays. . . . The whole effect is pleasant."—Pall Mall Gazette.

TALES IN PROSE AND VERSE.

By D. Christie Murray, Author of "Joseph's Coat."

"We doubt whether so finely wrought a picture of the human waif is to be found in all fact-built fiction as that of Moses Lowenstein."—World.

NEW TWO-SHILLING NOVELS.

THE CHRONICLES OF MICHAEL DANEVITCH.

By Dick Donovan.

UNDER SEALED ORDERS.

By Grant Allen.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

MR. HEINEMANN'S NEW BOOKS.

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE:

A CRITICAL STUDY.

By GEORGE BRANDES.

2 vols., Roxburghe gilt top or buckram uncut, demy 8vo, 24s. net.

The Outlook.—"Dr. Brandes's work exceeds the promises of its title, for he offers us much more than a critical study of his subject—he reconstitutes the entire social history of the age, sets the poet in his right atmosphere, and does both with remarkable learning and insight. His volumes are a perfect armoury of fact, suggestion, and criticism."

Literatures of the World. Vol. IV. Crown 8vo, 6s.

A HISTORY OF ITALIAN LITERATURE.

By RICHARD GARNETT, C.B., LL.D.

The Daily Mail.—"Breadth of view, culture, and thoroughness without pedantry characterise this history. We see Italian Literature not merely in its local proportions, but as an influence spreading wide over the literatures of other nations, and most conspicuously, perhaps, over our own."

THE WORKERS: AN EXPERIMENT IN REALITY.

By WALTER A. WYCKOFF.

With illustrations. 1 vol., crown 8vo., 3s. 6d.

NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

DREAMERS OF THE GHETTO.

By I. ZANGWILL.

The Daily Telegraph.—"Displays with conspicuous force and brilliancy all the finer qualities of his earlier works."

THE WAR OF THE WORLDS.

By H. G. WELLS, Author of "The Time Machine."

The Spectator.—"As a writer of scientific romance, Mr. Wells has never been surpassed. Even when he is most awful there is always something human about his characters. Both Poe and Mr. Wells are followers of Swift, but Mr. Wells keeps nearest to the human side of the author of Gulliver."

THE MINISTER OF STATE.

By J. A. STEUART.

The World.—"The working of character and the power of self-making have rarely been so finely delineated as in this novel, which is nothing that fiction ought not to be, while its qualities place it far above the novels we are accustomed to. It is dramatic, romantic, and realistic."

THE FOURTH NAPOLEON.

By CHARLES BENHAM.

The Saturday Review.—"A definite attitude to life, the courage of his opinion of human nature, and a biting humour, have enabled Mr. Benham to write a very good novel indeed. The book is worked out thoroughly; the people in it are alive: they are interesting."

THE SCOURGE-STICK.

By Mrs. CAMPBELL PRAED.

The Daily Telegraph.—"Undeniably powerful and interesting."

THE BETH BOOK.

By SARAH GRAND, Author of "The Heavenly Twins."

Punch.—"The heroine is one of Sarah Grand's most fascinating creations. The story is absorbing; the truth to nature in the characters every reader will recognise."

THE TRIUMPH OF DEATH.

By GABRIELE D'ANNUNZIO.

The Pall Mall Gazette.—"A masterpiece. The story holds and haunts one. . . . A great prose poem that cannot be surpassed. The work of a master—a master whose genius is beyond dispute."

THE BROOM OF THE WAR-GOD.

By H. N. BRAILSFORD.

Truth.—"All go from the first to the last page. A singularly vivid narrative in the form of a novel of the Græco-Turkish war; every line bears the impress of absolute truthfulness."

CLEO THE MAGNIFICENT.

By Z. Z., Author of "A Drama in Dutch."

The Daily Mail.—"A strong piece of work: more than commonly clever, conscientious, and sound."

GOD'S FOUNDLING.

By A. J. DAWSON, Author of "In the Bight of Benin."

The Daily Telegraph.—"The dénouement of this brilliant and powerful romance is every whit as satisfactory as its literary quality."

THE NIGGER of the 'NARCISSUS.'

By JOSEPH CONRAD.

A. T. Quiller-Couch.—"Mr. Conrad knows the life he is writing about and he knows his seamen too. By consequence, the crew of the "Narcissus" are the most plausibly life-like set of rascals that ever sailed through the pages of fiction."

London: WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford-street, W.C.

SMITH, ELDER, & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

With a Map, post 8vo, 6s.

EGYPT IN THE NINETEENTH CENTURY; or, Mehemet Ali and his Successors until the British Occupation in 1882.

By DONALD A. CAMERON, H.B.M.'s Consul at Port Said.

The Saturday Review says: "This is a book which was distinctly wanted. As a book of reference it should prove invaluable to journalists, and as a lucid account of how Egypt became what she was when England took her in hand, it will be instructive to every intelligent reader."

THE CORRESPONDENCE OF A DISTINGUISHED IRISHMAN.

With a Portrait, demy 8vo, 12s. 6d.

MR. GREGORY'S LETTER-BOX, 1813-30.

Edited By LADY GREGORY.

From the Freeman's Journal: "This is a book of peculiar fascination. It deals with the secret history of the Irish Executive during the days of its keenest struggles against the Catholic Emancipation movement. A most interesting and useful volume."

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION OF GARDNER'S "HOUSEHOLD MEDICINE."

THIRTEENTH EDITION. With numerous Illustrations, demy 8vo, 8s. 6d.

GARDNER'S HOUSEHOLD MEDICINE AND SICK-ROOM GUIDE:

A Description of the Means of Preserving Health, and the Treatment of Diseases, Injuries, and Emergencies. Revised and expressly Adapted for the Use of Families, Missionaries, and Colonists. By W. H. C. STAVELEY, F.R.C.S. Eng.

NEW NOVELS.

Ready this day. Crown 8vo, 6s.

A SOLDIER OF MANHATTAN, and His Adventures at Ticonderoga and Quebec.

By J. A. ALTSHELER, Author of "The Sun of Saratoga."

FOR THE RELIGION: Being the Records of Blaise de Bernauld.

By HAMILTON DRUMMOND. Crown 8vo, 6s.

From the ACADEMY.—"We have no hesitation in awarding 'For the Religion' a place in the first rank of the historical novels of the day. Altogether a very excellent book."

London: SMITH, ELDER, & CO., 15, Waterloo-place.

MRS. COULSON KERNAHAN'S NEW NOVEL.

TREWINNOT OF GUY'S.

Cloth gilt, 6s. [Ready Thursday.

London: JOHN LONG, 6, Chandos-street, Strand.

INDIAN FRONTIER TROUBLES.

THE KAFIRS OF THE HINDU-KUSH.

By Sir GEORGE SCOTT ROBERTSON, K.C.S.I. Illustrated by A. D. McCormick Royal 8vo, £1 11s. 6d.

"One of the most valuable and entertaining books ever written by Indian officers."—Daily News.

"A gallant record of its author's courage and capacity."—Pall Mall Gazette.

STRUGGLE IN THE FAR EAST.

WHAT WILL JAPAN DO? A FORECAST.

By J. MORRIS. Author of "Advance Japan." Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

"His descriptions of the naval fights are most graphic and inspiriting."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"An illuminating guide."—St. James's Gazette.

"A clever bit of constructive work, and worth reading."—Birmingham Post.

LAWRENCE & BULLEN, Limited, 16, Henrietta-street, Covent Garden, London.

ON THE STŒCHIOLOGICAL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION,

ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, AND ALL THROAT AND LUNG COMPLAINTS

By JOHN FRANCIS CHURCHILL, M.D.

One Shilling, Post Free.

T. BURLEIGH, LATE DAVID STOTT, 370, OXFORD STREET.

NEW BOOKS.

NOW READY. Price 5s.

HIS GRACE O' THE GUNNE.

By I. HOOPER, Author of "A Singer of Marly." Crown 8vo, cloth.

"It is marked by a strong individuality and an artistic conception of harmonious colouring which at no time is at fault. There is a fine suggestion of reserved strength in the book which is not the least of its attractions, while the easy flow of language and the natural avoidance of anything like exaggeration or affectation, are features which also contribute to the charm of the pages. . . . All is set forth with singular power and vividness, and the reader closes the book muchly impressed with the ability of the author."—Scotsman.

"The character painting is excellent. 'His Grace o' the Gunne,' as Kirke was nicknamed, Madam Celia, Colonel Challoner, Everard Challoner, Dickon Fleming, are clever, life-like portraits, drawn with an ease, a vigour, and a truth to nature that merits commendation. The book has a real breath of 'Flora and the country green' about it, such as we are so accustomed to note in the works of Mr. Thomas Hardy and Mr. R. D. Blackmore."—Glasgow Herald.

THE DREAM CHARLOTTE.

By BETHAM EDWARDS. Cheap Edition. Crown 8vo, cloth, price 3s. 6d.

A MODERN CRUSADER.

Cheap Edition. Crown 8vo, cloth, price 3s. 6d.

NOW READY. Price 3s. 6d. net.

WHO'S WHO, 1898.

An Annual Biographical Dictionary. FIFTIETH YEAR OF ISSUE. Containing 1,242 New Biographies. In crown 8vo, 864 pages, bound in cloth gilt, with gilt edges and rounded corners.

"One of the most wonderful productions of the day. . . . This is the best year-book, taking it all in all, that is published in our country."—British Weekly.

NOW READY. Second Edition.

THROUGH FINLAND IN CARTS.

By Mrs. ALEC TWEEDIE. Demy 8vo, cloth. Containing Map and Eighteen full-page Illustrations. Price 15s.

ROME, HANDBOOK to CHRISTIAN and ECCLESIASTICAL.

By H. M. and M. A. R. T. Part II.—The Liturgy in Rome. Crown 8vo, cloth, price 5s.

"This guide-book is in its department very complete, and it is crammed full of curious learning."—Literary World.

NOW READY.

THE VITALITY OF CHRISTIAN DOGMAS.

By A. SABATIER, D.D., Dean of the Faculty of Protestant Theology, Paris. Translated by Mrs. Em. Christen. With Preface by the Very Reverend the Hon. W. H. Fremantle, D.D., Dean of Ripon. Crown 8vo, 96 pages, cloth, price 1s. 6d. net.

"It is a powerful and thoughtful study of dogma in the light of modern scientific doctrine."—Scotsman.

A. & C. BLACK, Soho-square, London.

BAEDEKER'S TOURIST GUIDE-BOOKS.

Illustrated with numerous Maps, Plans, Panoramas, and Views.

12mo, cloth.

GREECE. 8s.
GREAT BRITAIN. 10s.
LONDON AND ITS ENVIRONS, 6s.
BELGIUM AND HOLLAND. 6s.
THE RHINE. 7s.
NORTHERN GERMANY. 8s.
SOUTHERN GERMANY. 5s.
AUSTRIA. 7s.
THE EASTERN ALPS. 10s.
NORTHERN ITALY. 8s.
CENTRAL ITALY AND ROME. 7s. 6d.
SOUTHERN ITALY AND SICILY. 6s.
NORWAY AND SWEDEN. 10s.
NORTHERN FRANCE. 7s.
SOUTH-EASTERN FRANCE. 5s.
SOUTH-WESTERN FRANCE. 5s.
PARIS AND ITS ENVIRONS. 6s.
SPAIN AND PORTUGAL. 16s.
SWITZERLAND. 8s.
EGYPT. 15s.
PALESTINE AND SYRIA. 12s.
UNITED STATES. 12s.
CANADA. 5s.
THE TRAVELLER'S MANUAL OF CONVERSATION IN ENGLISH, FRENCH, GERMAN, AND ITALIAN. 3s.
CONVERSATION DICTIONARY IN FOUR LANGUAGES: English, French, German, and Italian. 3s.

THE THOROUGH GUIDE SERIES.

Illustrated with numerous Maps and Plans.

Edited by M. J. B. BADDELEY, B.A., and C. S. WARD, M.A.

THE ENGLISH LAKE DISTRICT. Net 5s.
SCOTLAND. Part I. The Highlands. Net 6s. 6d.
SCOTLAND. Part II. Northern Highlands. Net 3s. 6d.
SCOTLAND. Part III. The Lowlands. Net 4s.
NORTH DEVON and NORTH CORNWALL. Net 3s. 6d.
SOUTH DEVON and SOUTH CORNWALL. Net 4s.
THE PEAK DISTRICT. Net 3s.
THE EASTERN COUNTIES. Net 3s. 6d.
SOUTH WALES. Net 3s. 6d.
NORTH WALES. Net 5s. Part I., net 3s.; Part II., net 2s. 6d.
IRELAND. Part I. Northern Counties. Net 4s.
IRELAND. Part II. Southern Counties. Net 5s.
SURREY and SUSSEX, including TUNBRIDGE WELLS. Net 3s. 6d.
YORKSHIRE. Part I. (East). Net 2s. 6d.
YORKSHIRE. Part II. (West). Net 3s. The Two Parts in One Volume. Net 5s.
ORKNEY and SHETLAND. Net 1s.
THE ISLE OF WIGHT. Net 2s. 6d.

London: DULAU & CO., 87, Soho-square, W.

STERILITY IN WOMEN: Its Causes and Curative Treatment. An Illustrated treatise based on the special practise and observation of the last 15 years. Price 3s. 6d.; post free, 3s. 8d.
London: HENRY RENSHAW, 356, Strand.

THE SURGICAL AID SOCIETY.

Chief Office—SALISBURY SQUARE, LONDON, E.C.

President—THE RIGHT HON. THE EARL OF ABERDEEN.

This SOCIETY supplies Trusses, Elastic Stockings, Crutches, Artificial Limbs, Artificial Eyes, &c., and every other description of mechanical support to the poor, without limit as to locality or disease.

Water Beds and Invalid Chairs and Couches are lent to the Afflicted upon the Recommendation of Subscribers.

22,247 Appliances given during the past year.

Over 280 Patients Relieved every week.

Annual Subscription of 10s. 6d., or Life Subscription of 5 Guineas entitles to Two Recommendations per Annum; the number of Letters increasing in proportion to amount of contribution.

SUBSCRIPTIONS and DONATIONS are earnestly solicited, and will be thankfully received by the Bankers, Messrs. Barclay & Co., Ltd., Lombard-street, or by the Secretary at the Office of the Society.

RICHARD C. TRESIDDER, Secretary.

GREAT NORTHERN CENTRAL HOSPITAL, Holloway

UNENDOWED and VERY POOR.

PATIENTS ADMITTED FREE, sickness and poverty the only passports to relief.

£10,000 needed annually to support the work of relieving 1,400 in-patients, and 25,000 out-patients.

LEWIS H. GLENTON KERR, Secretary.

SPIERS & POND's STORES

QUEEN VICTORIA STREET, E.C.

Opposite St. Paul's Station, L. C. & D. Railway.

STATIONERY DEPARTMENT.

Full Range. All Makers.

FOUNTAIN PENS.

"The Swan," Fine Medium, Medium Broad, or Broad Points, fitted with Iridium-pointed 14 Carat Gold Pen, chased Vulcanite, 9/-; with Gold plated Bands, 10/6.

"The Pelican" Self-feeding Pen, Plain, 4¾ inches long, Gold Nib, 8/-; Gold mounted, 11/6.

"The Eagle" Fountain Pen, chased Vulcanite, 7/6 and 10/6; Gold mounted 9/- and 12/6.

"The Caw" Fountain Pen, chased Vulcanite, 10/6; Gold mounted, 12/6.

"The Swift" Reservoir Pen, Pocket size, with Iridium Pen, 2/6.

"The Waterman Ideal" Fountain Pen, Plain Vulcanite, 7/3 and 8/4; Gold mounted, 10/- and 14/6.

"The Neptune" Fountain Pen, 2/-.

Price Book, No. 50, 1,000 Pages, Illustrated, Free on Application.

SPIERS & POND's STORES

QUEEN VICTORIA STREET, E.C.

Opposite St. Paul's Station, L. C. & D. Railway.

LIQUEURS OF THE GRANDE CHARTREUSE.

These delicious Liqueurs, which have come so much into public favour on account of their wonderful properties of aiding Digestion and preventing Dyspepsia, can now be had of all the principal Wine and Spirit Merchants, and all good Hotels and Restaurants throughout the Kingdom.

Sole Consignee: W. DOYLE, 35, Crutched Friars, London, E.C.

NOW READY. Price 6s. New Novel by John Bickerdyke, Author of 'Daughters of Thespis.'

HER WILD OATS.

A Story of the Stage, and Thames Life.

London: T. BURLEIGH, 370, Oxford-street, W.

Fourth Edition (Sixth Thousand), crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

HEALTH and CONDITION in the ACTIVE and the SEDENTARY, by N. E. YORKE-DAVIES, Royal Coll. Phys. Lond., Author of "Foods for the Fat."—Contents:—Perfect health, how to attain. Deviations from health. Insidious causes of disease. Causes of premature decay. Diseases due to diet only curable by diet. Epochs in life. Exigencies of modern society. Idiosyncrasies. The foundation of health. Tight lacing, diseases from. Preservation of female beauty. A short life and a merry one. Constitutional flaws. Aristocratic ailments. The London season. The débutante. The diet of grief. Vegetarianism injurious. Ailments of mal-nutrition and of excess. Obesity, gout, acidity, leanness, indigestion, &c., &c.

Opinions of the Press.

"Those who desire a long and healthy life will perhaps find their best means of obtaining it in the study and observance of such rules as are laid down here. The book is a rational and practical guide to 'Health and Condition.'"—Morning Post.

"Full of valuable hints and suggestive warnings as to the results of improper food and insufficient exercise."—Daily Telegraph.

London: SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON, & CO., St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, Fleet-street, E.C.

A Cup of Chocolat Suchard

accurately prepared, contains all the delicious, soothing, and restorative properties known to exist in Cocoa. Cup for cup, "Chocolat Suchard" is noted for its superiority of flavour and aroma over all other like preparations.

Chocolat Suchard

owes these characteristics not only to the choice materials it is made of, but equally so, perhaps, to the clean and careful methods by which it is uniformly prepared. The recognition of these sterling qualities has led to a largely increased consumption of Chocolat Suchard among the better classes all over the world. Beware of imitations.

All Chocolates, Cocoas and Bonbons bearing the name of Suchard are of the highest quality only.

70 YEARS' REPUTATION.

Welcomed in Every Home.

The POLYPHON MUSICAL BOX, with Interchangeable Steel Discs, is the greatest novelty of the age. It plays to perfection any air from the Operas, or renders most brilliantly any selections of secular or sacred music which a purchaser may desire.

All Dealers, or write for Illustrated No. 50 Catalogue, post free.

NICOLE FRÈRES, LTD.

21, Ely Place, Holborn, London, E.C.

	The Infanta.	The Kleberg.	The Gordon.	The Eugene.
With 6 Discs	32/-	51/-	85/-	170/-
Extra Discs	5d.	8d.	1/4	2/6

For Higher Priced Instruments see Catalogue.

LONDON AND COUNTY ADVANCE AND DISCOUNT COMPANY, Limited.—Cash advanced from £10 to £500, without preliminary fees or deductions for interest, for short or long periods, repayable by easy instalments, at moderate rates, upon approved security. Bills Discounted. Forms free. Offices, 57 and 58, Chancery-lane, W.C.—JOHN STONE, Secretary.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

For the CIRCULATION and SALE of all the BEST

ENGLISH, FRENCH, GERMAN, ITALIAN, RUSSIAN, & SPANISH BOOKS.

TOWN SUBSCRIPTIONS from ONE GUINEA per annum.

LONDON BOOK SOCIETY (for weekly exchange of Books at the Houses of Subscribers) from TWO GUINEAS per annum.

COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTIONS from TWO GUINEAS per annum.

N.B.—Two or Three Friends may UNITE IN ONE SUBSCRIPTION, and thus lessen the Cost of Carriage.

SURPLUS LIBRARY BOOKS NOW OFFERED AT GREATLY REDUCED PRICES.

A NEW CLEARANCE LIST (100 PAGES) SENT GRATIS AND POST FREE TO ANY ADDRESS.

The List contains Popular Works in Travel, Sport, History, Biography, Science, and Fiction. Also New and Surplus Copies of French, German, Italian, and Spanish Books.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY, LIMITED,

30—34, NEW OXFORD ST.; 241, BROMPTON ROAD, S.W.; 48, QUEEN VICTORIA ST., E.C. LONDON; AND AT BARTON ARCADE, MANCHESTER.

AMUSEMENTS.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.
Sole Lessee, Mr. Frederick Harrison.
Managers, Mr. Frederick Harrison and Mr. Cyril Maude.
EVERY EVENING, at 8.30, THE LITTLE MINISTER, by J. M. Barrie.
Miss WINIFRED EMERY and Mr. CYRIL MAUDE.
MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY and SATURDAY, at 2.30.

QUEEN'S HALL.
SUNDAY AFTERNOON CONCERTS.
EVERY SUNDAY, at 3.30.
Conductor, Mr. Henry J. Wood.
The Queen's Hall Grand Orchestra.
Admission free. Reserved seats, 2s., 3s., 1s., and 6d.

ROYAL SOCIETY of PAINTER-ETCHERS and ENGRAVERS.—ANNUAL EXHIBITION of the Society NOW OPEN at the Society's Gallery, No. 5A, Pall Mall East, from 10 to 6. Admission 1s.
A. STEWART, Secretary.

"ECCE HOMO!" Munkacsy's Sacred Masterpiece. This famous Work, containing over 70 figures, is NOW ON VIEW for the first time in London at the DOWDESWELL GALLERIES, 160, New Bond-street. Admission One Shilling. Descriptive pamphlet, 6d. post free. 315,000 people inspected the Picture during its exhibition at Budapest, often at the rate of 7,000 daily.

NEW NIAGARA. SKATING.
Morning, 9.30 to 1; Evening, 8 to 11, 3/-
Afternoon, 3 to 6.30, 5/-
Non-Skaters (Afternoon), 2/6.
SEASON and HALF-SEASON TICKETS ISSUED.

BRIGHTON ICE RINK. SKATING.
Morning, 9.30 to 1 Evening, 8 to 11, 2/6
Afternoon, 3 to 6.30, 4/- Non-Skaters, in the Afternoon, 2/-
Monthly Tickets, £2 10s.
SEASON and HALF-SEASON TICKETS issued.

NATIONAL SKATING PALACE (Hengler's), 7, Argyll-street, Regent-street, W.
REAL ICE. OPEN DAILY, 10.30 a.m. to 11 p.m. Admission 3s. GRAND FANCY DRESS CARNIVAL. ST. PATRICK'S DAY (THIS DAY), 17th March. Tickets, to include Supper, 25s. Valuable Prizes for the best Fancy Costumes.

OLYMPIA.
BARNUM AND BAILEY.
GREATEST SHOW ON EARTH.
LAST THREE WEEKS.
Positively closing the London Engagement on Saturday, April 2.
Touring the Provinces on 70 American Railway Cars, and Exhibiting the Undivided Show under 12 Mammoth Canvas Pavilions, Seating nearly 15,000 persons.

3 Circus Companies in 3 Rings.
2 Olympian Stages, 1 Huge Race-track.
2 Complete Menageries, 3 Herds of Elephants.
Museum of Living Freaks and Curiosities.
20 Funniest Clowns on Earth.
70 Horses Performing in One Ring.
400 Horses, 2 Droves Camels, Hosts of Quaer Animals.
1,001 Marvellous Sights and Wonderful Objects.

TWO GRAND EXHIBITIONS DAILY,
at 2.0 and 8.0 p.m.
Doors open at 12.30 and 6.30.

Early Gates open (Hammersmith-road) at 12.0 noon and 6.0 p.m. for 3s. seats and upwards. Early entrance fee, 6d. extra.

Owing to the stupendously large show, and the general magnitude of the Exhibitions, necessitating great preparations, the Menageries, Freak, and Horse Fair Departments can only be open from 12.0 to 4.15 p.m., and from 6.0 to 10.30 p.m.

No Promenade Tickets sold. Every ticket entitling holder to a reserved numbered seat, and admitting to all advertised departments without extra charge.

Prices.—Amphitheatre, 1s. and 2s.; Arena seats, 2s., 3s., and 4s.; Balcony seats, 3s.; Stalls, 5s., 7s. 6d.; Private Boxes, 5 and 6 seats, £3 3s.; Single box seats, 10s. 6d. Special prices for Royal Box when not engaged. Children between 4 and 10 years of age half-price to all except 1s. and 2s. seats. Box-office open from 9.0 a.m. to 9.30 p.m.; 1s. and 2s. seats on sale only after doors open. All other seats may be booked in advance at box-office and at usual libraries.

ROYAL COUNTIES'
AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.
PATRON: HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN.
PRESIDENT, 1898: VISCOUNT BARING.

GREAT SHOW AT PORTSMOUTH
JUNE 7th, 8th, 9th, and 10th, 1898.
FOR the Exhibition of Sheep, Horses, Cattle, Pigs, Poultry, Butter, Bees, Butter Making, Horse Shoeing, &c., Machinery, Implements, Farm and Dairy Utensils, Carriages, Seeds, and Miscellaneous Articles.
£2,000 IN PRIZES.
ENTRIES CLOSE AS FOLLOWS:—Implements, &c., April 2nd; Stock, April 16th (post entries at double fees April 22nd); Poultry, Butter Making, and Horse Shoeing, April 30th.
Schedules of Prizes and Forms of Entry may be obtained of the Secretary,
CHARLES SIMMONS,
Basingstoke.

AMUSEMENTS.

LYCEUM.—THE MERCHANT OF VENICE, Matinées Wednesdays and Saturdays, at 2; also Every Thursday and Friday Nights, and Next Monday and Tuesday, at 8. Henry Irving, Miss Ellen Terry.
WATERLOO and THE BELLS, Every Wednesday and Saturday night, at 8, Henry Irving.
Box-office (Mr. J. Hurst) 10 to 5, and 7.30 to 10. Seats also booked by letter or telegram.
LYCEUM.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.
Proprietor and Manager, Mr. HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE.
TO-NIGHT and EVERY EVENING, at 8.
JULIUS CÆSAR.
MATINEES EVERY WEDNESDAY and SATURDAY, at 2.
Box-office open 10 to 10. Seats booked from 2s. HER MAJESTY'S.

GARRICK.—Lessee, H. T. BRICKWELL.
EVERY EVENING, at 9,
A BRACE OF PARTRIDGES.
Preceded, at 8.5, by THE MUFF OF THE REGIMENT.

PRINCESS'S.—Mr. ALBERT GILMER, Sole Manager.
ENORMOUS SUCCESS OF THE NEW MELODRAMA.
EVERY EVENING, at 8 o'clock,
HOW LONDON LIVES,
By Martyn Field and Arthur Shirley,
For which Mr. CHARLES WARNER is specially engaged,
Miss Kate Tyndall, Miss Geraldine Olliffe, Mr. Oscar Adye, Mr. Charles Garry, &c.

ST. JAMES'S.—Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER,
Sole Lessee and Manager.
EVERY EVENING, at 8, Shakespeare's Comedy of
MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING.
MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY and SATURDAY, at 2.
Box-office open 10 to 10. ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.

COMEDY THEATRE, Panton-street, Haymarket.
Sole Manager, Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY.
EVERY EVENING, at 8.15, a New Play, in Four Acts, entitled
THE SEA FLOWER, by Arthur Law.
Messrs. John Beauchamp, Arthur Playfair, Cosmo Stuart, W. T. Lovell, Wilfred Draycott, A. E. Matthews, Frederick Volpé, Henry Ford, and Charles Groves; Miss Lena Ashwell, Miss Gladys Homfrey (by kind permission of Geo. Edwardes, Esq.), and Miss Eva Moore.
Box-office open 10 to 10. COMEDY THEATRE.

DALY'S THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. AUGUSTIN DALY.—EVERY EVENING, and SATURDAY MATINEE. Mr. George Edwardes's Company in THE GEISHA. The book by Owen Hall. Lyrics by Harry Greenbank. Music by Sydney Jones.

COURT THEATRE, Sloane Square.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH.—TO-NIGHT, at 8.30, TRELAWNY OF THE "WELLS," by A. W. Pinero. Doors 8. Commence 8.30. Box-office now open, 10 to 10. Telephone No. 3,031. MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY, at 2.30.

VAUDEVILLE.
Sole Lessees and Managers, A. & S. GATTI.
EVERY EVENING, at 8.20,
MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY, at 2.30,
THE FRENCH MAID,
With New Songs, Dances, and Dresses.
The very successful Musical Comedy by Basil Hood and Walter Slaughter.
Box-office open 10 to 10.

CRITERION THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. CHARLES WYNDHAM.—EVERY EVENING, at 8.15, THE LIARS, by Henry Arthur Jones. Mr. CHARLES WYNDHAM, Miss MARY MOORE, and Company. MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY, at 2.30.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—EVERY EVENING, New Ballet, THE PRESS, and Sporting Sketch, THE RACE. Grand VARIETIES. Doors open at 7.45.

PALACE, Shaftesbury-avenue.—The HANDSOMEST THEATRE in EUROPE. The finest Variety Entertainment in London. Full Licence. Prices from 6d. Doors open 8.—Manager, Mr. CHARLES MORTON.

TIVOLI, Strand, London.—The Greatest Combination of Talent in London.—Open EVERY EVENING, at 7.30, and SATURDAY MATINEE, at 2.30, with a STAR PROGRAMME, embracing every Artiste of note.—Manager, Mr. VERNON DOWSETT.

LONDON PAVILION.—Signor Pepi, Charles Godfrey, Florrie Forde, Tom Costello, Chas. E. Edwards, Lily Lena, George Lashwood, and many others, including Mark Melford's Sketch, MY WIFE WON'T LET ME. Prices 1s. to £3 3s.—Manager, Mr. FRANK GLENISTER.

MADAME TUSSAUD'S EXHIBITION, Baker-street Station.—Relics of H.M. Queen Victoria. Beautiful Copper-plate Etchings executed by H.M. The Queen and the late Prince Consort.—Admission 1s. Children under Twelve, 6d. Extra rooms, 6d.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—SATURDAY CONCERT, March 19, at 3. Vocalist, Mr. Santley. Pianist, Mr. Frederick Lamond. Conductor, Mr. August Manns. Seats 1s. to 4s.

THEATRE TICKETS.—Boxes, Stalls, Balcony, and Upper Circle Seats in the best positions can be had at any office of the DISTRICT MESSENGERS' COMPANY.—Letters and telegrams, 193, Piccadilly.—Seats for every theatre. If you ever want a MESSENGER FOR ANY PURPOSE, to go any distance, at home or abroad, ask for a "DISTRICT MESSENGER." Offices in all parts of London, open Day and Night. Electric call boxes, to summon messengers, are in every first-class club, hotel, and house.

"TRUTH" HOTEL LIST.

BONCHURCH HOTEL, Bonchurch, Isle of Wight, one mile from Ventnor Station.
A comfortable, quiet, and most beautifully-situated Hotel. Pretty garden. Good sea view.
H. RIBBANDS, Proprietor.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HIGHCLIFFE HOTEL. Unrivalled position, West Cliff, full south. Splendid sea view. Table d'hôte (separate tables). Supplies from Alderney Dairy Farm. Telephone 27.—J. KILNER, Proprietor.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HOTEL MONT DORE.—South aspect, 150 rooms, electric light throughout, passenger lift, first-class cuisine, winter garden and lounge, covered tennis court. Turkish, sea-water, and medicated Baths. The Hotel is within two minutes' walk of the Golf Links.—For tariff, address W. KNEESE, Manager.

BRIGHTON.—GRAND HOTEL.
Centre of Sea Front. Electric Light throughout. Lift to all floors. Bicycle room. INCLUSIVE TERMS IF DESIRED from 10s. 6d. to 15s. per day. For particulars apply to A. D. HOOK, Manager.

BRIGHTON.—BEDFORD HOTEL.—Old-established. Unequalled in situation; opposite West Pier. Spacious coffee and reading rooms; sea-water service; unequalled cuisine; great variety of excellent wines. Moderate tariff. Electric light in all rooms. Passenger lift to all the floors.
GEO. HECKFORD, Manager.

CARBIS BAY HOTEL, Cornwall. The very spot to obtain rest and quietude. Overlooking the finest bay in England. Mild yet bracing climate. Within easy distance of London by G. W. R. Splendid Golf Links. "A more beautiful spot for residence could hardly be imagined."—Truth.

FOLKESTONE.—The LEAS HOTEL.—Situated in private grounds. Adjoining fashionable promenade. Sea views. Refurnished throughout. Passenger lift. Certified sanitation. Excellent cuisine. Moderate tariff. Good golf links and tennis court.

FOLKESTONE.—BATES' HOTEL, West Cliff Gardens, and LONGFORD PRIVATE HOTEL, The Lees. Oldest established and most select Family Hotels in Folkestone. Reduced terms during Winter and Spring months. Pension (new Coffee-room) at Bates' Hotel.—G. L. HART, Proprietor. Sanitation Certified.

GRAND CANARY.—The Newest and Best Hotel is The METROPOLE. Facing the sea. Delightful position. Terms most moderate.
Agents, ELDER, DEMPSTER & CO., 14, Castle-street, Liverpool, and 4, St. Mary Axe, London, E.C.

JERSEY.—GRAND HOTEL.—Beautifully situated, facing the sea, full south, and sheltered from the north-easterly winds, with all modern comforts and liberal management. Reduced winter terms from October 15th.
D. DE LEIDI, Manager.

MALVERN—The IMPERIAL HOTEL occupies the best position, and receives visitors en pension. The golf-links (18 holes) are one of the best in England. Capital stabling for hunters. Droitwich Brine, Turkish and large Swimming Bath in separate buildings.—For tariff, apply to the Proprietor, F. MOERSCHELL.

SALCOMBE (Devon).—BOLT HEAD HOTEL.—This first-class Family Hotel commands magnificent views of English Channel. Delightful cliff walks. Grand coast scenery. Admirable winter health resort. Climate mildest in England. Carriages meet trains when requested. Stabling Billiards. Special terms for winter months and for families.—Apply, Manager.

SANDGATE.—ROYAL KENT HOTEL, a favourite resort of Ruskin. An ideal summer and winter residence, delightfully situated in its own grounds, facing the sea. Redecorated and refurnished. New Coffee-room, Smoking-room, and Conservatory have recently been added. Fifteen minutes from Folkestone. Omnibus meets all trains Sandgate Station.—J. E. TANARE, Prop.

TORQUAY.—IMPERIAL HOTEL.—Under entirely New Management. New sanitary arrangements throughout. It is the largest and best-situated Hotel in Torquay, and the best winter residence on the South Coast. Visitors received en pension or à la carte. Terms moderate.
F. FISCHER Manager.

BURLINGTON HOTELS COMPANY, Limited.

BURLINGTON HOTEL, Cork-street, W., near Burlington Arcade. Central, quiet, and most comfortable.
BUCKINGHAM PALACE HOTEL, S.W., close to Victoria Station. Specialty, Wedding Receptions. Suites of rooms facing Buckingham Palace Gardens from 12s. per day.
} London

BURLINGTON.—The HOTEL BURLINGTON, Boscombe, Bournemouth. 200 rooms, facing sea, and protected from north and east. Acres of beautifully laid-out pleasure grounds, with abundance of winter foliage. A Winter Garden, 300 feet long, facing south, containing dining-room, and kept at a uniform temperature. Nearest approach in England to a Riviera Hotel. 135 minutes from Waterloo. Pullman Car service. East Bournemouth Station. Special Boarding terms. Excellent cuisine for above three Hotels. Tariffs on application to the Managers.

A FINE HOTEL] DOVER [IN DOVER BAY

Accommodates 400 guests. Is superbly appointed, with all the comforts of a well-arranged mansion, at moderate cost. Perfect cuisine. The Dover Golf Links for use of Hotel Burlington visitors. The finest coast hotel in England. Brochure and Tariff free.

Facing the Pleasure Pier and in centre of Dover Bay.

HOTEL BURLINGTON

ROYAL PAVILION HOTEL FOLKESTONE

EASTER ARRANGEMENTS

Concert Every Evening in the Winter Garden. Large Restaurant open as usual, but only a limited number of bed and sitting-rooms, to secure which early application is necessary.

The ROYAL PAVILION HOTEL occupies a sheltered position, yet close to the sea and the Boulogne Steamboat and Promenade Piers, and beautiful Undercliffe private road. Celebrated for its home-like comforts, cuisine, and wines. Electric lighting throughout. Private dairy, farm, gardens, and laundry. Hotel omnibuses meet all trains at Folkestone Central.

The New and Handsome Additional Buildings will be Opened in July.

ROYAL PAVILION HOTEL FOLKESTONE

THE INTERNATIONAL PALACE HOTELS.

CAIRO ..... Shepheard's.
CAIRO ..... Chezireh Palace.
NICE ..... Riviera Palace.
LISBON ..... Avenida Palace.

London Office, 14, Cockspur-street, S.W.

HASTINGS. Due South, Facing Sea.

QUEEN'S HOTEL,

LARGEST AND BEST APPOINTED.
Sunny, and most sheltered position in Hastings and St. Leonards.
ELECTRIC LIGHT. PASSENGER ELEVATOR.
Moderate Tariff. Hotel Flys attend the trains.
WILLIAM GLADE, Manager.

ILFRACOMBE.

A Charming WINTER RESORT, climate mild and equable.

The ILFRACOMBE HOTEL,

First-class Return Tickets issued from London (Waterloo), L. & S. W. R., from November to March, including seven days' bed, board, and attendance, at the Ilfracombe Hotel, £5. 5s. each, available for one month. Ask for Hotel tickets, available by all trains. H. R. GROVER, Manager.

GRAND HOTEL, LYNDHURST (New Forest).—Charming Hotel, recently enlarged. Beautiful grounds of 4 acres adjoin golf links. Hunting, fishing, &c. Trains met at Brockenhurst.
Mrs. HART, Manageress.

INFLUENZA.—GRANVILLE, RAMSGATE.—As recommended by the Faculty, the best of all South-coast resorts to recuperate after the epidemic. Home comforts, combined with all advantages of First-class Hotel. Ozone and Turkish bath establishment, under the supervision of highly-qualified medical man. Terms, apply MANAGER, Granville, Ramsgate.

FOR KLONDIKE,

Passengers should book to Vancouver City, terminus of the CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY. The arrival platform is the departure wharf of all Klondike steamers. Complete outfits can be purchased in Vancouver City cheaper than in the United States. Purchasers save not only in first cost, but escape all Customs duties. Remember Klondike is in Canada. All outfits purchased elsewhere pay an average duty of 30 per cent. Steamers leave Vancouver City regularly direct for the Klondike.—Apply, CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY OFFICES, 67 and 68, King William-street, London Bridge, E.C.; 30, Cockspur-street, Trafalgar-square, W.C.; or ALLAN BROTHERS & CO., Liverpool.

Vancouver Board of Trade,
W. GODFREY, President.

NEW TOURIST RESORTS.

DALMATIA, BOSNIA, AND HERZEGOVINA.

COOK'S SELECT CONDUCTED TOURS.

Opening out an entirely new field for tourists, leaving London April 4th and August 29th, visiting Trieste, Pola, Zara, Sebenico, Spalato, Ragusa, Cattaro, Cettinje, Sarajevo, Banjaluka, Budapesth, Vienna, &c. Illustrated programme post free.—THOS. COOK & SON, Ludgate-circus, London, and Branch Offices.

TEN-GUINEA ROME TOUR.

Organised by Dr. Lunn and Mr. Perowne.

Extensions: NAPLES, FLORENCE, VENICE, RIVIERA.

Lectures by Dean Farrar. Dover-Calais Route.

SECRETARY, 5, Endsleigh Gardens, London, N.W.

JAPAN, CHINA, AUSTRALIA, HONOLULU, FIJI, NEW ZEALAND, and ROUND THE WORLD.

CANADIAN PACIFIC ROUTE.

For berths or descriptive pamphlets, apply CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY, 67 and 68, King William-street, London Bridge, or 30, Cockspur-street, Trafalgar-square, S.W.

BITING EAST WINDS.

"Vinolia" Soap

Is Unequalled for keeping the Skin soft and smooth and the Complexion clear. Contains extra cream and is exquisitely perfumed.

4d 4d

4d 4d

FOR DELICATE, SENSITIVE, IRRITABLE SKINS.

VINOLIA SOAPS—
Premier - 4d.
Floral - - 6d.
Balsamic (Medical) 6d.
Toilet (Otto) 10d.

"Vinolia Shaving Soap"

FOR SENSITIVE FACES. YIELDS A CREAMY LATHER OF CHOICE FRAGRANCE.

6d 6d

6d 6d

CAUSES NO BLOTCHES UNDER THE CHIN.

DOES NOT DRY, EAT INTO, OR IRRITATE THE SKIN.

VINOLIA CREAM, for Chaps, Itching, Face Spots, &c., 1/1½ & 1/9 VINOLIA POWDER, for Redness, Roughness, Toilet, &c., 1/- & 1/9

Dr Thomalla's Hygienic (DOUBLE-TEXTURE) Underclothing.

FOR LADIES, GENTLEMEN, AND CHILDREN.

THE Healthiest, Best, AND Cheapest UNDERCLOTHING.

The essential characteristic is its DOUBLE TEXTURE.

The perspiration being only absorbed by the outer texture, the inner texture remaining always dry, thus safeguarding against Chills. It is indispensable for persons subject to Colds, or afflicted with Gout, Rheumatism, and Nervous Debility. Of unsurpassed durability, and absolutely unshrinkable. Especially recommended for Cyclists, Tourists, and Sportsmen. Procurable from leading Hosiers and Drapers, but if any difficulty is experienced please write to R. LÖWEN, 8, Love-lane, Wood-street, E.C., who will send name of nearest Agent.

REGISTERED Dr THOMALLA'S Hygienic Underclothing TRADE-MARK

Please mention this Paper.

For Longhand, Shorthand, Pen-and-Ink Drawing, Music-Writing, indeed, whenever a Pen is necessary, use only

Adds immeasurably to Celerity and Comfort in writing. Of all Pens most famous.

Made in 3 sizes only at 10s. 6d. 16s. 6d. 25s. UP TO £18 18s. POST FREE.

MABIE, TODD & BARD,

93, Cheapside, London, E.C.

95a, REGENT ST., W., and 3, EXCHANGE ST., MANCHESTER.

POST 6/- FREE.

In Elegant Case Satin-lined complete.

A PERFECT PEN. Simple in construction. Lasts a life-time. Cannot get out of order. Quite equal to the Pens usually sold at Half-a-Guinea.

PRICE LISTS FREE.

FINE, MEDIUM, OR BROAD NIB CAN BE SUPPLIED.
ANY INK CAN BE USED.

A. M. BONNER MANUFACTURING CO.
(Dept. 19), 8, Long Lane, London, E.C

BEST AND SAFEST NATURAL APERIENT.

Hunyadi János

"The Prototype of all Bitter Waters."
THE LANCET.

CAUTION.

Every Bottle bears the Signature of the Proprietor, ANDREAS SAXLEHNER.

THREE GOLD MEDALS.

Exquisite Models. Perfect Fit. Guaranteed Wear.

THE Y & N PATENT DIAGONAL SEAM CORSET

Will not split in the Seams nor tear in the Fabric. Made in White, Black, and all the fashionable colours and Shades in Italian Cloth, Satin, and Coutil, 4/11, 5/11, 6/11, 7/11 per pair and upwards.

CAUTION.—Every genuine Y & N Corset is stamped.

Sold by Drapers and Ladies' Outfitters in the United Kingdom and Colonies

FLORILINE

FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH

Is the BEST LIQUID DENTIFRICE in the WORLD.

PREVENTS THE DECAY OF THE TEETH.

Renders the Teeth Pearly White.

IS PERFECTLY HARMLESS AND DELICIOUS TO THE TASTE.

Is Partly Composed of Honey, and Extracts from Sweet Herbs and Plants.

Of all Chemists and Perfumers throughout the World.

2s. 6d. per Bottle.

FLORILINE TOOTH POWDER,
Only put in Glass Jars, Price 1s.

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER

Prevents the Hair from Falling off.

Restores Grey or White Hair to its ORIGINAL COLOUR.

Being delicately perfumed, it leaves no Unpleasant Odour.

IS NOT A DYE.

Should be in every House where a HAIR RENEWER is needed.

ASK YOUR CHEMIST OR HAIRDRESSER FOR

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Price 3s. 6d. per bottle.

WATER SUPPLY.

Send for Illustrated List, No. 49, of

JOHN BLAKE'S Patent Self-Acting HYDRAULIC RAMS

For Raising Water for the Supply of Towns, Villages, Irrigation, Railway Stations, Mansions, Fountains, Farms, &c.

No cost for Motive Power, which is obtained from a Stream of Water passing through the Ram. No Oiling or Packing required. Made in Sizes to raise from 300 to 400,000 gallons per day. Will force to a Height of 800 feet.

Fig. A.—This Ram lifts part of the same water that works it. (Engraved from photo. of Ram which raises 250,000 gallons per day of 24 hours to medium heights, with good working fall.)

This View represents Fig. A Ram forcing up a part of the same water that works it, which is supplied from a spring. Special Rams of A make can be supplied to force to a height of 800 feet.

Fig. B.—This Ram, whilst worked by a stream of impure water, will pump clean water from a well or spring.

BLAKE'S HYDRAULIC RAMS HAVE BEEN SUPPLIED TO THE FOLLOWING AMONGST OTHERS:—

His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught
His Highness the Maharajah of Kashmir
The Secretary of State for India in Council
The Crown Agents for the Colonies
His Grace The Duke of Devonshire
His Grace The Duke of Westminster
His Grace The Duke of Cleveland
His Grace The Duke of Portland
His Grace The Duke of Sutherland
His Grace The Duke of Leeds
His Grace The Duke of Marlborough
His Grace The Duke of Grafton
His Grace The Duke of Somerset
The Most Hon. The Marquess of Ripon
The Most Hon The Marquess of Downshire
The Most Hon. The Marquess of Abergavenny
The Most Hon. The Marquess of Londonderry
The Most Hon. The Marquess of Cholmondeley
The Right Hon. The Earl of Derby
The Right Hon. The Earl of Devon
The Right Hon. The Earl of Gainsborough
The Right Hon. The Earl of Romney
The Right Hon. The Earl of Granard
The Right Hon. Earl Beauchamp
The Right Hon. The Earl of Caledon
The Right Hon. The Earl of Lichfield
The Right Hon. Earl Ferrers
The Right Hon. The Earl of Faversham
The Right Hon. The Earl of Harewood
The Right Hon. The Earl of Harrowby
The Right Hon. The Earl of Wemyss
The Right Hon. The Earl of Ancaster
The Right Hon. The Earl of Scarbrough
The Right Hon. The Earl of Londesborough
The Right Hon. The Earl of Carnarvon
The Right Hon. The Earl of Leicester
The Right Hon. Earl Bathurst
The Right Hon. Earl Fitzwilliam
The Right Hon. Earl Temple
The Right Hon. Earl Cowper
The Right Hon. Lady Northwick
The Right Hon. The Countess of Shaftesbury
The Countess de Morella
Lady Henry Cholmondeley
The Dowager Lady Williams Wynn
Lady Frankland, Thirkleby Park
Lady Henry Cavendish Bentinck
Lady Eliott Drake
Miss Talbot, Margam Park
Mrs. C. Salt, Saltaire
The Right Hon. Lord Mowbray and Stourton
The Right Hon. Lord Hothfield
The Right Hon. Lord Leconfield
The Right Hon. Lord Ribblesdale
The Right Hon. Lord Derwent
The Right Hon. Lord Hatherton
The Right Hon. Lord Leigh
The Right Hon. Lord Raglan
The Right Hon. Lord Northbourne
The Right Hon. Lord Crewe
The Right Hon. and Rev. Lord Scarsdale
The Right Hon. Lord Brougham and Vaux
The Right Hon. Lord Schroder
The Right Hon. Lord Maenaghten
The Right Hon. Lord Clifford of Chudleigh
The Right Hon. Lord Walsingham
The Right Hon. Lord Hindlip
The Right Hon. Lord Wantage
The Right Hon. Lord Hampton (Trustees of)
The Right Hon. Lord Burton
The Right Hon. Lord Abinger (Executors of)
The Right Hon. Lord Denman
The Right Hon. Lord Portman
The Right Hon. Lord de Blaquiere
The Right Hon. Lord Belper
The Right Hon. Lord Viscount Galway
The Right Hon. Lord Viscount Bridport
The Right Hon. Lord Viscount Clifden
The Right Hon. Lord Viscount Boyne
The Right Hon. T. Sotheron-Estcourt
The Right Hon. R. More O'Farrell
The Right Hon. Sir M. E. Hicks-Beach, Bart.
The Hon. Sir William Ventris Field
The Hon. George Kenyon
The Hon A. C. G. Calthorpe
The Hon. H. Sewell
The Hon. Evelyn H. Ellis

JOHN BLAKE, Limited, Oxford Street Works, ACCRINGTON, LANCASHIRE, England.

WATER ABSOLUTELY FREE FROM DISEASE GERMS, BY USING THE

BERKEFELD FILTER.

FOR THE PRIVATE HOUSE, OFFICE, FACTORY, HOTELS, RESTAURANTS, CLUBS, &c. &c.

Can be Easily and Cheaply Fixed to the Service-Pipe of any HOUSE having ordinary pressure.

ADVANTAGES:

They are Germ Proof.
Can be easily cleaned.
Are very simple in construction.
Give an abundant supply.

No House Should Be Without One.

In use in all the Principal Hotels. Full Illustrated Price List and Testimonials free on application. Visit to Showroom invited.

Glass and Earthenware Table Filters, price from 8s. 9d. each.

FILTER H. AS SKETCH, PRICE 42s.

SMALLER SIZE, 25s.

Offices and Showrooms:—
The BERKEFELD FILTER Co. Ld.
121, Oxford St. London, W.
City Depot: W. SCHACHT & CO.
26, Finsbury Pavement,
London, E.C.

Extract from the Special Report to the British Medical Journal on "The Relative Efficiency of Water Filters," by Drs. Sims Woodhead and Cartwright Wood, Jan. 22nd, 1898.

"Experiments were carried out with the Filter H., an exceedingly good model which seems to subserve the functions of a Filter better than any we have yet seen described. . . . The output is so large that there is no reason why such Filters should not supply sufficient water for all household requirements. These Berkefeld Filters afford complete protection against the communication of waterborne disease."

Thick Legs and Thin Feet.

GOLF, SHOOTING, AND CYCLING HOMEKNIT

STOCKINGS.

FREE FROM ALL SEAMS.

Pure long staple Scotch Wool, full length, broad ribs, double heels and toes, most comfortable.

Colours: Navy blue, black, light and dark grey, heathers and fancy mixtures.

THICK LEGS AND THIN FEET. All Sizes, 2s. 6d., 3s. 6d.

The Highland Check,

Hand-Knitted, Thick Legs and Thin Feet, 3s. 6d., 4s. 6d. As Illustration, 5s. 6d., 8s. 6d. Usual Feet, 3s. 6d., 4s. 6d. Postage, 3d. per pair; two pairs, 4½d.

A. W. GAMAGE, Ld. 126, 127, 128, 129, HOLBORN, E.C.

£20 TOBACCONISTS COMMENCING. Illd. guide (259 pgs.), 3d., "How to open respectably £20 to £2,000." Tobacconists' Outfitting Co., Euston-rd., Ldn. Hairdressers fitted.—H. MYERS.

MAPLE & CO

BILLIARD MATS
BILLIARD MATS
BILLIARD MATS

In NOISELESS CORK CARPET
DURABLE LINOLEUM
RICH SOFT WILTON
LUXURIOUS AXMINSTER
THICK PILE TURKEY

Woven specially for the purpose
The Largest Stock in the World
The Lowest Prices

BILLIARD MATS at from 50/- per Set

MAPLE & CO

LONDON AND SMYRNA

These Cigarettes are the Choicest in the Market, and will be appreciated by connoisseurs. Sample Box of 25, Post Free, 2s.

THE VASSO
HIGH-CLASS TURKISH CIGARETTES.

Of the Manufacturers,
LITSICA, MARX & Co.
21, Piccadilly, 84, Strand,
Or at Head Depot-174, HIGH HOLBORN, W.C.
Price List on Application

Elegantly designed,
Tastefully finished,
AND, ABOVE ALL,
Trustworthy under all conditions.

ROVER CYCLES

Set the Fashion in 1898 as in 1885.

THE ROVER CYCLE CO. LTD. (LATE J. K. STARLEY & CO. LTD.)
METEOR CYCLE WORKS, COVENTRY.
LONDON { 4 and 5, HOLBORN VIADUCT, E.C.; 157, NEW BOND ST. W.
19 and 20, OLD BAILEY, E.C. (Repairs Department).

RECOMMENDATIONS.
Candles always remain same height, no waste, no dirt, no smell.
Candles cannot gutter, shades cannot take fire.
They fit in any candlestick, and exactly resemble wax candles when in use.

The saving in candles, &c., more than pays for the cost of lamps in a few weeks.

PRICE, from 4/- each, COMPLETE.

Illustrated Price List and Catalogue of Latest Novelties of Table Decoration and Lighting FREE.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.
Or can be seen in great variety at the Show Rooms of THE
ARCTIC LIGHT CO.,
179, REGENT ST., LONDON, W.
(Nearly opposite Liberty's).
Wholesale Offices: 49, HATTON-GARDEN, E.C

The New Patent
SELF-CLOSING BRACELETS.
NEVER SLIP in whatever position placed.
Delightfully Flexible and Comfortable.
Specially Suitable for Presents; as fit any wrist.

CLOSED.

OPEN.

Made in Plain Gold, also with Gem or Watch Centre.
LARGE VARIETY OF PATTERNS.
Sold by all Leading Jewellers.
WHOLESALE ONLY, SAUNDERS & SHEPHERD, LONDON

CARTER 6A NEW CAVENDISH ST. PORTLAND PLACE, LONDON.
ONLY ADDRESS OF ORIGINAL CARTER
LITERARY MACHINE.

For holding book, lamp, meals, &c., in any position over an easy chair, bed, or sofa.
Deliciously luxurious. A most useful gift. Prices from 17/6

INVALID FURNITURE.
ADJUSTABLE COUCHES and BEDS from £1. 10/-
Bed Lift £3. 10/-
Reclining Boards, 25/-
Walking Machines
Portable W.C.'s.
Electric Bells,
Urinals, &c.
Air & Water Beds.
Bed Rests 7/6
Leg Rests 10/-
Crutches 10/6
Bed Baths 12/6
Commodes, £1. 5/-

Carrying Chairs from £1.

Self-Propelling Chairs from £2

Breakfast in Bed Tables from 30/-

BATH CHAIRS FROM £1. 5/-

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES POST FREE.

JOHN CARTER, 6a, NEW CAVENDISH ST. Portland-pl. London. W.

MASSAGE AT HOME.
The MATTO CHAIN
Used by Sandow and all the leading Athletes, Cyclists, &c.
Recommended by the Medical Profession.
For Liver Complaints, Rheumatism, and all Nervous Disorders. Prevents Obesity.
Price 7s. 6d. each. By Post, 4d. extra. From all Chemists.
MATTO LIMITED, 32 & 34, Clerkenwell-rd. London, E.C.

USE ONLY
BLAISDELL PENCILS

SELF-POINTING.
ALL COLOURS. ALL GRADES.
NO WASTE. BEST LEADS.
Black Lead 1d. & 2d. Coloured Crayons 2d. & 3d.
SOLD EVERYWHERE.
Sample Box of 5 Pencils 1s., Free by Post in the U.K.
BLAISDELL PENCILS, Ltd., 46, Holborn Viaduct, London, E.C.

WIRE CYCLE SADDLE.
WOODS' PATENT.
AN IDEAL SADDLE FOR LADY OR GENTLEMAN.
NO MORE CHAFING.
SADDLE SORENESS ENTIRELY PREVENTED.
One Month's Trial Allowed.
Prices and Testimonials on application to

Fitted with Felt or Leather Cover

THE LONGFORD WIRE CO., LTD., WARRINGTON.
Showrooms—61, ST. MARY AXE, LONDON. [Please mention this Journal]

The Public Benefactor.

HOVIS BREAD

DISTRIBUTES HEALTH.

No loaf genuine unless stamped HOVIS.

All good class Bakers make and sell Hovis.

Hovis Flour and Biscuits can be obtained from all leading Bakers and Grocers, or 6d. and 1s. samples will be sent on receipt of stamps by—

S. FITTON & SON, Hovis Mills, Macclesfield.

Sold Everywhere.
Clarke's "Pyramid" & "Fairy" Light Co., Ltd., Cricklewood, London, N.W.

SOUTHALL'S PATENT BOOTS.

Are you tired of Laced & Button Boots?
Then send Postcard for our Catalogue at once.
ALL THE OLD IDEAS DISPENSED WITH.
Splendid Value.

SOUTHALL & CO.
Dept. O, Kirkstall Road, LEEDS.
Please name this Magazine.

ALL PRICES.

FOR ACCURACY

H. SAMUEL'S KEYLESS WATCHES.

Prices show a considerable reduction as compared with the heavy London charges

Free by post to any address.

Illustrated Book of 168 Pages, comprising Watches, Diamonds, Jewellery, Clocks, Cutlery, Electro-Plate, &c., forwarded free on application.

LADY'S KEYLESS WATCH, fine jewelled movement, carefully adjusted. Handsome art-tinted dials or plain, as preferred. Also supplied two sizes smaller than drawn is desired. Gold, £3 Silver, 27/6

GENTLEMAN'S KEYLESS WATCH, fine jewelled movement carefully adjusted, hard enamel dial. Gold or steel hands, crystal glass front. Gold, £5 5s. Silver, 32/6

NEW GOLD INITIAL BROOCH. Any letter supplied. H. Samuel's price, 5/-

When writing please mark the envelope "accurate"

H. SAMUEL, Lever Watch Factory, Market St., MANCHESTER.

The Best CHAINLESS Cycle!

THE BANTAM.

With Registered "Alpha" Frame.

Simple, Compact, Durable, Speedy. Thoroughly tested for four years, and greatly improved for 1898. Send for Price List and "Notes on the Bantam;" also particulars of the Crypto Safety and other patterns.

CRYPTO WORKS CO., LTD.,
29, Clerkenwell Road, London, E.C.

COLEMAN'S WINCARNIS

is a delicious beverage and tonic made from Port Wine, Liebig's Extract of Meat and Extract of Malt.

OVER FIVE THOUSAND

Unsolicited Testimonials have been received from Medical Men.

The following Important Testimonial has been received from Dr. FLETCHER.

Applecross, Rosshire, N.B., July 2nd, 1897.

Dear Sirs,—Please forward quarter of a dozen "Wincarnis" immediately as my patient's supply is about done.

I trust there will be no delay, as he takes no other nourishment, and has been sustained and gained strength by "Wincarnis" for twelve weeks. Yours faithfully, DUNCAN FLETCHER, L.R.C.P.

Sole Proprietors and Manufacturers of the above,

COLEMAN & CO., Ltd.,
NORWICH and LONDON.

Sample Bottle may be had, free of charge, on receipt of full postal address. Sold in Bottles, 2/9 and 4/6.

"The Old Favourite."

MAX GREGER'S CARLOWITZ

SAFEST, SOUNDEST

Dinner Wine.

PURE HUNGARIAN BURGUNDY.

From 15/- per doz.

Of all Wine Merchants and Grocers.

See that every cork bears the brand "Max Greger." Without it the wine is not genuine.

THE CROWBOROUGH DISTRICT WATER COMPANY.

Incorporated by the Crowborough District Water Act, 1897.

ISSUE of 2,364 ORDINARY SHARES of £10 EACH

(balance of the Authorised Share Capital of £30,000), £6,360 having been privately subscribed.

The liability on the Shares is limited.

Under Section 75 of the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847, the Shares may rank for dividends up to 10 per cent.

Price of Issue, Par.

BANKERS.—Messrs. Barclay & Company, Limited, Union Bank, Brighton, 54, Lombard-street, London, E.C., and Branches.

The LIST will OPEN on THURSDAY, MARCH 17th, and will CLOSE on or before MONDAY, MARCH 21st, 1898.

Payments—On Application 40 per cent.;
Three months after allotment 10 per cent.;
And the balance in calls of not exceeding 20 per cent. at intervals of not less than three months.

The Crowborough District Water Act, 1897, which received the Royal Assent on the 15th day of July, 1897, incorporated the Company and empowered them to construct waterworks, as follows:—

Section 5: The limits of this Act for the supply of water (hereinafter referred to as "the limits of this Act") shall be so much of the parishes of Rotherfield and Withyham, in the County of Sussex, as lies south of a line drawn due west from the point where the main road from Tunbridge Wells to Crowborough enters the Parish of Rotherfield at or near Eridge Green, and so much of the Parish of Buxted in the said County of Sussex, as lies north of a line drawn due west from the point of junction of the boundaries of the Parishes of Rotherfield, Buxted, and Mayfield, at or near Little Forge.

Section 25: Subject to the provisions of this Act, the Company may make and maintain in the lines and situations and according to the levels shown on the deposited plans and sections the waterworks hereinafter described, with all proper and necessary embankments, filtering beds, drains, sluices, catchpits, conduits, culverts, channels, wells, outs, adits, roads, approaches, telegraphs, telephones, and other means of electrical communication, standpipes and hydraulic rams for high-level service, and other apparatus, engines, works, and conveniences connected with the said works, or any of them or incidental hereto, or necessary or convenient for inspecting, maintaining, cleansing, repairing, conducting or managing the same, and may enter upon, take and use such of the lands delineated on the deposited plans, and described in the deposited book of reference, as may be required for that purpose.

Under a contract entered into by the Company on 2nd March, 1898, the construction of the high and low service reservoirs, water tower, and pumping station, and the laying of the necessary mains, all of which are situate in the Parish of Rotherfield, in the County of Sussex, are being proceeded with.

The Company are authorised under their Act to construct an impounding reservoir, with a pumping station and filter beds, to be situate upon or across the stream flowing down from Crowborough to Jarvis Brook, to be formed by a dam or weir across the said stream, situate at a point eight hundred yards or thereabouts, measured in a north-westerly direction, from the bridge carrying the railway from Uckfield to Tunbridge Wells, over the road from Crowborough to Rotherfield, at or near Crowborough Station.

In addition to, or possibly in substitution for, the impounding reservoir above mentioned, use will be made of a good underground supply, which has been already obtained from a well sunk in a most convenient position at Maynard's Gate (on the main road from Crowborough Station to Rotherfield, and with easy access to the railway station) where the pumping station will now be placed.

The well above referred to has been sunk to a depth of over 50 ft., and now yields a quarter of a million gallons of water every twenty-four hours.

The freehold land at present required for the undertaking has been acquired by agreement between the Marquess of Abergavenny and the Company, dated the 30th day of December, 1897.

A copy from the Ordnance Survey is enclosed with the Prospectus, showing the position of the pumping station, Company's Offices, high and low service reservoirs, water-tower, mains, &c., which it is proposed to construct.

Crowborough is situated seven miles south-west of Tunbridge Wells and about nineteen miles from Lewes and twenty-eight miles from Brighton. The station is on the L. B. & S. C. Railway.

Crowborough Beacon, being situated 800 feet above sea level, is very highly recommended by physicians and others as a health resort, the air being particularly dry and bracing. It has the advantage, owing to its elevated position, of possessing some of the most beautiful views in the South of England; in one direction Eastbourne can be seen many miles distant, and various other points of the coast. Then, as to its inland scenery, a view of the heart of Sussex and the whole range of the South Downs right away to Hampshire, and westward along the centre of the Ashdown Forest to the Dorking Hills, is obtained. The locality is not only picturesque, but bears a strong resemblance to Scotland, many of the hills being covered with heather, and is therefore a unique spot considering its short distance from London. The estates in the district are being developed for building purposes; during the last few years many excellent houses have been erected and a first-class water supply is only required to further develop the district, which it is thought by many will become a formidable rival to Tunbridge Wells as a health resort.

As an illustration of the present value of local waterworks investments, it may be mentioned that the £5 Ordinary Shares of the Tonbridge Waterworks Company, Limited, are certified by the Secretary to stand at £11 per share, or a premium of 120 per cent.; while the Secretary of the Cranbrook District Water Company certifies that the £1 Ordinary Shares in that Company have recently changed hands at a premium of from 20 to 25 per cent., and that on a recent issue of Debentures part realised £128 11s. 6d. for each 100 Debentures, or a premium of over 28 per cent.

A Form of Application for Shares is enclosed with the Prospectus. Where no allotment is made the deposit will be returned in full, and in case of a partial allotment the balance of the deposit will be applied towards the subsequent instalments. If default be made in payment of any instalment at its proper date, the deposit and instalments previously paid will be liable to forfeiture.

Prospectuses and Forms of Application may be obtained at the Company's Offices; or of their Bankers, Messrs. Barclay & Company, Limited, Union Bank, Brighton, Head Office, 54, Lombard-street, E.C., and Branches; or of Messrs. Verrall & Borlase, Solicitors, 4 and 5, New-road, Brighton, at whose office the before-mentioned contract and agreement can be inspected.

Applications for Shares to be made on the form enclosed with the prospectus and forwarded to the Company's Bankers with the amount of deposit.

DIRECTORS.

F. Miller, Esq., Director of the Barton-upon-Humber Water Company and the Cranbrook District Water Company.
E. J. Holmes, Esq., Director of The Cranbrook District Water Company.
S. Dennis, Esq., Director of The Guernsey Waterworks Company, Limited.

BANKERS.—Messrs. Barclay & Company, Limited, Union Bank, Brighton.
SOLICITORS.—Messrs. Verrall & Borlase, 4 and 5, New-road, Brighton.
ENGINEERS.—C. O. Blaber, Esq., C.E., and G. Perryn, Esq., A.M.I.C.E.
ANALYST.—Otto Hehner, Esq., Public Analyst for West Sussex.
COMPANY'S OFFICES.—4, Tokenhouse-buildings, Bank of England, E.C.
WORKS.—Crowborough, Sussex.

March 14th, 1898.

The List of Applications will OPEN on WEDNESDAY, the 16th MARCH, and CLOSE on or before FRIDAY, the 18th MARCH, 1898, for both Town and Country.

UNITED BREWERIES OF WESTERN AUSTRALIA, Ltd.

(Incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1893.)

CAPITAL £150,000, divided into 75,000 Six per Cent. Cumulative Preference Shares of £1 each (Preferential both as to Capital and Dividend), and 75,000 Ordinary Shares of £1 each. The Purchase Price payable to the Vendor Company is £105,000, in part satisfaction of which 10,000 Preference Shares and 18,333 Ordinary Shares will be allotted to them as fully paid.

65,000 Six per cent. Cumulative Preference Shares and 36,667 Ordinary Shares are offered for Subscription at par, payable:—2s. 6d. per Share on Application, 7s. 6d. on Allotment, 5s. One Month after Allotment, and the balance Two Months after Allotment. The Interest on the Preference Shares will be payable half-yearly, on the 1st of March and 1st of September, the first half-year's dividend being payable on the 1st September next. This Issue will provide £25,000 beyond the above-mentioned Purchase Price. 20,000 Ordinary Shares will be reserved for future issue for providing additional Working Capital.

DIRECTORS.—W. F. Morgan (Bakers, White, & Morgan, Hop Merchants), London Bridge, S.E., Chairman; T. O. Pugh (Managing Director, the Kingsbury (St. Albans) Brewery Co., Ltd).; G. P. D. Kinahan (Director, Kinahan & Co., Ltd.), London and Dublin; John Welch (Chairman, Welch & Sons, Ltd.), London and Luton; A. E. Barton, 195A, Winchester House, E.C.

LOCAL DIRECTORS IN AUSTRALIA.—W. Strickland, Senior (Managing Director, Port Brewery Co., Ltd.); A. J. Diamond (Messrs. Diamond & Son), Fremantle.

BANKERS.—The City Bank, Limited, Threadneedle-street, London, E.C.
The Bank of Australasia, Threadneedle-street, London, E.C.

SOLICITORS.—Burn & Berridge, 11, Old Broad-street, E.C.

BROKERS.—Aylward Bros., 120, Bishopsgate-street Within, and Stock Exchange, E.C.; Dean Swift & Co., 18, Old Broad-street, and Stock Exchange, E.C.

AUDITORS.—London: Ford, Rhodes, & Ford, 81, Cannon-street, E.C.
Western Australia: Ford, Rhodes, Ford, & Co., Perth.

SECRETARY AND OFFICES.

A. V. J. Fellowes, 195a, Winchester House, Old Broad-street, E.C.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

This Company has been formed for the purpose of acquiring as going concerns the two important brewery businesses in Western Australia, carried on respectively by the Stanley Brewery Company, Limited, Perth, and the Port Brewery Company, Limited, Fremantle, and it is intended to further develop and extend the same by the erection and equipment, on an extensive scale, of a Lager Beer Brewery.

THE STANLEY BREWERY COMPANY, LIMITED.

This business, together with its assets and liabilities, will be taken over as a going concern as from the 12th November, 1897.

An independent valuation has been made at the request of the Westralia Industries, Limited, by Mr. B. C. Wood, Member of the Legislative Assembly, Valuer for the Australian Mutual Provident Society, the Perth City Council, and for the principal Banks and Insurance Companies of that city. His report is as follows:— Western Australia, 501, Hay-street, Perth, 16th Dec., 1897.

STANLEY BREWERY COMPANY, LIMITED.

The particulars referred to in this Valuation consist of Freeholds, Leaseholds, and Rights to supply various Hotels in Western Australia by the above Company.

My estimate of value of the Stanley Brewery Company's, Limited, assets, as contained in the foregoing particulars, is Sixty Thousand Two Hundred Pounds sterling. (Signed) B. C. WOOD, Valuer.

The other Assets (not included in the above valuation) comprising Book Debts, Bills Receivable, &c., amount to about ...	£14,550	0	0
Profits from 13th November, 1897, which to 31st January, 1898, are certified by Messrs. Ford, Rhodes, Ford, & Co. (Accountants), to amount to	1,576	0	0
	£16,126	0	0

THE PORT BREWERY COMPANY, LTD.

This business will be taken over as a going concern as from the 1st Feb., 1898.

The Brewery occupies a site consisting of two Blocks, having frontages to Beach-street and Cantonment-road, Fremantle, and very near to East Fremantle Station. This property is the Company's Freehold.

The business of the Company is an important and increasing one.

The Brewery and Properties of the Port Brewery Company have also been similiarly independently valued by Mr. B. C. Wood, who has transmitted per cable his valuation as amounting to the sum of £22,300. Subsequent advices increase the total to about £24,200. The Assets to be taken over include Loans on Mortgages, Book-debts, Stock-in-Trade, &c., amounting to about £9,900.

Goodwill of the free trade of the two Breweries has not been taken into account by Mr. Wood in his valuations.

The properties to be acquired by this Company being situated in Perth, the seat of Government and most populous commercial centre of Western Australia, and in Fremantle, the nearest seaport (only twelve miles distant by rail from the capital), will, it may reasonably be assumed, improve considerably in value.

Fremantle is now attaining a position of very great importance in the Colony. The Government is, at great expense, constructing a new harbour; the North German Lloyd (whose agent at Fremantle, Mr. A. J. Diamond, is a Local Director of this Company), have made it a port-of-call for their line of steamers, and there is a large and increasing inter-Colonial traffic carried on there.

The books of the Stanley Brewery Co., Ltd., and the Port Brewery Co., Ltd., have been examined by Messrs. FORD, RHODES, FORD & CO., Accountants, Perth, W.A., who have furnished through their London house the following certificate:— 81, Cannon-street, London, E.C., 12th March, 1898.

To the Directors, UNITED BREWERIES OF WESTERN AUSTRALIA, LTD.

Gentlemen,—In accordance with instructions, we have examined the books of the Stanley Brewery Company, Ltd., Perth, for two years and two months, and of the Port Brewery Company, Ltd., Fremantle, for two years, and after providing for depreciation and bad debts, Directors' remuneration and expenses of management, but not for interest on loans, we find the profits to be as under:—

STANLEY BREWERY COMPANY, LTD., PERTH. For two years and two months, averaging for two years to November 30th, 1897	£11,510	14	7
PORT BREWERY COMPANY, LTD., FREMANTLE. For two years ended 31st January, 1898	9,360	0	0
Averaging £10,435 7s. 3d. per annum.	£20,870	14	7

The profits of the Stanley Brewery from the 12th November, 1897 (the date from which your Company, we understand, will take over the business), to Jan. 31st, 1898, amount to £1,576. (Signed) FORD, RHODES, FORD, & CO.

The combined profits as per above Certificate have amounted to, per annum, £10,435 7s. 3d.; To pay the interest on the 75,000 Six per Cent. Cumulative Preference Shares will require £4,500; leaving a balance of £5,935 7s. 3d., over 10 per cent. on the present issue of 55,000 Ordinary Shares.

FUTURE PROFITS.—The point to which the Directors attach the greatest importance as bearing upon the future of the Company is the proposed

"LAGER BEER BREWERY,"

the produce of which will undoubtedly sell at a much higher price than any other beer at present brewed in the Colony, and which it is believed will procure for this Company a command of the trade throughout the Colony, to an extent scarcely attainable by any other means. No brewery has yet been established in Western Australia to supply the demand for the lighter German kinds of beer known as "Lager." All such beers sold in the Colony are imported, heavy duties being levied upon their importation, viz., 1s. 6d. per gallon in bottle and 1s. 3d. per gallon in cask. When it is remembered that to these duties and the brewer's price the cost of freight and transport, besides numerous intermediate profits, must be added before the article reaches the consumer, it will be apparent that brewing the beer in the Colony, as proposed, offers prospects of a highly remunerative nature. It is intended that the erection of the new Brewery (a plan for which has already been prepared) shall at once be proceeded with, and equipped with machinery and appliances of the latest construction. The Directors do not deem it expedient in the interests of the Company's business to state publicly the estimated revenue to be derived from the brewing of Lager Beer, but assuming the sale to be equal to only 5,000 gallons per week, the profits from this source should be more than sufficient to double the sum at present available for the Ordinary Shares. Prospectuses and Forms of Application for Shares may be obtained of the Bankers, Solicitors, Brokers, and Auditors, and at the Offices of the Company. London, March 15th, 1898.

THE SUBSCRIPTION LIST for both Debentures and Shares opens to-day WEDNESDAY, MARCH 16th, and will close on or before FRIDAY, MARCH 18th, at Four o'clock, for both Town and Country.

No Promotion Money has been or will be paid by the Company.

None of the Debentures or Shares have been or will be underwritten.

STANLEY GIBBONS, Limited.

Incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1893, whereby the Liability of Shareholders is limited to the amount of their Shares.

SHARE CAPITAL AND DEBENTURES:

75,000 Shares of £1 each	£75,000
900 5 per cent. First Debentures of £50 each	£45,000
	£120,000

Of which shares the Vendors will take £25,000, the maximum proportion of the Shares allowed under the Rules of the Stock Exchange, and also £13,000 of the Debentures.

SUBSCRIPTIONS ARE INVITED FOR

50,000 Shares of £1 each	£50,000
and
640 First Debentures of £50 each	£32,000
	£82,000

The Debentures, which are offered at par, will be redeemed by annual drawings of not less than £1,000 per annum, commencing on June 30th, 1901, at Five Pounds per cent. premium, and six months' notice thereof will be given to the holders of the Debentures drawn previous to payment. On any reconstruction or amalgamation with any other Company the Debentures shall not be redeemable except at the same premium.

The Debentures will bear interest from the date of allotment up to the 1st day of July, 1898, and afterwards the interest will be payable half-yearly on the 1st day of January and 1st day of July in each year. The Debentures will constitute a first floating charge upon the whole of the present and future property undertaking and assets of the Company.

PAYMENTS.

SHARES.		FIRST DEBENTURES.
On Application ...	2s. 6d. per Share.	On Application	£10 per £50
On Allotment ...	7s. 6d. ,,	On Allotment...	£40 per £50
One month after Allotment	10s. ,,

DIRECTORS.

Marcellus Purnell Castle, J.P., Kingston Lodge, Brighton, Chairman.
Charles James Phillips, Amyand House, Twickenham, Managing Director.
Major Edward Benjamin Evans, late R.A., Glenarm, Sydenham, S.E.
Gordon Smith, M.A., Barrister-at-Law, 61, Royal Hill, Greenwich.
William Henry Phillips, 73, Tollington-park, London, N., Assistant Managing Director.
Robert Ehrenbach, Brook House, Addlestone, Surrey.

SECRETARY (pro tem.).—W. Percy Barnsdall.

BANKERS.—Lloyds Bank, Limited, 72, Lombard-street, E.C.

SOLICITORS.—Messrs. Gush, Phillips, Walters, & Williams, 3, Finsbury-circus, E.C.

BROKERS.—Messrs. E. O. Lloyd & Hardy, 7, Finch-lane, E.C.

AUDITORS.—Messrs. Mackintosh & Ridsdale, Chartered Accountants, Colmore-row, Birmingham.

REGISTERED OFFICES.—391, Strand, London.

PROSPECTUS.

The Company has been formed to acquire, continue, and extend the well-known business of Stanley Gibbons, Limited, Foreign Stamp Dealers and Publishers. The business was founded in or about the year 1856 by Mr. Edward Stanley Gibbons, and is believed to be the oldest in the trade. Mr. Edward Stanley Gibbons carried it on alone until the year 1890, when he retired from the business.

In August, 1890, the business was purchased by a private limited Company, and since that date it has, under the management of Mr. C. J. Phillips, the Managing Director (with Mr. W. H. Phillips as his assistant), been most successfully carried on. The sales during the last seven years have been marvellously increased—in fact, they have trebled—as will be seen from the figures set forth below, which are taken from the books of that Company.

In addition to their business of Dealers in Postage Stamps, which extends throughout the civilised world, Stanley Gibbons, Limited, are very extensive Publishers of Albums, Catalogues, and Handbooks. The sales for the last few years in this branch have approximated to 60,000 Volumes per annum. Their Price Lists are the standard Price Lists of the World. Their Trade Journal, published monthly by subscription, under the title of Stanley Gibbons' Monthly Journal, has a very large circulation—larger, it is believed, than any similar journal. They have keen and energetic Agents in almost every civilised country, who are continually extending and increasing the connection in both branches of the business.

Stanley Gibbons, Limited, have secured the highest possible Awards at all the various Exhibitions where their publications have been shown, amongst the most recent which they have obtained being:—

A Gold Medal at Paris, 1892.
A Gold Medal at the World's Fair, Chicago, 1893.
A Gold Medal at Geneva, 1896.
Three highest possible Awards at the London Philatelic Exhibition, 1897.

The immense growth of the business may be gathered from the following figures as to the Cash Receipts, which, for the past seven years to the 30th June, 1897, have been, as shown by the books of the business, as follows, viz.:—

	£	s.	d.
Year ending June 30th, 1891	16,605	14	5
,, ,, 1892	17,740	3	7
,, ,, 1893	22,582	13	1
,, ,, 1894	27,166	10	2
,, ,, 1895	44,044	15	8
,, ,, 1896	45,955	4	10
,, ,, 1897	50,600	11	8

The Accounts show that the Sales effected during the six months ending the 31st December, 1897, have exceeded the Sales made in the corresponding period of the previous year.

The books have been regularly audited since 1890 by Messrs. Mackintosh & Ridsdale, Chartered Accountants, of Colmore-row, Birmingham, whose Certificate as to the net profits is as follows, viz.:—

To the Directors of Stanley Gibbons, Limited (New Company).

9th March, 1898.

Gentlemen,—We have examined the Accounts of Stanley Gibbons, Limited, and beg to certify that the books have been well kept and regularly audited by us for the past seven years, and that the net profits of the last three years, ending 30th June, 1897, have averaged at the rate of £11,399 10s. 8d. per annum. These profits, as ascertained by our examination of the Books, are arrived at after making due provision for depreciation, but without charging Interest on Capital, or Directors' remuneration.

We are, Gentlemen, yours truly,
MACKINTOSH & RIDSDALE.

On the basis of the average profits certified by the Accountants of £11,399 per annum, there will be available for Dividends—

5 per cent. on £45,000 Debentures	£2,250
10 per cent. on £75,000 Shares	7,500
	£9,750
Leaving for Directors' remuneration, Reserve, and further Dividend	1,649
	£11,399

This, however, is without making any allowance for the extra profits which may be expected to accrue from the expansion of the business consequent on the increase of working Capital provided for out of this issue, and the many sources of profit which, as hereafter stated, can be developed by its use.

The purchase price has been fixed by the Vendors at £102,000 payable as to £64,000 in cash, as to £13,000 in Debentures, and as to £25,000 in Shares.

The Assets which will be acquired by the Company comprise—

(1) The Stock-in-Trade, Fixtures, Fittings, and Furniture which stood in the Vendors' Books at 30th June, 1897, at the sum of £70,159 15s. 3d. The Stock-in-Trade includes Rare, Medium, and Common Used and Unused Postage and Fiscal Stamps, Post Cards, Envelopes, Albums, Catalogues, Handbooks, Unprinted Paper, Blocks for Illustrations (over 15,000), and Printer's Type.

(2) The Book Debts, which at 30th June, 1897, amounted to £7,854 13s. 8d., and are guaranteed by the Vendors to realise that sum.

(3) The Profits accrued since June 30th, 1897, less interest to Vendors on Purchase Money at 4 per cent. per annum.

(4) The valuable Leasehold Premises, 391, Strand, London, as now occupied by the Vendors, and held for a term of 35 years from 25th December, 1892, at the yearly rent of £600, until the 25th December, 1913, and thereafter of £650 per annum. Over £2,300 has been expended since 1893 in alterations and extensions of these premises.

(5) The valuable Goodwill of the business, and the numerous and valuable Copyrights.

Having regard to the importance and value of the Stock, the Directors deem it right to state that in their opinion the basis on which the valuation of it by the Vendors, at the 30th June, 1897, was arrived at is extremely fair and moderate, the discounts off selling value as to Retail Stock and off trade price as to Wholesale Stock ranging from 40 per cent. to as much as 75 per cent., while Publications, Albums, Catalogues, Handbooks, and unprinted paper have been taken at absolute cost price (no stock of obsolete publications having been taken into account), and Printers' Type, Blocks for illustration, &c., have been taken at cost price, less a large depreciation allowed for wear and tear.

The Directors have thought it advisable to obtain an independent valuation of the Stock-in-Trade to be acquired by the Company (which has not been increased by any abnormal purchases since the 30th June, 1897) and accordingly they have instructed Messrs. Ventom, Bull, & Cooper, the well-known Valuers, to make a valuation of it at the 1st of January, 1898, and the following is a copy of Messrs. Ventom, Bull, & Cooper's valuation:—

To the Directors of Stanley Gibbons, Limited (New Company).

35, Old Jewry, London, E.C., 9th March, 1898.

Dear Sirs,—We have surveyed the Leasehold Premises, No. 391, Strand, at which the business of Stanley Gibbons, Limited, Stamp Importers, Dealers, and Philatelic Publishers, is now carried on, and have also made a detailed valuation of the Stock-in-Trade, Fixtures, Fittings, and Effects.

The Stock of Stamps is an exceptionally large one, and comprises the rarities, medium and common stamps of every country, used and unused, together with a very large quantity of Envelopes, Post Cards, and Wrappers. In addition there is an important Stock of Philatelic Publications and Accessories.

We value the Lease, Fixtures, Fittings, and Effects, and Stock-in-Trade, as a going concern, at the sum of Ninety thousand, six hundred and thirty-eight pounds (£90,638), divided as follows:—

	£	s.	d.
Lease, Fixtures, Fittings, and Effects	3,237	16	0
Stock of Stamps on hand	69,691	13	0
Stamps in Books out on approval	12,416	14	0
(These have not been seen, but are estimated on the basis of similar books.)
Publications and Accessories at 391, Strand, and Unbound Publications, Type, Blocks, and Unprinted Paper at the Printers' and elsewhere, taken at cost price...	5,292	10	0
	£90,638	13	0

The packets and sets of stamps, common approval sheets, and loose used stamps, post cards, envelopes, and wrappers, of which there is a large and valuable stock, are purposely excluded from this valuation, as it was not possible to value same within the time at our disposal.

Yours faithfully, VENTOM, BULL, & COOPER.

The Directors are satisfied that the Stock (which has been very largely and judiciously increased by the Vendors during the past seven years out of their profits) is ample for the present requirements of the Company, but they have provided out of the present subscription for £18,000 as additional working Cash Capital to enable them to more fully develop different branches of the business, such as the Importation and Wholesale Sale of New Issues of Postage Stamps, &c.; the Purchase and Sale of Large Collections for Cash; and the Publication of several new and much-wanted Stamp Albums, Books, &c.—branches which they are assured can be largely developed by the judicious use of such further capital so as to yield larger profits—and also to extend the business in other directions of a remunerative character which they have in view, but which it would be inadvisable to make prematurely public.

The Vendors will bear and discharge all Liabilities which existed on 30th June, 1897. These include Debentures for £25,500 and a Loan of £4,000, mainly incurred in respect of the original purchase of the business and assets from Mr. E. Stanley Gibbons, and of the purchase of two large Private Collections of Stamps. This Loan and the Debentures (the payment of which latter is spread over a series of years, but with power to the Vendors to pay off at any time) will be wholly paid off out of the cash purchase money.

The business will be taken over as a going concern as from 30th June, 1897, and the Company will take all profits from that date, allowing the Vendors interest on the purchase money to the date of completion at 4 per cent. per annum.

The Rare Stamps, Collections, Stock Books, and best Reserve Stocks are kept in Fire-proof Strong Room and Safes. All other Stocks, both at 391, Strand, and at the printers', are kept fully insured against fire.

It will be seen that the Company have secured the services of Mr. M. P. Castle (whose knowledge and experience in Stamp matters is universally recognised) as Chairman, while the present Managing Director, Mr. Charles J. Phillips, and Assistant Managing Director, Mr. Wm. H. Phillips, will by agreement continue to act as Managing Director and Assistant Managing Director, respectively, for at least five years.

Major Evans and Mr. Gordon Smith, and all the present principal Assistants have also expressed their willingness to continue their services to the Company.

The following Contracts have been entered into, viz.:—

(1) Agreement dated the eighth day of March, 1898, between the old Company and Charles James Phillips, as the Liquidator thereof, of the one part, and John Kemp, as Trustee for the new Company, of the other part.

(2) Agreement dated the ninth day of March, 1898, between the new Company, of the one part, and Charles James Phillips, of the other part.

(3) Agreement dated the ninth day of March, 1898, between the new Company, of the one part, and William Henry Phillips, of the other part.

These, with the Memorandum and Articles of Association and Accountants' Certificate, and a specimen of the Form of Debenture can be seen at the Offices of the Company's Solicitors.

The above Contracts are, so far as the Directors are advised, the only contracts which could come within the meaning of the 38th section of the Companies Act, 1867, but in case any of the Trading Contracts can be construed to do so, applicants for Shares must (as it is not in the interests of the Company to specify such Contracts here) be deemed to have had notice of, and to have waived their right to, the publication of any particulars as to them.

The Vendors will pay all expenses of every kind in connection with the formation and registration of the Company, up to and including the first allotment of Shares, and of the vesting in the Company of the property agreed to be sold.

A Stock Exchange Official Quotation will be applied for in due course as to both Debentures and Shares.

Applications for Debentures and Shares should be made on the Forms accompanying the Prospectus, and forwarded to the Bankers or their Branches with remittances for the amount of the Deposit.

If no allotment is made, the Deposit will be returned in full; and where the amount of Debentures or number of Shares allotted is less than that applied for, the balance will be applied towards the amount due on allotment, and any excess will be returned to the applicant. Failure to pay the amount due on allotment in respect of any Debenture will render the amount paid on application liable to be forfeited.

Prospectuses and Forms of Application can be obtained at the Registered Offices of the Company, and from the Bankers and their Branches, the Auditors, the Brokers, and the Solicitors.

London, 10th March, 1898.

Pattisons' Whisky, like a British Ironclad, is at home in all "Waters."

Ask for { "PATTISONS'" and Schweppe. "PATTISONS'" and Soda.

"PATTISONS'" and Apollinaris. "PATTISONS'" and St. Ronans.

SINGER

MODÈLE DE LUXE

(Registered Trade Mark)

CYCLES

IMPORTANT NOVELTIES FOR 1898.

1898 Lists Free.

SINGER CYCLE CO. LTD. COVENTRY
LONDON: 17, HOLBORN VIADUCT.

IF YOU COUGH USE . .

GERAUDEL'S PASTILLES.

Let your lungs be filled with the vapour of Norwegian Pine Tar, which they give off whilst dissolving in the mouth. The efficacy of Pine Tar in all affections of the Throat and Lungs is well known; the best mode of applying it is by inhalation, and the mouth makes the best inhaler.

ALL CHEMISTS SELL THEM.

A MASTER KEY of this SIZE

Can be made to open any number of Locks. Many Ladies and Gentlemen have the whole of their locks so arranged that a MASTER KEY, so small as to be worn in a finger-ring or locket, will open every lock they possess—from their Dressing Bags, Trunks, Jewel Cases, Despatch Boxes, &c., to the Front Door, Wine Cellar, Park Gates, &c. Just think of the Convenience! The locks are made in suites, each suite with its own key, so that the ladies' maid or valet can open the luggage, the butler the wine cellar, and so on, but the suite keys are of no use for any but their own series.

BRAMAH JEWEL SAFES,

BURGLAR AND FIRE RESISTING, SPECIALLY ADAPTED FOR BED AND DRESSING ROOMS.

Specialities in fitted Suite Cases and Dressing Bags, Jewel Cases, Despatch and Deed Boxes, Bramah Street Door Latches, with small keys, Bramah Padlocks for Bicycles, with Leather-covered Chains, &c. &c.

New Illustrated Catalogues Post Free.

For Prices and Particulars apply to

NEEDS & CO. Late

Bramah & Co.

Sole Manufacturers of the real Bramah Locks.

100, NEW BOND STREET,
LONDON, W.

A Master Key Signet Ring (Open).

OUR PUZZLES.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE No. 994.—STANZA CONTAINING THE WORD "CHINAMAN."

Vox (real name and address will be published in due course) £2 2 0

CONDENSED RULES.

All answers to the current Puzzle must be sent in on or before the morning of the Monday week following the date of that Puzzle's publication, to the PUZZLE EDITOR, TRUTH Buildings, Carteret-street, Queen Anne's-gate, London, S.W. The answers must be signed by a nom de plume of not more than twelve letters, and must not be sent on post-cards, nor by telegraph, nor by hand; whilst in the case of new competitors the real name and address must be forwarded with the first reply sent.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 993.

There will be a chance, I think, of printing some more "Trilby" verses next week.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 995.

It will have been seen that an exceptionally large number of competitors essayed to complete the two stanzas published in a skeleton form in this page on February 17. No competitor succeeded in supplying the exact words of the original; and no two competitors, I may say, sent in an identical version. The competitor who came nearest to the original was CRERAN, whose verses run as below:—

Down by the tide her name I traced
Upon the smooth, white sand;
The waves in jealous tumult raced,
And kissed it from the strand.

I breathed it to the evening breeze
That wooed the moonlit sea;
And lo! at dawn the wind-tossed trees
Whispered it back to me.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 999.

The usual Prize of Two Guineas is offered this week to the competitor who proves most successful

IN COMPLETING THE FIRST FIFTY OF THE SENTENCES PRINTED BELOW.

It should be understood that the addition of some one particular vowel will make sense of the combinations of consonants which are printed as "Specimens" this week. In different sentences the vowel to be added also differs, but only a, e, i, o, or u must be added throughout any one of the given sentences. All Lists of the Fifty Sentences must reach me by the morning of Monday, March 28, at the latest. In the possible case of more than one competitor proving equally successful in completing all the sentences correctly, the weekly Prize would be divided amongst those who thus tied. I would add that, in spite of the careful "reading" the combinations of letters have received, it is quite possible that errors may have crept in.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

 The real name, with the address, of COMMA, winner of Prize No. 990, is Miss Ellen Fitz Gibbon, 10, Merrion-square, Dublin.

LUSS.—I find that the stanzas of which you write were duly received from you. The failure to acknowledge them last week was the consequence of an oversight, which I regret.

O. B. C.—Your inference is obviously correct.

W. B. W.—Many thanks for your letter. I am afraid, however, that your suggestion is one I cannot undertake to carry out. Even if there were many to be found able to compile such a list as you propose, I doubt my own ability to accurately appraise the relative value of such lists when the time came to award the prize.

LUDWIG B.—The Editor has caused inquiries to be made into the competition about which you wrote, and, from what he has heard, it would seem to be a bonâ fide one.

THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE No. 996.—ASSORTED SPECIMENS—GOOD AND OTHERWISE.

COMBINATIONS OF CONSONANTS WHICH CAN BE READ AS SENTENCES BY THE ADDITION OF A VOWEL.

 It should be understood that the vowel which has to be added differs in many of the sentences—"a" being the absent one in some cases, "e" in others, "i" in others, and so on.

THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

1. H l f m d n d l l g h s t s m l l h g g r d v g r n t l d h r d p g n r g c l d r b b r t t r m p s f s t n d f r p s t g s l m p s b n k n d t l l b r r c k s p s t s p h l t p t h s n d t r m s s t r t s t l l p l c r d s s t b l c k p h n t s m s t h t l r m p s t d r k v c n t b r n s l g g r d f r m h n d s m r l c r t s n d c r v n n d s n s t r l b l m c h r m s b r n c h n d c r g h l t s t l s t t d m p r n k g r s s p t c h g r s p s n d b s t r c t s n s h s t f f t h n d n d h z r d p s t n d m n s t r c k s f r b c k f l l s s l n t c n v s b g t h t r n k s s k n p s c k n d h t h t c l l l l c n n s f r g r n t l n d s g r n t n d l m b s t g r s s s f t s r s c l s.—Dombey.

2. T w s t r n g t r p s f l r d j h n h d s c r p s t l d f f f r p n t n w r k g t m r r w n s i p g l w w r m f r m p r t f l n d n t n r t h c n c b t s k t—Whig.

3. N v r h d t h s c r d l s s m n
S y k p t h t n t s t n
F d t h w r t c h d t n d t h m k
V r y w h r t h h l p l s s s k
T l l t h m t h r s t h n d l s s r s t
W h r t h y l l t h n b v r b l s t
Union Jack.

4. N t r t h f l h m b g s p l c k t r s t f l g l l s b t l s t s c h h m b g s t r t h h n t s p.—Woodlands.

5. S p r n g s n g h b r d s w l l s n g w l d p p n g r l l s w h l s t c r c l n g n f r s t f l g h t s w t h t n d w n g s.—Bel Demonio.

6. When that eminent archæologist and investigator of ancient ruins, Herr Pr. Gröbemungern, met his death at the hands of the savages of Central Asia, it is not generally known that his regretted demise prevented the definite solution of the much-vexed question of the exact position of Paradise. The last entry in his pocket-book runs as follows:—Copy of inscription found to-day on a granite rock. Note.—Must be at least 5,000 years old.

V n h r v h l d h r l v r v r t h s r p n t n t r d d n

Archæologists who have scrutinised this pocket-book have come to the unanimous conclusion that this inscription bears but one—and that a simple interpretation. What is it?

7. B v r g n t l s w t t m p r d m k p r s r v p r f c s l f s t m b n v r h d l s s k p y t h s p r c p t s.—Special Bee.

8. L d d c t r s w h g f r t h t l k r w r k f r g l d r s c l d f l s w h d n t c r s s l c h s r p l s r f l d s t r k f r f d d g d w r k.—Islay.

9. M s t x f r d d n s r t h d x r n t l k t c l m b r n g k n g f r c m f r t n t t p r t s f t l r s c r t n h k r g d l d s c t c h t h c m m n r m s h l d s t c k f r m p r t r f r m b n d f l n d n d c k s.—Orlando.

10. W l l f d r c t r s p l n d n t g n t l m n s g n t m n t h m s l v s d p c l v r s c h m r s r f l c t f f r s c n t g r d w h n n d l s s s p l n n t r s t h m w n v r m r p n c t n d r d t h m r p r s n t w l l b r s w t t m p r d y t d b t f t t r d m n s m k p r s n s.—La Plata.

11. T h t l s t f g h n b r w l w s s d s c n d i g l l n b r h m n t k n d h r b r r c k s s w t l l d r k r s c n t c h b r b n d c r w l h i f p s t h r b c n n d s m n t h t h d c s t b n n s p l l m l l t p g n c r v.—Ukdoo.

12. P t m d j c k t r h n n h t l l f r m l s s h l f d f t n g l d n d n s s n d c r t s h l l l l d s h f s t t f r t b r c l l h l t s t c k r m s p s s b d n n s s t n d p r t n d h w k f t l m b c r b s y m s l t b n n s n d r t t r p s s d p l n t.—Scarp.

13. T h r c k l s s d t s t d f r n c h j w r s n t s t h s v r s n t n c h n v r d s r v d.—Polar Bear.

14. S p d w l l l c t d m m b r s n v r r c d n v r b d t r r d f f c t n d d b t t r m n t.—Kinbaun.

15. W h n t h s v n c h r l s s s l p r s v r s t m d f b l f l t r s t d t h y n v r t h l s s x r t d t h m s l v s t h n t h y s l p t y t t h r w k s.—Corkscrew.

16. T b r d f r m m r n t m r r w t d r p f r m f r s t s f s c r n s h w s n g d w n f r m s r r w s m s t h l y c r w n f t h r n.—Pauvre Femme.

17. G r c r g r t s t h r c n t s n s l s s d d r l n t l s s m n f f c t d n v r t h l s h r r g n t v r c l m n t s t s n t n c s t h n f r s t h m.—Oxoniensis.

18. M n w n t s l l t h t m n c n g r s p n d w n t s t h t l l s g r n t t h t s h l l l s t.—Excelsior.

19. T h x m p r s s n v r n g l c t d t h f r n c h v n w h n t h m n d s r t d h r.—Squat.

20. H r t h r w h r v r t h s t t l r n t r s t h r l n t l s s l m n t g r d s m s v r p r s n t.—Marpiot.

21. C h p t h v n t h s c t c l l t h t t t r c t s c t s t d r k n d l r m s l l r t s n d b t s f r w y s t n d r d.—Singer.

22. W h n b t t r g t h r f r s h g g s t n d r g r n s d p r d b f b s t b r n v r h d l n t l t h r s l p.—Carima.

23. T h n r k n w n r t h f l r d r l w b r n r t h d x r n t h l d s g d n w f r l n d n f l k.—Wild Thyme.

24. S w t s l p w h n m n s y s n d r s t v r r n w s t h n r g y r c k l s s l y x p n d d.—Poofy.

25. R t h l b r t f f c t d t h n d d r t r n c h m n t t h p r v r s r v r n d b r t h r n r j c t d t h s c h m.—Pemmie.

26. T h t s m r t c h p t c h t h m b r r c k s h s f t l p i n t h t c n t l s t p p l l l p c h s.—Natacha.

27. L l n n s w t l l h b d n d m d r s w s b l n k w l l n d n r c h w y.—Pseudonym.

28.—B r h m n d s r h s t t n l t r n d s n g g r n d c n t t.—Fury.

29.—H g h m r m r s h s h s h t p s c h c r s t h b b b m c h h r t s s.—Woodhurst.

30. W h n w f i d c m b r s b r z t h n t h w r t c h d m t r s f r z.—Beaumont.

31. W h n p r s s s b t p n c x t r m s m t.—Surplice.

32. F s m l n g s w n n n g g r n n n g s s n n n g.—Cassock.

33. T h t h r f r n c h v r s s w r v r y w l l r n d r d.—8*nt*nc*.

34. T h s t h n g s r g h t s t f f w s h m g h t w t h s k l l w n r c h p c k n g s n t.—Mercutio.

35. S t r l p r l l x c n h r s s c n t b s s s m r t s d m s w s.—Erica.

36. T h w r t v s t s h r p s s c r v n s f r p r t.—Mos.

37. F r i n g m n t h s c l c l n y b s s s t d m s t f x y l d m s b y c t t f g l d m o n p l y t w n.—Quilp.

38. N t h s c h l l w n d t h n s h r t s w l l b r n g p h t h s s.—Kelt.

39. R w x p c t d t h f b l x m p r s s n t r d h r x c l l n t n w s t t l m n t s.—Beginner.

40. G r c d f n d d h r s l f v n w h n s h m t n d l s s r v r s s.—Castle Corner.

41. T h r v r n d g n t w h r v r h w n t s m d v d p r s s d w h n t h r p n c h s p n t.—Selah.

42. W h n v r p l r s n t r p r s d m s n s t h y d m t h m s l v s b l s s d.—N. C. N.

43. P r s v r v r y t n v r l t g r d x c d t h n d. — One Hand.

44. P r s v r v p r f c t m n v r k p t h s p r c p t s t n.—North Pole.

45. T h s c n t d b r z r f r s h d t h t r s t h g n t l d w h r j w l s t h r w.—Felicité.

46. P r s v r y p r f c t m n v r k p t h s p r c p t s t n.—Fife Rabbit.

47. R s t l s s f r n c h r v r s t h s n t n c.—Louise.

48. C l v r m n d s r v p r c d n c w n d r m m b r s t m v n r v r n c t h m.—Pearl.

49. R g h t t h n k n g m n d s f n d b l s s n g v n g t s s g n c h r s t s s p r t s t l l s l v n g.—Elk.

50. W l i f d m n n v r s l p w l l g r d k p s t h m r s t l s s.—Expectant.

51. T r c s s n d r h l l t t n p r s h t t l v s s l d h.—Mops.

52. W t h n t h s s t l l f m p s n s p r n g g r n w l d s t l l l c t r s h g n.—Touch.

53. T l h m b r s g r n d h l l b r s s b n d h d c l l.—Wim.

54. T h b s t m n v r r v r x c l l n t d d s.—Svinok.

55. L s t h t s s p s m m d r m p u t w r c l s s r m s n d t t c k s s v n t s m r t g r n d m n c t t h t l r m s l l r n k s.—Esperanza.

56. T h t f r w y l n d l s k t t r c t s m n y r s h m n.—Heathfield.

57. L v n g s g r t d t h l r d w h n h n t r d t h g r n.—Anselm.

58. W k p r s r v d t h z w h l z s s w t t m p r d t n d r y d s s l k w l l f d s t d s.—Kulo.

59. W h n g n t l n s s c h r s t h d p r s s d s h d s r v s r s p c t.—Ainsi Quasi.

60. G n t l m n v r y w k t h n d l s s c r t r f r n c s s m s t r b l d.—Peg.

61. T r t h h m b l y s h t s p n j s t m r m r s.—Luss.

62. V r r d w h n t h s r p n t n t r d d n.—Wyalong.

63. W h r v r f r n c h m n m t d m n t d s c n s x p c t.—Pump

64. P r s v r y p r f c t m n v r k p t h s p r c p t s t n.—Gringoire.

65. R v t h g n t s h p s l p t x c p t t h w r t c h d n w w.—Celandine.

66. T h p r s s d m s t h f r n c h s n t n c x t r m p y s v r.—The Hen.

67. T h r c h t f r n c h s n t h c s m s m r p r t x t.—A. E. L.

68. M m n d d h d g r n d s t l l t c h t h m b z r l s t m r c h.—Colonicnsis

69. V n t h t h r x p r t s n v r d t c t d t h d p s c r t.—Notnag.

70. H n w j h e l d b y d n t g t t w n s s n.—Borris.

71. R m m b r n v r m d d l b t w n t h r h n p c k d m n.—Rex.
72. N s p d w t t c s m s m x s g h s w t h m r t h.—Nota Bene.
73. H t g r g r g d f d s n c m f r t s p r l d f l k s.—D'Arcy.
74. H f l s t g f r g l d n c m f r t n f d s c l d.—Klondyke.
75. M d n g h t f n d s h m s t l l w r t n g h s l p s t w t c h n g h s s g h t d m h s s p r t n s t n e t w t h n h l s t r g h t s.—Susy.
76. W h n p t r p l t h b k p r n t r d t h x t r x p r s s h r g r t t d t h p n c h t h n s p n t.—Ebonite.
77. W h r w s t h w b f d w v n s m k s h p r c d.—Sing Song.
78. T h g n t l b r z b t w n t h t r s b n d s t h r d s w h r t h w r n s k s h r n s t.—Beaumont.
79. N d w k p t h p r s w h n l e t d m m b r s b s t r p r s n t f r m n.—Selwood.
80. W h n g r k m t s g r k t h n w x p c t x c l l n t d d s.—Argonaut.
81. T h n v r s l p y h b r w f l c s t h v r y g r n p r.—Tiny.
82. H r c n t d f n d r s w r t n b s t m n g r c v r k n w.—Varmint.
83. T h s r p n t t m p t d v w h n s h n t r d d n.—Teajaypea.
84. B r n f c l d s n w g r w s n w d r p b l s s m s t s h w g d m r r w.—Megrah.
85. G h s v n s h p p t r s k n s n t m s m d w l l w h n t h s h p h r d l t t h m n t r t h g l n.—Vesta.
86. Y s t r v q u r p t r n t r d s w t q u n h l n s s h l t r d g l n.—Ilfra.
87. T h s l c t d m m b r s r d m t h b t t r m n t s c h m p l d g s.—India.
88. P g s t c k n g p n k p g s n b c y c l n g t h n g s s s m p l y s l l y.—Pink Pig.
89. B l s s d b t h p r l s s m p r s s w s r v.—Union Jack.
90. B r t s h w t s w l l b r n g n b l l r g h t n g r s h l l s.—Hacomaco.
91. S t r n v n t s p r v n t d t h s p t m b r r v l s.—Sinona.
92. T h n d l s s b r z v n f r z s t h v r g r n s.—Tom P.
93. T h n k s t l l f n d p n k s p l l s f r s t l n l l s.—
94. T r n i t y n g n d r s h o p t r n a l.—P. P.
95. T h m b z z l m n t s t h m n f f c t d w r r d r s s d.—Untruth.
96. N v r t h l s s t h x c l l n t m n w r x p l l d.—Cygnet.
97. N f d r c m f r t f r p r f l s w h g f r g l d.—Cygne.
98. W h n n d w d d d h d m d x p n s s n d l s s.—Djalfi.
99. C t t n w l f t e m f r t s h l l w c r w n f t t h.—Martlet.
100. C b m n s s l n g d w r f s s r c s m.—Vice Versa.
101. W h k n w s h w s n h t c r s s w r d s r l k s f g l m m g r w t s t r m s f s r r w s.—Hopping.
102. B r t s h d r n k v c t m s n h b t l l c t s p r t d r n k n g d m n s h t h r s t w t h m b b n g m l k n s l g h t s p s n s t l n m n d l l s v s t n g t h s n f r m t y.—Yalgogrin.
103. M s t l d f l k s k n w g d l d s n g s.—Heartsease.
104. W h r t h f l t d r s h l t d t h r t h s k r s s c n t h r.—Flamingo.
105. W h t c t e h f r n k m y l n d s g l l n t n v l s p r k.—Prak.
106. W h n g r k m t s g r k s v r t h t s t w s y t g r c r p n t d r t h e r t s w r f r.—A. A. G.
107. C l v r f r n e h m n w h n t m p r h l p s t h m d t c t v n t h b s t p r s r v d s c r t s.—Scorpio.
108. N t p m s t r c k s r s t t r p s f r y s t n c r w s.—Bathyllus.
100. W h r g r k m t s g k s v r s t s t s t h s t r s s—Quatra Bras.
110. D h n r t t m p e n n r m p s t h r b s n p r h f l r d s n h f e m m r s f l r.—Edgcome.
111. T h s r e n t v n t s x p r s s d t h f r n c h m n s f b l r g r t.—Psycho.
112. P r l d t t l k s t g d t d w r n g.—Club.
113. T h s w t b r z f r s h n s t h r s t l s s.—Ellarb.
114. W h n c h r y m n m t m r r y c h r r v l s.—Mrs. M.
115. N j s t h g h s h t p n t r t h f l z l s.—Cotton.
116. C v l c v c c t s c l m b l g h.—Ecossalse.
117. L t m g t t h l t h w w w s h x p e t d y s t r v.—Duff.
118.—P r s v r y p r f c t m n v r k p t h s p r c p t s t n.—Moll.
119. R m m b r t h n d w s k l s d.—Dorset.
120. D m s f f t m r r w t t w l m l.—A. C.
121. L v n r l c t d m m b r s w r p r s n t w h n w n t r d.—Albula.
122.—H y r d w h l y t r p r s s s h f l s h l y s t d.—Sylvia.
123. T h s m n s t r y s r s h b l l s n v t n g b r t s h c r t e s m.—Ubique.
124. D s t l l t l k w s l l t r s h.—Nippo.
125. G l d g r w s s c m m n c r w d s f l c k t b e.—Ninnin.
126. H f l s t g f r g l d n e m f r t h f d s c l d.—Klondyke.
127. V f l l w h n t h s r p n t t m p t d h r.—Flag.

Combinations of consonants have also been reeeived from Parish, Tum Tum, Rover, His Holiness, Ooloo, The Cock, Viper, Cockatoo, Chiea, Malabar, E. Furquhart, Brentwood Cat. Row, Mad Margaret, O'Lady, Hunter, Harry, Daffodil, South West, Ed-al-Anoram, Bag, Feather, Manx Cat, Old Bailey, Fluffy, Gee Gee, Swinton Park, Tuffy, Lola, Anne Kerenina, Swallow, Lynden, Gronèe, Firtree.

PATENT FAST DYED KHAKI MATERIALS.

Absolutely Fast to Washing.
Stand any amount of wear.

Most useful for all kinds of wear
by Ladies, Gentlemen, and Children.

LEEMANN & GATTY'S KHAKI. REGISTERED TRADE MARK.

Contractors to
H.M. WAR OFFICE and INDIA OFFICE.

WOOL.

SERGES.
FLANNELS.
CORDS.
LEG BANDAGES.

COTTON.

DRILLS.
SERGE.
CORDS.

Price List and Patterns Free on application to

E. SPINNER & CO., MANCHESTER AND BOMBAY, Sole Agents.

THE PATENT "RIGID-CURVE" STROP.

An English Gentleman, J.P., F.R.S., M.I.C.E., &c., writes:—"I have tried your Razor Strop, and have pleasure in sending you this Testimonial:—It is a simple and sure means in the hands of any novice of securing a proper cutting-edge upon a Razor, and I am surprised that such an improvement has been so long delayed."

Price 3s. 6d., carriage paid. A month's free trial allowed in actual use. Full money returned with pleasure if not approved.

A. HOWARTH, 53, Penn-road, Wolverhampton.

JUNO CYCLES ARE THE VERY BEST

Any JUNO Twelve Monthly Payments.
JUNO Lady's or Gent's Safety, £12 12s., 21/- monthly; £14 14s., 24/6 monthly. JUNOS from £10, 16/8 monthly. Write for New Season's List of JUNO Cycles & Accessories, sent post free. Standard Cyclometers, 10,000 miles, 2/3. Juno Riding School.
METROPOLITAN MACHINISTS CO., LTD., 75, 76, Bishopsgate Without, E.C.; & at Piccadilly Circus, London, W.

OLLVAAN DIAMONDS

Lovely New Design Brooch, 20/- post free.

(Rgd.) are all mounted in SOLID GOLD and SILVER, but that is not the point. The point is that these stones are in themselves the Only Rivals of real Diamonds, of which they are an exact representation.

Book of illustrations post free for the asking. Address:—

OLLVAAN, Rgd., 227, Regent St.

PRUDENTIAL ASSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.—Holborn Bars, London.

EVERY DESCRIPTION OF LIFE ASSURANCE AND ANNUITY BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
REVERSIONS PURCHASED.

Invested Funds, £30,000,000.

The last Annual Report can be obtained on application to the Secretary.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE INSURERS.
THE IMPERIAL INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED. FIRE. Est. 1803, 1, Old Broad-st., E.C., & 22, Pall Mall, S.W. Subd. Capital, £1,200,000. Paid-up, £300,000. Total funds, over £1,500,000.—E. COZENS SMITH, Gen. Man.

BEST & SAFEST DENTIFRICE
SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS AND PERFUMERS IN ELEGANT CRYSTAL TOILET CASKET
PRICE 2/6.
ALSO IN PATENT METALLIC BOX
PRICE 1/-

PRESERVE YOUR TEETH
BY USING THE
OS TOOTH BLOCK
Established 20 years
OVER 3000 TESTIMONIALS

BIRKBECK BANK (Estab. 1851), Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane, London. Two and a-half per cent. interest allowed on deposits, repayable on demand. Two per cent. on current accounts, on the minimum monthly balances when not below £100.
The BIRKBECK ALMANACK with particulars, post free.
FRANCIS RAVENSCROFT, Manager.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

NOTICE.

No Member of the Stock Exchange is allowed to advertise for business purposes, or to issue circulars to persons other than his own principals.

Persons who advertise as Brokers or Share Dealers are not Members of the Stock Exchange, or under the control of the Committee.

A List of Members of the Stock Exchange who are Stock and Share Brokers may be seen at the Bartholomew-lane Entrance to the Bank of England, or obtained on application to

EDWARD SATTERTHWAITE,
Secretary to the Committee of the Stock Exchange.

Committee Room, The Stock Exchange, London, E.C.

Genuine Old Welch Dressers

(Inlaid and Carved Oak), from £6. 10s.

ILLUSTRATED PRICED CATALOGUES POST FREE.
ALL GOODS CARRIAGE PAID TO ANY STATION IN GREAT BRITAIN.

HEWETSONS,

TOTTENHAM COURT ROAD, London, W.

FARADAY & SON's

Electric Light Fittings

New Designs

(in Classic and Renaissance) for Season '98

2 & 3 BERNERS ST. LONDON W

A Great Public Boon!

LIPTON

has commenced making EXTRACT of BEEF and FLUID BEEF, and is now offering to the Public, at his Branches and Agencies, the

Finest Quality

EXTRACT OF BEEF

EXTRACT OF BEEF & FLUID BEEF At prices which will place these most valuable articles of food

WITHIN THE REACH OF ALL.

LIPTON'S EXTRACT OF BEEF and FLUID BEEF

Are made from the finest quality of Fresh Ox Beef, under the most skilful, scientific, and practical supervision, by a process entirely his own, unquestionably making his

EXTRACT OF BEEF and FLUID BEEF

FLUID BEEF

the Finest Quality ever offered to the Public, and SAVING PURCHASERS from 25 to 35 PER CENT.

THE DAYS OF HUGE PROFITS ARE OVER!

It is admitted by everyone that LIPTON caused a revolution in the Tea Trade, and forced Tea Dealers and Merchants to REDUCE THEIR PRICES. Before LIPTON introduced his celebrated Teas, THE PUBLIC HAD TO PAY nearly double the price they are now charged by LIPTON for the Finest Teas the World can produce.

WHAT LIPTON HAS DONE IN THE TEA TRADE, LIPTON WILL DO IN THE EXTRACT OF BEEF TRADE.

LIPTON'S FLUID BEEF contains the three principal properties of meat, viz., ALBUMEN, FIBRINE, and ESSENCE OF BEEF, in equal proportions, thus making A PERFECT BEEF FOOD, and as there are no condiments nor preservatives of a foreign nature used, it will be found that THE NATURAL FLAVOUR OF THE BEEF IS RETAINED.

LIPTON'S EXTRACT OF BEEF or FLUID BEEF makes the richest Beef Tea.

They are also invaluable in the domestic economy, and will be found by all good cooks the most economical and the best for flavouring Soups, Gravies, Sauces, Entrées, &c.

UPON THE PUBLIC VERDICT Lipton will rely. One trial of his Extract of Beef and Fluid Beef, he is confident, will ensure their being used in future IN EVERY HOME.

Lipton's Extract of Beef and Fluid Beef can be obtained from Lipton's Markets and Agencies throughout the World.

CHIEF OFFICES: CITY ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

THE MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY OF NEW YORK.

RICHARD A. McCURDY, President.

Policy-holders in the "Mutual" enjoy the advantages of

SECURITY.—

Assets, 1897, exceed £52,000,000
Surplus, 1897, exceeds 7,250,000

ADAPTABILITY.—

LIFE INSURANCE.
INVESTMENT.
INCOME.

PROMPTITUDE.—

Claims paid in London immediately on receipt of satisfactory proof.

LIBERALITY.—

Bonuses have, in many cases, trebled the original sum.
Surrender values of unique liberality paid.

Detailed information supplied on application.

Head Office for the United Kingdom:
17 & 18, CORNHILL, LONDON, E.C.
D. C. HALDEMAN, General Manager.

BOVRIL

Contains in a highly concentrated and easily digestible form the direct nourishment of

PRIME OX BEEF

and fortifies the system against

COLDS, CHILLS, AND INFLUENZA.

BOVRIL, LIMITED, LONDON,
Food Specialists and Hospital Purveyors.
CONTRACTORS TO
HER MAJESTY'S AND FOREIGN GOVERNMENTS.
Chairman:
The Right Honourable LORD PLAYFAIR, G.C.B., LL.D.

W. & F. THORN, 19, Gt. Portland-st. W.

LONDON AGENTS.

THE STEREOSCOPIC COMPANY, 106, 108, Regent-st. W.

THE

ELSWICK

LADY'S ELSWICK.

GENTLEMAN'S ELSWICK.

1898

Elswicks are, if possible, superior to those previously made and are as perfect as money and skill can make them.

ELSWICK CYCLES are fitted with the PATTISSON HYGIENIC SADDLE.

CITY AGENTS—
BENETFINK & CO.
107, 108, Cheapside, E.C.

A WONDERFUL MEDICINE

BEECHAM'S PILLS

Have been before the Public for more than fifty years, and have now the greatest sale of any Proprietary article. This has been achieved without the publication of testimonials, the convincing fact is, that BEECHAM'S PILLS RECOMMEND THEMSELVES.

WORTH A GUINEA A BOX

FOR ALL
Bilious & Nervous Disorders
SUCH AS
Sick Headache, Constipation,
Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion,
Disordered Liver and Female Ailments.

Annual Sale, SIX MILLION BOXES.

Sold everywhere in boxes 9½d., 13½d. and 2/9 each.

Printed for the Proprietor by LOVE & WYMAN, Limited, Great Queen-st. W.C. and published at 10, Bolt-ct. Fleet-st. E.C. in the Parish of St. Dunstan's-in-the-West in the City of London. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to REGINALD E. BOOKER, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-st. Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

TRUTH

"Cultores Veritatis Fraudis Inimici."—Cicero.

No. 1108. Vol. XLIII. Thursday, March 24, 1898. Price Sixpence.

NOTICE.

The terms of Subscription to Truth, which are payable in advance, are as follows:—To any address in the United Kingdom, for 3 months, 7s.; 6 months, 14s.; and for 12 months, 28s. The Thin Paper Edition is forwarded to countries within the Postal Union for 3 months for 7s. 8d.; 6 months, 15s. 4d.; and 12 months, 30s. 8d. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to the Manager, Truth, "Truth Building," Carteret-street, S.W.

ENTRE NOUS.

THE Prince of Wales will leave Cannes at the end of next week on his return to England. H.R.H. intends to stay for a few days in Paris, at the Hôtel Bristol, on his way home. The Prince is expected at Sandringham on Thursday, April 7, and on Easter Monday H.R.H. and his guests will attend the West Norfolk Hunt Club Steeple-chases at East Winch, near Lynn. The Prince goes to Newmarket on Wednesday morning, April 13, returning to Sandringham after the races on Friday, the 15th, and he will arrive at Marlborough House for the season on Monday, the 18th.

The Duke of Saxe-Coburg has been living in Malta harbour for some days on board H.M.S. Surprise, the Admiral's despatch boat which brought the Duke from Alexandria. Even the most loyal have been severely tried by seeing the Saxe-Coburg flag flying from the British ship. The Duke of Saxe-Coburg is so entirely a Prince of the German Empire that the Duchess would not be permitted to have in Germany an English Lady-in Waiting.

An evening paper announced on Thursday that the Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz "is residing for the present in Paris quite privately," whereas H.R.H. has not been in Paris for years, and during the last month she has been staying at Mentone. The Grand Duchess Augusta is at the Hôtel du Louvre, where her niece the Duchess of York, is also staying incognita as Lady Killarney.

The Empress Frederick has been seriously ill from bronchitis, and she has left Berlin to recruit her health at Kiel, the physicians having advised sea air. The Empress will stay for several weeks at Kiel with Princess Henry of Prussia, and it is possible that she may defer her visit to England until the third week in May, in which case she will accompany the Queen to Balmoral. The Empress Frederick has been much pulled down and depressed by her illness.

The Duchess of Albany and her daughter Princess Alice are expected to return next week to Claremont Park from Cannes, where they have been staying for nearly two months at the Villa Nevada. Princess Alice is to be confirmed at St. George's Church, Cannes, by the Bishop of Ripon in the course of the next few days.

The Empress Dowager of Russia and the Princess of Wales are expected this week at Copenhagen, to stay until April 12, when they will proceed to Gmunden on a visit to the Duke and Duchess of Cumberland. It has been settled that Queen Marie of Hanover's eightieth birthday is to be celebrated on April 14 at Gmunden, and not at Cannes, as was originally arranged. The Crown Prince of Denmark will accompany his sisters from Copenhagen to Gmunden, and H.R.H. and the Crown Princess are to proceed thence to Cannes to attend the marriage of their eldest son, Prince Christian, with the Duchess Alexandrina of Mecklenburg-Schwerin. The Crown Princess Louise has settled twenty millions of marks on Prince Christian, whose bride has a large fortune.

I hear that the "irregular" presentation which was made at the first Drawing Room of the season has since been privately cancelled. The same course has been adopted in regard to another presentation, about which there has been a great fuss, and it was with difficulty that the Queen was induced to withdraw her order that an official notification of the "mistake" should be published in the Gazette.

It is greatly to be hoped that Lord Salisbury will recover shortly from the effects of influenza. Should he break down entirely, it is understood that the Duke of Devonshire will become Premier, and that Lord Lansdowne will be Foreign Secretary, unless this post should devolve on Mr. Balfour. In the latter case, as it would be impossible for any one man to do the work of the Foreign Office and that of Leader of the House, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, it is expected, would become the Leader.

There is not a particle of foundation for the report that Lord Londonderry is to replace Lord Aberdeen as Governor-General of Canada. The post will probably be offered to Lord Hertford, but there are several eager candidates.

One of the shortest Castle seasons on record came to an end in Dublin last week. For a little over five weeks Lord and Lady Cadogan stayed at Dublin Castle, and gave the customary entertainments in the customary way. The enthusiasm — not to say hysterics — of Court-inspired journals over the brilliancy of Lord Cadogan's reign in Dublin Castle is all rubbish. Lord Cadogan, in entertaining, has closely followed, as every Viceroy does, the traditions of the Castle, and done exactly what his predecessors, with very few exceptions, did. To be sure, each Viceroy was, in his day, lauded as exceptional, and as surpassing his predecessors in brilliancy. The laudations of the courtiers may therefore also be looked on as traditional at Dublin Castle.

The last party of visitors at Dublin Castle included Lord and Lady Arran, Lady Ancaster, Lady Alice Willoughby, Lord and Lady Listowel, Lady Beatrice Hare, Lady Rosse, Lady Muriel Parsons, Lords Kilmorey, Erne, Inchiquin, Colonel Crichton, and many others. The party broke up on Friday morning, St. Patrick's Ball taking place on the previous night. In the evening Lord and Lady Cadogan left Dublin Castle for England, where they will remain for some weeks. They will return to the Viceregal Lodge for Easter.

Lord Roberts, on his white Arab of Jubilee fame, presided at the guard mounting and trooping of colours in the Castle-yard, Dublin, on St. Patrick's Day. Lord and Lady Cadogan and all the Viceregal party, profusely decorated with shamrocks—a fact which may be of interest to Commanding Officers who cavil at the harmless fancy of their Irish subordinates for wearing the green—were present on the balcony in front of the Throne Room. After the ceremony their Excellencies and most of the Viceregal party drove to the race meeting at Baldoyle. A band played in the enclosure, where, notwithstanding a strong March wind from the sea, a large assemblage of the elect of Irish society seemed to enjoy themselves.

The Duke of Devonshire is going to the Riviera, to join the Duchess, who has been staying at Monte Carlo during the last three weeks. They will return to England on April 12.

Sir Henry Bessemer had the good fortune (so rarely enjoyed by inventors) of reaping a generous harvest from his famous process, which greatly lessened the cost of the production of steel, while the quality of the metal was improved. Sir Henry's royalties brought him in upwards of £1,100,000; but his boat, which was to prevent seasickness, proved an ignominious failure.

The late Sir William Fraser was a most learned antiquary, and quite unrivalled in his knowledge of the Scotch Records. In 1832, at the age of sixteen, Sir William came to Edinburgh from a village in Kincardineshire with only a few shillings in his pocket, and he commenced life as a clerk in a writer's office. Even in those days he was conspicuous for his zeal in historic research. He was employed at the Record Office at Edinburgh for thirty years. Sir William was so engrossed in the work which was the business and the pleasure of his life that he never troubled himself about politics, but he received decorations from both Mr. Gladstone and Lord Salisbury. He brought out many family histories, the fruit of his garnerings in charter chests and muniment rooms, and each volume contains much curious, interesting, and valuable information which can nowhere else be found. These volumes were all privately printed, and they command high prices at sales. Sir William was a delightful companion when in the vein (which was not always), for he was a perfect reservoir of strange and entertaining reminiscences.

There is not a particle of foundation for the statement in the Westminster Gazette of Saturday that Avery Hill, Eltham, the residence of the late Colonel North, "has been acquired by the Duke of York." The report, which was probably started in order to facilitate the sale of the property, is absurd, for there are already more than a sufficient number of Royal residences, and the Queen has granted the White Lodge to the Duke and Duchess of York, who had been given Bushey Park after the death of the Duc de Nemours, but they prefer the Richmond place.

The tyrant Man seems to have been rather unfairly handled at the meeting of the Rational Dress League last week. Lady Harberton expressed her wonder at his stupidity in being unable to look at knickerbockers and divided skirts from a common-sense standpoint, and went on to attribute his hostility to these garments to the survival of "tribal influence." The "tribal influence," it seems, leads men to regard women as creatures whose place is by the fireside, and who are doomed to a life of inactivity. In order to keep women in this state of inactivity, Man insists in dressing them in petticoats. Possibly the "tribal influence" has the effects here attributed to it, although I have heard of tribes in which the women do all the work and the men sit about in a state of inactivity, even if they do not wear petticoats. But really it is a little hard on the inferior being to saddle him with responsibility for the way women dress themselves.

Within my own brief experience I have seen Man expending his sarcasms on crinolines, dress improvers, matinée hats, and a dozen other eccentricities of feminine costume, but for any result produced he might as well have addressed his remarks to the advancing tide. Women

---

For the Truth Hotel List, see page 750 in the present issue.
For Hospitals and Appeals, see page 749.
For Amusements, see page 751.
For Our Puzzles, see page 761.

will always wear what they please, regardless of the feelings of their male belongings. I know that I am a stupid thing, and possibly I am dominated by tribal influences, but still I have some knowledge of the world around me, and my impression is that if the parties who set the female fashions chose to-morrow to ordain that civilised Woman should array herself in the costume of the Esquimaux, or the South Sea Islander, the whole of our female population would speedily be dressed in that style. Nor have I the slightest doubt that if men began to-morrow to denounce the wearing of petticoats, and beg their sisters, cousins, and aunts to array themselves in "bifurcated garments," even those who at present affect divided skirts and cycling knickers would instantly renounce them for ever.

A poet, who has evidently risen superior to "tribal influences," sends me the following verses inspired by the Rational Dress meeting. In the hope that they may do something to advance "the cause," I humbly publish them :—

"THE SONG OF THE SKIRT."

With accents heated and high,
  With cheeks that were angrily red,
A woman stood, in unwomanly "bags,"
  Scornfully tossing her head.
At a platform's front she stood
  The claims of her sex to assert;
And there, with a voice of indignant pitch,
  She sang this "Song of the Skirt."

"Work! work! work!
  Oh, women, though men may scoff!
Work! work! work!
  Till you've thrown this incubus off!
For the skirt is the badge of shame
  That Man to our sex allots,
So work till you've changed that humbling badge
  For a pair of—you-know-whats.

"Work! work! work!
  However the cynics laugh;
Work! work! work!
  Though the comic papers chaff;
Enjoy neither ease nor rest
  Till your end at last you gain,
And proudly stand, as you see me now,
  Arrayed in cylinders twain!

"The tyrants whom I denounce
  Have sisters, and mothers, and wives,
Yet they'd make you wear the badge
  Of slavery all your lives.
New Women! uprise, I say!
  For unless you soon rebel,
This skirt which clings to your waist will be
  The shroud of your hopes as well.

"The Spirit of the Age
  You will all in vain invoke
For a latch-key—Freedom's sign—
  And the precious right to smoke.
You will still remain the slaves
  Of Man's tyrannical whims,
So long as the skirt is still begirt
  Round your—well, your nether limbs.

"As long as that skirt you wear,
  Your onward path 'twill block;
You must still Man's dinners cook,
  You must still his cradles rock;
You will still remain his toy,
  You will never bestride the barb,
As Emancipated Woman should,
  In a bifurcated garb!

"So, work! work! work!
  For the cause you have at heart!
With pamphlet and with speech
  Be ready to play your part.
On the platform take your stand,
  And the downfall there proclaim
Of the hated skirt, and the advent hail
  Of the—things I need not name.

"Twin omens of victory,
  These garments should lead you on—
I've grasped and I wear the prize,
  And so may you all, anon.
Already has trembling Man
  Good reason to fear our raid,
For he knows that his citadel we shall storm
  Through the breaches we have made!"

* * * * *

With accents heated and high,
  With a face that was angrily red,
A woman stood, in unwomanly "bags,"
  Scornfully tossing her head.
At the front of the platform stood,
  The rights of her sex to assert;
And there, in a voice of indignant pitch—
And giving her "knicks" an occasional hitch—
  She sang this "Song of the Skirt."

Should hospital nurses be allowed to wear their bonnets in those parts of theatres where other ladies are compelled to remove them? I should have said not; the feminine bonnet being at all times a nuisance in places of amusement. I have had a letter, however, from an invalid, who visited one of the theatres the other day attended by a nurse, and is very indignant at the delay caused by the nurse having to go to the cloak-room to remove and replace her bonnet on entering and leaving the theatre. It happens that, in this case, the party were occupying a private box, so that I suppose the nurse's bonnet would not have interfered with any other members of the audience. But if managers make rules for the general observance of ladies visiting their theatres, I really do not quite see why hospital nurses should be specially exempted from them.

A medical gentleman, who recently sought admission to St. Thomas's Hospital as a paying patient, gives an account of his reception, which is, primâ facie, not over creditable to the Hospital authorities. He had made his arrangements for admission in advance, had explained that he was a doctor, and also that he was stone deaf. On arriving, however, he found that no arrangements whatever had been made for his reception. He had to go through the annoyance of being shouted at in vain by one official after another, and being requested to pay fees, &c., which is unusual in the case of a doctor, and only after a long delay was he interviewed by a medical officer. This gentleman offered in writing a few words of apology for what had occurred, and the patient replied that he thought he had good grounds for complaining: whereupon, to his astonishment, the medical officer angrily informed him that St. Thomas's Home was not a suitable place for his case, and he was packed off there and then. This is really a very singular story, and I should be glad to hear if the Hospital authorities can put a more agreeable complexion upon it.

Major Howe & Co.—Fashionable Boots and Shoes.—16, Coventry-st., W.; 60, Strand, W.C.; 81, Gracechurch-st.; and 13, Queen Victoria-st., London. "Note Addresses." (Repairs)

There is one terror of London life which I wonder we submit to so patiently. It is the invasion of quiet streets, between ten and midnight, by leather-lunged louts, generally two or three in a party, who make night hideous by shouting for sale an "extry speshul" evening paper, alleged to contain news of some "'orrible murder" or "'orrible discovery" in that particular district. The paper is usually sold at double the nominal price, and the purchaser is usually sold too, for the journal rarely contains anything corresponding in the remotest degree to the sensational announcements of the vendors. On almost every occasion the latter might be given into custody for obtaining money by false pretences. Nobody cares to take that extreme course, but most people strongly object to having their peace disturbed by this untimely bawling, and it is strange the police do not put an end to the nuisance.

The police appear to make up for their apathy in the presence of undoubted nuisances, such as that described above, by extra vigilance in dealing with minor and technical offenders who cause no annoyance. This has just been strikingly shown at Liverpool, where, according to the Porcupine, the Chief Superintendent of the Police has entered upon a vigorous crusade against the harmless, if not necessary, flower-girl. The girl who stands in the street a minute or two to sell a bunch of violets is at once summoned under some musty local by-law, and fined by the magistrates for causing an obstruction, though it is obviously ridiculous to pretend that anybody has been obstructed. The police strain at gnats while swallowing camels.

Apropos of street nuisances, a friend who has suffered many things of church bells suggests that those responsible for the Street Noises Bill should endeavour to remove this distressing form of annoyance at the same time that they put a limit to the operations of the organ-grinder and the German band. I fear that the Bill in question experienced ill-fortune in the ballot at the commencement of the Session, but if more is heard of it later on, this suggestion may be worth the notice of its promoters. As was pointed out in Truth the other day, the clergy have in the present state of things, no choice in the matter of bell-ringing. What seems needed, therefore, is a change in the law, which shall veto the nuisance, at any rate in populous localities.

One of my readers raised the other day the question whether there is any legal objection to a man marrying his divorced wife's sister. I told him in reply that I imagine there is the strongest legal objection, but he does not feel satisfied, so I am curious to know whether any legal reader can corroborate my views. I take it that the law is laid down in the Table of Affinity in the Book of Common Prayer, which begins by prohibiting a man from marrying his grandmother, and among other things declares that he cannot marry his "wife's sister." His wife's sister does not cease to be his wife's sister when he has divorced his wife, any more than she does when his wife is dead. However, there may be some special legislation on the point with which I am unacquainted.

Apart, however, from legal considerations, my advice to any one who contemplates marrying his divorced wife's sister is "Don't!" I should give the same advice to any one who contemplated marrying his deceased wife's sister. It is, of course, a matter of individual taste, but to me, personally, I confess the hankering that so many men have after their wives' sisters is a little mysterious. Possibly the attraction is like that of forbidden fruit, and if we withdrew the prohibition, the desire for marrying deceased wives' sisters, or divorced wives' sisters would disappear with it.

The famous Worcestershire sauce has produced financial results which a former Lord Sandys can never have contemplated when he presented the recipe to the original partners in the firm of Lea & Perrins, who were druggists at Worcester. The fortunes left by Mr. C. W. Lea, Mr. J. W. Lea, and Mr. J. D. Perrins amounted in the aggregate to over two millions. The present owner of Ombersley Court must regret that his ancestor did not speculate on his own account in the sauce, the recipe of which is said to have been brought from the East by Lord Sandys, and it was by a mere chance that he one day mentioned it to Lea & Perrins while purchasing some articles in their shop.

There are many men of wealth among us—indeed, if one might believe all that one reads, millionaires nowadays are becoming quite common. What they do with their money I cannot say. I can say, however, that it is very rarely applied with such munificence for the public benefit as Mr. F. J. Horniman, M.P., is showing in the gift he is about to make to London. Mr. Horniman is building a permanent house at Forest Hill for the fine collection of curios and works of art which has been open to the public in a temporary museum for some years past; he intends to fit up another large building as a club-house and free library for the neighbourhood, and to convert the fifteen surrounding acres of land into a public pleasure and recreation ground; and the whole property is eventually to be handed over to the County Council. Such an example of generosity and public spirit may well be commended to those who are in a position to go and do likewise.

"Hôtel Burlington," at Sunny Boscombe. (200 rooms). Every luxury. Delightful grounds. Magnificent golf links. Sea-water baths. Moderate charges.—Bournemouth East Station.

A Leamington paper reports that, at a pigeon-shooting match a few days ago at the neighbouring village of Radford, the supply of birds ran short, and so "those shot at were imprisoned by a piece of string attached to the body, and, if not killed, they were pulled back into the trap" to be shot at again. I am not a pigeon-shooter myself, but I should much like to know whether followers of that noble sport consider that this practice comes within the rules of the game. My own opinion is that it is a piece of abominable cruelty.

Here is another "ingenuous gentleman" in defence of the Game Laws:—

> You say, in reply to an ingenuous gentleman, that the "prospect of the abolition of the Game Laws is one which the country may face with equanimity." Now, I am another ingenuous gentleman, and I would ask you in all simplicity and meekness if the country would face at the same time with equal equanimity the accompanying abolition of all game birds, such as grouse, pheasants, partridges, &c.? Would, moreover, the fishmongers, greengrocers, and gamekeepers face it? Would reputed gourmets like yourself face it? And last, but not least, what would become of the poachers?
>
> You, sir, may talk vaguely of the land suffering from game preserving, but, after all, pheasant rearing is only a modified form of poultry growing, and every one knows how profitable a branch of farming industry that is.

This raises various and complicated questions. As regards the extinction of game, my impression is that if the Game Laws of England were assimilated to those of foreign countries, the only game whose existence might be jeopardised would be pheasants, and perhaps in some degree hares and rabbits. If, however, pheasant rearing is to be treated as a branch of poultry growing, it would be perfectly easy to preserve the pheasants without Game Laws. No special legislation has been needed up to the present for the preservation of our domestic cocks and hens. The difficulty only arises when you turn your poultry loose in the woods, with a view to the sport of shooting them periodically. My impression is that this difficulty of rearing and preserving poultry for purposes of sport rather than for the market is the whole raison d'être of the British Game Laws. As to grouse and partridges being exterminated if our special legislation in regard to night poaching and game trespass were abolished, I simply don't believe it.

I recommend this second "ingenuous gentleman," as he finds pheasant growing so profitable, to go into it on commercial lines, and drop the idea of getting sport out of it. He will then be able to keep the gamedealers and the "greengrocers" fully stocked, to employ as many hands as at present, and probably to add more to his income. It is, indeed, news to me to hear that pheasant preserving is such a profitable business. Not many years back a friend in that line told me that every bird he shot cost him 20s. That, however, was before the development of the practice of sending the game to market by the ton after a battue.

By the way, it is surprising intelligence to me to know that I have acquired the reputation of a gourmet. I should as soon have expected to hear that Sir Wilfrid Lawson was a reputed connoisseur of dry champagne. Truly it is an easy thing in this life to acquire a reputation. One day I am told that I am a notorious atheist, another that I am well known as a socialist, another that I am a well-known gambler; and now I am a reputed gourmet.

TO NELLIE FARREN.

(March 17, 1898.)

Full many triumphs you have won, delightful "Little Nell,"
But none so great as that of which to-day's records will tell;
This is your greatest and your best—the sweetest you could win,
For love for you makes all the world of London stageland kin!

If Friendship, proved beyond all doubt, can happiness decree,
It would be hard to overstate how happy you must be.
If sympathy can soothe the smart of trouble such as yours,
You have a solace that will last whilst life itself endures.

In those glad years we all recall you freely gave your best,
But how incomparable that was till now we never guess'd;
Now, by a surer standard, we its worth can estimate—
No trivial service could have earned a gratitude so great!

Take, then, this tribute, not by way of adding to your bays,
But for the happy sake of old and unforgotten days;
Take it, and be assured, should it inelegant appear,
It might have been much more ornate had it been less sincere.

A gentleman in the provinces writes to me, under the suggestive nom de plume of "An Old Scribbler," to complain of the great lack of independence shown by editors in publishing letters addressed to them. Not only has this Old Scribbler found by experience that letters likely to give offence to advertisers or persons in authority always fail to obtain insertion, but he also finds that the contributions of voluntary correspondents too often share the fate of pearls cast before swine. In order to relieve myself of this reproach, I select the following pearl:—

> Editors are usually well-informed; but they cannot know everything, and what may seem to them to be of no moment, may greatly interest some of their readers and the public. Besides, the letter writers themselves should be considered. They often have an object in view, which they cannot otherwise obtain, and having made their effort, they should have a fair field and no favour.

Fresh Flowers from the Flower Farm, Wisbech, 2s. 6d. per box, paid. Also Garden Plants at grower's prices. Write for list.

That such scribblers often have an object in view which they cannot otherwise obtain, is a truth to which no one will assent more readily than I. Unfortunately their objects are not always those to which an editor can conscientiously lend himself. In nine cases out of ten, according to my experience, the object is self-advertisement. As to the failure of editors to perceive what the public really care for, it may be that we are, as a class, very ignorant of our own business. But I am afraid it will hardly do for us to surrender our editorial judgment, such as it is, into the hands of any casual contributor who thinks he understands the public taste better than we do, or has an object in view which he could not otherwise obtain.

Mr. Langton Bayly is very cross with me for having presumed to condense the lengthy letter which he sent for publication in TRUTH last week. He now sends a further communication, in four large sheets of type-written matter, which I am to publish, accompanied by a retractation of my views, unless I am willing to incur the charge of dishonesty. The last alternative is a serious one, but I really think that, out of respect for my readers, I must take this risk. Every point that Mr. Bayly made in his first letter in answer to my criticism was fairly given in last week's TRUTH. The whole contents of his present letter may be fairly and accurately summed up by saying that he disagrees with all my conclusions and opinions about his scholarship competition, and reiterates everything that he said before. When I have said this, I consider that I have said all that Mr. Langton Bayly has any right to ask for. If he wishes to expound his views and refute mine at greater length, he has a weekly journal of his own in which he can do it, and his doing it in his own columns will have the advantage that it will reach his own readers, who are presumably the persons chiefly interested in the matter.

A curious document recently reached the London County Council offices in Spring-gardens, addressed to "Señor Presidente de Consejo Municipal de Londres." The writer of the letter was Senor Rafaela Caramon, of Cordova, who was anxious to dispose of a printed pedigree of the Kings of the Angles. He wanted £2 for the pedigree, and was prepared to forward it on receipt of that amount. It would be interesting to know more of Señor Rafaela Caramon, who looks as if he might be some relative of the unfortunate prisoner who has been so long languishing in the dungeons of various Spanish towns. Anyhow, it is to be hoped that his knowledge of genealogy is superior to his knowledge of etymology, for he states in his letter that the English were formerly called Angles from Angela, a queen of the Saxons—a statement calculated to make the late Professor Freeman turn in his grave.

The Westminster Gazette has been publishing an interesting description of "Christian Science," the latest fashionable superstition. By a curious coincidence, it so happens that I have also been investigating the teaching and practice of Mrs. Field-King and her disciples, and it was purely by a journalistic accident that the result of my inquiries did not appear on Wednesday last, simultaneously with the first of the Westminster Gazette articles. As my contemporary is now in possession of the field, I think it better to wait until its articles have been concluded before saying anything on the subject. But I think it possible that I may be able to supplement those articles with some particulars which will throw a good deal of additional light upon the Christian Scientists.

The new issues of two more works of reference have been added to my shelves during the past week or so—Kelly & Co.'s "Clergy List" for 1898, and the spring edition of "Ruff's Guide to the Turf." I take the liberty of coupling them because each in its own line is excellent, and to me at least both are indispensable. It would be hardly possible to send a number of TRUTH to press without consulting the Clergy List and Ruff's Guide for the name of some parson and the record of some race.

A certain Mr. Walter Cave has confided to the Editor of the Times and the public his indignation "at the flagrant injustice" of Sir William Harcourt's remark that the police building by Westminster Bridge compares unfavourably with the establishment of Crosse & Blackwell on the other side of the river, as an ornament to the Metropolis. This, says Mr. Cave, "must have caused a feeling of hopeless despair in the hearts of all artists in the country." If such be the case, the condition of the hearts of all the artists in the country fills mine with despair, for on a more hideous building than this police structure never did my eyes rest.

It is by no means necessary to be "an artist" in order to judge of the beauty of a building. The artist, indeed, is less fitted to form a sound opinion on the matter than others, because his judgment is warped by technical trivialities. The less artists and architects have to do with the new Government buildings, the more suitable will the buildings be for their purpose inside, and the more pleasing will they be outside. On the site in Parliament-street a building for the Local Government Board and other Departments is to be erected. Mr. Akers Douglas has promised that all the internal arrangements shall be in the hands of that capable official, Sir John Taylor, but that in regard to the exterior an architect will be consulted. Why? The exterior should correspond with that of the building on the right side of Whitehall-place that was erected a few years ago. This being admitted, and I suppose few who are not artists would contest it, what is the use of an architect?

It is highly desirable from every point of view that the South Kensington Museum buildings should be finished off. Before, however, we spend £800,000 on bricks and mortar for this purpose, we ought to seriously consider whether we cannot save some of it by utilising the vast barren solitudes of the Imperial Institute. I read in the papers last week that "those who have the control of the Institute are still hoping against hope that something may happen to make it popular." The picture which this calls to mind of the Institute management waiting patiently, with folded hands, "for something to turn up," is a very touching one. But I doubt whether anything better could "happen" to the Imperial Institute, than that it should come to the aid of the National exchequer, and lessen the cost of the new Museum buildings. It would then be necessary to do little more than finish off the present Museum with a frontage to Cromwell and Exhibition roads. The memory of the Institute might be suitably enshrined on a prominent tablet, setting forth how it had expired for the sake of a grateful country, whom its efforts to serve during life were unavailing.

Some one in authority is very much to blame for the delay in distributing the grants of the Science and Art Department. I hear of a case in which the grants in respect of the examinations held in May last have not yet been paid. Application after application has been made for the money, which is considerably over £100, but up to the present time the only communication received in reply is a request, forwarded some few weeks ago, for the filling up of another form for an amount of six guineas in a certain science subject, on the ground that the previous demand was made on a blue form instead of a white, or vice versâ. There are few schools in which the payment of these grants is not a matter of urgent importance, and where the delay does not materially affect the efficiency of the schools.

As already mentioned in Truth, the fees paid to polling clerks at the last School Board election were very considerably reduced. One would have thought that in view of this fact special promptness would have been shown by the authorities in making the payments. As a matter of fact, some of the clerks have only got their money within the last week. Even then they have had to apply in person at the Vestry offices in order to obtain payment, which means in some cases a journey of several miles. Why on earth could not this money have been sent out at once by cheque or postal order?

I take the following edifying specimen of sectarian intolerance and educational blindness from a speech by Professor Mahaffy at Belfast last week:—

> But if there was to be a Roman Catholic University for Ireland, for what purpose would it be? Was it to educate paupers in the arts? There might be countries, such as Scotland, in which very poor people learned the arts and became professional men. He (the professor) had now lived forty years in Ireland, and he could say conscientiously that any system of education in the form of a Roman Catholic University which took the poor classes and educated them to leave their own condition in life and become professional men, would be not only no benefit to that class of their population, but a great mischief.

It might, indeed, be an argument against the establishment of the proposed University, if these enlightened views of an Irish Protestant were to be taken as a fair indication of the probable results of an academic training on Irish Catholics.

The Country Vicar whose questions anent the suggested "pooling" of parochial endowments I answered a fortnight ago returns to the charge with another series of interrogatories. If I could spare a couple of columns for the discussion of this subject, I think I could deal with his questions, but, as I cannot, I must ask to be excused for the present. I will admit, however, that in one point the Country Vicar scores. He asks how a clergyman could give a suitable education to three or four children on an income of £246, taking that as the average value of the present livings. The education difficulty is no doubt a real one, and I can only suggest that it should be met by making some special provision for the education of the children of the clergy.

It cannot be seriously contended, however, that a clergyman's income should be proportional to the number of his children. Neither is it an answer to a proposal for a readjustment of the revenue to say that even if readjusted the available income would still be insufficient for this or that purpose in particular cases. We must look at the case all round. So looking at it, what I contend is that it would be infinitely better that every clergyman whose parish justified it should have an income of from £200 to £300 a year, than that a large number of them should be in a state of chronic destitution while others are in comparative affluence.

This discussion arose out of a reference in Truth to one of the too numerous clerical begging-letter writers. Another appeal from one of these mendicants has just come under my notice, the writer being the Rev. Henry E. Smith, Vicar of Weston, Crewe. Mr. Smith's appeals were referred to in Truth last July. He was then giving a heart-rending account of his poverty, and referring specially to the sad condition of his wife, who had fractured her knee-cap. In his latest appeal the fractured knee-cap is again a prominent feature. After it had been partially cured, one of the reverend gentleman's daughters contracted typhoid fever. While endeavouring to get about and nurse her, the wife dislocated one of the sinews of the fractured knee, and this leads to a piteous account of the condition of the household, with the mother laid up in one room and the daughter in another. As I intimated on the last occasion, I do not feel unduly exercised over Mr. Smith's troubles, because they have been systematically paraded in the same way over the last seven or eight years. At the same time, Mr. Smith—and he is not the only one—is at present expected by the Church to perform his parochial duties on a stipend of £46 a year. That a man in this position should degenerate into a sort of professional mendicant is not to be wondered at. If I were responsible for the arrangement, and saw on the one hand Mr. Smith with his £46 a year, and on the other a brother Rector with £460, I should consider myself justified in pooling the two incomes, and giving each incumbent £253. The result would, I think, be more creditable to the Church, even if the hitherto wealthier Rector found a difficulty about sending his sons to a public school.

I have also been taken to task for introducing the late Cardinal Manning on to the scene. One cleric takes exception to the statement that the late Cardinal lived and died in something little better than a garret, and points out that Archbishop's House at Westminster, if not an attractive building outside, is a beautiful place within—large, and suitably fitted up for the purpose of hospitality or reception. Another Anglican remarks that the Cardinal was a bachelor, and wants to know if I am going to advocate the celibacy of the clergy. Really, all this is somewhat wide of the mark. I was asked what income I thought suitable to the sacred calling of a minister of religion, and I instanced perfectly well-known facts as to the simple and unostentatious way in which Cardinal Manning lived, and the virtual poverty in which he died. These facts seemed to me to prove that a large income is not necessary to the dignity of a clergyman of any rank. The other day an Anglican bishop died—and he was a prelate of rather democratic tendencies—and he left personal estate to the value of over £70,000. When at the same time one sees a country vicar in possession of a stipend of £46 a year, and left to supplement his income by scattering begging-letters broadcast over the country, it is no use contending that the distribution of ecclesiastical revenues cannot be improved. I really am not open to conviction on this point, and I must decline to argue it further.

The Master of the Temple, who has been the Canon-in-Residence at Bristol Cathedral since January 1, will return to town next week from Clifton, and he will preach in the Temple Church for the first time this year at the morning service on Palm Sunday.

I learn that the Primate, who has been living at Lambeth since the beginning of October, is going to Canterbury for three weeks at Easter, and that he will occupy one of the prebendal houses in the precincts. The Primate at present has two desirable benefices in his gift, and it is much to be hoped that he will not go outside of his own diocese to find new incumbents. The rectory of Buxted, Sussex, is worth nearly £600 a year, with residence; while the vicarage of St. Peter's, Isle of Thanet, has a stipend of about £400 a year, with residence.

The appointment, by the Lord Chancellor, of Archdeacon Hayward to the vacant stall in Gloucester Cathedral has given much satisfaction in the diocese, where the new Canon has worked hard and successfully for many years. Archdeacon Hayward will resign the living of Cirencester, to which he was presented by Bishop Ellicott in 1882, and he intends to reside entirely at his prebendal house in the College Green, at Gloucester. It is well known in the diocese that the Archdeacon has drawn nothing for himself from Church funds at Cirencester, as both his income as Vicar and his stipend as Archdeacon have been required to pay for an adequate staff of assistant clergy.

The important and valuable living of Emmanuel, Streatham Common, which has become vacant by the preferment of Canon Streatfeild to Christ Church, Hampstead, has been given by the Low Church trustees, who are the patrons, to the Rev. H. F. S. Adams, Rector of Branston, Lincolnshire. Mr. Adams is a clever, energetic man, and a very good preacher. He was educated at Cambridge and read theology under Dr. Moule, and he was ordained in 1886 at Liverpool by Bishop Ryle. Mr. Adams is an uncompromising Evangelical.

A meeting held a few days ago at Lowfield Heath was occupied with one of those ecclesiastical scandals which are inevitable under the system of endowing the parish priest with autocratic authority in all the parochial affairs of the Church. Lowfield Heath is a portion of the parish of Charlwood, but it has a church of its own and a small endowment for a minister. Without the sanction of the Rector of Charlwood, however, the church cannot be used, and for the last six months his reverence, for some reason best known to himself, has kept it closed. The congregation invoked the assistance of the Bishop of Rochester, and the result was a proposal for re-opening the church on certain conditions approved by the Rector, one being that a stipend of £140 a year, including the income from the endowment, should be raised for the payment of a resident curate at Lowfield Heath. Considering that the Rector is in receipt of the handsome stipend of £850 a year, and that the arrangement in question would relieve him of a considerable portion of his spiritual labours, or at least responsibilities, it might be thought that he would make a substantial contribution towards the support of the curate. But the reverend gentleman does not appear to have offered any help in that direction, and the residents of the district must either comply with his terms, or see their church permanently shut up.

The dismissal of Mr. Crockett, the schoolmaster at Gresford, Denbighshire, affords a flagrant example of ecclesiastical tyranny, and it may be hoped that the Education Department will interfere. Mr. Crockett, who has filled his post most efficiently for many years, is an Evangelical, like most Welsh Churchmen. Dean Howell was recently succeeded as Vicar of Gresford by the Rev. J. Fishbourne, an appointment of the Bishop of St. Asaph which excited much disapproval in the diocese. Mr. Fishbourne has introduced numerous Ritualistic innovations, to the annoyance of his new parishioners, and one of his practices is to process round the church before the service, the congregation being expected to stand while this is going on. Many of the worshippers, however, have remained seated, and Mr. Crockett belonged to this contingent. The Vicar required the schoolmaster to resign within twenty-four hours and when he refused to do so, he gave him notice to leave. Parish clergymen must be taught that they cannot play tricks of this kind in their parishes, for many of them appear to be under the delusion that they are as omnipotent in the school as in the vicarage.

The Church Times published the other day a letter from Mr. A. H. Lang, editor of the Quarterly Paper of the Assyrian Mission, defending himself for publishing the Rev. Mr. Jenks' cold-blooded record of his brutal treatment of a horse while on a missionary journey. Mr. Lang pleads that in Eastern travel it is only possible to obtain halt, blind, maimed, and broken horses in the last stage of weakness, and he suggests that Mr. Jenks mistook the weakness of his animal for obstinacy. It looks from this as if Mr. Lang considers it quite a natural and legitimate proceeding to beat an obstinate horse to death. The objection to the Jenks' story was not merely in the facts, but in the cold-blooded and indifferent way in which they were described. The man not only beat his horse till it dropped down dead, but recorded the fact without a sign of compunction, and rather with the air of one who considered the incident a good joke. If he mistook weakness for obstinacy, he must, at least, have been undeceived when the animal died, unless he supposes that horses die of obstinacy. It would seem that Mr. Lang and Mr. Jenks are not the only parties whose perception of what constitutes cruelty is a little obtuse, for the editor of the Church Times has refused to publish a further letter written in reply to Mr. Lang. Does the editor of the Church Times seriously consider that Mr. Lang's letter satisfactorily closed the case?

At a meeting of the local Women's Temperance Union at Ottawa the other day, a lady gave a shocking example of the indifference to Sabbath observance which is creeping over the modern world. She stated that she had, to her shame and sorrow, seen two men looking in at the window of a well-known tailor's shop on the Sabbath Day, evidently engaged in selecting the materials for their new spring suits. She added that she had consulted a solicitor as to whether there is no law which could be invoked for the purpose of putting a stop to such profane conduct, and that she had been informed in reply that, though there is at present no law under which tradesmen can be compelled to pull their blinds down on Sundays, it was quite within the power of the Legislature to pass such a law. She asked the meeting to join in a petition to the Legislature in favour of such an enactment, and the matter was referred to the Lord's Day Committee. I believe that I can cap the shocking experience of this Canadian lady. I have seen ladies in church on Sunday taking stock of the bonnets of their lady neighbours, obviously with the view of deciding on the purchases that they contemplated making during the week. Such conduct occurs in all countries. It seems highly improbable that there is any law in Canada for the purpose of stopping this desecration not only of the Sabbath, but of the House of Prayer; and the Canadian Legislature would do well to take this evil into consideration at the same time as the other.

The Rector or the Curate—it is not clear which—of St. Mark's, Salisbury, has hit upon an idea for raising money which is, I should think, unique and unlikely to lose that distinction. It appears from an announcement in the District Magazine that the scheme is to admit persons who promise "to earn or to give £1 in the year for the Building Fund" to a select circle of "The Friends of God." Apparently £1 is the minimum subscription, and the widow with her mite, in common with those who cannot or will not give anything whatever to the fund, is not to be counted among "The Friends of God."

The Rev. A. S. Hewlett, of St. John's Clergy House, Tooley-street, has answered my inquiry as to what had become of the endowed local charities, in view of his advertisements for funds for the relief of the sick in south-east London. The local charities, he states, are admirably administered by trustees under a strict scheme sanctioned by the Charity Commissioners, but innumerable cases of relief, where the bread-winner is laid up for a time, where extra nourishment is required, and where immediate action is necessitated, are outside the scope of the scheme. Hence his appeal. Mr. Hewlett adds to this explanation a plaintive note of complaint as to popular ignorance of poverty-stricken south-east London. No doubt he is right. Philanthropy has boomed the East End to the exclusion of the equally poor districts over the water, where there is in reality unlimited scope for charitable effort.

The advantage of having practical men at the head of a charitable undertaking was never better exemplified than by the present position of the Queen's Commemoration Fund, organised on behalf of the Queen's Jubilee Institute for Nurses. From the report just issued I learn that about £136,000 has altogether been subscribed to this object, of which some £41,000 is the result of the Central Committee's labours. In the collection of this latter sum the expenses incurred by the Committee during the sixteen months over which their work has spread only amounts to £1,300 or about 3¼ per cent. Few other Jubilee Commemoration Funds would I fancy be able to point to so satisfactory a result, and the Hon. Sydney Holland, as treasurer, and Messrs. Harold Boulton and Ernest Flower, M.P., as secretaries to the Fund, have reason to congratulate themselves upon it.

At the recent annual meeting of the Governors of the Royal Victoria Hospital at Bournemouth, attention was called to a case which the Committee considered, apparently with justice, an abuse of the charity. It appears that Mr. E. S. Mostyn Pryce, who is one of her Majesty's Inspectors of Schools, and also, I believe, a Welsh landowner, applied to the hospital for a letter of recommendation, for which he tendered 5s. Under the rules that is the rate at which additional letters are issued to subscribers of one guinea and upwards. Mr. Pryce was not a subscriber, but the letter was nevertheless given to him (under protest), and with it he sent to the hospital his governess, who required advice as to the condition of her eyesight.

The Committee next wrote to Mr. Pryce expressing the opinion that, in sending a governess in receipt of a salary of £40 a year and board and lodging, to be treated at the hospital he had not complied with the conditions attached to the use of the letter of recommendation. They also expressed surprise that Mr. Pryce, a resident in the town of many years' standing, was not a contributor to the hospital. To this Mr. Pryce replied that an institution "so parsimonious and money-seeking that it begrudged the small services which were rendered for 5s. to an applicant having under 15s. 6d. a week and board did not commend itself to him for an annual subscription." The Committee, in a second letter, said it was never intended that the hospital should be used in the way Mr. Pryce had used it, and that it scarcely lay with him to write of "parsimony and money-seeking."

With the Chairman of the hospital, I think that the above facts scarcely require any comment. It may be interesting, however, to mention that the local papers are said to have been prevented from publishing a statement of the case by a threat of legal proceedings. The correspondence was sent to them by the Hospital Committee, but was not printed, and in the reports of the annual meeting the names and details were carefully suppressed. Not being so easily terrified as the local Press, I have given publicity to what seems to me a very interesting narrative. Mr. Pryce can hardly complain, for if his view of the matter is correct, the course I am taking will only show up a "parsimonious and money-seeking" institution. If, on the other hand, the Committee are right, the case affords a timely illustration of the free-and-easy fashion in which a certain section of the public makes use of medical charities.

I am asked to mention that the annual meeting of the Factory Girls' Country Holiday Fund will be held at the Mansion House on April 22, the Lord Mayor presiding. The Fund is deserving of support, for it confers an inestimable boon on many poor and sick girls who, without some help, would be unable to obtain a much-needed rest and change of air. Last year no fewer than 1,250 were sent to the country or the seaside for periods amounting in the aggregate to 2,120 weeks. The fact that this was done at a cost of £1,230. 3s. 6d. (of which the girls themselves contributed £246) speaks well for the management of the Fund.

The Duke of Cambridge has consented to take the chair at the Festival Dinner in aid of the Royal London Ophthalmic Hospital on Friday, May 6. The Duke of Leeds will discharge the same office at the Earlswood Asylum Dinner on Friday, May 20.

I have received the following amounts towards the deficit of last year's Toy Fund:—Mrs. Arlosh, £2 2s.; Pte. 5s.; C. H. T., £1; D. T. N., £1; Bahiana, £1.

Owing to the increase of the Army Estimates, and the reforms in connection therewith, it would seem that nearly every non-commissioned officer and private in the British Army is seizing on the opportunity to advocate his claims to an increase of pay or pension. On one day last week I counted on my table communications from about fifty claimants to consideration in this direction. Needless to say, the various Departmental Corps are particularly to the front. With every desire to oblige my military readers, I must reluctantly decline to ventilate every one of these grievances in Truth. Even if I had time to read all that the complainants have to say, which I have not, the present size of Truth would render it out of the question to go into all their cases on their merits. There are some few cases here and there which I will do my best to put forward in due course, but as regards the majority, this general apology must suffice.

An officer came home from abroad a few weeks back to take up the appointment of second in command of a battalion in Ireland. He is married, but the only quarters provided for his accommodation are two small rooms and a kitchen in a house in which three subalterns are also living. The officer had previously applied for a lodging allowance, having heard that there were no quarters for him, and the application was refused. Surely the gentlemen at Whitehall who arrange these things do not expect the second in command of a regiment to live in this style. At the very same station the quartermaster occupies a house similar to that in which the second in command is quartered, but he has it all to himself; and even the sergeant-major and some of the N.C.O.s have three or four rooms If there are no better quarters available, the officer ought to have a decent lodging allowance and be allowed to provide for himself.

An interesting item of news from India is that the cemetery at Benares is being enlarged by three acres, and enclosed with a solid brick wall. The cost of the whole job is said to be about Rs.10,000. The Government has presumably adopted this course in preference to spending the money on improving the sanitary condition of the barracks. It is cheaper, probably, to provide the troops with more burying-ground than to prevent them dying.

The rumour was current in India a week or two back that the present P.M.O. is likely to obtain an extension of time beyond the age limit. It is devoutly to be hoped that this rumour is untrue, or that, if the P.M.O. is seeking such an extension, his efforts will be frustrated. The appointment of Surgeon Major-General Gore was in the first instance looked upon with scant approval by the Medical Staff in India, and his services have hardly been such as to call for an extension of his term of office.

Since referring to the matter in Truth last week, I hear that the various soldiers who acted as waiters, &c., at the last Malta Jockey and Sporting Club race meeting have now received their pay. It is therefore unnecessary to say anything more on the subject, unless it is to thank the officer concerned for reading his TRUTH so carefully.

The Royal Warrant for Pay provides that when a sergeant-major or an orderly-room sergeant is absent from duty on account of sickness or other domestic reasons, an acting sergeant-major or acting orderly-room sergeant may be appointed and paid; but when either of these officers is away on duty, a deputy can only be appointed on a special application, which is to be submitted to the Secretary of State for War. Can anybody explain the reason for this distinction? If not, can the War Office show cause why the Royal Warrant should not be amended?

Reference has frequently been made in TRUTH to the injustice done to the Military Staff Clerks R.A. by the systematic appointment of clerks from the War Office staff to Superintending Clerkships elsewhere. This habitual jobbery is as much against the interest of the Service as it is unfair to the district Staff Clerks. The War Office section of the Staff Clerks is a close preserve; the men in it have in some cases never even completed their recruit's training, and have rarely served anywhere but in offices at London and Woolwich. There are only about a dozen of them, and there are nearly as many Superintending Clerkships at the War Office open to them for promotion. On the other hand, the district Staff Clerks—about fifty in number—have only about twelve Superintending Clerkships as an opening for promotion when once they have reached the rank of quartermaster-sergeant. It ought to be the rule that these berths shall be reserved exclusively for the district Staff Clerks.

While soldiers still in the ranks are complaining that they lose their chance of promotion by N.C.O.s rejoining under the new rules, the Reservists are also crying out that they have been induced to come back under false pretences. It seems that under an order issued two or three weeks back, N.C.O.s rejoining are placed at the bottom of the roll for promotion. They were told, when they decided to rejoin, that they would come back with their former rank, and they assumed (if, indeed, they were not expressly told so) that they would be credited with their former service as N.C.O.s, and take their place accordingly. This may not have been the intention of the authorities, but it is a great pity that the point was not made clear, for some of the men say that, had they known what was intended, they would not have rejoined.

There is no doubt that the new regulations on this point are likely to cause friction, and they need to be carried out with much circumspection. It is quite clear that you do not want to tempt men back to the Army who are already provided for in civil life. To do that you must offer them terms which will create a grievance among those still with the colours. I have preached for years the desirability of giving facilities to men to rejoin, but merely from the point of view of those Reservists who have been unable to find their legs in civil life, and are ready to rejoin the Army on almost any terms. The men whose case requires to be met are the Reservists who re-enlist fraudulently, or those who have been deterred from coming back by the necessity of refunding their deferred pay. Experience has shown that there are plenty of men who, after a few months of civil life, are ready to rejoin, even at considerable risk and some sacrifice of their former position. Common-sense suggests that you should take such men without demur; but it does not suggest that you should let the men rejoin under a misapprehension, or that you should purchase their services at the expense of men still in the ranks. It strikes me that in their eagerness to increase the number of men with the colours, the authorities have rather overshot the mark.

Below I summarise a few more growls from various regiments which seem worthy of attention. The most noteworthy among them relates to the barrack damages accounts of the Longford Militia. The figures given I have every reason to believe authentic, and no information whatever seems to be accessible as to the purpose to which the money has been applied. Judging from other evidence before me, there are several other matters in regard to the management of the same Depot which need looking into. I also solicit special attention again for a long-standing grievance of the 1st Northamptonshire—a battalion which, by its exploits on the Frontier, has deserved well of its country:—

6th Battalion Rifle Brigade, Longford.—In 1896 each man in this battalion was charged 1s. 9d. for barrack damages, and in 1897, 1s. 3d. In 1896 there were 393 men to pay, and in 1897, 373. It is stated on good evidence that the total official charges for damages and deficiencies against the battalion were in 1896 £4 5s., and in 1897, 3s. What became of the balance of the money? The importance of the question is accentuated by the fact that at the commencement of the 1897 drill the battalion funds were actually in debt, so that the money does not seem to have gone in that direction.

No. 4 Mountain Battery, R.A., Newport (Mon.).—Not only have the three vacancies in the non-commissioned ranks been filled up by outsiders, as mentioned in last week's TRUTH, but a further grievance is likely to arise in regard to five men who were sent from field batteries, and appointed acting bombardiers when the battery went on field service. These men have been kept on as supernumerary to the establishment, retaining their stripes, but without pay, and they are to be recommended for the first vacancy that occurs if still efficient as N.C.O.s. This I understand to be in pursuance of direct instructions from the War Office. It is obviously unfair to qualified men in the battery waiting for promotion. What is the reason for it?

1st Battalion Northamptonshire Regiment, Peshawur.—It appears that the native tradesman, whose management of the regimental coffee-shop caused so much dissatisfaction when this battalion was with the Tirah Field Force, still remains in possession, and quite recently he has been allowed to set up a mineral-water shop in the barracks, the regimental mineral-water machine being put away into store. Unless I am mistaken, it is entirely contrary to regulations for an outsider to be running all the regimental institutions. There is presumably a sergeant nominally in charge of the grocery bar and the coffee shop, and it would be interesting to know what his real functions are under the present arrangement.

1st Battalion Royal Irish Regiment, Limerick.—In order to encourage shooting, every man in this battalion is now being subjected to a stoppage of sixpence per month, in order to form a fund out of which prizes are given when the men are firing their annual musketry course. This is all very well in theory, but as

---

SURPLICE SHIRTS for evening wear, with pique fronts, 9/6, 10/6 each, made to measure.—SAMPSON & Co., Shirt Tailors, 268, 270, Oxford-street, London, W. Price lists forwarded.

all the men certainly cannot get prizes, however good their shooting, it seems decidedly unfair that the majority of them should be compulsorily made to provide, out of their own pockets, rewards for the men who score a few points more than they do. Is a Commanding Officer really authorised to lay men under a stoppage of this kind?

1st Battalion Connaught Rangers, Athlone.—A boy in the band of this battalion recently broke the key of a clarinet. The instrument was sent to be repaired, and the firm who did the work thought fit to have the whole instrument refitted, at a cost of £2 10s. 5d. This amount the boy has been ordered to pay by weekly stoppages of 5s. In excuse for the C.O. who sanctioned this stoppage, it may be mentioned that there seems to have been a suggestion that the boy had done other damage to the instrument besides breaking the key. But this suggestion appears to have been entirely unsupported by evidence, and no inquiry was made into the facts before the stoppage was ordered. It really seems too bad that a band-boy should be fined 5s. a week for ten weeks, unless good cause for doing so was clearly made out.

1st Battalion Suffolk Regiment, Malta.—There are a number of complaints from this quarter about the unsatisfactory character of the messing arrangements. It seems, among other things, that there is a regulation in force that each mess shall consist of twenty-five men, or as near that as possible. Instead of this, the quartermaster has been making the whole of each company mess together. The available accommodation is insufficient for this purpose, and a great deal of the discomfort and bad serving of food, &c., which are complained of, are very probably more due to this cause than anything else.

A Cavalry N.C.O. of twenty-three years' experience forwards the following notes on the training of recruits at the Canterbury Depot and elsewhere. As he is a man of large experience, and seems to know thoroughly well what he is talking about, I think they may be worth the notice of those interested in the training of cavalry soldiers :—

When drafts left Canterbury I can say positively that the men were thoroughly well trained, considering the time they had spent there. I am speaking of the time when Major Knox was the Adjutant. They were all dismissed musketry, gymnasium, riding-school, and foot-drill. The Depot could put as many as 600 or 700 men in the field, all of whom could ride thoroughly well. Of course, I do not mean to say that these men know all about reconnaisance and outpost duty, but they had a very fair idea of that. When General Luck once inspected them as a regiment on Park Farm, Canterbury, he remarked that they worked as well or better than some regiments he had seen.

Now, I have watched recruits at foot-drill in several regiments, and I have asked N.C.O.s how long these men had joined, and in some cases they averaged nine months' service and upwards. As far as I could see they knew very little about their drill, and they had done no musketry or gymnasium. I was told "we have not had time yet to put them through that." I could see at a glance that the real reason was that the Instructors did not understand drilling their men. I do not mean that the Instructors did not know their drill, but many of them had no idea of pointing out their faults to the men. Now this is the thing that wants looking into.

You will see that there is an Inspector of Musketry, and an Inspector of Gymnasiums, who make their quarterly visits to see that things are all right. But what is wanted is an inspector to go round and visit each regiment, and see the N.C.O.s drill their own squads, and explain to the Instructors their faults. There should be an officer of very great experience appointed for this business. No recruits ought to be at foot-drill more than five months. I have seen, under Major Knox, a thousand recruits on the Square in Canterbury. I think they used to form three or four lines, with four strong squadrons in each line. These men averaged four to five months' service, mere boys. They used to work like clockwork. Now go and look at regiments standing on parade. You will see men moving about all over the place, and the instructors drilling the squads take no notice of it. That shows the instructors have not been properly trained themselves. I was looking the other day at a squad at lance drill. I was told they had joined nine or ten months. They were a disgrace to the regiment. I know that there are old soldiers and N.C. officers who think men should not be dismissed till they have done twelve months' service. That is nonsense. If they are put under good Instructors they could be dismissed under six months. You see, after that the poor devils get sick of the grind. They don't care whether they work or not, and no wonder, seeing what recruits have to do between réveillé and 1 p.m.

American Tooth Crown Company, 24, Old Bond-street, W., where the finest Experts in Dentistry from leading American Colleges are in attendance to save decayed teeth. Consultation free. Book describing work post free.

The two following cases are authenticated by the accounts of a Line infantry regiment :—

1. Private Smith, two badges, employed in canteen, attends one parade a week, does no fatigues, has his meals specially prepared by canteen steward's wife, no grocery stoppage, and 1s. per day extra duty pay. Remuneration for one year :—

Pay at 1s. ...				£18 5 0
G. C. pay ...				3 0 10
Extra Pay				18 5 0
				39 10 10
Less Washing ...	£0	15	2½
,, Library ...	0	13	0
				1 8 2½
Total pay for the year				£38 2 7½

2. Corporal Jones, Drill Instructor for three years, exemplary character, has had 60 per cent of the battalion passed through his hands with credit. Remuneration for one year :—

Pay at 1s. 8d.				£30 8 4
Extra pay...				nil
				30 8 4
Less groceries	£4	11	3
,, washing	0	15	2½
,, library, &c.	0	13	0
				5 19 5½
Total pay for the year				£24 8 10½

Thus we have, on one hand, a private soldier in a highly desirable berth, with no responsibility of any kind, and no special abilities as a soldier, drawing more than half as much again as a non-commissioned officer occupying one of the most responsible, important, and arduous positions in the battalion—a man who must be one of the smartest soldiers in the regiment, and must be endowed with an inexhaustible fund of perseverance and patience, as well as capacity for teaching. Surely this points to the necessity for some improvement in the position of Drill Instructors.

A bitter cry has reached Truth Office from the wives and families of the Seaforth Highlanders, whose experiences during the last fourteen months appear to have been truly phenomenal. When the regiment arrived in Malta in January, 1897, the women and children were quartered in the Cameratta at Valetta. When the husbands and fathers departed for Crete, their families were packed off to Imtarfa, seven miles distant. After a few months there, they were again removed to the Cottenara district, nine miles off. Here they remained till the return of the regiment from Crete in November, when they were once more brought back to the Cameratta. On the departure of the regiment for Cairo in January of this year, the women were left behind at Malta, and at the expiration of a month were again shifted to their former quarters in the Cottenara district, where they remain for the present, waiting anxiously to know what the next move will be. Every one of these moves involves not only an immense amount of trouble and discomfort to women with families, but also a heavy loss in the way of breakages and small expenses, and of course things are worse when the job is done in the absence of the husband. It is true, as the lady who sends me these particulars admits, "that the girl who weds a soldier must be prepared to rough it." That is no reason, however, why the authorities should go out of their way to make things rougher for her than is necessary ; and for bandying these unfortunate women and children to and fro, all over the island, every three or four months, it is difficult to believe there is any necessity whatever.

A letter recently received from Gibraltar throws light on the condition of some of the skeleton battalions which have incurred the criticism of Mr. Arnold-Forster and other critics. The 1st Battalion Yorkshire Regiment, which was recently sent out to Gibraltar very hurriedly, is only about 550 strong, and consists largely of raw recruits, fully half of them of less than twelve months' service. My informant states that there are at least 200 men in the battalion who had never fired a rifle at the time they went out. The battalion had recently been depleted by several large drafts. If it was absolutely unavoidable to send a battalion in this condition on foreign service, things must indeed be in a bad way. Gibraltar, with its limited facilities for training soldiers, is the very last station to which such a corps ought to have been sent.

Sundry dovecotes seem to have been fluttered—more seriously, I think, than the occasion warrants—by two paragraphs in last week's TRUTH, one of which related to the Shanghai, and the other to a troopship unknown, which I surmised might possibly be the Shanghai. The P. & O. Company inform me that no complaints whatever have been received by them in regard to the victualling of the ship. On the contrary, everything has been officially reported as satisfactory. From the details which the company give of the arrangements made, it seems credible that this should have been so, and that if our friend "Tommy" threw his rations overboard during the voyage, it was because sea-sickness or some other cause had rendered him more than usually fastidious. I cannot see, however, that in so doing he has injured any one, unless it be himself.

With regard to the other points mentioned in the same connection, I take the following from a long and interesting letter which an officer—and not an unsympathetic one—writes on "Tommy's" grievances :—

> TRUTH says :—"Another curious statement is that numbers of soldiers were regularly employed in scrubbing paint, swabbing the decks, &c., which is surely not the usual practice, &c." The very last joined subaltern must be aware that the duties are, and always have been and must be, the duties of troops on board ship, who are in no sense passengers. It is absolutely essential from a sanitary and disciplinary point of view that soldiers should swab decks and do all these things, and it is no more than they do in barracks every day of their lives. . . .
>
> Then again, with regard to guard duties on board ship, with such a responsibility as the charge of a trooper, the danger of an outbreak of fire, collision, men falling overboard, &c., it is obvious to the meanest (military) capacity that a very large proportion of the troops must be kept on the alert day and night. Hence the guard duties. TRUTH states that "as many as twenty-four men" were "put on this duty every morning." Assuming the number of troops on board to be only 900—a low estimate—this means that a man would only have been on guard duty one day in thirty-seven.

It is highly gratifying to me, as a humble civilian, to know as much as the last joined subaltern; but with all this knowledge I question whether it is a legitimate thing to put men—probably in an advanced stage of sea-sickness—on a rough passage through the Bay of Biscay to the same sort of duty they would have to discharge in barracks. Personally, I should be very sorry if I had to pursue my ordinary business daily routine in the course of a voyage across the Atlantic. As to the guard duty, it is possible that I misunderstood my information; but I take it to be that as many as twenty-four men were mounted on guard simultaneously during the voyage, which would, of course, work out very differently from the calculation of my correspondent. However, these are minor points. I referred to the Shanghai because it struck me that the vessel might be the one on which the mutiny and robbery of the bread locker are alleged to have taken place. This story, as mentioned in last week's TRUTH, was told in a private letter, written home by a man whose good character and credibility are vouched for. I think it is to the public interest that the matter should be noticed, and any doubt about it cleared up.

The following memorandum, which was sent recently to candidates going up for the March examination for Naval cadets, throws further light on the point mentioned in TRUTH the other day :—

> At the examination to be held this month for the entry of cadets in the Royal Navy, candidates will be regarded as having qualified who obtain such an aggregate of marks in arithmetic, algebra, and geometry combined, also in the subjects under Class I, as a whole, as shall satisfy the Civil Service Commissioners, without regard to the qualifying standard laid down in the regulations.

This I take to mean that provided a boy does well in Latin, the Commissioners will be ready to turn a blind eye to his deficiencies in mathematics.

At the last annual meeting of the P. & O. Company it was categorically denied that the shipping "conference" headed by that company quotes cheaper rates for Continental than for British ports on freights to and from the Far East. This denial appears to have evoked a good deal of discussion at Hong Kong, and the local Telegraph quotes current freight market reports, which certainly seem to show that the "conference" rates for homeward freight from China are uniformly the same to London as to Hamburg, Bremen, and other northern Continental ports, even by boats calling at London, while the rate to Liverpool is as high as to New York viâ London, and 25 per cent. higher than to Antwerp, Hamburg, or Bremen. Possibly this conflict of statements is susceptible of some satisfactory explanation, but in view of the constant allegation that a preference is given by the "conference" to foreign ports—an allegation repeated once more at the meeting of the Association of Chambers of Commerce last week—it would be interesting to know what the explanation is.

I have been asked to gibbet the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company by an aggrieved passenger who recently travelled by one of their boats from Jamaica, and lost a trunk or box which he had left on deck during the first night of the voyage. It seems that he told one of the stewards to bring the box down, but it was not brought, and the next morning it had disappeared. As I find that the Company disclaim on their tickets all responsibility for baggage, and urge passengers to cover themselves by insurance, I really do not see that anybody but the aggrieved passenger himself is responsible for the loss he has incurred. Would he have expected the Company to compensate him if somebody had stolen his watch from his berth during the voyage? Judging from what one often sees on board steamboats, there is a general impression among passengers that the duty of looking after their effects is anybody's business except the owners'.

The following items in connection with the grounding of H.M.S. Victorious should be read, marked, and digested by every British taxpayer. On February 22, at noon, the Victorious came out of the Suez Canal, and anchored in Suez Roads. At 5.30 p.m. she was followed by the Surprise, with Rear-Admiral Noel on board. On his arrival, the Admiral placed the Captain of H.M.S. Victorious under arrest for having put his ship ashore at Port Said. In the meantime, H.M.S. Rapid, homeward bound from the Australian Station, also anchored at Suez. Instead of sending the prisoner back to Port Said by the Rapid, which in the ordinary course of things would have resumed her journey in the course of a few hours, the Admiral ordered H.M.S. Melita, which had been stationed at Suez for some weeks, to convey the Captain and four witnesses from Suez to Port Said. The Rapid was ordered to remain at Suez pending the return of the Melita. On the following morning the Surprise returned to Port Said with the Admiral, and on the following morning the Melita followed, carrying the Captain of H.M.S. Victorious and the witnesses.

Now there is railway and telegraphic communication between Port Said and Suez, by which means all necessary steps could have been taken to detain the Victorious on her arrival at Suez and bring the Captain back to Port Said, thus saving the two journeys of the Surprise through the Canal. Further, even if it was necessary for the Admiral in person to pursue the Victorious to Suez in the Surprise, there is no conceivable reason why the prisoner and the witnesses could not then have been brought back to Port Said either on the Rapid, or by railway, or even on the Surprise. In point of fact, both the Captain and the witnesses eventually returned from Port Said to Suez by train. The Canal dues for the two journeys of H.M.S. Surprise from Port Said to Suez were £343 16s. 8d., and for those of the Melita £190 15s. 2d. £534 11s. 10d. was, therefore, the trifling sum charged against the taxpayer by the failure of Rear-Admiral Noel (unless it was some one higher in authority) to use ordinary common-sense in arranging for the arrest and return of the Captain of the Victorious. Well may it be said that if any private firm were to conduct its business on such lines as our great "spending departments" adopt, it would be in the bankruptcy court in a few months!

From many communications received during the last two or three weeks, I find that there is a wide consensus of opinion among experienced Anglo-Indians as to the desirability of the appointment of a genuine Foreign Minister as a member of the Viceroy's Council. The following comes from a gentleman exceptionally well qualified to speak on the subject:—

> The work of the Foreign Office in India is so vast, so very responsible, and of such vital importance, that there is really required between the Office and the Viceroy the best civil administrator and statesman India can produce. Things are widely different now from what they were half a century ago. The Foreign Office has grown during that period to eight times its former size, and the work has multiplied twentyfold. Experience shows that the absence of an able, independent, and unmilitary administrator at the head of foreign affairs practically leaves them to be bossed by the Commander-in-Chief and military member of Council, goaded on as they are by an array of enthusiastic Adjutant-Generals, Quartermaster-Generals, and "Intelligence" experts. These officials, with their unquestionable knowledge and argumentative resource, are well able to hustle the Viceroy and his small civil Council. Only a strong civil statesman, having time and facilities to deal with foreign affairs exclusively, could grapple with this military horde and advise the Viceroy as a diplomatist. No mere secretary is in a position to do this fearlessly, even if he could or would. If, in addition to other disadvantages, the Foreign Secretary is himself imbued with military ardour, as is often the case, the civil element in the Government is reduced to impotence.

Commenting on the portentous development of red-tape in the Government of India, an Anglo-Indian, who has had large experience of Simla, writes:—

> The arm-chair administrators at Simla pride themselves before everything else on the extent of their correspondence. It is a race between them as to which office can turn out the greatest quantity of official literature. A few years ago an official, with the air of a weary Titan, pointed out to me the great bundles of papers, neatly tied up with red tape and bristling with reference slips, which embodied his official labours. The bundles were scattered all over the floor and the tables of his office, they overflowed into his sitting or drawing-room, and they covered the seats and the table in the billiard-room. Of course, there are no billiard-rooms in public offices, but big officials at Simla usually work in their own houses. He imagined that I should be astounded at his gigantic labours, but I knew by bitter experience how executive works were suffering from this terrible craze to win renown as a laborious administrator.
>
> I believe the War Office well deserves its evil reputation for red-tapeism, but it is not to be compared with Simla. A small volume, called the Queen's Regulations, suffices for the British Army at home and in the Colonies. The Bengal Army Regulations now fill about sixteen huge volumes!

It is announced from Calcutta that, with the submission of the Kuki Khels and the Kambar Khels, the frontier fighting may now be regarded as practically ended. Everybody will hope that this anticipation will be justified by the event. If it is, we shall probably be told that the result is a conclusive answer to the criticism that has been passed upon the management of the late campaign. Let there be no mistake upon this point. If, as seems to be the case, the Afridis and the kindred tribes have had enough fighting for the present, and are anxious to avoid a fresh invasion of their territory by British troops, that result is due to the pluck and fortitude of our fighting men, officers and soldiers, and to that only.

Ernest's American Cycling Skirt.—4,650 sold in New York last season, and the sale in London promises to be even greater.—185, Regent-street, London.

Duysen Pianos are the most superb of all modern Instruments. They stand absolutely unrivalled for beauty of tone, touch, & finish. A consummate success in small grands.—Lloyd's, 24, Mount-street, Grosvenor-square, W.

I am told by an officer, who ought to be an authority on this question, that it is quite erroneous to suppose that anything in the nature of an explosion occurs when the Dum-Dum bullet "finds its billet." The history of the bullet is this: the original Lee-Metford bullet was encased in a nickel shell to prevent the lead getting into the grooving of the rifle. It was found that the hardness of this covering prevented the bullet from "setting up," as it is technically called, on impact. Unless it met with a very powerful resistance it would pass clean through the body it struck, inflicting a wound similar to what would be caused by a long slender weapon. The consequence was that a man struck by the bullet, unless hit in a vital part, would often not be conscious for some time that he had received a wound, and the effect of the rifle in stopping an advancing enemy was proportionately reduced. To remedy this, the Dum-Dum authorities removed the point of the nickel cap without altering the shape of the bullet, and introduced a softer metal into the nose. The effect is that the nose flattens on impact, and the harder metal forming the base breaks up. There is no air inside the bullet, and I take it that it only differs from any bullet hitherto in use in that, owing to the higher velocity, when it is once stopped, it breaks up more, and does more damage to the resisting body than bullets fired from the old-fashioned rifles.

The Bombay authorities have carefully closed the stable-door after the steed has been stolen, by revising the procedure which led to the recent deplorable riots. The announcement of the Governor that search parties are to be "abolished experimentally" is a virtual confession that the previous procedure was at fault; that is to say, that the whole responsibility for the recent riots and loss of life rests with the authorities. A gentleman with a long experience of India, writing to me on this subject, remarks that to send a plague party to search the zenana of a Mohammedan in a Mohammedan quarter is an act of folly akin to taking a lighted candle into a powder magazine; and that to employ a Parsee magistrate in the attempt to quell a Mohammedan riot is like endeavouring to extinguish a fire with petroleum. Is anybody to be called to account for such blundering?

I take the following from a very good letter on this subject which appeared the other day in the Western Times, the writer of which expresses similar sentiments to the above:—

> An English reader may ask, What is to be done to enforce the law? Well, this is what would have been done when India under the Lawrences was governed by men, and not by sticks of red sealingwax clad in foolscap. The householder would have been told to admit to his zenana a female practitioner or medical examiner. To this, nine chances to one, no objection would have been made. If entry was denied, the door would have been nailed up as a quarantine precaution, and the inhabitants of the house supplied with food through a hole in the wall.

This disposes of any suggestion that the measures adopted by the Bombay Government were unavoidable.

A member of the Indian Medical Service who has charge of one of the largest plague hospitals and segregation camps strongly complains of the inadequacy of the extra allowance granted by the Government for such services. The allowance to the medical officer is, it appears, only Rs. 150 per month, whereas combatant military officers working under his superintendence on plague duty are rewarded with Rs. 300 per month. It may be said that plague duty should come in the day's work of the medicos. Putting aside, however, the question of special remuneration, the Rs. 150 a month is in many instances insufficient to compensate the medical officer for the other allowance and private earnings which he necessarily sacrifices while on this special employment.

By the way, it would be interesting to know whether any missionary agencies have been engaged in the plague work at Bombay. I have been told that such is the case, and if it were really so, this would no doubt be an additional provocative of fanatical resistance to the sanitary measures of the Government.

Every mail from India brings fresh evidence of the deep and widespread opposition which the Criminal Procedure Bill has excited among the non-official European community, as well as among the most loyal and distinguished exponents of native opinion. Its strongest opponents, both in the Legislative Council and outside, are men above the suspicion of any sympathy with the incitements to sedition which it is one of the professed objects of the measure to suppress—men who would have nothing to gain and everything to lose from any disturbance of the existing order of things. The truth is, however, that the Bill has been designed, not to deal with seditious journals—the existing law gives ample powers for that purpose—but to afford a means of silencing all unfavourable criticism of officialdom, no matter how legitimate or well merited it may be. This is pointed out with great force in the protest of the Calcutta Bar—a document drawn up by a committee composed exclusively of the European leaders of the Bar:—

> In effect, all newspapers will be placed under the complete control of the District Magistrates, or those Magistrates specially empowered in that behalf, that is to say, of the very persons whose action, by virtue of their public position and the very wide powers they enjoy, is likely to meet with disapproval and to be the subject of strong criticism at the hands of the Press, and who, therefore, will be the most intolerant and the most inclined to be prejudiced.

It is very much as if an official in an English town, combining the powers of a Chief Magistrate with the duties of Head Constable, were placed in a position to prosecute, to try, and to punish any local journalist who happened to fall foul of him in his judicial or executive capacity. The Bill relates to various offences besides sedition, and the memorandum of the Calcutta Bar sets forth a dozen different provisions, more especially in reference to the extension of the jurisdiction of the inferior magistracy and the powers of the police, which set aside the most elementary principles of justice. However, the measure has now been passed by the Legislative Council, and, unless the Secretary of State interferes, it will soon be in operation. Outside official circles the universal opinion is that these changes in the law will be productive of an infinite amount of mischief and injustice, and tend more than anything else to create that disaffection towards the Government in India which the Bill is ostensibly framed to prevent.

For Truth, and all other Newspapers, Magazines, and Periodicals, send your Subscriptions to Wm. Dawson & Sons, Ltd., Cannon House, Bream's-bldngs., London. (Estab. 1809.) Catalogue gratis.

Bellis's world-famed real Turtle Soup, more strengthening than any beef fluid. Glass flacons 7/-, tins. 5/-.—Obtainable everywhere, or direct, post free. T. K Bellis, 6, Jeffrey's-square, London.

By a recent appointment in the Excise Department in Somerset House, the Board of Inland Revenue has finally broken down an arrangement which had prevailed for the past half-century. The Department is divided into two sections—the Secretary's office, composed of a clerical staff, and the Chief Inspector's office, composed of practically-trained outdoor experts, who have to deal with an immense variety of technical questions. It was originally considered necessary for the efficient working of the Secretary's office that both the Secretary and the Assistant Secretary should be selected from among the practically-trained officials, but the old practice was over-ridden a few years ago on the appointment of the present Secretary. Now the Assistant Secretaryship is about to become vacant, and it is announced that this berth also will be filled by an indoor clerk, so that for the first time during fifty years neither of the men at the head of the Secretary's office will have had any training or experience in the practical department. This will occasion much inconvenience and circumlocution in disposing of many points that come up in the Secretary's office; but neither that fact, nor the further fact that the appointment filches a piece of promotion from the Chief Inspector's Department, seems to have weighed with the Board.

I understand that a committee of inquiry has been sitting at the G.P.O. to devise some means of reducing the arduous labours of the Surveyors. To do this will be easy enough if only the departmental passion for red tape can be abated. Nothing could be more useless, vexatious, and absurd than the present arrangement, under which all Postmasters, except those of Manchester, Liverpool, Leeds, Birmingham, and Bristol, are prevented from submitting any proposal direct to the Secretary at St. Martin's-le-Grand, everything having to be forwarded through the Surveyor for the district. Is it not, for instance, perfectly ridiculous that the Postmaster of an office where upwards of fifty telegraph messengers are employed should have to consult a Surveyor, whose residence is possibly fifty miles away, respecting the appointment of a new messenger in the place of one dismissed?

If you want to entirely Furnish your House or select any article of Furniture or Carpet, &c., send for Hewetsons' Illustrated Priced Catalogue.—Hewetsons, Tottenham Court-road, London.

So far, at any rate, as the larger offices are concerned, there are dozens of minor matters in regard to which the Surveyors might be relieved of their duties without the slightest impairment of either the efficiency or economy of the service. There seems, indeed, no valid reason why the Postmasters of Newcastle-on-Tyne, Bradford, Sheffield, and a score or two other places should not be entirely released, like the five already mentioned, from the supervision of the Surveyors, and allowed to deal direct with the head office in London.

The Gas Light and Coke Company have just notified those of their customers who use penny-in-the-slot meters, that on April 1 the charge will be raised to one penny per twenty-two cubic feet. The present rate is 3s. 4d. per thousand, and it will be seen from this that the price is actually to be raised nearly 5½d. per thousand feet. The threatened increase all round in the price of gas in London at the present time is quite unjustified by existing circumstances, and ought to bring home to Londoners once more, the utter futility of the present statutory sliding-scale, and the helplessness of the community in the hands of the gas monopolists. But that the price should be specially increased at the expense of the poorest class of consumers is particularly outrageous. The effect of the new scale will be that, while the consumer by ordinary meter is paying 3s. per thousand for his gas, the user of the penny-in-the-slot meters will pay nearly 3s. 9½d.

By the way, it is a significant fact that the circular to the penny-in-the-slot consumers was only issued on March 4—the day after the County Council Election. Had it made its appearance a few days earlier, it might have been another useful weapon in the hands of the Progressives.

In talking over this matter the other day with a man who uses a penny-in-the-slot meter, I discovered a new instance of the high-handed tactics of these monopolists. Although the penny-in-the-slot contrivance is supposed to measure out the gas in pennyworths, and although the company have advantage of payment beforehand for every pennyworth of gas used, they decline to be bound by the reckoning of their own machine, and employ side by side with it an ordinary measuring apparatus which registers at the same time the number of feet consumed; and it generally happens that when the company's man comes round to collect the coppers from the meter he finds that the total amount consumed is in excess of that represented by the pence, and the consumer is presented with a bill for the difference. No case has been heard of in which it has been found the consumer was entitled to the return of some of his coppers from the company. As usual, the rule of the monopolists is, "Heads, we win; tails, you lose."

It is satisfactory to see that energetic efforts are being made to deliver London from the hands of the telephone monopolists, who, though young in years, have already exhibited the worst vices of their elder brethren, the water, and the gas, and the tramway companies. Outside the office of the National Telephone Company it is universally recognised that in the greatest city in the world an abnormally high price has to be paid for an abominably bad service. Insignificant little towns in Switzerland and in Norway are far better served at much cheaper rates. The conference of local authorities held at the Guildhall last week passed a resolution asking for an inquiry by the Treasury, and if this is granted there will be no difficulty in making out an overwhelming case against the National Telephone Company.

Of the minor shortcomings of railway management, a good illustration is furnished by a recent experience on the North-Eastern line at Newcastle-on-Tyne. There is a notification in the Company's time table that a commercial traveller's luggage can be booked forward from the station at which he starts to the station at which his day's journey ends, notwithstanding any intended stoppages at intermediate stations. A commercial traveller was refused this privilege at Newcastle, because the officials were ignorant of the fact that the Company had adopted and printed such a rule. The same traveller then applied to have his luggage labelled in the ordinary way for York; but he was told that this also could not be done, as the supply of York labels had just run out! Passing over the latter mishap, what is to be said of the management of a company which advertises a regulation for the benefit of travellers, but keeps its own servants in the dark as to its existence?

Telegraphists appear to be among the worst paid of the clerical employees of the railway companies. There are many employed by the London and North-Western Company who, after upwards of twenty years' service, are only receiving £80 a year, less £2 deducted for the superannuation fund; and probably the position of men on other lines is fully as bad—if not worse. Considering the nature of a telegraph clerk's work, 30s. a week is miserably inadequate pay for men who have served the Company so many years. It is exceedingly mean in the case of a wealthy and flourishing concern like the North-Western, more especially as it makes a very large sum from rent and commission on Post Office messages sent over the railway wires.

Concerning the extraordinary tangle into which the Hythe Town Council has got the financial affairs of the borough, a ratepayer assures me that it has not been in any way due to the lowness of the rates. On the contrary, the rates, including the water-rate, reach the appalling total of 9s. 7d. in the £. This makes the mismanagement of the corporation appear worse than before, and strengthens the demand that is being made for an inquiry by the Local Government Board.

It will be a relief to a good many householders to hear that sanitary inspectors have no right to make, merely in virtue of their office, such a domiciliary visit as I described last week in connection with a case at Liverpool. From the statements with which two or three correspondents have favoured me, I gather that though the local sanitary authority is charged with the general duty of inspection of nuisances, its officers have no power whatever to enter any private dwelling against the wish of the occupier, unless they first lay an information before a magistrate, and show good cause for the granting of an order of admission. In the case at Liverpool the inspection appears to have been made both vexatiously and illegally, and the aggrieved householder has a good cause of action against the intruding officials.

Certain remarks in these columns in reference to a conviction under the Margarine Act at Mullingar Petty Sessions have borne fruit; for I now hear from a local correspondent that the Lord Chancellor of Ireland has called upon Mr. Fitzherbert Delamer to resign his commission as a justice of the peace. Lord Ashbourne's jealous regard for the reputation of the Bench stands out in very favourable contrast to the conduct of Judge Curran, who so strangely and vainly attempted to white wash the character of the defendant magistrate.

The action of Klene & Co. against Mr. Frank Dicksee, R.A., in the Bloomsbury County Court, must have been particularly amusing to readers of TRUTH, who have long been acquainted with the true character of the biographical works published by the plaintiffs. Mr. Dicksee ordered a copy of "Our Contemporaries," but declined to pay, on the ground that the book did not fulfil Klene & Co.'s representation that it would contain a comprehensive, and, at the same time, circumspect selection of biographies. The comprehensiveness was shown by the exclusion of all but a score or so of really well-known names, and the circumspection by the inclusion of a host of self-advertising nobodies. It would be invidious, perhaps, to mention any of the latter, but among the former were such men as Lord Salisbury and Mr. Balfour, the Archbishop of Canterbury, and the President of the Royal Academy. Judge Bacon had no hesitation in finding that Klene & Co. failed to carry out their contract, and he therefore gave judgment for the defendant with costs—a result which conveys a valuable lesson to other persons who have been similarly victimised by the same firm.

Yet another development of the case of the young lady who, having attained her majority, was put to a cost of £7 16s. 6d. in obtaining an order for the payment out of the Court of Chancery of a legacy of £50, which had been left to her whilst she was a minor. The money was invested by the Court, and the legatee is now informed that it cannot actually be handed over to her till a dividend which becomes due in April is paid! The option of taking the capital without waiting for the dividend is not allowed, and if the owner of the money had happened to be in the direst need, it would still have been all the same to the Court of Chancery.

In my Legal Pillory this week the West Kerrier magistrates are represented by a peculiarly harsh and discreditable sentence. The practice of sending people to gaol for sleeping out and having no visible means of subsistence is scandalous enough in ordinary cases, but when the homeless and penniless delinquent is a wretched old man of eighty-three, one might surely expect even the most Draconic Bench to show a little compassion. It was such a man who was accused of this enormity at West Kerrier, and his judges were so destitute of mercy that they condemned him to seven days' imprisonment—a heavier punishment than many an able-bodied ruffian receives for thrashing his wife. But, as will be seen from the following list, the magistracy generally treat offences of violence and cruelty as of small account in comparison with acts of vagrancy or poaching and petty thefts:—

Thingoe Petty Sessions. Before Rev. J. White, Lieutenant-Colonel L. H. Josselyn, and Mr. R. Burrell. John Mayes, convicted of assaulting George Codling by striking him in the face and biting his ear. Fined 5s. and 13s. costs.

Derby Borough Police-court. Before Messrs. J. W. Newbold and R. Jefferson. Charles Wright, convicted of assaulting Joseph Mardle. Defendant gave complainant a severe blow, which fractured his jaw. He had been previously convicted of an assault. Fined £2 and costs.

Exeter Police-court. Robert Salter, convicted of assaulting Sarah Jeffrey, who said he struck her in the face and knocked her down. The fall broke her collar-bone. Fined 30s. and costs.

Nottingham Police-court. Before Messrs. T. Gascoigne and S. Bourne. Reuben Belshaw, convicted of assaulting Mary Ann Francis, with whom he cohabited. He struck the woman and knocked her down, causing a serious injury to her head. Fined 15s.

East Penwith Petty Sessions. Wm. Henry Mugford charged with cruelty, by abandoning and neglecting a pony. The animal was reduced almost to a skeleton, and it died from neglect and exposure. Fined £1 1s. and costs.

Chester Police-court. Before the Mayor and Mr. G. Dulton. Elijah Beckett, convicted of a brutal assault upon his wife. She had had to summon him on a previous occasion, and she stated that he had not worked for nine months but had lived upon her money. Bound over and ordered to pay the costs.

Stafford Police-court. Before the Mayor, Messrs. W. H. Peach and N. Joyce. Benjamin Patrick, charged with assaulting Thomas Underhill, a cripple. Defendant knocked complainant down and kicked him five or six times. Fined 15s., including costs.

Thingoe Petty Sessions. Before the same magistrates. John Cooper, David Bullock, and Harry Elliston, charged with an offence under the Game Laws by killing a hare. Each fined £1 and 2s. 10d. costs.

West Kerrier Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. R. G. Rows, C. C. Hocking, J. Coad, J. Boaden, Sir V. Vyvyan, and Captain Rogers. Thomas Johnson, a tramp 83 years of age, charged with sleeping in an outhouse, and having no visible means of subsistence. Seven days.

Ludlow County Police-court. Before Messrs. W. St. A. Rouse-Boughton, H. Foster, T. H. Atherton, and Captain Parkinson. John Fletcher, charged with using a gun without a licence to kill partridges. Fined £2 9s. 6d.

Henley County Police-court. Before Colonel Baskerville, Messrs. I. T. Witherington, and G. T. Inman. Arthur Hanson and Charles Sweeney, summoned for trespassing in search of game. Sweeney fined £1 6s. 6d., and Hanson £2 6s. 6d.

Bedford Police-court. Wm. Westley charged under the Poaching Prevention Act with being found in possession of rabbits and nets. Fined £5 and costs or one month.

Samford Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. C. H. Berners, T. S. Furness, W. A. Elliston, J. O. Fison, and Captain A. H. Morse. Wm. Hamilton, a young sailor, charged with stealing a shirt and a pair of socks. The prisoner had hitherto borne a good character. Fourteen days.

Jedburgh Sheriff-court. Before Sheriff V. Campbell. Robert Storrie, charged with poaching on land belonging to the Marquis of Lothian. Three months.

Malvern Police-court. Before Colonel Heywood. George King, charged with sleeping in an outhouse. Seven days.

Dursley Police-court. Before Captain Graham, Colonel Browne, Messrs. W. Phelps and R. A. Lister. John H. Blake, a football player, charged with assaulting J. F. Chambers, another player. The parties were playing in opposing teams in an Association League match, and defendant was dribbling the ball down the field when complainant charged and obtained possession of it. At this defendant lost his temper and deliberately kicked complainant, rendering him partly unconscious. Fined £2 and costs.

Clevedon Police-court. Before Sir E. H. Elton, Messrs. C. Hill and F. Weatherly. Albert Jones, Wm. Walbridge, and John Smith, charged with stealing a quantity of watercress growing in open land. Fourteen days each.

Lichfield County Police-court. Before Mr. J. Fowler. Thomas Rose, John Thompson, and George Littlewood, charged with sleeping out. Seven days each.

Westminster Police-court. Before Mr. Shiel. Robert W. Hardingham, cab-driver, charged with cruelty to a horse by overdriving it. He drove the animal to Lingfield and back, a distance of sixty-four miles, without giving it a rest. Fined 40s. and costs.

Strange indeed are the aberrations of the Great Unpaid on the subject of cruelty to animals. At Bridgwater the other day, four defendants, described as young men, were charged with torturing a cat by tying a tin on its tail, and anointing its body with turpentine. The turpentine naturally caused the animal's fur to come off, and witnesses deposed (if such evidence was necessary) that it suffered from the ill-treatment for several days. Nevertheless the Bench dismissed the case, with the extraordinary observation that, "having seen the very small tin and the string, they had come to the conclusion that it was a boyish prank, and they considered no cruelty had been committed." Nature has unaccountably omitted to equip some beings with the caudal appendages and elongated ears which they ought to possess—otherwise this view of the matter might be modified by a suitable experiment upon some member of the Bridgwater Bench with a tin, however small, a piece of string, and a quantity of turpentine.

I am glad to see that in the latest of his periodical warnings against swindling advertisements, the Commissioner of Police has specially noticed the "free gift" trick, which Ernest Goode and others continue to practise with such amazing impudence. The Commissioner also mentions the puzzle competition and home employment swindles, and suggests that provincial papers would do a service to the community by cautioning their readers against all such frauds. It seems to me that the provincial papers, and some in London, too, would do a far greater service if they would have the decency to omit from their columns the palpably dishonest advertisements by which these frauds are carried on. The warning also refers to the Spanish prisoner and buried treasure swindle, which, the Commissioner remarks, "is apparently as flourishing as ever." That the gangs who work it are as busy as ever I can myself testify from the number of the letters that are sent on to me every week.

Subscriptions greatly needed by The Royal Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.—6,929 convictions this year; 7,320 last year. Address complaints of cruelty, contributions, letters, &c., to Secretary, 105, Jermyn-st., London.

H. L. Savory & Co.'s Cigarettes.—By Special Warrants of Appointments to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, H.R.H. the Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, H.S.H. the Duke of Teck, and the Houses of Lords and Commons. To be obtained of all the leading Houses in the trade.—Sole address, 59, Piccadilly, London, W. Specimen case of samples, containing all sizes, 2s. 6d., with price list.

The evidence given before the Money-Lending Committee by the man Shuckburgh, alias the Clerical and Medical Bank, hardly requires any notice here, for nearly all the cases of cruel and unprincipled extortion to which this notorious shark confessed have been recorded from time to time in these columns. Mr. Justice Hawkins's endorsement of the suggestions made by Sir George Lewis was, however, extremely important, and should greatly encourage the Committee to recommend legislation on those lines.

Pending an alteration of the law, it is pleasing to find Judges making effective use of their existing powers to curb the rapacity of such vampires as Isaac Gordon. This well-known scoundrel last week applied to the Bath County Court for an order of commitment against a borrower who had received £30, had repaid £10, and was still indebted to the amount of £39 10s. It was a case in which Gordon had got the man into his clutches by one of his usual tricks, and the Judge marked his sense of the usurer's conduct by making an order which is to be suspended so long as the defendant pays sixpence a month. At this rate it will take more than 130 years to clear off the debt.

Since the Select Committee resumed its inquiry the circularising usurers and usurers' touts have been more active than ever. No doubt they want to make the most of the time that remains before the Legislature proceeds to pare their claws. In this enterprise, it is almost superfluous to say, the champion bloodsucker, Gordon, easily outdistances all his rivals. He must be spending money in printing and postage with the most reckless prodigality. The famous polychromatic circular bearing the name James W. Ryland, and the address, 6, Livery-street, Birmingham—I am amused, by the way, to notice, that some of my contemporaries have only just discovered that this gorgeous missive emanates from Gordon—is being scattered broadcast. That, however, is only one instance of his industry, for Gordon has a dozen different addresses—in London, Bristol, Manchester, Liverpool, and elsewhere—and a score of different aliases. Thus the circulars sent all over the country from 99, Withington-road, Whalley Range, Manchester, and signed "Robert Dean," are Gordon's, and so also are those from "W. Wallis," of 66, Great Russell-street, London, "Arthur A. Andrews," of 6, High-street, Kingsland, N., and "George J. Addison," of 3, Holles-street, W.

Joel Ford, of 17, Coleman-street, E.C., is another member of the tribe—and a most unconscionable extortioner—who is very busy at the present moment. Beaumont & Co., of 92 and 93, Great Russell-street, W.C., of whom I had lost sight for some time, have also broken out afresh, and the clergy throughout the country, as well as many other people, are being persecuted by the attentions of the new usurer's jackal who calls himself "Jones & Co., Limited," of 159, Cannon-street, E.C., though, as I mentioned last week, no such Company has been registered at Somerset House. Richard Pelham, of 47, Whitcomb-street, W.C., used at one time to specially bait his hook for medical gudgeon; but he is now, like Shuckburgh and Jones & Co., addressing himself more particularly to the clergy, whose necessities and innocence oftener make them an easy prey.

Just when the pricking of the editorial conscience has led to the exclusion of objectionable advertisements from one or two other well-known papers, the People has begun to open its columns again to one of the vilest quacks in the country. In his latest advertisement this man calls himself "Henry Davis, Esq.," and gives one of the two addresses which he is able to use from the occupation of a house at the corner of two streets in Brighton. At different times the same individual has also christened himself "W. H. Brown," "Hawkins & Co.," and the "Rev. David Jones," of Lewes. His business is so pernicious, and the literature he issues so filthy, that I feel sure it must be simply through an oversight that his advertisement is republished in the People, from which it had long disappeared.

The extract given below should cause some of my contemporaries who are engaged in running competitions not altogether above suspicion to thank their stars that they do not live in the United States. It is taken, needless to say, from an American paper. It is a pity that the "fraud order" is not a British institution. If it were, the official charged with the duty of issuing these documents would have a pretty busy time of it :—

> Washington, March 3.—The Post Office Department to-day issued a fraud order against the Woman's World Publishing Company, of 22 and 24, William-street, New York, and James H. Plummer, manager. It was charged that this paper had attained a large circulation by offering prizes which were advertised as being of much greater value than they were. Plummer was represented by counsel from New York and Washington at a hearing recently before Attorney-General Tyner, of the Post Office Department, which lasted three days. There is no appeal from a fraud order, and no mail will be delivered to the publication.

A Folkestone paper announces, among other items of fashionable intelligence, that John James Jones has acquired a "beautiful little place" on the Royal Military Road, which was for many years the residence of the late County Court Judge Lonsdale. Is John James about to retire on a competency, or is this another investment on behalf of the London Samaritan Society?

Although the famous New South Wales snowball lately began to roll wildly about the Continent, it has not by any means finished its fantastic career in this country. Copies of the chain letter are still being circulated here, and one ingenuous writer has just managed to produce yet another variation of the address of the Miss Griffin (or Suffen, or Giffon, &c.) who is supposed to be collecting the million cancelled postage-stamps. What the original address was, goodness only knows; but it is now being rendered as Ralienga Mill-street, Hartsville, New South Wales—evidently a corruption of Botago Hill, St. Hankwell, N.S.W., which in its turn was derived from something else equally fanciful. This idiotic enterprise really seems destined "to spin for ever down the ringing grooves of change," a moving monument of human folly.

Reuben May's latest:—

Dear Friend,—I am sorry to say that both the premises shown in the enclosed circular are in jeopardy, in part owing to arrears of rent. But I cannot think God, who has hitherto so graciously and even marvellously used them will let the cloud continue long and beg to ask some special help of some of my old and faithful friends. . . .

This plaintive utterance is dated March 8. The premises referred to are apparently those occupied by the Great Arthur-street Mission. Perhaps the editor of the City Press, who has taken Reuben May under his protection, and vouches for the veracity of all his statements, will let us know what amount of rent was owing at that date, and to what extent the premises were "in jeopardy."

A peculiar temptation has been devised for persons of strong religious views, who are not exactly Rechabites. The tempter is the "Palestine Wine and Trading Company, Limited," which is now sending its circulars to ministers of religion and others. The Company's price list contains such specialties as the following:—

No. 1.—Vin de Rishon le Zion, Red .....18s. per doz.
Produced from Bordeaux Vines, transplanted to Palestine.

No. 4.—Vin de Rishon le Zion, Red, Sweet Wine 24s. per doz.
A Beautiful Wine from Alicante Vines. Similar to Port.

No. 5.—Cognac de Rishon le Zion.....54s. per doz.
Old. Pure Grape.

The Mount Zion Port will, I imagine, find special favour with the old crusted Tory High Church school of divines. One has heard of Palestine as a land flowing with milk and honey, but it is something new to learn that it also flows with port wine and cognac.

M. Emile Solomiac's stock of "Domaine La Générale, Année 1888," seems to be as inexhaustible as the widow's cruse. The bereaved Frenchman began offering four cases of the precious vintage some time last November. I have a postcard before me, dated March 14, in which he is still offering precisely the original quantity (quatre caisses) which, in view of the necessity of disposing of them at once, he offers at the reduced price of 2 francs a bottle, "paiement comme vous voudrez." This is tempting, but, I should say, not quite tempting enough.

A suggestion is made by Mr. Ellis Lever, of Liverpool, that railway companies should arrange for every ticket to carry with it, without extra charge, an insurance of the passenger in case of accidental injury or death. Such an all-round insurance would be an addition to their liabilities which the companies are not in the least likely to undertake; but it seems to me that they might find a modification of the plan serviceable in attracting passengers back to the first and second classes. Many who travel third might be induced to patronise the second class if the cost of the ticket covered insurance; and some who go second class might change to the first if that brought a heavier insurance.

Cabby is so pronounced a conservative in all his ways and ideas that I shall not be at all surprised to see him offer the strongest opposition to the introduction here of the "taxameter." It is stated that this machine, which is already being used in Paris, automatically indicates on a dial the distance travelled by the vehicle on which it is fixed, takes count also of the time consumed in stoppages, and—best of all—shows the exact amount of the fare to be paid at the end of a journey. The majority of fares, at any rate, will be grateful for so useful an invention. In the long run, too, I think Cabby himself may be brought to look upon it as a friend. He would much prefer, if I understand him aright, to have a fair fixed wage, instead of being obliged to hire his vehicle from the owner, and make what he can out of it. By keeping, as it apparently will, an infallible record of the earnings of the cab, the taxameter will render practicable such an alteration in the relations between the owner and the driver.

English journalists at Bangkok seem to have been getting into hot water all round. The editor of the Siam Free Press has been deprived of the protection of the British Consul, and the editor of the Bangkok Times has been sued for libel by the Medical Officer of Health, Dr. Nightingale. In the latter case it seems that the paper had argued that the duty of inspecting cattle and condemning diseased animals would be performed more satisfactorily by a veterinary surgeon than by a medical man. Dr. Nightingale resented the imputation that he was not qualified to do this work; but, after an exhaustive trial, the jury by a majority returned a verdict for the defendant. It would have surpassed almost anything we have heard of the libel laws at home if it had been held to be a libel on a medical man to say that he is not a veterinary surgeon.

Oh, no! I do not abuse the Globe. I am only desirous that this organ of Conservatism, which has some reputation to lose, should not lose it because its proprietor and former Editor is allowing his son to swagger and bluster in it after the manner of the 'Arries of a music hall. The son is a Lieutenant, whether of the Army or of the Navy, or of the Horse Marines, I know not. Be this as it may, his tone is hardly one that can commend itself to the officers of our Army or Navy, who fight well when called upon, but eschew cheap bluster. The Lieutenant is apparently anxious to emulate the fame of that ornament of American journalism, Mr. Jefferson Brick; and it must be admitted that he runs him close. I am all the more benevolent in seeking to restrain him, since I do not know a person who does more to stem the tide of Jingoism than this young gentleman. He renders that creed not only odious, but ridiculous, and he thus serves the purpose of the drunken Helot among the Spartans. A soldier or a sailor, why does he not betake himself to the Soudan or to West Africa? Surely in this he would do more for the cause that he advocates than in shouting, "War! War!" from the safe retreat of a newspaper office.

I cannot help smiling at the way in which we have been "hoist with our own petar." The House of Commons passed a resolution that it was essential to our interests that China should remain independent, and we have secured from the Chinese Government a pledge that none of the Yang-tsze provinces shall be alienated to any European Power. This has been met by France demanding that none of the provinces south of the Yang-tsze Valley shall be ceded to any such Power. This, it is urged by our Jingo Press, is a monstrous action on the part of the French; for they must be aware that we want a rectification of the frontier of the Burmese-Shan States, and also a trifle of Chinese territory to be ceded to us on the mainland opposite Hong-Kong. We are told that against this French demand we must protest, and, if necessary, "have recourse to our Fleet to checkmate the designs of France." But on what grounds? France is simply following our example, and acting on the resolution of the House of Commons.

One of the amendments to the Benefices Bill adopted in Committee last week empowers a Bishop to refuse presentation to any clergyman who at the date of his presentation to the living has not been five years in orders. Instead of leaving the matter to the discretion of the Bishop, it would be more satisfactory to make a clergyman absolutely ineligible for preferment until five years after his ordination—a proposal frequently advocated in TRUTH. But in Church reforms we have to be thankful for small mercies, and this amendment is at any rate a good step in the right direction. If it becomes law, the Bishops will no longer be able to say, as they do now, that they cannot prevent the scandals that arise from the appointment to benefices of young and inexperienced curates of one or two years' standing.

The pay of a trooper in some of the Colonial police forces seems as a rule to be sweated by stoppages even more grievously than the soldier's shilling a day used to be under the old order of things. An ex-trooper in the Natal Mounted Police corroborates the statement I published recently respecting the system in vogue in that force, and he adds one or two further details of the deductions that are made from the monthly pay. For instance, if a new station is established, the men themselves are charged with the cost of a cooking stove and a variety of other necessaries; all that the Government provides for their accommodation being a table, a couple of forms, and the requisite number of iron bedsteads. Even the buckets and brooms used in cleaning the cells at the out-stations have to be purchased by the troopers. One mysterious entry in the account I reproduced is explained, it appears, by the fact that, when a man dies, each of his comrades is compelled to give a shilling towards the erection of a tombstone.

These, however, are but small items in the long list of stoppages, of which the net result is that at the end of a month a trooper is sometimes lucky if he gets half a sovereign for himself—in other words, about as many shillings as he was promised pounds. It naturally makes him the more discontented with his lot when he finds that he is actually worse off than the Kaffir policeman, who invariably draws his £1 10s. a month. The Natal Government keeps its bargain with the native policeman, but it has no compunction about enlisting white troopers, many of them young fellows from this country, on what is undoubtedly a false pretence.

Nor is it only in regard to pay that recruits for the Colonial police forces are deceived and disappointed. Many enlist under a complete delusion as to the real nature of the duties they have to perform, and the conditions of the life they have to lead. This appears to be particularly the case with those who join the Chartered Company's Police in Mashonaland. Complaint after complaint is received that the men are not only ill-paid, but ill-clothed, ill-fed, ill-sheltered, and generally ill-treated, and in one of the latest letters I have seen, a young trooper, writing home to his relatives, speaks in particularly strong terms of the unhealthiness of the climate, which he has found vastly different from what the rhapsodies of Mr. Rhodes had led him to expect. Minor discomforts might be patiently endured if good health could be maintained, but there is little chance of that—more especially for men kept, as the Company's police are, for months together on a diet of inferior tinned stuff, with no fresh meat or vegetables.

Some of these Colonial police forces profess, by the way, to be extremely exclusive. The other day a man who had served in the Royal Horse Artillery inquired at the Cape Government offices if there were any vacancies in the Cape Mounted Rifles. Since he left the Army he has been employed in a "menial" capacity at a well-known club, and on this fact being mentioned he was at once informed that he was not eligible for the C.M.R. Only the sons of military men who have been plucked in their Army examinations are admitted—so he was given to understand—to this select corps. I did not know that these colonial policemen were such exalted beings; but the fact only makes the ill-treatment of which they complain all the more serious.

The extravagance of the expenditure on the government of the West Indian Colonies is effectively illustrated by a comparison of the salaries paid to the Governors with those paid to the Governors of the Australian Colonies. For example, Jamaica, with a population of 625,271, and a revenue of £777,133, pays its Governor £6,000 a year—only £1,000 less than is given by New South Wales with a population more than twice as large, and a revenue amounting to upwards of nine millions. Still more striking is the case of Trinidad, which, with a population of 248,404, and a revenue of £618,322, is bled to the extent of £5,000 a year for the salary of its Governor, while the Governor of South Australia, where there is a population of 356,835 and a revenue of £2,628,019, has to be content with £4,000.

It is the same all through the system of administration in the West Indies. Many snug berths could be abolished altogether, and three fourths of the remaining salaries greatly reduced without any injury to the efficiency of the Government. That is what would be done first of all by any self-governing colony brought face to face with the condition of things prevailing in the West Indies. But these Crown Colonies are regarded as a natural and legitimate dumping ground for over-paid officials, and it is to maintain them in that position, and at the same time to put money in the pockets of the sugar planters, that the British taxpayer now has to make a grant of £120,000.

"DOLUS LATET IN GENERALIBUS."

Debate on the West Indian Vote, March 15, 1898.

Mr. Chamberlain, loquitur :—

"You're quite mistaken. Bless my soul!
You must not say it is a 'dole';
It is a 'grant': to make things pleasant
You might describe it as a present;
Or as a stimulus to trade;
Or a Colonial "rate in aid";
Or as a kindly indication
Of all good wishes from the nation;
Or as a handsome gift from 'Joe,'
The man from whom all blessings flow.
Don't say a 'dole,' though, I beseech—
Don't join in Little England's screech!
When I, you know, devise a scheme,
Things are not always what they seem.
So vote my project 'holus bolus;'
It's not a 'dole,' but only 'dolus.'"

SCRUTATOR.

NIGGER SPHERES AND BRITISH INFLUENCE.

SUPPOSING that two men each owned a portion of the outside rim of a circle, and that both claimed all within the circle in the rear of his portion, it is evident that if both acted on this proprietary view, a point within the circle would be eventually reached where the rival claims would clash. This is briefly the history of our dispute with France in the interior of Western Africa Both of us have colonies on the Bight of Benin which faces south; both of us have colonies on the coast which faces west; and France has possessions on the African coast of the Mediterranean which faces north. In regard to the hinterland of the French Mediterranean possessions, the two countries have come to an agreement. This is what is called the Say-Barru agreement, which is a line of delimitation drawn laterally from a place called Say to a place called Barru. The line is on the thirteenth parallel, and all to the north of it we recognise as within the French Mediterranean sphere of influence. As far north as the ninth parallel the frontiers have also been delimited between the hinterland of our colonies and that of France on the Bight of Benin. Between the ninth parallel and the thirteenth parallel there is a vast territory, through which the Niger flows. On the eastern side, the German sphere of influence commences, and the line delimiting this sphere has been drawn. But no line has been drawn on the western side. We and France both push forward from our respective colonies on the Bight of Benin, and France also pushes forward laterally from her colonies on the Western coast of Africa. All that has been agreed to is, that "all that fairly belongs to the Empire of Sokoto" is within our sphere of influence, and the Niger Company has concluded a treaty with the Sultan of Sokoto giving effect to this. The Empire of Sokoto is situated between the German sphere and the left bank of the Niger, but of what the Empire precisely consists, and how far it extends, are points which have never been settled. On the right, or western, bank of the Niger, and between it and what is admitted to be within the French sphere of influence, there is a strip of land. France claims it, and we claim it Both countries have agreed that a line of delimitation from north to south—i.e., from the ninth to the thirteenth parallel—ought to be agreed to, and a joint Commission is now sitting at Paris to draw it, if possible.

Our respective claims to this disputed strip are based upon treaties with the sultans and chiefs holding sway there, and upon effective occupation following up these treaties. There seem to be two kingdoms in the strip. One is called Boussa, the other is called Gandu. But who is the monarch of Boussa, and what precisely Boussa is, or what precisely is Gandu, no one exactly knows. In 1890 an official of the Royal Niger Company concluded a treaty with a monarch professing to be the Sultan of Boussa or Borgu (for this kingdom is known by both names), in which the Ethiopian placed his monarchy under the protection of the Company, in consideration of receiving a yearly sum of "fifty bags, native value, in any class of goods." But in 1894, Colonel Lugard, acting for the Company, seems to have come to the conclusion that this sovereign was merely the ruler of the town of Boussa, and that the real ruler of the Monarchy of Boussa, or Borgu, was another potentate residing at Nikki. He therefore made a treaty with three negroes, who professed to be the representatives of Lafia, also called Alsalami, son of Warukura, King of Nikki and of all Boussa or Borgu country, by which the said Lafia placed himself and his dominions under the protection of the Niger Company, on receipt of a "donation." This treaty was signed by the three representatives of the monarch, and was sent to him by a man named Joseph, who appended the following certificate to the treaty:—

> I certify and solemnly declare that I was sent to the King Lafia by Captain Lugard to carry to him a present from the Company, and that at that interview, in accordance with my instructions, I asked the king myself in the presence of various chiefs and people whether he had himself deputed the Leman, and Sirkin Powa, and Naiman to act for him in the matter of this Treaty, and that he thrice declared to me that he had done so.
>
> (Signed) J. F. Joseph.

As regards the kingdom of Gandu, the Niger Company first asserted its claim to it on the ground that the Sultan of Gandu is a feudatory of the Sultan of Sokoto, and that, consequently, Gandu is by agreement with France and with the Sultan of Sokoto within the sphere of British influence. The Company appears, however, subsequently to have discovered that this was not correct, for in 1894 it concluded a treaty with the Sultan of Gandu as an independent potentate. The treaty is on the same lines as that made with the Sultans residing at Boussa and at Nikki, except that the Gandu sovereign, instead of a "donation," or of 50 bags per annum of goods, is to receive 2,000 bags of goods each year for accepting the protection of the Company.

It will be seen from the above how very vague all these treaties are. It is, in fact, an absurdity that such gifts of kingdoms in return for a "donation," or for a promise of a few bags of goods, should be termed treaties. Those making over the kingdoms often do not own them, and even if they did, they do not understand what they are signing away. The French also claim the disputed strip on the strength of treaties made with negroes professing to rule more or less of it, and these treaties probably are neither better nor worse than ours. In the meantime, French officers, and Niger Company officers, each with a band of armed negroes at his heels, have been strengthening the "treaty claims" by what they are pleased to call "effective occupation." They encamp in this village or in that, and assert that the village and its surrounding territory are, as the case may be, either in the French or the English sphere—the only persons to whom both agree that it does not belong being apparently its dusky inhabitants. The disputed territory is comparatively worthless. In view of the large tracts of land that both France and England have acquired in Western Africa, a small accession of area to either of their acquisitions is unimportant. Both are, in fact, in the position of two gorged dogs snarling over a bone with the very smallest shred of meat attached to it.

I am myself strongly opposed to all these African annexations. I do not believe that the game is worth the candle. Some little commerce may be carried on with Central Africa, but even this is only possible so long as slavery is permitted. In our East African Protectorates we tolerate the enslavement of one African by another. In Rhodesia, Mr. Rhodes bitterly complains that the country is going to the dogs, because we will not allow him and his brother financiers to force the natives to work in mines for them. We have owned islands in the West Indies for many a year; we have an expensive system of government there, and the islands have for long enjoyed the advantage of civilisation. But what do we find? That they do not pay their way; and we are now called upon to supply them with doles and grants. It is ridiculous, therefore, to add to our dominions and responsibilities vast kingdoms in Central Africa peopled by uncivilised negroes, and where Europeans cannot live, under the illusion that this is a sound business speculation. We have now nearly 400 million of subjects. Our notion of keeping them under subjection is to arm one race against another race. This is precisely what Carthage did, and we know what was the fate of Carthage. To add to the number of our subjects on the ground that we are lost so soon as we do not continue to expand the area of Empire is simply lunacy. What we should do is to devote all our attention to maintain Free Trade and no favour in the eighteen provinces constituting China; instead of annexing swamps and jungles in Central Africa, or attempting, at a heavy cost, to bring within our sway the wild tribes inhabiting the Upper Valley of the Nile.

Apart from my own views in regard to African expansion, it would be a lasting disgrace to our boasted civilisation were we and France to go to war for a wretched strip of land in Central Africa. But this is not the view of our Jingo Press, and bellicose scribblers are doing their best to urge us to fight for our "undoubted rights," as though our "rights" to this strip were as unquestionable as they are to the British Isles; whilst the "rights" of France to it are as mythical as they would be if she claimed Kent or Surrey. They are just now indignant at the French Temps hinting that Lord Salisbury and Mr. Chamberlain are not entirely of one mind in regard to our West African policy of bluster. Yet the very newspapers that insist upon these two statesmen being as much agreed as were David and Jonathan, have themselves for weeks been reviling Lord Salisbury as a weak, vacillating creature, oblivious of the honour and interests of his country, and lauding Mr. Chamberlain as the incarnation of patriotism. I have observed that our Jingo Pressmen are never happy unless they can egg on the Ministry to some folly. A little while ago they were howling for war with the United States rather than that we should agree to arbitration in regard to the respective title of Venezuela and British Guiana to some worthless disputed territory in the interior of South America. Then came the turn of the Transvaal. We were called upon to smash and pulverise that Republic, to "avenge Majuba Hill," and Mr. Rhodes was the hero of the moment for endeavouring to do this on his own account and on that of Herr Beit and the other cosmopolitan financiers with whom he was connected. After this they rejoiced over our fatuous attempt to deprive the Afridis of their independence. At present they are running two hares, one in West Africa and the other in Manchuria. One day they give the African hare a run, the next day the Asiatic hare; and if they could manage to hustle us into war with France, Russia, and Germany, they would, I presume, feel that they have accomplished their beneficial mission.

But Jingoism is a creed as mean as it is blustering. When its high priests threaten one Power, they try to wheedle with childish flattery the other Powers that they have threatened a few months before. When the enemy of the moment was France, they flattered Germany; when it became Germany, they flattered France. Now that the enemies are all the European Continental Powers, they are flattering the United States, and suggesting that Americans should help us to pull the chestnuts out of the fire for our own consumption. When they find—as might have been expected—that all this does not succeed, they then boast of our "splendid isolation," as though this were a perfect triumph of diplomacy, and they urge that our Army and Navy should be increased. In the first year of the Queen's reign our armaments cost us twelve millions. This was deemed amply sufficient for our needs by the Duke of Wellington and by Sir Robert Peel. Now they cost us forty-four millions, and our Jingoes are clamouring for more. If they were double what they were in the first year of the Queen, we should have in hand each year twenty millions. This would provide a meal for every hungry child in our schools, and a pension for every veteran of labour. Assuredly this expenditure would be more reasonable than adding million on million to the cost of our armaments and giving doles to the "classes." But Ministers do not think so. Economy is as odious to them as is a proper application of the national resources. When they propose some swollen estimate, they generally apologise for its not being more. We shall only awake from this war craze when conscription is established, and when we feel the pinch of taxation. As it is, in addition to our Army of British soldiers, we are raising an Army of blacks at the cost of £250,000 per annum, either to aid or to fight Lafia, also called Alsalami, son of Warukura, and other black potentates, in order to establish our rule over territories in the interior of Africa.

China and Glass. — Messrs. Goode, Artists and Designers, solicit an inspection of their collection in their recently-extended South Audley-street premises, now by far the largest and most important in Europe. Messrs. Goode guarantee the excellence of all their productions, and invite a comparison of their prices with those of any co-operative stores.

And what will our rule be like when it is established? This may be judged from what goes on on the coast colonies of the Bight of Benin, which have been ours for many a year. This is the experience of Mr. Joseph Thomson, who negotiated the treaty of the Niger Company with the Sultan of Sokoto. Speaking in 1887, he said:—

> In wandering through some of the native villages on the Kru Coast one feels in a sort of Hades, peopled by brutalised human beings, whose punishment it is to be possessed of a never-ending thirst for drink. On all sides, you are followed by eager cries for gin, gin, always gin. Under these eager appeals one seems to hear the bitter reproach, "You see what you Christians have made us. You talk of peace and goodwill, and yet you put devils in us. Give us more drink that we may allay these cravings, and for a moment be allowed to forget our misery." The boast of many a village on that unhappy line of coast is the amount of liquor they can afford to drink; the gauge of their wealth and its proudest monument, the pyramid of empty gin bottles which adorns its square.

Nor are things better now. Miss Agnes McAllister, who has been for nearly eight years on the Kru Coast, tells us in a book that she has just published, called "A Lone Woman in Africa," that it is rather worse:—

> One of the greatest obstructions in the way of the Gospel in Africa is the rum traffic carried on by the European saloons. A few years ago this traffic was not to be compared with what it was to-day. It is not long since one bottle of gin would satisfy all the people in a town; they used to take a spoon to drink it out of. But now when rum comes into town, not by the bottle but by the barrel, I have seen men standing round it with brass kettles, tin buckets, iron pots, and tin cans contending to see who could get the most, and then ending in a fight. The little children stood round, sipping the last drops out of the dish father or mother had emptied. Many of the older people think it a good piece of fun to get a child drunk.

Sir Ralph Muir, the British Consul-General of the Niger Protectorate, defends the sale of imported spirits in this way:—

> From personal observations in the Protectorate I can state that while a man who gets drunk on imported spirits on one day is fit and able to work on the following, the man who becomes drunk on native fermented liquor will be absolutely unfit for work for from one to four days, and a continuance of the abuse of such drink ruins the native, both mentally and physically, much more quickly than the abuse of imported spirits. Having now for some years carefully observed the mode of life and circumstances of work of the native in the Niger Delta and the Protectorate Territories, I am of opinion that the conditions of his life and work are such as to render the moderate use of a sound spirit beneficial rather than harmful.

The native spirit thus alluded to is a sort of light lager beer made from maize and palm wine. What the trade spirit is, that is beneficial rather than harmful, may be estimated from the fact that a case containing twelve bottles ($1\frac{3}{4}$ gallons) is invoiced to West Africa at 2s. 11d., and here is the evidence in regard to its excellent qualities:—

> A certain Anglican clergyman visited one of the English firms of Lagos. He saw the European agent there giving away as presents to the Krooboys, trade gin and rum. The Krooboys were drinking, and appeared to be jolly. The clergyman, anxious to teach the European agent that it is not right to give to others what we would not like ourselves, said to the agent, "I would like to have a glass." The agent refused to give him one. The clergyman asked why? The agent replied, "It is not good for you. It is fire-water; it is only turpentine and rotten ingredients. I would not take it myself."

The mode in which the trade in liquor is dealt with in our West African Colonies and in the Niger Country Protectorate is to levy a high duty on imported spirits. This duty now amounts to two shillings per gallon. But if a gallon and three-quarters of liquor can be invoiced to West Africa at 2s. 11d., it can be imported, including the duty, at 7s. 5d. per gallon and three-quarters, which still enables it to be sold at a price that (including a large profit to the trader) cannot put it beyond the paying capacity of any African who may wish to get drunk. As a matter of fact, trade spirit is indeed the currency of the country in many parts, being the chief article of barter, and in the Delta region of the Royal Niger Company a missionary states that he found it difficult to obtain food because he could not pay for it in gin. Truly, therefore, has Sir John Kirk, the British Commissioner to Brass, written:—

> The last four centuries of contact with Europeans and European trade have degraded rather than elevated or improved the people.

THE CONFIDENTIAL REPORT AGAIN.

My Service readers may remember the case of Major Acheson, of the Army Service Corps, which was dealt with at some length in TRUTH in the autumn of 1896. It recently came to my knowledge that, by a curious coincidence, Major Acheson's successor at Fermoy has also fallen a victim to the abuse of the confidential report system; and although the case is now a matter of history, it points a moral which ought not to be missed.

The victim in this case was Lieutenant-Colonel D. S. Skirving, of the Army Service Corps, an officer who, after five and twenty years' service, sent in his papers some few months back under the following circumstances:—In December, 1896, Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel Belfield, Royal Munster Fusiliers, then commanding the troops at Fermoy, made a confidential report on Lieutenant-Colonel Skirving, to the effect that "he did not suppose" that the Lieutenant-Colonel possessed either much energy or ability, and that he had caused friction in his relations with the troops. At the time when he supposed, or did not suppose, this, Lieutenant-Colonel Belfield had been commanding at Fermoy for about a month or five weeks. During that period he had seen Lieutenant-Colonel Skirving three times. The report having been communicated to him, Lieutenant-Colonel Skirving made an answer to it in the manner provided for by the Regulations. To contradict what Colonel Belfield had merely supposed was, of course, impossible; but in regard to the second point, as to his causing friction, the accused officer referred to ten past and present Officers Commanding Troops and Corps at Fermoy, Buttevant, and Tralee, in proof of his cordial relations with those with whom he had to work. It may be remarked that no complaint against Colonel Skirving's energy or ability had previously been made. At the time when the report was made he had recently passed with credit as a French interpreter, and he had recently contributed a valuable series of articles to the Army Service Corps Journal on the "French Intendance." Work of this kind, done in addition to his ordinary Service duties, certainly does not suggest lack of energy or ability on the part of an officer. After the appeal was sent in, Colonel Belfield's report seems to have been referred back to him and altered. Notwithstanding this, however, the C.S.O. at Cork declined to forward Colonel Skirving's appeal to the War Office. Thereupon, in disgust at such treatment after twenty-five years' satisfactory service in the Army, Lieutenant-Colonel Skirving sent in his papers, intimating that he did so as a protest against an Army Service Corps Officer in his position being placed absolutely at the mercy of any Officer for the time being in command of his station.

MORTLOCK'S (Oxford-st.), Estd. A.D. 1746.—The collection of China and Glass now on view in their Galleries fully maintains the high reputation and pre-eminence enjoyed by "MORTLOCK'S" for the last century and a half, and well repays a visit of inspection.

Any one who can consider this case with a judgment unbiassed by the traditions of officialism must admit that Lieutenant-Colonel Skirving had been treated with gross unfairness, and that, in resigning under the circumstances, he took the only dignified course. It is on the face of it a monstrous thing that the reputation and prospects of a Departmental Officer of twenty-five years' service should be at the mercy of any Regimental Officer temporarily commanding troops at the same station. It is still more monstrous that when such a Departmental Officer has been unfavourably reported upon by the Commandant, and has appealed against the report, he should be refused the right to be heard at the War Office. Over and above this, the case has a special importance for officers of the Army Service Corps. From their position, such officers are necessarily liable to be brought into conflict, or at any rate into differences of opinion, with Officers in authority over them. In this very instance it appears that Lieutenant-Colonel Skirving had previously come into conflict with the G.O.C. at Cork on a question of canteen supply. The C.O. of the Sussex Regiment had complained to Colonel Skirving, in his capacity of local Canteen Inspector, respecting the quality of the butter and soap supplied to his canteen. Colonel Skirving thought the articles very bad, and said so. He was subsequently told that his complaints were quite groundless, and rebuked for saying that the butter was adulterated, the fact being that it was an admixture of two qualities, one of them very inferior. As, however, both he and the C.O. of the Sussex Regiment were confident that their complaints were just, Lieutenant-Colonel Skirving respectfully declined to withdraw what he had said. As my military readers are aware, the G.O.C. Cork District has established a system of supplying the whole of the canteens of the District from an office at the District headquarters; and it is not unnatural to suppose that he felt aggrieved at the imputation on the quality of his butter. In another and more personal matter, Lieutenant-Colonel Skirving had had a little difference of opinion with the Cork authorities, and in this instance had scored off them on appeal to the War Office. These facts do not lend a more agreeable colour to the subsequent refusal of the General to forward to the War Office Colonel Skirving's appeal against the unfavourable confidential report. It looks uncommonly as if there was somewhere a desire in this case to snub and suppress an officer who had shown a little too much independence of judgment. It is not for the interest of any one concerned that such a design should succeed. The position which Army Service Corps officers hold in relation to commissariat and other domestic matters affecting the troops renders it of great importance to the Service, and possibly also to the public, that they should occupy a position of some independence, and this they certainly do not occupy if they are to be treated as Lieutenant-Colonel Skirving was in the above case.

The worst objection to the confidential report is that it lends itself so readily to indirect motives of this kind. That there are circumstances under which confidential reports may serve a useful purpose, I have never denied, but it were better that the system should not exist at all than that it should be improperly used for any purpose whatever. It is a weapon of the most dangerous kind, carrying with it a standing menace to the character and professional career of every officer in the Army. This is virtually admitted in the Regulations, which have prescribed various safeguards against abuse. Even, however, if these safeguards were observed, it is doubtful whether they are sufficient for their purpose, and if they are not to be observed with the most scrupulous care and loyalty, they are absolutely useless. Judging from what one continually sees, the confidential report serves in the British Army very much the purpose which the Lion's Mouth served in the Venetian Constitution—a convenient instrument for paying off grudges, and damaging men who have not earned the favour of those in authority over them. If the rulers of the Army do not approve of such a state of things, it is time they took steps to stop the abuses which are so frequently coming to light.

THE CHARITY-MONGER'S LIVE-STOCK.

An inquiry reached this office from Oxfordshire a week or two back respecting an Orphan Girls' Home and Christian (or Gospel) Mission to the Fallen, carried on at 326, Kennington-road, S.E. A lady collector representing this institution was at work in the neighbourhood of Witney, and one of the residents on whom she had called very wisely sought independent information before contributing. It so happens that I have had this institution under my eye for some months past, and as it forms a suitable pendant to the enterprise of Mr. Chubb Jackson dealt with in last week's TRUTH, this will be a convenient opportunity for fully enlightening, not only my Witney correspondent, but any others who may be approached by the same collectors.

The presiding genius of the Orphan Girls' Home and Christian (or Gospel) Mission to the Fallen is a Mr. H. W. Street. He is a printer by trade, but has for many years past combined philanthropy with printing. He had a "Rescue Home" in Lambeth as far back as 1889. The Rescue Home attracted the kindly attention of the Charity Organisation Society, and their investigations into it do not seem to have furnished much proof of the value of the rescue work there carried on. The Rescue Home was subsequently converted into a "Preventive Home." At this institution a servants' registry office was conducted, and servant girls out of places were taken in at a charge of 7s. a week. The idea looks a promising one; but somehow the "Preventive Home" does not seem to have been a success. Perhaps it was the name that was against it, perhaps it was the terms. At any rate, before long Mr. Street dropped the Preventive Home, and fell back upon the ultimate resort of every struggling philanthropist, an orphanage. Whatever other lines they may try, they always seem to find in the long run that the orphan is the most profitable stock-in-trade. Mr. Street's efforts on behalf of the orphans first came under my notice about twelve months ago; and from what I have seen of him and his work in the interval, I should think he has no reason to regret having left servant girls to their fate in order to devote himself exclusively to the fatherless.

It was in May last that, in consequence of inquiries from one quarter and another, I sent one of my staff to look into the Orphan Girls' Home. Having hunted up Mr. Street at his business premises hard by, my representative obtained permission to view the Home, and was conducted over it by the matron. The Home consists of an eight-roomed house, two of the rooms being the kitchen and scullery in the basement. The two rooms on the ground floor were occupied by the matron; the four rooms above were occupied by the children and two young women. There were at that time fourteen children on the premises, nine of them being in a room on the first floor with six beds in it, and the remaining five with the two young women in the other three rooms. There was no sitting-room or playroom for the children other than the kitchen, where they were having their dinner when my representative called. There was a small yard at the back where the matron stated that they played. The furniture of the upstairs rooms was meagre in the extreme. The bedrooms contained no other furniture than the beds, not even washing appliances. There was no bath-room in the house. The bed-clothing was old and dirty. The house generally was squalid and dilapidated, the walls of the staircase were broken, and the paper hanging in shreds. A place more utterly unfit for a Children's Home could hardly be found. The children themselves struck my representative as ill-clothed, though apparently well fed.

After inspecting the Home, my representative returned to Mr. Street's printing office, and asked to see his accounts and reports. Street replied that he had never published any, but that he had one on hand. Asked at what date it would be out, he replied about a fortnight. He added that he collected very little money, and that the orphanage was mainly supported out of his own private means. He was asked if he could mention the total amount of his income from subscriptions, and he replied that he had no idea what it was; but it would appear upon the balance-sheet in due course. He promised to forward this document in about a fortnight, and, with the understanding that he would call again as soon as he had seen the accounts, my representative left. Ten months have since elapsed, but no balance-sheet has made its appearance. I have sent to Kennington-road in search of it I think about six times during the interval, and have always had the same answer from Mr. Street, viz., that the document was in hand, and would be out in the course of a week or two.

Now, here is a pretty specimen of a voluntary "charity." During all the time that Mr. Street has been labouring in the philanthropic field he has had no committee, no treasurer, other than himself, no independent responsible person as a guarantee for the proper administration of the funds he collects or the efficient discharge of the work he professes to do. The concern, under all its varying names, has been run solely by Street and his paid assistants. Money for the purpose has been obtained during this period by collectors working in all parts of the country. I have mentioned at the outset of this article that one of them was cadging from house to house a few weeks back in Oxfordshire. The same lady was similarly employed during last summer in Cornwall, where she got into trouble by her cadging operations, was arrested by the police, and charged at Launceston Police-court. These two instances alone suffice to show that Street's net is cast over a wide area. He has told my representative that he collects very little money, and mainly carries on the home out of his own pocket. I regret to say that this statement does not appear to be worthy of credit. His ordinary business is only a small one, and his circumstances do not convey the idea that he is overburdened with cash. When I mention that the Bills of Sale Register records several of these tell-tale instruments executed by Mr. Street during the years 1882-1894, the last one being in favour of a money-lending firm, the reader will probably feel as much difficulty as I do in believing Mr. Street's assertion that he is voluntarily maintaining a home and fourteen orphans out of the superabundance of his worldly goods. But even if his statement were true, the fact of his spending his own money on the concern would not absolve him from the duty of keeping and publishing accounts. That Street has published none is certain. That he has kept none is a legitimate inference from his own statements and conduct. He asserted in May last that he did not know what his income from subscriptions was, which can only be explained by his never having kept an account of his receipts. He has asserted half a dozen times in nine months that a balance-sheet was in course of preparation, and would be out in a week or two; and none has ever yet appeared. It can only be inferred from this that he has no intention of issuing any such account, and that his professions of such an intention are a mere pretext to gain time. Here we have, then, a man who has been busily collecting money from the public for eight or ten years past, if not longer, who is unwilling (and probably unable) to give an account of what he has received or spent, who makes statements about his relations with the charity which are incredible in view of well-established facts, and who, when challenged to justify his proceedings, takes refuge in prevarication and subterfuge. This is the sort of men whom a certain infatuated section of the public support with their alms, as a father to the fatherless and a rescuer of the fallen.

My sympathy with the subscribers to "charities" such as those of Street or Chubb Jackson is limited. But public attention ought to be seriously directed to the position of the children who form the stock-in-trade of enterprising gentry of this class. It may be that as a rule the little waifs are not worse off in the speculative "orphanage" or "home" than they would be elsewhere. The proprietor of the establishment knows that anything amiss in the condition of his little boarders may quickly attract the eyes of suspicious neighbours, or of that troublesome body the N.S.P.C.C. If he is in a large way of business, he has to reckon with the possibility of a visit from an enthusiastic subscriber, or it may be from some inquisitive outsider like the editor of Truth. Besides, the philanthropist who knows his trade will be as careful to have his children healthy-looking and clean, as an intelligent shopkeeper is about the dressing of his window. But can anybody, in the face of such cases as have been noticed in Truth, hold that these are sufficient guarantees, or that it is a satisfactory state of the law which allows children to be exploited on such conditions by any enterprising charity-monger who can get hold of them? Look at Chubb Jackson; yesterday the impecunious caretaker in charge of a house in St. John's Wood, to-day the flourishing proprietor of two so-called "Homes" where children are taken in for country holidays. Look at H. W. Street—a small tradesman of limited means — with his shabby house in Kennington stuffed full of little friendless waifs, and not a soul in the world, but Street himself, answerable for their present condition or future prospects. Look at the exploits in time past of men like Bradshaw and Walter Austin, who have perpetrated the grossest frauds on the public by means of such Homes, and who are notoriously unfit to have ever had a single child under their care. Remember that the children who form the stock-in-trade of the charity-monger can be obtained without difficulty, and in any quantity desired, by any plausible "philanthropist," through slum Missions, district visitors, police-court missionaries, or it may be from baby-farmers and other custodians of illegitimate or "unwanted" children. Is it, I ask, a tolerable state of things that any philanthropic adventurer should be free to lay his hands on as much human live-stock of this kind as he can, and use it to bait a subscription-trap, without a shadow of guarantee beyond his own word, as to how the little creatures will be treated, how they will be housed, fed, nursed, clothed, or educated? If, as I think, few will deny that such a state of things is radically wrong, then there ought to be some amendment of the law which will put a check upon this branch of the charity-monger's trade. Premises used for such purposes should, at least, be registered or licensed, and inspected by public authority. Their registration or their licences should be made conditional upon their being under the control and management of a certain number of persons whose character and responsibility are satisfactorily vouched for. If they profess to stand on a charitable basis, the publication of duly certified accounts should also be insisted upon. The present state of the law in regard to the promotion and maintenance of voluntary charities is in many respects most unsatisfactory, but I know of no direction in which reform is more urgently needed than in this.

NOTES FROM PARIS.

A PRINCESS'S DEBTS.

"TAKE Notice!" Prince Philip of Saxe-Coburg warns all whom it may concern that he will be no longer answerable for his wife's debts. As she has been living expensively at Nice, the notice appears in a French legal journal, Les Petites Affiches. Every one is supposed to read Les Petites Affiches. The Princess will have now to reduce her stables at her own place at Paradiso, near Cimiez. They are, in arrangement and inmates, worthy of belonging to Queen Marie Henriette, and contain horses enough for a troop of dragoons. Her old-fashioned mode of travelling with relays, postilions, and mounted servants must be expensive. The Duke of Cumberland shares her dislike to railways, but he goes on a "mail coach" that he drives himself, and is not an ostentatious traveller. But I fancy the Princess is rich enough in her own right to keep up the showy style of living she affects. Her expectations are also brilliant. The King of the Belgians is enormously rich. The Princess is heiress to the third of his wealth. She is now staying at an hotel in Vienna, whither she went when she quietly slipped away from Nice the other day. Her object in going there was to meet King Leopold, who is going to attend a family council.

The Princess is an object of sympathy to Frenchmen. Their doctrine is that a woman has a right to happiness, and to secure it as best she can. She is the age of the German Emperor, is good-looking, of a robust style of beauty, and extremely dressy. But she has rather high shoulders and a curiously Brussels air. The prodigality must be inherited from her mother's branch of the Hapsburg family. They have for three generations lived in a magnificent patriarchal style in Hungary.

Prince Philip was born at the Tuileries in 1844, and is eldest son of the Princess Clémentine and the late Duke Augustus of Saxe-Coburg-Kohary. He is thirteen years her senior, and is a handsome, fair-haired man, bearing a strong family likeness to the sons and daughters of Louis Philippe. The marriage took place when she was only seventeen—a dangerous age to be transferred from quiet Brussels to Vienna. She took precedence of him, as being Royal. He disliked on this account to go about with her. She had, therefore, a rather lonely life, until her second sister married the Imperial Crown Prince Rudolph. Incompatibility of temper showed itself in the two ménages. Prince Philip and the Crown Prince left their wives to make out the time as best they could, and shared each other's amusements. The two husbands were at Meyerling on the night of Rudolph's mysterious death.

The great manufacturer of perfumes at Grasse, M. Louis Roure, died last week. He was an active, clever, and ingenious Frenchman. All his perfumes were extracted from flowers. He combined the scents of six or seven in endless varieties. They were to him, as a perfumer, what the keyboard of a piano is to a Rubinstein. But he did not catch up the Orientals in his distillations of roses. He was very proud of his jessamine extract, a few drops of which will fill a bath with a clinging, subtle perfume. M. Roure made a large fortune with his perfumes. His best customers were American ladies. But he saw the time coming when Florida would be the great manufacturing country of flower perfumes.

M. Charles Schefer, who died last week at the age of seventy-nine, was one of the best-informed persons of his time on Levantine affairs. He was dragoman at the chief French Consulates of Syria and Egypt at an interesting time. He was Chancellor of the French Embassy at Constantinople during the Crimean War, and came to Paris to translate at the Congress of Paris. His store of anecdotes about the great people he had known and translated for in the East was endless. Schefer was employed as translator to Abdul Aziz, when that monarch was the guest of the Emperor and Empress of the French in 1867. That Sultan was as coarse and crude in speech as his Kurd mother. He had no sense of politeness, or of any of the convenances. His talk to the Empress at the Imperial table and elsewhere was meant to be complimentary; but the translator thought it could not be repeated even in a very free translation. As he said, he had to drown Constantinople odours with rose water. The Empress was enchanted with the compliments, she not suspecting what was behind the translation. But the Sultan sometimes suspected that his words were not faithfully rendered, and kept calling to the Turkish Ambassador: "Keep your ears open, and tell me whether the rogue presumes to alter what I say."

The Palais Royal Theatre loses a taking actress by the enforced retirement of Alice Lavigne. She is blinded by the glare of the footlights. Her forte was comicality. It lay in her broad face and the curious tones of her voice. Did you ever in childhood talk into an empty barrel? If so, you can have a notion of her odd intonations. The face was sometimes stolid. It sometimes gleamed with tomboy fun and spirit. But, however it looked, it was irresistibly funny. Nothing is rarer in women than the vis comica carried to the degree she had it. She was admirable in the part of the vulgar, good-natured Englishwoman. She became familiar with English types at Chantilly, where her husband Petitt had horsey employments. Her French, as spoken by an English mouth, used to keep the audience in a continual roar. She had only to show herself to tickle. The benefit representation set on foot by the Figaro has brought in £2,000.

Is French spoken well outside France? I think not. The best samples of exotic French I can think of were furnished by old Canadians of Quebec; but it was French as spoken in the eighteenth century. Geneva and Lausanne French of the present day is good enough for English youths to learn. It will enable them to understand a conversation in a Paris drawing-room. But it is quite different from what they might hear there. French was very well taught in Belgium when that city was the abiding-place of French exiles. That was during the greater part of Napoleon III.'s reign. The Indépendance Belge absorbed the best talents France could furnish. Its palmy days were in the eighteen years of the Second Empire. It still keeps up a certain Parisian style. But some of its chief rivals are not at that trouble. Nothing amuses me more than to read their smart—or would be smart—articles. I was first in Brussels when Sardou's "Patrie" was coming out there under the patronage of Victor Hugo and the Duc d'Aumale. In regard to French conversation, Brussels was then better off than Paris. There was freer speech, and the Frenchmen of brilliant parts were endless. But in recent visits I have been greatly struck by the alteration both in the spoken and the written French of that city.

LETTER FROM THE LINKMAN.

It is seldom, dear Lady Betty, that an opportunity occurs which enables a considerable section of the community to become twenty years younger, even for an instant! The extraordinary performance which was given at Drury Lane Theatre last week, for the benefit of Miss Nellie Farren, owed much of its success to this, that it enabled three generations to revive vividly the memories of youth.

From the late-sixties to the middle-seventies the generation which was influenced by the example of the Prince of Wales, and numbered amongst its leaders the late Duke of Hamilton and Lord Carrington, reigned supreme. Cosmopolitanism was the keynote of this influence. The Prince of Wales and the late Duke of Hamilton popularised the Continent. Their horses ran at Paris and at Baden; they themselves were familiar figures in every capital in Europe; and to their example is in a great measure due the extinction of that insular spirit which until then had been a prominent feature of English character and customs. This was the period of luxury and extravagance; it was an immoderately princely and moderately polished period—and many vast fortunes were squandered whilst it lasted.

From the middle-seventies to the early-eighties another generation was to the front. The tone of this generation was greatly influenced by Miss Nellie Farren and the actors and actresses who were associated with her in the series of brilliant burlesque performances which then attracted all who were either young or lively to the Gaiety Theatre. This group of young men earned for itself the name of the "Crutch and Toothpick Brigade." This generation resented unnecessary restraint; it upset many old-world conventionalities; it inaugurated the habit of dining and supping at restaurants; and it helped to emancipate its womankind from the unreasonable restrictions which formerly were so oppressive. Since then, however, this emancipation has been unduly extended. It was a good-humoured, good-natured generation—and hundreds of small fortunes were frittered away by it in small extravagances.

The third generation, which is just relinquishing its hold on the situation, has devoted most of its energies to making money, and has contrived, in so doing, to utterly ruin the West End. It must be admitted, however, that the two preceding generations had so greatly impoverished the families to which they belonged that no option was left to the last but to venture into the City—now, the eternal City!

Miss Nellie Farren has been a star in the theatrical firmament almost throughout all three generations, and it is not surprising that at the different stages of age which these have reached, they eagerly combined to pay tribute to her genius and liveliness, and to revive the memories of youth. The actors and actresses who performed on the Gaiety stage during the period referred to will long be remembered for their humour, talent, and beauty. The names of Miss Nellie Farren, Miss Kate Vaughan, Miss Constance Gilchrist, Miss Amalia, Miss Phyllis Broughton, Miss Marion Hood, Miss Lizzy Wilson, Miss Alma Stanley, Miss Agnes Hewitt, Miss Wadman, Mr. Edward Terry, Mr. Royce, Mr. David James, Mr. Fred Leslie, Mr. Willie Edouin, and Mr. Lonnen revive in many a mind memories that are indescribably pleasant.

Would that it had been possible at the recent performance at Drury Lane Theatre to fill even one row of the stalls with well-known frequenters of the Gaiety fifteen years ago! There were the late Colonel "Jim" Farquharson; the late "Phizzy" Drummond Wolff, whose wit was almost as keen and as ready as that of his brilliant father, Sir Henry Drummond Wolff; Mr. "Hughie" Drummond, whose overflowing spirits, audacious escapades, and undoubted cleverness for several years attracted considerable attention; the late Mr. Harry Tyrrwhit Wilson; Mr. "Charlie" Balfour; the late Lord de Clifford, and a host of others who occupied the same seats at this theatre night after night for years. We were living then, and already this is history!

* * * * *

Lord Salisbury will not retire from active politics unless his health absolutely collapses; but notwithstanding that this is fully acknowledged, many politicians are discussing the changes which his removal from office might bring about. It is generally imagined that the Duke of Devonshire would become Prime Minister, and most Conservatives admit that he would be a safe Premier. Nevertheless, his appointment would certainly annoy those Conservatives who hold the opinion that the Liberal-Unionists have already been more than sufficiently rewarded for the support which they extended to the Party during the Home Rule Crisis. Sir Michael Hicks-Beach should make a good Minister for Foreign Affairs if his character has been rightly estimated.

. . . . .

Those who are well informed scout the belief that the country is in any imminent danger of going to war with any European Power. The peril—so far as Great Britain is concerned—lies in the Transvaal and at Yukon. Mr. Joseph Chamberlain and President Kruger do not understand each other; and this misunderstanding between two men who are both strong-willed may lead to serious consequences—all the more that certain financial interests are eagerly trying to bring about hostilities between the two countries, and that the Impetuous Imperialist Party is unconsciously working into their hands.

On the Yukon the situation is almost on all fours with that which has caused so much trouble in the Transvaal. The greater proportion of the "claims" in the new gold district are owned by Americans; Canada has formulated several regulations which are much resented by them; and, moreover, the frontier is a subject of dispute. It would be a painful repetition of history were an American filibustering raid to be made upon Klondike, in which event, very probably, the ten millions recently voted by the Senate for the purpose of preparing for war with Spain would be used to support the cause of the filibusterers against Canada and Great Britain. The whole trend of European diplomacy is to entangle this country in a war with some other nation, and then to divide the spoil whilst we are too much engaged to interfere. Mr. Cecil Rhodes with his policy of Impetuous Imperialism has brought about a state of affairs which assuredly must convince even his warmest admirers that, however patriotic he may be, he is certainly not a statesman. Besides, his patriotism has made him immensely rich, whilst it has impoverished thousands of his fellow-countrymen.

* * * * *

An excellent Berliner established at his own expense a cemetery for dogs just outside the City of Berlin. No dog, however, was allowed to be buried there unless he had either saved the life of a human being or had attempted to do so. For some reason which it is not easy to understand, it appears that this cemetery has been recently closed. The idea, however, is so admirable that it would be well were it adopted in London. English men and women are especially fond of animals, and if one or two would only interest themselves actively in the scheme, such a cemetery could be established in the neighbourhood of London in a short time. The conditions imposed by the German originator of the idea might be rendered less stringent.—Believe me to be, very truly yours,

MARMADUKE.

SPORTING NOTES.

DISRAELI has been doing no work at Newmarket for the last week, and it is reported that he has injured one of his legs. It seems to me that the Two Thousand prospects of the so-called "cracks" at Newmarket are not particularly bright, and I shall not be at all surprised if they are all beaten by Batt and Wildfowler. Mr. Baird's Brio is certainly the most promising of the "dark" candidates, and he goes uncommonly well in his gallops, but no sane person will think of backing him for either the Two Thousand or the Derby until he has been tried in a satisfactory manner. The breeding of Brio (by Galopin out of Briarroot) is not encouraging, and he may very likely prove to be deficient in stamina. The Duke of Devonshire will be at Newmarket for the Craven Meeting, and he will then decide whether Dieudonné is to start for the Two Thousand, or be reserved for the Derby.

A well known writer states that the Comte de Berteux's colt Géronte, by King Lud out of Hysteria, who has been backed for the Derby, is also engaged in the Two Thousand, which is incorrect, this animal being entered only at Epsom. Géronte had much better be left alone for his English engagement as he is entered for a large number of races next month, and in May at Longchamps and at Chantilly, and he will probably start for the Prix du Jockey Club, which is run on the Sunday before our Derby.

Royal Footstep is going on remarkably well at Newmarket, and she will be quite fit to start for the One Thousand, which race I expect her to win if she comes to the post fit and well.

Mr. Leopold de Rothschild has sold Gulistan to the French Government. This horse, when at his best, was only about 12 lb. behind St. Frusquin, but his career has been disappointing, as it was always difficult to give him a proper preparation for any race.

A great deal of nonsense has appeared in the papers about Lord Bradford's "extraordinary luck" in winning the Derby of 1892 with Sir Hugo, but it seems to be forgotten that fortune owed him some compensation for his exasperating disappointment with Chillington, who would have walked in for the St. Leger of 1888 (won by Seabreeze) if he had kept on his legs. Lord Bradford was also very unlucky on more than one occasion with Retreat, and particularly when that horse was disqualified for the Ascot Stakes. Quicklime would very likely have won the Two Thousand, Derby, and St. Leger of 1882 if he had been in his best form as a three-year-old.

Mr. Raphael's Sangrado, by Friar's Balsam, started twice last season without winning, but this colt appears to have come on very much during the winter, and when he ran as a two-year-old he was exceedingly backward in condition. Sangrado is being prepared to run for the Craven Stakes at Newmarket, on April 15, and he may be able to carry off that race in the absence of Jeddah, who will probably be reserved for the Two Thousand. Sangrado is also engaged in the Hastings Plate at the First Spring Meeting, and if he should miss the Craven Stakes he ought certainly to win the other race, having so considerable an advantage in the weights with all the winners in the entry. Sangrado was bred at Blankney, and he cost 2,000 gs. as a yearling at Newmarket, in July, 1896.

Lowland Chief was shot last week at Stetchworth, as his temper had become so bad that he was useless and unmanageable. Lowland Chief, who was decidedly the best son of Lowlander, won the Stewards' Cup at Goodwood for Lord Ellesmere in 1882, and he was beaten a head for the City and Suburban of 1883 by Roysterer. It cannot be said that Lowland Chief was a success at the stud, Belted Earl being about the best of his stock.

Several of the sporting papers plump for Mr. Raphael's Amurath for the Brocklesby Stakes, and the colt won a good trial last Wednesday; but quite a month ago this animal was mentioned by TRUTH as having been well galloped, and I then predicted that he would be a formidable candidate for Lincoln. Amurath has very few engagements, and the wisest policy would have been to keep him for another month, as he was amiss for several weeks early in the winter, and he wants time to develop.

Mr. Cassel has a smart two-year-old in April Morn, by Common out of April Fool, who easily won a satisfactory trial over five furlongs, at Newmarket last week. April Morn will make her début in the Westminster Plate at the Epsom Spring Meeting.

Lord Rosebery's stud has sustained a great loss by the death of Quarrel, who had been sent to Dalmeny (in the place of Oriflamb) for the use of farmers in the Lothians. Quarrel, who was a son of Discord, was bred in 1891, and he was originally known as Tarrare. Lord Rosebery bought the horse at Newmarket in December, 1895, for 670 gs., and in the following year he won the Royal Hunt Cup and several other races. Last season Quarrel carried off the Durdan Stakes at the Epsom Summer Meeting. How this horse ever come to be beaten for the Lincolnshire Handicap of 1896 (when Clorane gave him 37 lb.!) will remain an inscrutable mystery to the end of time.

Sir Blundell Maple has a very nice lot of two-year-olds, some of them being highly promising animals. The best of the season is unquestionably Commodore, by Common out of Princess Arena. He is a grand colt, and an exceedingly fine mover. Commodore wants time, and nobody will know anything whatever as to his racing capacity for at least two months to come. It is most probable that Commodore will make his début in the Woodcote Stakes at Epsom, and then go for the Coventry Stakes at Ascot, but if it is decided to keep him quiet for a little longer (which would perhaps be the most prudent course to adopt) he will be reserved for the New Stakes at Ascot.

Ardeshir is a horse that is quite certain to win a nice six furlongs handicap in the course of the season, and he must not be forgotten when he is started for such an event. He would assuredly have carried off last year's Stewards' Cup at Goodwood if he had been favoured with a clear course.

There is sure to be some betting on the City and Suburban directly the Grand National has been got rid of. I strongly advise my speculative readers to leave alone the Epsom event until the day of running arrives, as Hermiston will win if he starts, but he may be reserved for the Kempton Park Jubilee Handicap. I warned my readers from the first that Hermiston would not run at Lincoln, but the horse has been sedulously written up for this week's race in certain quarters, and it is to be feared that a large number of infatuated simpletons were gulled into throwing away their money on him.

I have heard a wonderful account of Captain Greer's Birkenhead (by Orme out of Tragedy, dam of Wildfowler), who is reported to be a magnificent two-year-old, which will be good news for the friends of the colt's sire, whose first season has been a most grievous failure. Birkenhead will probably make his début either in the Coventry Stakes at Ascot or the New Stakes.

Sir M. Fitzgerald's Sister Angela is said to be the highest tried two-year-old at Newmarket for the Brocklesby Stakes, and as she has very few engagements she is sure to run. Sister Angela's gallop was really a good one.

Chamant, who died the other day at the Prussian Royal Stud at Graditz, was one of the best race-horses ever foaled, and he was also a most successful sire. Chamant, who was bred in 1874 by the late Mr. Lefevre, was by Mortemer out of Araucaria, and he was raced in England by Count Lagrange. As a two-year-old Chamant won both the Middle Park Plate and the Dewhurst Plate, and in 1877 he cantered away with the Two Thousand. Chamant would assuredly have won both the Derby and the St. Leger if he had kept well, but he fell lame shortly after the race for the Two Thousand. Silvio, who was the winner both at Epsom and at Doncaster, was estimated by his owner, Lord Falmouth, to be a stone inferior to Chamant, who had "lost" him in the Two Thousand. Chamant was started at Epsom just on the off chance, but he might as well have been kept in his stable, for he was palpably lame, and he never ran again. A few years afterwards Chamant was purchased by that excellent judge, Count Lehndorff, for the Prussian Government for £4,000, which was a ridiculously small price. The horse's stock have won about £200,000 in Germany, Austria, and Hungary.

Several weeks ago I mentioned Sir Blundell Maple's filly Monopoly, by Common out of Minting Queen, as being likely to prove a dangerous candidate for the Brocklesby Stakes. I hear that Monopoly has won her trial. If the filly should be defeated at Lincoln this afternoon she may very likely compensate her owner by winning the Sudbury Stakes at Derby next Monday, and she is also engaged in the Althorp Park Stakes at Northampton next Wednesday.

There will be racing next week at Derby on Monday and Tuesday, at Northampton on Wednesday and Thursday, at Croxton Park on Thursday, and at Leicester on Friday and on Saturday. The arrangement of the List of Fixtures is thoroughly skimble-skamble, and no principle whatever appears to be observed when settling the dates of the various meetings. Why Derby should have been brought forward a fortnight it is impossible to understand, the result of the change being that Northampton has been put back a day—so that there will be a most inconvenient clashing with Croxton Park, which cannot fail to damage both meetings.

There are twenty-two acceptances for the Northamptonshire Stakes, the list being headed by St. Bris (9 st.), but Mr. Low's horse is not likely to run. I fancy that this handicap will be a good thing for Jaquemart (four years, 8 st. 4 lb.) if he starts, but it is possible that Mr. de Rothschild may decide to reserve this horse for the Chester Cup. Jaquemart has improved very much since last autumn, and he is now in good form. If he runs at Northampton he ought to win, and if he does not start Mr. de Rothschild may still secure the race with Morissia, who is very well in with only 6 st. 12 lb. to carry. Nunsuch has accepted with 8 st. 7 lb., and this is a horse that is sure to win an important handicap before long, but he is not likely to distinguish himself so early in the season. Ugly will very likely win the Spencer Plate if he is in form, and the market will indicate whether he is fancied by the stable.

At Liverpool to-morrow Lord Wolverton will very likely win the Prince of Wales's Plate of £300 with Titare, who did well in a gallop at Newmarket last week. Twenty-one three-year-olds are left in for the Union Jack Stakes of £950, and the Duke of Devonshire may take this race with Carhaix, a colt which he purchased at Newmarket last December (out of M. Lebandy's stud) for 660 gs. Bittern represents the best public form in the race, but he has 11 lb. the worst of the weights with Carhaix. There are fifty-seven entries for the Molyneux Stakes, in which race Champ de Mars made a successful début last year. It is leaping in the dark to meddle with two-year-old events so early in the season. I have heard a good account of both Mr. A. James's Fascination, by Royal Hampton out of Charm; and Mr. L. de Rothschild's Sais, by Lactantius out of Taia.

The Sefton Park Plate on Friday, which race was won last year by Cyllene, has fifty-four entries, and Mr. Dobell's Melfi, by Melton out of Veritas, is the great Newmarket tip for this race. Canonbury is very nicely weighted for the Hylton Handicap of £500, and Mr. Pilkington's horse will win this race if he is in form. The Bickerstaffe Stakes of £600 may fall to Devon or Bittern.

The Grand National will be contested by a big field of moderate horses, and the chances are that there will be an unusually large number of accidents. It was a wise man who declined to bet on cross-country events because he "did not like to see his money in the air." A good judge of steeplechasing protests that he "would not be flogged" into backing Manifesto, whom I never fancied at the weight. I am told that Filbert and Gobo are two good outsiders, and if people must bet on such a race it might be better to trust them with a trifle rather than to plunge on one of the favourites.

BOAT-RACE PROSPECTS.

For the first time for some years it not easy to make a forecast of the result of the University Boat Race with any confidence. Had the race been rowed a few days after the crews came to Putney, Cambridge would probably have won, for Oxford were extremely backward when they first made their appearance on the tide-way, while their rivals were, and still are, better than any of the last seven Cambridge crews. During the past fortnight Oxford have made great improvement in the matter of length and finish. They are a crew of men who have all been often tried, and of whom none has ever been found wanting in a race. To see them "paddling," one would put them down as a distinctly second-rate lot. There is very little body swing (none at all in the case of Carr and Burnell), and the stroke is consequently short in the water and the finish weak. When they lay themselves out to row hard it is quite another story. The swing forward is fairly steady, the blades all get a firm grip of the water, the leg work is very hard, and their only very conspicuous fault is that the slides are all finished a little too soon and the finish is consequently somewhat short and weak, while the body-swing is anything but uniform. They are by no means slow at the start and generally travel at a great pace for a minute or more; after that they are inclined to slack off too much, but they always come again and row well and hard at the end of the course. In fact, the way in which they have rowed when called upon for a dozen or so extra hard strokes in the middle of a course, and the way in which they have responded to the exhortation of their coach during the last hundred yards, gives one the impression that they are lazy and have not as yet really laid themselves out to their full extent over the whole course. If this is so, and if Cambridge lead them, or even press them, for a couple of miles on Saturday, some of them will feel extremely uncomfortable before they reach Mortlake. A crew which is inclined to take matters easy in this way can never race with the same power or with the same confidence as a crew which rows itself "right out" in practice. Gold may be relied upon to race with judgment, and to get every ounce out of the men behind him, so long as "5" and "6" bear in mind that it is their duty to keep the stroke long and to keep the crew together and not merely to "plug" away independently—a fault which they are rather apt to fall into when pressed. Herbert at seven has a long reach, but is not a very strong man, and, consequently, finds some difficulty in getting his blade through with the rest. He has improved considerably during the last few weeks and would probably show up better behind a stroke who gave his men a little more time at the finish. Carr slides too soon, and has little or no idea of using his weight; his leg work, however, is extremely powerful, and his blade very good as far as it goes. Burnell has improved during the last few days in the matter of swing, but he is still very short and a long way from the ideal in that respect; his work is undeniable from start to finish. Warre is rather slow in getting hold of the beginning, and is inclined to hurry forward, especially when rowing a fast stroke. Philips and Edwards are both short in their swing forward, the former more so than any other member of the crew, although he is the only man in the boat who does not finish his slide too soon. Pitman is often late with his blade and generally late with his work. When he does get hold of the beginning his work is very good for a man of his size.

Cambridge are a very much neater crew to look at than Oxford. Their body swing is more uniform, their sliding more correct, and their recovery smarter and better together. In their trials over the full course they have shown themselves capable of going for about three miles at their best pace; during the last mile they have not done so well, and when they rowed from Mortlake to Putney it looked very much as if there was a passenger in the boat for the last five minutes of the course. Their superior finish makes them travel faster than Oxford against a head wind while they are fresh, but they hardly look like staying so well. Bell is rowing better at stroke than he has ever done before. He has had a succession of little mishaps in practice which have brought the crew to a sudden standstill, and which, it is to be hoped, he will avoid in the race. It is reported that a special sliding-seat is being constructed for him which no amount of acrobatic feats will wriggle out of gear. Goldie is a good timekeeper who always maintains his form; he therefore makes a very useful "7," although he supplies a very limited amount of motive power to the boat. Etherington-Smith rows in very fair form and does sound work. Swanston is inclined to lie too far back, and his recovery is consequently somewhat strained. He rows very hard during the first part of the course. Pearson is rather short forward, but works well all the way. Brown hardly does the work that one would expect from a man of his weight. Beall is rowing extremely creditably considering the short time he has been in training. He was in the running for his "Blue" some years, and when one considers the form displayed by several of the members of recent Cambridge crews, it is impossible to understand why he was not selected before. Rennie rows in neat enough form, but hard work is not his strong point.

As I have said, it is not easy to foretell the result of the race. It is not likely that the conditions of wind and tide of 1896 will be repeated. If they are, and if Cambridge draw, as they did in that year, the Surrey station, they should win. Unless, however, there is a strong head wind, I do not expect they will get a commanding lead at any part of the course, and Oxford should win from either station if they are not led by more than a length at Chiswick.

The London Athletic Club opened the season with a short and interesting programme. For each of the challenge cups—the mile and quarter—there were only two runners. In the mile, Lutyens, who now has a curacy in town, had matters his own way after going half the distance, and in the quarter Fitz-Herbert went off at a great pace, closely followed by Jones, the holder, who ran very pluckily; but the Old Blue in the end trotted in almost as fresh as when he started, in 51 sec. These two old Cambridge presidents should win their respective championships. In the half, Lutyens was at scratch, but half way round the last lap, when he was working his way up, he got leg-weary and gave up. Hunter, the Cambridge miler, had little notion of running the race, and went too slowly at the start. But he is running better than he was at Cambridge, and Graham, the Cambridge second string, finished a good second to Coltart. In the two miles, Munro was at scratch, and he worked his way to the front splendidly, but in the last two hundred yards he was left by Haydon and Lloyd, who had a fine race home, and the latter won easily. In the sprint, Mayne, who has been doing cross-country work, ran well, and won fairly easily from a middle mark. It was very satisfactory to find such good fields and so many club men competing. The open races are practically invitations, and many applications were refused. The list of new members is very satisfactory, and the club looks as though it were going stronger than ever. There has been some talk of a Bar athletic meeting. The first step towards its realisation will have been taken when one finds students of the Inns of Court joining the L.A.C.

There was some little confusion owing to the reports of the further trials for the quarter mile at Oxford. Robertson, who was thought to be first string, tailed off, and Hollins won easily in much better time than any one had previously done this term. It turned out that Robertson was still first string. He was only making the pace, and so Hollins got second place, as he beat Stevenson. Hollins is a good runner who requires a lot of work to get fit, and there should be a fine finish between him and Carter, the Cambridge president.

It is often said, and not without a great deal of truth, that professional teams will not show their best form against amateur clubs. Hence amateurs are not given credit for the abilities they undoubtedly possess. Sheriff Dewar offered a charity shield to be played for by a leading amateur and professional team. The Corinthians altered their rules, and for the first time in their history played for a trophy. Their opponents were Sheffield United. So soon as this club was selected, protests were heard. It was not necessarily head of the League, Sunderland might beat it in the end. Furthermore, it was grossly unfair that any League club should be pitted against a club which had all the amateurs in the Kingdom to select from. It was lovely to hear this growl, which is about the first admission that amateurs can, on occasion, play. Well, those who went to the Palace saw a great game, spoiled, however, by the drifting mist that fell. The Corinthian forwards were in splendid form, and that their opponents were in deadly earnest was shown by the deliberate way in which Burnup was fouled when he had the goal at his mercy. The player seemed to think he was playing Rugby. The free kick was the only penalty awarded, and the Corinthians were given the same penalty when Fry and Oakley at back gave some samples of the legitimate vigour for which the brothers Walters were famous. The game ended in a draw after the Corinthians had shown some splendid work forward. They were not so good as Sheffield at half. In goal, Campbell was simply brilliant. I believe he is qualified for an Irish International cap. He is worth one for any country. Fry played a better game than he has over done, and Newham was the most prominent at half.

In the Association Cup ties Southampton again made a splendid fight. In meeting Notts Forest they had tough opponents, but they acquitted themselves splendidly at Sheffield, where a huge crowd met them and gave both teams a reception and an appreciation of their play which indicated that Yorkshiremen are still, even in football, as good judges of sport as ever. They cheered both sides impartially, and the fine forward play of the South team, even after their centre, Farrell, was injured, was appreciated. Indeed, Southampton had bad luck in not winning. Each side scored from a free kick for a foul, the play often being unnecessarily rough. The other tie was between Everton and Derby county. The weather was wretched and the ground very slippery, but the Derby County team were well trained and lasted well. They attacked well and lost no opportunities of scoring. They ought to win the Cup, and this is the chief reason why they will lose it.

Since Ireland beat England their Rugby team has not been in luck's way. They were beaten by Wales, whose outsides showed strong attacking power, and as the Welsh forwards are stronger than usual, and play as part and parcel of a team, instead of acting as mere feeders to the three-quarters, the match with England promises to be very exciting. In club matches Unwin again had the misfortune to be injured. This accident prevented Blackheath from doing as well as they might have done against Manchester. However, they won easily, and the three-quarters showed some pretty passing. The Marlborough Nomads continued their successes by beating Lennox, who have done so well this season. Next year this Old Boys' team should once again be one of the strongest in the Metropolis. The Old Merchant Taylors had a hard fight against Cooper's Hill. Early in the game they scored. After that they played a hard, defensive game. This year they have had to rely on a number of new hands, who are just learning how to collar. Guy's are to be congratulated on defeating Thomas's and so winning the cup. They played a much better game than is usually seen in the final. Needless to say, rejoicings were great, both at the Hospital and elsewhere.

The dispute in the swimming world has been settled, and there will be no secession of the clubs in the South. The leaders of the swimming world are puffed up with too great a sense of their own importance. They mix up the regulation and the teaching of swimming in a hopeless manner. They imagine the world cannot go round without their help. Each man's feet grows too big for his boots, and he then proceeds to tread on his neighbours' toes. If these worthies would only try to put amateur swimming on a satisfactory basis, and refrain from toasting as champions of one season the professionals of the ensuing year, some good would be done.

MAMMON.

From MOSES MOSS to BENJAMIN BOSS.

Sunday.

MY DEAR BEN,—A calm after the storm! The panicky feeling of a week ago has been followed by returning confidence. The Stock Exchange has come to the conclusion that its fears concerning foreign politics had exceeded the bounds of reason, while, on the other hand, the public have not played into the hands of the "Bears."

War Rumours Subsiding.

I have all along expressed the view that there was no fear of war between this country and Russia or France, and that diplomatic means would suffice to bring about an understanding on the points in dispute in China as in West Africa. A number of exaggerated rumours have been set about, and the most daring falsities have been concocted in order to supply sensations to certain newspapers, and to assist the "Bears" in their raids upon the stock markets. So far, they have all come to naught, and we have the spectacle of the Chinese Loan being issued with a fair chance of success, notwithstanding all the alarming news which has been propagated. As regards the loan itself, the security seems to be satisfactory, as under the administration of Sir Robert Hart a great increase in the yield of the taxes may be looked for, while, on the other hand, the opening up of China must necessarily bring about yet further progress. Personally, I should not perhaps care to embark a great deal of money in this loan, for fear that some time or other the "Bear" brigade would again put about alarming reports for the purpose of depressing the quotation, and any one who invests in it must not look upon it as a gilt-edged security. But then investors get 4½ per cent. interest, and the issue price is 90, while the drawings at 100 are a considerable attraction to those who like a little excitement of the game of chance kind. A good many of the recent rumours were doubtless hatched for the purpose of injuring the prospects of the loan, and when the issue has been made, we shall probably hear less disquieting news concerning the Russian and French demands or of coming insurrections. We have also heard a great deal concerning the alleged precarious political situation in the Transvaal, but the absurd talk about a coming insurrection in Johannesburg has fizzled out, and there remains the report that President Kruger proposes to renounce the suzerainty. His statement to the Volksraad is to the effect that when his despatch to Mr. Chamberlain is published, the people will see that they (the Boers) "are a Government." The Boers have all along challenged the name of suzerainty, but Dr. Leyds has quite recently stated emphatically that they would strictly adhere to the London Convention, and if the despatch be to that effect, it will do no harm. It is altogether incredible that Oom Paul should provoke a war with this country. In the meantime these political rumours are preventing the public from embarking in the South African market, and there is continued nervousness, notwithstanding the progress made by the industry, and the comparatively low level of prices. The West Australian section has, on the contrary, braced up, and there seems to be every prospect of increased animation, the recent shake-out having placed this department on a much sounder basis. Spanish-American relations are still strained, but the apprehension of war has subsided, and Wall-street, after the exaggerated slump, has engineered a very considerable recovery in American Rails. In the coming week the uncertainty concerning the Maine disaster will doubtless be removed, and unless very adverse developments should occur, we shall probably have a further important improvement. Home Rails, after an advance, have eased off again, yet traffics are excellent, and the Money Market is distinctly easier on the release of Government funds, while the demand for gold has temporarily stopped. Hence we have also a smart rise in Consols. The Foreign department is still under the influence of the dangers which are threatening the Paris Coulisse, while Spanish do not show much of a recovery, notwithstanding the statement that the money for the payment of the coupon has once again been scraped together. South Americans have been fairly steady, but no animation can be expected in this section until the political scares pass away. The Industrial market has recovered somewhat from the depression, but I adhere to my view that there are breakers ahead in consequence of the excessive flotations and over-capitalisations which have been indulged in.

Money and Gilt-edged Investments.

The remarkable change in the tendency of the Money Market which has taken place during the last few days is, of course, to be explained by the release of Government money and by the fact that Japan has parted with a further large sum. But I suppose that we should not have had quite so sudden a change had it not been for the wish of the authorities to give the new Chinese Loan a good send-off. As regards the proceeds of this Loan, it is expected that the bulk will remain here to pay off the indebtedness of China to Japan, and that no great dislocation of funds will occur. There remains yet the Greek Loan to launch, but it is hardly likely that much of that will be taken in this country. The ease of the Money Market, and the disappearance of some of the political clouds, are responsible for a rise in Consols, which are quoted 111⅞ for the account. Other gilt-edged securities which have recently been dislodged by fears of dearer money, such as Home Railway Debenture and Preference stocks, however, have not recovered their fall, and as they have been practically at prohibitive prices, it is as well that their level should be lower. The relapse in some of these Debentures and Preference stocks from the highest in 1897 varies from 6 to 11 per cent., the latter fall being marked in Great Western Five per Cent. Consolidated Prefs. and Four per Cent. Perpetual Prefs. From the highest point in 1897 leading British Corporation stocks show declines of from 2 to 3½, and the Three and a Half per Cent. Metropolitan is 7 lower. India Sterling stock is from 5 to 6 down from the top figure of 1897, and Local Loans stock marks a fall of 3. It is an ill wind that blows no one any good, and this reaction will provide an opportunity for investors who absolutely stick to the most gilt-edged investments. Silver has advanced to 25⅞d., chiefly owing to a cessation of American sales, but these may be renewed at any time. Rupee Paper is lower at 63⅛, and amongst the Chinese loans the Seven per Cent. Silver Loan is quoted 101, the Six per Cent. Gold Loan 105½, the Five per Cent. Gold Loan 100¾, while the new loan stands at a small premium. Japanese bonds are somewhat firmer at 100½.

Home Rails.—A Favourable Outlook.

More almost than any market, with the exception of that for gilt-edged securities, the Home Railway department feels the approach of dearer money, and this has been the reason why the recovery in these stocks has not so far been strong or lasting. Now, however, we have a distinct easing off in the value of money on the release of Japanese funds from the Bank of England and on British Government disbursements, and it may be assumed that the payments in connection with the Chinese Loan will not be allowed to unduly interfere with moderate ease. The trade outlook, on the other hand, is exceedingly satisfactory, and the traffics of the leading lines continue to show increases, while more favourable climatic conditions give fair promise of a growing passenger movement. Easter is now in sight, and the holiday traffic should assume large dimensions if the weather be at all favourable. From this point of view the Southern passenger stocks, such as Brighton "A" and Dover "A," deserve special attention, and no doubt Great Eastern stock will also respond to satisfactory returns. The appointment of Mr. Cosmo Bonsor, M.P., as successor to the late Sir George Russell in the chairmanship of the South Eastern Railway has been generally well received. He is a keen business man, thoroughly acquainted with the work, and his appointment should be a guarantee of the continuance of the progressive policy which is doing so much for this line. When all the various extensions are finished, especially the widening of the approaches to the London stations, it will be possible to carry a larger traffic without the delays which are now unavoidable at times. The issue of £500,000 in Preference stock, bearing only 2 per cent. per annum until July 1, 1900, and then ranking for dividend at 3 per cent. with the present Preference stock, represents, of course, the cheapest manner in which capital can be raised. The unfortunate accident at New Cross has temporarily depressed South-Eastern stocks, and the loss of three lives is greatly to be deplored; but this will not prove a very expensive accident all the same. For the past week the traffic increase of the whole of the Companies was £24,560, chiefly on goods traffic, so that the improvement in the atmospheric conditions will be doubly welcome for stimulating the passenger movement. The stocks of the Heavy division have on the whole been steady, and the Great Northern Deferred stocks are attracting attention. It must be conceded that York Deferred at 53 are a tempting purchase. So is also Great Central 1894 Ordinary, which is being mopped up by investors at from 40 to 41. The opening up of China, which is now at hand, gives fair promise of new markets for our industries, by which all the railways should benefit, but the lines which are at present likely to feel the effect of a particular trade boom most are the Caledonian and North British, especially the former. The shipbuilding industry is in a state of restless activity. I gather from the trade reports that at no time during the present decade has the demand for steel and iron manufactures in Scotland been so great as at the present moment, and the amount of orders for ships in hand in all the Scotch shipyards is now estimated at nearly half a million tons. Caledonian Deferred Ordinary (Coras), at the present price of 57, yields 4 per cent. per annum, with a dividend of 2 per cent. to come off next settlement, and there is now every prospect of last year's distribution not only being maintained but added to. North British Deferred have been steady at about 43½. On Saturday a meeting was held of the shareholders of the Central London Railway, at which Sir Henry Oakley, late the general manager of the Great Northern Railway, was appointed chairman of the Central London Company. This is an important and very satisfactory new departure. As Mr. Henry Tennant, who presided, explained, Sir Henry will take a very great interest in the line, to which his varied experience will be of the greatest importance. Lord Colville of Culross, who also spoke at the meeting, stated his conviction that no man stood higher in the railway service than Sir Henry Oakley, and congratulated the shareholders of the Central London on securing on their board a gentleman who, he was sure, would do a great deal towards bringing to a successful issue the works and working of this new and important undertaking. Central London fully-paid Ordinary shares have been somewhat easier, but are now bracing up again at 10¾, and should certainly be benefited by this new departure.

The Yankee Market—Calmer Views and Higher Prices.

A week ago Wall-street was in the throes of a veritable panic which had been engineered with the assistance of all manner of alarming rumours, and was taken advantage of by the ursine party to commence covering their commitments. Of course, the Senators and statesmen are for the most part actively engaged in the Wall-street gamble, and Washington purchases or sales generally precede any fresh announcement concerning the Spanish-American difficulty. Of late, Washington has been buying back, and this is perhaps the best proof that the outlook is more pacific, and that an actual outbreak of war is not apprehended. When exactly the report of the Court of Inquiry on the Maine disaster will be published it is impossible to say, but it is hoped that this will take place during the present week. Nothing is more disturbing for the Stock Markets than uncertainty, and be the report on the occurrence whatever it may, I should think that its publication will improve matters in the American department. It seems a thousand pities that all these rumours of war should now threaten to arrest the satisfactory financial and commercial progress which was being made in the United States. If the actual outbreak of war should, however, be avoided, there is as yet no fear that business generally will be damaged, and in the meantime traffics of the leading railroads continue very satisfactory. Such increases as those shown for the second week of March by the Milwaukee of $149,399, of the Missouri Pacific of $65,000, of the Missouri, Kansas, and Texas of $14,000, are certainly very favourable indications. As to the course of prices, the extent of the recovery from the lowest quotations touched a week ago will be gathered from the following table, which shows that there has been a moderate improvement:—

—	Highest in 1897.	Lowest in 1897.	Price, Jan. 2, 1898.	March 14, 1898.	March 21, 1898.
Atchison	17⅛	10	13⅞	11	11½
Do. Five per Cent. Pref.	36¼	17¾	31⅝	23¾	25⅝
Canadian Pacifics	90⅛	46¾	83⅛	82	85
Central Pacific	18½	7½	12½	11¼	12½
Denver	15½	9 7/16	11¾	11	11⅞
Do. Pref.	51⅞	37⅝	47¼	44½	45¾
Erie	19 11/16	12	15⅜	12⅝	13¼
Do. First Pref.	46½	28⅝	39¾	33½	35¾
Lake Shore	183	156	176½	192	192
Louisville	65¼	43¼	58⅛	47¾	50
Milwaukee	105⅛	71⅞	98	89	92
Missouri, Kansas, and Texas	17⅜	10¾	13	10⅞	11⅜
Norfolk Adjust. Pref.	50	22½	48¾	44¼	47
North Pacific New Pref.	61⅞	34½	61	59½	62¾
New York Central	118⅛	95⅛	110½	111½	114
Ontario	20 9/16	13	16¼	14¼	15⅛
Reading	15¼	9⅞	11½	8¼	8¾
Southern Ordinary	13	7 1/16	9¼	7¾	8⅛
Do. Pref.	39	25	33⅛	25½	26⅞
Union Pacific	35 7/16	19 13/16	26¼	24½	26⅝
Wabash Pref.	24¾	12⅛	18½	15½	15¾

Whenever the sky clears, and the market braces up again, I should think that Milwaukee, Louisville, Union Pacifics, Union Pacific Prefs., Erie, and Erie Prefs., Chesapeake and Ohio, Central Pacifics, &c., will be well to the fore. Very little notice has been taken of the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Nebraska rate case in favour of the railroads, yet it will have an important bearing upon the future working of the roads, and also upon the Stock market. It will, of course, do away with the interference by the State Legislatures with fair and just rates to the railroads, viz., rates such as to permit railroads to make fair profits. The case first came before the United States Supreme Court in the October term of 1895 on an appeal from the decision of the Circuit Court, which also had declared the interference with the railroads to be unconstitutional. The Act in question was passed in Nebraska on April 1, 1893, and was a measure of most unjustifiable confiscation and of intolerable interference. The railroads which contested the Act were the Union Pacific, St. Joe and Grand Island, Omaha and Republican Valley, and the Kansas City and Omaha, and they really have fought the battle for the whole of the railroads of the United States, which are thus protected from undue interference on the part of the State Legislatures. The troublous times have unfortunately interfered with the progress of the proposed reorganisation of the Baltimore and Ohio. It is, therefore, satisfactory to see that steps are all the same being taken to prepare the way for such a measure by taking the initiatory legal steps. I gather from the American papers that a Bill has been introduced into the Delaware House of Delegates providing for the complete reorganisation of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company. The incorporators named in the Bill are Louis Fitzgerald, Henry Budge, Eugene Delano, and E. R. Bacon, of New York; George H. Earl, Jr., of Philadelphia; Alexander Broun, John Gill, Edwin Warfield, James Bond, J. McDenny White and Thomas J. Hayward, of Baltimore. The Bill does not set forth in detail a scheme of reorganisation, but simply gives power to reorganise the road should such a thing become necessary before the Legislature meets again in 1900. It is asserted that the incorporators represent all interests. The war of rates between the Grand Trunk and Pacific roads is unfortunately still in progress, but the curious thing about it is that it does not seem to interfere with the traffis, which show large increases in the case of all the lines. The Grand Trunk had a gain of £14,968 for the second week of March, while the Canadian Pacific increase amounted to $169,000. All the same, it is little short of scandalous that at a time when prosperity is within their grasp after all the years of depression, such roads as the Canadian Pacific and Grand Trunk should take to quarrelling. Negotiations are at present going on for effecting an arrangement, and I cannot help thinking that a settlement will shortly be reached, especially as the principle of arbitration has been conceded. In the meantime, the stocks have moved very irregularly, Canadian Pacifics rallying to 85 after a sharp decline, while Grand Trunks are also above the worst at 66¼ for the First Prefs., and 74 for the Guaranteed.

Union Pacifics.

As the Union Pacific reorganisation is now being finally consummated by the issue of the new stocks, amongst which the new Four per Cent. Prefs. are to be listed this account, it may be useful to again glance at the figures which indicate the future progress of the Company after reorganisation. The total of the new Common stock is $61,000,000, while of Preference stock there is $75,000,000, and, including some 5,000,000 still to be issued, Four per Cent. Gold bonds to the amount of $90,000,000. The interest on the $90,000,000 of First Mortgage bonds will amount to $3,600,000, and that on the Preferred stock to $3,000,000, together $6,600,000. The net earnings for 1897 are stated at $6,180,000, to which, according to the 1896 report, a sum of $500,000, as income from other sources, has to be added, and this amount perhaps understates the case, as the resources in the Treasury are known to be considerable. This brings the total income up to $6,680,000, thus showing that the full Preference dividend has been earned for the year. Whether a dividend will be paid on the Preference stock just yet is doubtful, but at the present rate of progress and with the continued traffic increases, there is no doubt but that at the end of the fiscal year on June 30, 1898, the full 4 per cent. dividend can be paid, while, in view of the alliance with the Vanderbilt group and the more skilful working of the system, much greater progress may be anticipated, bringing a dividend on the Ordinary stock within measurable distance.

It is surprising that under these circumstances the Preference stock, which touched 64 before the Cuban scare assumed an acute form, should have dropped to 53, and I feel sure that this is one of the stocks that will be affected by a favourable turn in the Spanish-American dispute as much as any, and is, therefore, more particularly suitable for a lock-up. More speculative, but equally promising, is Union Pacific Common stock, now quoted 27½ here, and $18¾ in New York. The latter quotation is already ex the $15 Four per Cent. Preference stock, which are due to the Ordinary shareholders in lieu of the assessment paid. As the Four per Cent. Preference stock at 53 works out to nearly $8, this means that the present price of Union Pacifics in London ex rights should be about 19½. Surely an exceptionally low price for a stock so near dividend point! My strong advice to holders of Union Pacifics is to stick tight to them, and certainly not to sell the Preference stock they are receiving until they get 70 for it.

Foreigners and South Americans.

The Foreign market is still troubled by the unfortunate situation with regard to the Paris Coulisse, and although the evil day is put off until July 1, there is much fear that realisations in particular securities will continue. I do not attach much importance to all the rumours concerning difficulties with Russia or France over the Chinese question, and the French Press even now maintains a calm attitude, which is in strange contrast with the hysterical conduct of some of our leading dailies. Spain has scraped together the money for the payment of the next coupon, but there is always the fear that this may be the last, and it is certain that the threatened expenditure into which the strained relations with the United States have involved the country must cause most severe financial stress. Nay, it may prove the proverbial last straw on the camel's back. Spanish have been down as low as 52¾, and have now recovered to 54¾, but any unfavourable development of the Cuban question may cause another severe fall. Italians and Hungarians have improved; but Turks are not in favour, although the Greek loan is now in sight, and will furnish the much-needed supplies to the Sultan. South Americans have recovered to some extent from their recent scare, although there is not at present any inclination on the part of the public to effect purchases. Argentines are fairly steady, the 1886 Loan at 89, the Funding Loan at 88¾. It is reported that ex-President Pelligrini is on his way to this country with powers to arrange the consolidation of the debt. Argentine railway stocks have maintained the reduced level at which they arrived during the recent depression, although traffics of the Buenos Ayres Great Southern, Rosario, and Central Argentine continue very favourable. Buenos Ayres Great Southern are now quoted 151, Buenos Ayres and Rosario 72½, Central Argentine 79½, Buenos Ayres Western 11. The report of the Directors for the half-year ended December 31, 1897, of the Buenos Ayres Western is most unsatisfactory, and is attributed by the board to the failure of the maize crop, while the wheat crop was not up to expectations, more damage having been done by the drought and frost in November than was at first anticipated. The gross receipts amounted to £290,292, against £354,524 in the corresponding half-year of 1896 while the net receipts work out to £132,170, against £193,051. The disposable balance is £66,780, out of which the Board have decided to pay an interim dividend at the rate of 3½ per cent. per annum on the Ordinary share capital of the Company, carrying forward a balance of £5,530. Some further remarks in the report are of interest as bearing upon the position not only of this Company, but of other Argentine lines. It appears that the wheat crop is coming forward slowly, and there have as yet been few operations for export in consequence of the decline in prices through the heavy fall in gold. This has also affected the moving-off of the wool clip, as many of the holders are waiting for a rise in gold, and the new maize crop is described as coming on splendidly; but unfortunately the young locusts, which have been very numerous in the Company's districts, have done considerable damage to the crops at certain points. Brazilians have been steadier since the April coupon was announced, but the scare which the bondholders have had will not so easily be forgotten. Uruguay bonds have not altogether maintained top price, touching 46½, and reacting to 45¼. This fall is doubtless due only to profit-taking, as the news from Monte Video is very satisfactory. The Central Uruguay Railway of Monte Video has just issued its report for the half-year ended December 31, 1897, which, of course, bears traces of the revolution. The net receipts amounted to £67,524, against £79,215 for the corresponding half of 1896. A disposal balance of £30,138 is shown, and the Directors have decided to pay an interim dividend for the half-year at the rate of 3 per cent. per annum, carrying forward £138. The revolution which broke out in March last year is, of course, blamed for paralysing the general traffic movement, until the conclusion of peace arrangements in the month of September; but, according to the report, there has now been a revival of commercial activity, and this, coupled with a good wool clip and favourable harvest prospects in both wheat and maize, has materially improved present prospects. Some rumours have recently been current of coming trouble between Costa Rica and Nicaragua, but authentic information is to the effect that there is no real danger of any outbreak of hostilities between these two countries. In the meantime, the Costa Rica Electric Lighting and Traction Company appears to have met with a satisfactory reception on the part of the public. The Company takes over the local Electric Lighting Company in San José, the capital and principal commercial city of Costa Rica, and the electric light system in Cartago, and, considerable as are the profits of electric lighting Companies in this country, it may be presumed that they will be exceeded by a Company in Costa Rica, which has no competition to fear. Chilians have been quiet, but Peruvian Corporation stocks have risen, the Prefs. being quoted 9⅞.

The Kaffir Circus—Still Nervous.

I related last week how certain "Bear" operators tried to make capital out of the melancholy news of the assassination of Mr. Woolf Joel in order to bang Barnato stocks, and I predicted that this trick would not succeed, and no more it has, as prices of Johannesburg Consolidated Investment and Barnato Consols have since rebounded to the level at which they stood before the catastrophe. But we have had other influences which have again prevented a material improvement in the South African department. The friction between President Kruger and ex-Chief Justice Kotze finally culminated in a manifesto issued by Mr. Kotze, in reply to an utterance by Oom Paul, in which the President invoked an unmentionable personage whom he is very fond of quoting. Finally, the "Bears" invented the story that Kotze had been arrested, this report circulating late on Wednesday afternoon in the street. Ursine operators are beginning to make a practice of depressing values just before the street market closes, the final low quotations being fixed by two or three habitual "Bears," and therefore altogether unreliable. While the story of a coming insurrection in Johannesburg has now been fully contradicted, and is disclosed as a discreditable "Bear" trick, the proceedings at the closing session of the Volksraad have been utilised for all they are worth for the purpose of depressing prices. The rumour, however, that the Volksraad had in secret session authorised President Kruger to repudiate the suzerainty whenever this country should be implicated in a European war, is obviously an invention, which is fully proved by the refusal of the Raad to authorise the raising of a loan of £6,000,000 sterling. On the other hand, President Kruger has evidently indited a despatch to Mr. Chamberlain, in which he makes a quibble over the suzerainty. I cannot bring myself to believe that he can be mad enough to throw up the London Convention. This would, moreover, be altogether opposed to the public statement made by Dr. Leyds, that the London Convention would be scrupulously adhered to. In the meantime the various rumours are preventing a revival in business, which would be fully justified by the progress which has been made in the mining industry. Rand Mines have fluctuated between 27 and 28⅜, and the other shares chiefly dealt in were Consolidated Goldfields of South Africa and East Rands. Chartered shares are firmer on the announcement that Mr. Cecil Rhodes has left the Cape for this country, and he is expected to be present at the meeting of the Chartered Company, which has been fixed for April 21. De Beers have been steady at 26 9/16, New Jagersfontein at 7⅝.

Golden West Australia.

A distinct improvement has occurred in the "Kangaroo" market, and prices show a general advance, partly owing to a resumption of purchases by Adelaide, which seems at last to have digested the somewhat excessive amounts which it had taken. Crushings have been satisfactory, although the number is smaller this week, the following being the list:—

—	Tons of Ore Crushed.	Oz. of Gold.	Assay of Tailings per ton.
Great Boulder Proprietary	1,435	3,273	—
Cue One	790	590	4 dwt.
,, (Plates)	—	662	—
St. Agnes Gold Reefs	180	149	3 dwt.
Londonderry	320	477	—
North Boulder	359	436	—
Westralia and East Extension	1,675	1,104	84 grs.
Belle Vue Proprietary	167	333	—
Ivanhoe Gold	830	1,324	15 dwt.
Cuddingwarra	175	150	—
Wealth of Nations	260	140	—
Associated Gold Mines	1,800	1,500	—
Burbank's Birthday Gift	470	645	—

The news from the Lake View Consols is encouraging, and according to Mr. Callahan's reports, the 300-ft. level is improving in both the north and south drives. The north shows about 3 ft. of ore, sampling from 1 to 2 oz., while in the south drive the full width is in ore which has bulked for some days 7 oz. and 13 oz. per ton. Mr. Callahan expresses the view that the ore bodies continue in size and in richness at depth. The decline in Lake View Consols has now been recovered, the price being again 9½. Ivanhoe shares dropped to below 5 just before the special settlement was completed, but then strongly recovered to 5⅜. This is one of the best purchases in the Westralian section. The amalgamation scheme of the sub-Companies of the London and Globe Finance Corporation is now practically adopted by the Companies, viz., Wealth of Nations, Wealth of Nations Extended, Mainland Consols, Hannan's Golden Treasure, Hannan's Golden Group, Paddington Consols, and Golden Crown. This decision was come to by large majorities, and there are now merely some technicalities to be amended in the case of the Mainland Consols and Golden Crown. There is no doubt that the amalgamation will prove to be in the best interests of the shareholders. London and Globe Finance shares have hardened to 1 9/16. The news from the Wealth of Nations is favourable; 260 tons have been crushed for a yield of 140 oz. of gold, and it is also stated that there is ample water to run 20 stamps, and that they will continue sinking. Most excellent reports are again to hand from the Lady Shenton Mine, and it is evident from the intelligent cable messages that are being sent by the manager, Mr. Rayfield, that he is the right man in the right place. The following is the latest cablegram:—

> North drift of level No. 4 extended to 123 ft.; the vein is fully 4 ft. in width, high-grade ore: good gold can be seen each breaking down. Rise upon the vein started on the northern boundary. Level No. 3—The vein is fully 3 ft. in width, carrying fair sprinkling gold. Winze in No. 4 level is now down 17 ft.; still looking grand. The developments and workings continue to look exceedingly well.

This cablegram shows that the mine is being thoroughly proved as containing rich ore throughout by recent developments, and another good monthly crushing is again in sight. Advices from the adjoining Florence Mine are equally satisfactory, and also bears upon the Lady Shenton. Last week I mentioned a cablegram, according to which the reef was cut in the Florence 36 ft. from the boundary of the Lady Shenton. Now the news is to hand that it has been cut 49 ft. past the Shenton boundary in the No. 3 level, and where cut, shows 2 ft. of first-class ore. Lady Shenton shares have advanced to 2 9/16, Florence to ¾; and, from all accounts I have been able to gather, the Lady Shenton is one of the best mines in Western Australia, equal to the Lake View and Ivanhoe, while the Florence promises in time to become a second Lady Shenton. Both mines are situate in the Menzies district, and will, of course, greatly benefit by the railway from Kalgoorlie to Menzies which has just been opened. According to the latest cablegram, the Ivanhoe Mine cleaned up on March 15, 1,324 oz. of gold having been obtained from 830 tons, the tailings assaying 15 dwt. per ton. Dulness has prevailed in the West Australian Goldfields group, West Australian Goldfields being quoted 1⅞, Hampton Plains ⅞. In the Market Trust group the meeting of the Northern Territories Goldfields of Australia has attracted most attention, and both the Chairman and Mr. Horatio Bottomley were listened to with rapt attention by the shareholders. The information afforded by the former was subsequently supplemented by Mr. Bottomley, who, amongst other statements, mentioned that he had received advices according to which in the Eureka group of mines there is upwards of £3,000,000 in value of ore in sight and ready to be crushed. He also stated that his information was that in the Howley group there were over £2,000,000 of ore in sight. A further point which he made bears on the market position, viz., the discovery that he and various City firms and friends with whom he is in relation are at present the actual possessors of 380,000 shares, as against the total capital of 300,000 shares. His playful allusion to the festive "Bear," for whom he professed great admiration, created much amusement. One of the statements made by the Chairman, which was of special interest, is that there were negotiations in progress for the purpose of floating two more subsidiary companies for working the Eureka and another group of mines. Northern Territories shares have braced up, and are now quoted 4⅞. The Directors of the West Australian Joint Stock Trust have issued their report for 1897, in which the amount of profits for the year is stated as £279,851. Adding to this the balance of undivided profit from 1896, and deducting the interim dividends paid amounting to 20 per cent., and providing for the claims of the founders' shares, the amount of profit is increased to £317,098. The reserve fund has now been increased to £100,000, and the Ordinary shareholders are to receive a further dividend of 20 per cent. The Directors propose to distribute quarterly interim cash dividends at the rate of 20 per cent. per annum, commencing on April 1. The Directors of the West Australian Loan and General Finance Company have also issued their report, in which they state that the profit for 1897, after bringing in various amounts from 1896, and deducting the four interim dividends at the rate of 20 per cent. per annum already paid amounts to £176,184. The Directors recommend that the reserve fund be made up to £50,000, and that a scrip dividend of 20 per cent. be distributed amongst the Ordinary shareholders. In this case, also, the directors propose to restrict the payment of cash dividends to 20 per cent. per annum, distributions at this rate being made quarterly and commencing on April 1. The services of Mr. Charles Kaufman have been secured by both these Companies, which, it is expected, will largely benefit by his co-operation and advice. Associated Gold Mines, after a decline, are firmer again at 3 11/16. Great Boulder Proprietary have been steady at 21s., the crushing having been satisfactory, and Golden Links are slightly firmer at 1 1/32 on an official communication. Hannan's Proprietary have also hardened to 16s. 9d., and Brownhill Central, after a sharp relapse on the difficulty with the clearing house owing to the dealings being limited to the fully-paid shares, have rallied to 1⅞. Golden Horseshoes have advanced to 7 5/16. The London and West Australian Exploration group is also firmer, Hannan's Brownhill having risen to 7¾. The news from this mine is exceedingly favourable, and latest advices state that they are about to cut the lode at the 470-ft. level, and that the whole of the machinery will be in full swing in April, so that the output will be largely increased. It may therefore be anticipated that the shares will rise to a much higher level. Sons of Gwalia are still very firm at $2\frac{1}{16}$. A sharp improvement has taken place in Boulder Main Reefs to $1\frac{11}{16}$ on a cablegram from the property stating that the vein had been cut at the 230 ft. level. and looked splendid. I hear that the Great Boulder Perseverance lode has been struck in the adjoining Golden Pike property, whereupon the latter shares have risen to $\frac{7}{8}$. As the strike has been made at considerable depth, this is a most important discovery. The Great Boulder Perseverance lode is, of course, a most valuable one, which has caused the shares in this company to rise to $3\frac{3}{8}$, and it is evident that we are on the eve of a further important improvement in Golden Pike shares. With regard to the Burbank's North a cablegram has been received from Professor Nicholas, stating that a profitable reef 18 in. in width, has been struck on the Burbank's boundary. Peak Hill have declined to $2\frac{1}{2}$ on the alluvial difficulty, which appears to specially hit this property more than others. None of the leading mines, however, have alluvial gold, so that no trouble can arise, for instance-with the Lake View Consols, Ivanhoe, Hannan's Brown, hill, Lady Shenton, &c. As a matter of principle, however, the question is a most important one. On this subject I am writing further on.

The Alluvial Question in Western Australia.

So much has of late been said on the alluvial question in Western Australia, that it may be as well to state the position clearly. It will be remembered that great excitement has been caused throughout the goldfields by the publication of an Amendment to Clause 103 of the Mining Regulations, which limits the depth to which alluvial miners may go, on a lease, to 10 ft. The Hon. E. H. Wittenoom, Minister of Mines for Western Australia and acting Premier, deserves every support for the strength of purpose he has shown in protecting the interests of the leaseholders and of the English Companies owning properties in the colony. The following statement, made on the highest authority, puts the matter in a nutshell:—

Hitherto the law has been that a leaseholder owns everything within his four pegs, as set down in his lease instrument, with the exception of the reservation contained in Section 36, which allows a miner to go on to the lease under certain conditions. Deep alluvial was struck by several of the leaseholders in the vicinity of Kanowna, Bulong, and Kalgoorlie, at depths of over 100 ft., and the alluvial miner immediately proceeded to exercise his rights. It was soon apparent to the Minister of Mines and the West Australian Government that if the alluvial diggers commenced to sink deep shafts within 50 ft. of the workings and machinery houses of a leaseholder, nothing but complications and accidents would ensue. Moreover, if the news became spread about that leases which were going and profitable concerns were pegged out under another title, the shareholders and investors in the other colonies and in England, might be so disgusted with the apparent insecurity and duality of title, that they would transfer their investments to countries giving them more security of tenure. The Government took the only course which was open, and which was not absolutely ultra vires, by preventing these men going deeper than 10 ft., with the expressed purpose of suspending the question until Parliament met. It was never intended that this 10 ft. was to be an existing law, or to solve this difficult problem. The idea of the Government is that Parliament alone can do this. Of course, the action taken has been done entirely to protect leaseholders, investors, and capitalists, as the West Australian Government have always tried to make it certain that the title any one obtains for their money shall be as secure as possible.

It may be as well to here point out that throughout his term of management of the Mines Department Mr. Wittenoom has endeavoured to secure to investors a full and sound title:—Firstly, by his strenuous exertions in favour of capable and proper transfer and registration offices, so that there might be no flaw in the titles, for which he was subjected to much abuse; secondly, by the relaxation of the labour conditions; thirdly, by the regulation which compelled that applications for forfeiture should be accompanied by a deposit of £25, to prevent blackmailing by men of straw; and lastly by the amendment of Regulation 103, which simply sets forth the method of applying Section 36 of the Act. The action of the Acting-Premier, although violently attacked in certain quarters, has been endorsed and supported by all the thinking and leading men of the colony, and also throughout South Australia, Victoria, and New South Wales, from the centres of which he has received most complimentary telegrams. Latest cable advices from the colony state that the West Australian Government fully maintains the attitude assumed with regard to the alluvial question, but that it is willing to consider any reasonable suggestion that may be satisfactory to all parties. There is no doubt that Sir John Forrest, who has now returned to the colony from Melbourne, will fully endorse Mr. Wittenoom's action, and I understand that the latter will shortly take his departure for London to take up the post of Agent-General for West Australia.

Indian, Australasian, and British Columbian Mines.

In the Indian mining section the only upward movements took place in Ooregums and Champion Reefs, while Mysore Gold are somewhat lower. In Australian mines, other than West Australian, Broken Hill Proprietary are firmer at 44s.; but Mount Lyell have reacted to $13\frac{1}{2}$, Mount Lyell North being quoted $3\frac{1}{16}$. In Charters Towers shares there has been a rise in Mill's Day Dawn United, but Brilliant and New Queen are lower. New Zealand mines have been remarkably dull, and Consolidated Goldfields of New Zealand have fallen as much as $\frac{1}{2}$, Waihi, Woodstock, Glenrock, and Kauri are all lower, almost the only improvement taking place in Hauraki. In British Columbian shares changes have been slight. London and British Columbia Goldfields and Hall Mines have improved, and British America Corporation shares have recovered to 21s. On the other hand, Klondike and Columbian Goldfields, British Columbia Development Association, and New Goldfields of British Columbia have eased off. Amongst Mexican Mines a moderate improvement has been established in Consolidated Goldfields of Mexico to $1\frac{1}{16}$, while Grand Centrals are firm at $1\frac{11}{16}$. It would not be surprising to see greater activity in the Mexican section in the near future. Campana are being dealt in at $\frac{3}{4}$. Rio Tinto have advanced to 29, on favourable dividend rumours, other copper shares sympathising.

Governor Mackintosh on British Columbia.

The Hon. C. H. Mackintosh, Lieut.-Governor of the North-West Territories, arrived home a week ago by the Campania for the purpose of conferring with his colleagues on the Board of the British-America Corporation. For some time people have been anxious to learn something of the properties acquired by this important Company, and some extracts from an interview which a representative of the Citizen has just had with Mr. Mackintosh will, therefore, prove interesting. The Governor expressed a very high opinion of the Rossland district in British Columbia, and mentioned the names of a number of mines owned by his Corporation. This is what he had to say on this head:—

The Corporation purchased the Josie, adjoining the Le Roi on the north-west; the Poorman, closely allied with the Le Roi, Centre Star, and War Eagle; No. 1, adjoining the north-west boundary of the War Eagle; the Nickleplate adjoining the south-eastern boundary of the Centre Star; the West Le Roi, on the western boundary of the Le Roi, Josie, and No. 1; the Golden Chariot and Great Western adjoining the Nickleplate; and also secured options on the Legal Tender or Olivette, south of the Le Roi and Centre Star. The latter, being in legal dispute, was not in a position to give title. All these properties have been thoroughly examined by mining men, not experts in the professional sense of the term. Added to this, the very best expert opinions have been procured.

Mr. Mackintosh explained that all these properties were acquired at very moderate prices, and he also gave conclusive reason why the Le Roi Mine, on which the Corporation had an option, was not purchased. In fact, he stated that the Josie, which has been acquired, proved that it could produce as valuable ore as the Le Roi. After giving the reasons why the Alaska Company's business was not taken over, Mr. Mackintosh stated that the Corporation controlled mineral areas, comprising fully 2,000 acres, in the Salmon River, Wild Horse Creek, Sophie Mountain, and East Kootenay districts, many of which, he said, would prove very good value. During all last year responsible agents of the Corporation were in the Yukon country, where it holds some very valuable claims. Mr. Frank Bowker, who will be the Company's representative there, and who has had an experience of ten years in that country is now en route to Yukon, and early in the summer some very good news is expected. Mr. Mackintosh laid special stress upon the confirmation of his former statement that stories of alleged starvation and wretchedness at Dawson City and other places were questionable. He also furnished some very useful information upon the question of smelting in British Columbia. It appears that within a brief time the ores of Rossland will be smelted for 12s. per ton. When this takes place the Columbia and Kootenay groups of mines (concerning the acquisition of which the Governor told an interesting tale) alone will be able to produce 600 tons per day at a profit of from 14s. to 16s. per ton, as the ore body is phenomenal. In conclusion, the Governor furnished excellent reasons for the policy of the Corporation of not putting all their eggs into one basket or paying excessive prices for any one property. The appointment of Mr. Carlisle, for several years the chief mineralogist of the Province of British Columbia, as chief mining engineer of the Company, is also a step in the right direction, and the whole statement made by Mr. Mackintosh is such as to inspire confidence in the "British commercial principles" upon which the undertaking is to be conducted.

New Enterprises and Issues.

The prospectuses of the following new enterprises and issues have been placed before the public during the week:—

Chinese Imperial Government Four and a Half per Cent Gold Loan.—The Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, of 31, Lombard-street, London, and the Deutsch Asiatische Bank, Berlin, invite subscriptions for £16,000,000 sterling bonds, at the issue price of £90 per cent., in bonds to bearer of £25, £50, £100, and £500 each, with half-yearly coupons attached for interest at the rate of 4½ per cent per annum. The loan is for forty-five years, redeemable at 100 by forty-five annual drawings through the action of an accumulative sinking-fund, and is specially secured by a charge upon the Imperial Maritime Customs Revenues of the Treaty ports of China, subject to loans at present unredeemed. The loan is exempt from all present and future Chinese taxes.

Aplin & Barrett and the Western Counties Creameries, Limited.—This Company has been formed to acquire and carry on the business of Aplin & Barrett, Cheddar cheese and butter merchants, Yeovil, with which will be amalgamated the businesses of Edwin Down Marden; the Western Counties Creamery, Marston Magna, Somerset; and Maynard & Sons' sausage manufactory, now carried on by Maynard's Pure Food Company, Limited, Yeovil, Somerset. The capital is fixed at £100,000.

This is a mixture that had better be left to the inhabitants of the Western counties. The capital is excessive, and altogether the issue is too rich for the digestion of an average investor.

The Smelting Corporation, Limited.—This Company is formed for the purpose of acquiring from the Burnham Syndicate, Limited, their business and patent rights for the treatment of refractory sulphide ores of silver, lead, zinc, gold, &c. The patents acquired are for the United Kingdom, United States of America, Canada, and other British colonies, and also Mexico; in addition to which a right is acquired to 80,000 fully-paid shares of £1 each in the West Prussian Mining Company, Limited, and the vendors interest in the smelting works at Llansamlet, near Swansea, with the benefit of all existing contracts for ore. The capital is fixed at £600,000, in shares of £1 each, of which 350,000 shares are taken by the vendors in part payment of the purchase money.

United Breweries of Western Australia, Limited.—With a capital of £150,000 divided into Preference and Ordinary shares of £1 each, this Company is formed for the purpose of acquiring the businesses of the Stanley Brewery Company, Limited, Perth, and the Port Brewery Company, Limited, Fremantle, W.A.

Brewing business has not been very successful in Australia up to now, and why these two Companies, both presumably doing well according to the prospectus, should wish to combine is not very apparent. It is not a venture to be recommended in any way.

The Omnibus and Tramcar Cigarette Automatic Supply Company, Limited.—With a capital of £100,000, this Company is formed for the purpose of supplying the public with cigarettes on omnibuses and tramcars.

This is a Company the success of which is somewhat doubtful. Most cigarette-smokers carry small cases holding their favourite brands, and are not likely to give them up for they know not what.

The Copper Estates of Western Australia, Limited.—This Company has been formed with a capital of £100,000 in £1 shares, to acquire the freehold property known as the Wanerenooka Copper Mine, and an option to purchase other copper estates in the same neighbourhood, situate near the township of Northampton, Western Australia.

The properties acquired are large in extent, but apparently very little development has been done. I would warn my readers that Mount Lyell's are nowadays not so scarce, and from the statements in the prospectus, this does not appear to be anything like one.

My Letter Box.

The following are replies to inquiries from various correspondents:—

Government, &c., Bonds.

Bath, C. S.—Yes, I think it would be advisable to hold your Perus for an improvement. Liverpool Reader.—Thanks. I am glad you are making money in Uruguay bonds on my advice. I was strongly in favour of the Old Loan when at 40, and the price has since been 46¼. Beaulieu.—For the investment of your £1,000 I should think that Chilian Fives (1) and Mexican Sixes (2) would be the best purchase from the point of view of safety, if you require high interest. Uruguay bonds (4) are also a progressive stock. As regards Bulgarians what is chiefly to be considered is the possibility of further trouble in the East, and you can never make sure as to the payment of the interest in the case of war.

Banks, Trusts, and Financial.

Tobacco.—1. I do not see why you should sell these bank shares. British Columbia is doing exceedingly well, and this bank should participate in the improvement. 2. I have no information about the electric lighting Company. An Investor, Manchester.—I do not think much of this bank, and perhaps you had better sell. W. F., Stranraer.—I cannot reply by letter. The rule in the case of subscriptions to Companies is that you can only cancel applications before receiving allotment letters. You ought clearly to have withdrawn your application by telegraph. You have placed yourself anyhow in a doubtful position. If the Company let you off it will be an act of grace. R. A. C.—I give you Punch's advice to those about to marry—don't. High rates of deposit are not compatible with safety. You had better invest in sound securities. J. W., Pontefract.—I do not think you will gain much by connecting yourself with this concern. Bob.—I always advise my readers to deal only through members of the Stock Exchange, and not through outside concerns such as that mentioned by you. Simon.—Everything depends upon the class of policy under which you insured in the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, and I cannot advise you until I know its provisions. I suppose there would be a certain surrender value. I cannot reply by letter. A. G. W., Bolivia.—I do not think that the bank in question offers sufficient security. You had better deposit your money with a London bank. Wexfordian.—The bank in question is a third-rate institution, but it should be sufficiently safe for small amounts. E. B.—What you require has been forwarded to you, and I hope that you will succeed in making this person disgorge. I have not heard of the individual before.

Home Rails.

Sugar Cane.—The prospects of the Metropolitan District Company are excellent, and I do not advise you to sell any of your holding. If you will lock them up for a little time, you will probably see them take a jump. The other stock is also very promising, but there is no reason to make a change. X. Z. Y.—Yes, Dover "A" and Coras are a good purchase. For a lock-up, Great Central 1894 Ordinary are also very promising.

American and Foreign Rails.

A. K., Manchester.—If you can afford to hold your American Rails through the fluctuations which may possibly occur, you will see them very much higher. F. O.—There may be further adverse rumours, and further sensational reports, concerning a possible war between the United States and Spain, but personally I think that a settlement will finally be reached. You may, therefore, see your American Rails go lower for some days, but a final recovery is certain.

Old False Teeth Bought.—Many ladies and gentlemen have by them old or disused false teeth, which might as well be turned into money. Messrs. R. D. & J. B. Fraser, of Princes-street, Ipswich (established since 1833), buy old false teeth. If you send your teeth to them they will remit you by return post the utmost value; or, if preferred, they will make you the best offer, and hold the teeth over for your reply. If reference necessary, apply to Messrs. Bacon & Co., Bankers, Ipswich.

MINING SHARES.

Spes.—I am not sufficiently posted about the North Mount Lyell to be able to recommend a purchase of the shares, and certainly cannot promise a dividend within twelve months. J. W., Brighton.—Kaffirs Consolidated are certainly not worth buying. Timolus.—Yes, you will do well to hold all your shares Nos. 1 to 4. Tom.—No; I have always held a most unfavourable opinion of Monastery Diamonds (1), and warned my readers against them when at a high price. I do not even now recommend a purchase of them at their present rubbish price. No. 2 seem to be a fair lock-up, and as regards West Australian shares I must refer you to my letter. Leamington.—I do not advise a purchase of No. 1, but Woodstock-Transvaal (2) are in favourable position, an excellent report on the property having been made by an independent expert. There is a prospect of an improvement. 4. I should not advise a purchase just now. 5. Very cheap; you cannot lose much, and might make a good profit. C. U.—I do not believe in this reconstruction. Hydro.—I do not think much of this concern, and if you can get out without a loss you should sell. Polo.—Hold New Crœsus shares for the present. Viking.—I cannot possibly tell you whether you are actually liable, but you should do your best to get out of this liability, and not throw good money after bad. If there is any liability it would, of course, be only in proportion to your holding. The document is returned. C. B.—I have always had an unfavourable opinion of Mountain Coppers, and still hold this view. You had better sell. Nitram.—Unfortunately, South African mining Companies generally pay dividends only two or three months after their declaration. This is also the case with the Porges Randfontein.

INDUSTRIAL SHARES.

M. E.—There does not appear to be any particular reason for selling these co-operative shares at present. Cantanvarus.—As regards your investments Nos. 1 to 13, it cannot be said that "they are safe stocks for a quiet investor to buy." For instance, No. 7 are very speculative, and No. 5 might eventually prove doubtful. The others may safely be held for the present. Forty.—I do not by any means consider these debentures a catch. Bolter.—There is no official quotation for Belgravia Hotel shares, and there is no market for them. E. W.—No reason to sell these shares. Jersey Pear.—No reason to get out of these Stores shares. Lancastrian.—1. I do not think that prospects are at all satisfactory. All the other shares mentioned are more or less speculative, but No. 4 is the safest of them all. Box, Leeds.—A fair industrial investment, but no catch. A. C., Liverpool.—Millars Karri and Jarrah Prefs. should be a good investment, as the Company is undoubtedly doing well. The rumours of amalgamation with another Company appear to be unfounded. R. D. N.—You were quite right to hold the shares in question on my advice. 1. No option but to hold these debentures, which should come right. 2. Hold Bovril Ordinary; the Company is reported to be doing well. F. E. D.—I should advise you to realise if you can get any premium, but these quotations are often altogether nominal. Twyn.—From the point of view of infusing fresh blood into a local concern of this kind, I should think that the agreement should be entered into. The document is returned. Worried, Belfast.—It almost looks as if tyre and cycle shares of the better class have practically reached bottom, and I strongly advise you not to sell but to hold for a possible improvement. Motor.—I should advise you to get out of the Great Horseless Carriage Company, and not to throw good money after bad.

MIXED INVESTMENTS.

Aurelius.—1. The price of British Motor Cars is nominally $\frac{3}{4}$; but I do not think you could sell at all. 2. The Prefs. are not quoted. 3. No. An Altruist.—The Ferreira (1) is one of the best South African mines. The various shares, Nos. 2 to 7, are well selected, and there is no reason to sell. Stiema.—A. A local concern about which it is impossible to obtain any information here. 2. These shares should be held for a recovery. 3. The Knights mine is doing very well, and the shares should also be held. B. I really cannot do better than refer you to my letter. H. C., Canning Town.—No, I do not advise a purchase of Carlyle Gold. No reason to sell the other shares at present. S. G. G.—No reason to sell No. 1; but I should not like to be a "Bull" of English Cottons (2) for any length of time. I do not like St. Augustine (3), and never have. Sell No. 4 if you can. R. A. W.—The Company is a wealthy American insurance institution, and I have nothing to say against its stability. Personally, however, I should prefer to insure with an English office. Fritzomania.—1. I do not think there will be any fall in Consols for the present. 2. The investments which can at present be bought to yield $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. may fall considerably in capital value, and I can therefore hardly advise you to make a change. 3. Certainly hold Baltimore and Ohio stock, which should certainly improve when the war scare is over. 4. Not yet. G., Bath.—1. The Lady Shenton Mine paid 20 per cent. dividend in 1897, and double this dividend is expected for 1898. The shares should certainly be held, and the market moreover is very strong. 2. Yes, Union Pacific Prefs. are an excellent purchase at the present price, and if you lock them up you will see a rise of $10 as soon as ever the war scare is over. 3. A $4 dividend is expected. 4. A fair brewery investment, but no catch. 5. This brewery stock is not tempting under present circumstances. Lengthy.—1. I should not like to express an opinion, the prospects are doubtful. 2. The information I possess concerning the Kalgurli Great Western does not enable me to recommend these shares to you. 3. I really must ask you to take your own decision in this matter, the future is somewhat doubtful. 4. Hold Humber Extensions. 5. I do not like Beeston Tyre Rims, and never have. As regards the list of investments Nos. 6 to 20, from which you wish to make a selection, Colonial Finance Corporation (15) and London and West Australian Exploration (6) appear to be the most promising. Beyond these, however, I consider such shares as Hannan's Brownhill, Ivanhoe, Lady Shentons, and Florence, as most promising. Truth, Radnor.—There is at present no option but to hold the various railway stocks you have got from A to I. In due time they will doubtless improve. I do not know whether the Carbolic Smoke Ball Company is yet in existence, but I need hardly repeat that I do not at all like this concern.

A CHAPTER ON INDUSTRIAL STOCKS.

The importance which the market for home industrial enterprises has assumed is my excuse for devoting a special paragraph to it. It is true that I have for some time deprecated the excessive flotation of industrial companies, which in many cases takes the form of conversions, the chief defect of which is enormous over-capitalisation; but the public, in view of the disturbed state of foreign politics, and the uncertainty of the South African market, have elected to embark in these ventures to such an extent that quite a big market has grown up for industrial stocks, and I have of late received so large a number of inquiries for advice on such securities that this new departure will meet the wishes of many. One of the features of the moment is the large speculative dealing in Allsopp Ordinary, which have finally dropped to 151, rallying to 155 on the announcement of a capital increase to £3,300,000, by the issue of 110,000 new shares of £10 each. The Ordinary stock is in future to become a preferred Ordinary, entitled to a maximum dividend of 7 per cent., and the dividend on the new shares is to be paid out of the surplus earnings. The latter are not, however, to receive any dividend until the reserve fund has reached £1,100,000. I cannot, however, see that this is sound finance, and I should have thought that a debenture issue—for which there is still authority—would have been preferable; but I suppose that there will be all the more opportunity for the stockjobbing, which has been a feature of the Allsopp market for some time past. The Incandescent Gas Light shares were not at first benefited by the statements made at the meeting of shareholders, and some of the jobbers started banging the stocks. In this they were not, however, finally very successful, as inside support was given, with the result that the Ordinary were finally quoted 115-117, the Preference 100-101. The remarks on the new Welsbach burner and the new electric mantle were, upon the whole, encouraging, but it remains to be seen what the electric lighting industry will have to say about the latter. The prospectuses of a number of Industrial Companies are ready to be rushed out the moment the Lipton allotment is out, so as to catch disappointed subscribers upon the rebound. Amongst these are, I hear, Dr. Tibble's Vi-Cocoa and The Kodak. The Lipton shares, by the way, are quoted at $1\frac{1}{8}$-$\frac{3}{8}$ premium, the Preference at $\frac{3}{16}$-$\frac{5}{16}$ premium, and the Debentures at $6\frac{1}{2}$-$7\frac{1}{2}$ premium. Probably the "Bears" will be punished, but I should think that it will be difficult eventually to maintain these high premiums, although the tale goes that Sir Thomas Lipton made his friends, who are to get large allotments, promise not to sell for two years. By the way, I should like to know more about Lipton's American business. Shareholders in the English Sewing Cotton Company are still waiting for the special settlement, and the quotation of the shares is now $\frac{11}{16}$ to $\frac{3}{4}$ premium. It seems likely, however, that when the settlement comes off the price will decline. A pleasing feature amongst recent announcements was that of a dividend of 6 per cent. on Paquin Ordinary, which, with the 4 per cent. already paid, makes 10 per cent. for the year, while £7,642 is placed to reserve, and £2,259 carried forward. It is not surprising that, under these circumstances, the Ordinary shares should have risen to $1\frac{1}{8}$-$\frac{1}{4}$, and I really should like to know what caused all the "Bearish" talk a month or two ago. Anglo "A" are of course entirely dependent upon the American market, and to speculate in them is equivalent to taking a hand in Yankee Rails, as any movement in Wall-street at once reacts on Anglo "A." The present quotation of this stock is $12\frac{1}{8}$-$\frac{1}{4}$, and there are not many people who have made money out of this speculative counter. I have for some time been protesting against the gamble in oil shares, and I am not surprised that Russian Oils should have fallen again to $21\frac{1}{4}$, while the Prefs. are quoted 11. A correspondent invites my attention to a comparison between Schibaieff Six per Cent. Prefs., now quoted par to $\frac{1}{16}$ premium (the Ordinary standing at $\frac{1}{4}$-$\frac{3}{8}$ premium) with Russian Petroleum £10 Six per Cent. Prefs. at 11. My informant considers that, apart from their preferential claim of 6 per cent., Schibaieffs have a further deferred interest in that they take one-third of all profits after the Ordinary have received 10 per cent.; also that the Schibaieff, being a refining Company, provides a better security than the Russian Company, which only owns the crude oil business, and is therefore dependent upon the wells of the estate. West Australian timber shares are in favour, and deservedly so, but it is evident that there was nothing in the rumours of the Millars Karri and Jarrah Company amalgamating with one of the other concerns, so that M. C. Davies now stand at $1\frac{5}{8}$ only, while Millars are firm at $3\frac{1}{4}$. The only other West Australian timber share is Canning Jarrah, quoted $\frac{1}{4}$ premium. Schweppes have become a very dull market, the Deferred at 10s. 9d., the Ordinary at $1\frac{3}{16}$, while Bovril Ordinary have been steady at $\frac{15}{16}$, the Deferred at 13s. I referred some time ago to the action of the shareholders in the Rhymney Iron Company against Sir Henry Tyler and his fellow-directors. A circular just issued by Mr. Hern recapitulates the grievances of the shareholders, and I hope that the committee will succeed in forcing the hand of the Board, the members of which appear to have sold all the shares they have been holding. The enterprise should certainly be placed under the control of very different men. I have always taken the view that the United Alkali Company was not promising from the point of view of the investor, as it dealt with an industry that was subject to great fluctuations in view of other processes which were bound to be discovered. The £10 Prefs. are now quoted 9, the £10 Ordinary $1\frac{3}{4}$, and the view which I have taken is fully confirmed by the statements made at the meeting that the Company had to abandon a very large amount of the old "Le Blanc" type of plant, which had become obsolete. This rendered necessary the erection of works for the manufacture of their alkalies by the newest processes, and so history will repeat itself. The same dulness has reigned in the Cycle section during the past week as has been noticeable for some months past, but it should not be forgotten that we are now approaching the springtime when an increased demand for machines will, doubtless, be experienced. In fact, my information is that a number of Companies are very busy. Some of the concerns which were floated during the time of the boom will never recover their position, but there are others—the shares in which are quoted at very low prices—which will certainly take a start one of these days, and shareholders in these should, therefore, not part with their holdings. In the meantime, we see Humber Ordinary quoted at 12s. 6d., ditto Extensions 7s., Singers 13s. 6d., Swifts 13s. 9d., Dunlop Deferred 11s. 6d., ditto Ordinary 17s. I may be able in the near future to give particulars of some of the neglected shares which are at present worth picking up. Several correspondents have drawn my attention to a communication issued by G. & S. Reed, 10, Bush-lane, Cannon-street, E.C., in which they offer 100 fully-paid shares of £5 each in the Cambridge, Limited, at £4 7s. 6d. per share, which they state is a low price. They represent this, in fact, as an exceptionally favourable offer, but I gather from the tape quotations that at about the same time Cambridge shares were quoted 3 only. Under these circumstances I advise my readers not to avail themselves of this tempting offer.—Your affectionate uncle,

PRINCES' RESTAURANT, PICCADILLY.—The fashionable resort. Finest wines and cuisine only. Table d'hôte luncheon 4s. 6d. Dinners à la carte, Suppers 5s. Mang. Directr., G. FOURAULT, from Benoist.

MOSES.

Bexhill-on-Sea.—The Mentone of England.—The Sackville Hotel, an ideal winter and spring residence. Special inclusive terms till Easter. For tariff, &c., apply to Manager.

All Rights Reserved.]

QUEER STORY.

AN ACCIDENT AT AINTREE.

[I have been rather amused to receive the following letter from a "constant reader" of Truth who lives at Birkenhead:—

—— Mersey-avenue,
Birkenhead, 14/3/98.

Dear Sir,—Bein a constant reeder of Trooth and avin notised as yer sumtimes prints troo storeys—wich I see yer dun it sevril times lately—I ventures ter send yer the enclosed. As I don't set up ter spell or rite grammar, I'll arsk yer to get wun of yer starf to work it up inter sootable littery form, as yer dun with that story bout the Docter larst Jennary.—Yurs trooly,

As will be seen from the letter, my correspondent is not a gentleman with any claim whatever to the literary or grammatical faculty; which, indeed, he himself, with becoming modesty, admits. But, for all that, I have not carried out his suggestion that I should turn over his enclosure to one of my staff to "werk up inter sootable littery form." On the contrary, I am presenting it to my readers precisely as received; feeling that there is a dramatic raciness and humour in this ill-spelt and ungrammatical document which, if it were edited on "littery" lines, would inevitably disappear. The only liberty I have taken with my correspondent's "copy" has been in punctuating and paragraphing it. Without this, parts of it would have been nearly unintelligible. Here it is.—Ed. Truth.]

"I'll begin by sayin as the story I'm goin ter tell is or troo, as them as appens ter be in the no will bare me witness; wich there ain't menny sech left, 'cos orl this appen mor'n thutty eers ago, bein in the urly sixteys. I won't say zackly wich eer, nor will I giv the reel names of the osses and riders. Not cos there cud be enny harm in doin it, but cos it seems ter be the fashun not ter; leastways, not in the Trooth storeys. Wich I dersay yer, Mr. Edditer, Sir, hez good reesons fur it. Wich I might venshur to guess them reesons hez sum conneckshun with the libel lors. Peeple bein ridiklusly tucchy, and juries no more rellyible than 2-eer-olds. Wich I was downright shamed, that I was, wen a Lankashur jury made yer stump up five hundred larst eer fur an hoversight. Yer hez my sinseer simperthy over that job—yer hez indeed, Mr. Edditer, Sir.

"But ter go on with my storey. Wich its about the Gran Nashunal, wen that grate raice wos in its parmy days. Things wos very different then from wot they is now. Thur wos jyents on the turf in those days, as sumwun sez. Sportsmen wos sportsmen then. They swore arder; they drank arder; they road arder; they betted arder. My guvnor, in ooz service I then had the onner to be staible-boy, is a good egsample. Wen e swor—wich wos wenever e open is mouth—e'd use langwidge wich wos more egspressive than yer can think. I wos orfen lorst in admirashun at is wunderful flo ov wurds. An Joe—he wos ed groom—I've menny a time erd im say, 'Ther aint 2 ways about it. The Capting's a born orritor.' So e wos. The sware wurds cum to im as natral as jumpin cums to a flee.

"Ruswarp was is name—Capting Ruswarp. E'd been in the Army, but e'd retired wen e cum into is munny, on wich e live like a toff, an keep a dozen steeplechaisers. E wos as good a judge of orseflesh as ever I see, an as dairin a rider. I doubt if e ad is eekal acrorse country in Ingland. Nuthink funk im, from a canal to a bullfinch. An I bleeve e wos never so appy as wen e wos riskin is nek over sumthink extry stiff. Owever, xcep for ridin em a bit too ard, e wos verry kind to is osses, an verry fond of em. So wos they of im. Quite luv im, they did. And the way theyd orl prik their eers, and wicker with pleshur wen e cum inter the staibles wos a reglar treet.

"Now the Capting ad wun scores of steeplechaises in is time, but e'd never wun the bloo ribbing of the crorse country kalender, as they corl it—meanin, of course, the Gran Nashunal. An e wos natrally as keen as mustard to win it. An that eer e ad as good a charnce of carryin it orf as enny man ever ad. For e wosn't relying on wun candydit—avin, in fact, 2 strings to is bo; and 2 wunderful good strings they wos. Wot's more, they wos in on most easy terms, wich orl the noin wuns recognize; fur they wos maid first and seckond favrit the moment the axeptances appeer.

"I'll giv the naims of these 2 as Angler and Nettie—wich they wosn't really that, enny more than my guvnor's naim was Ruswarp, or than annuther gent, oom I shall now av occaishen to menshun, wos reelly naimed Dingley. But, as I've sed abuv, I'm putting fictishus naims orl throo; though the naims is the only fictishus things about it. This Dingley wos well-nown as a breeder of steeplechaisers and as a gentleman rider; wich, to tell the trooth, gentleman ain't the rite naim for im, bein a snobb of the very wust and most pernounced descripshun. The guvnor orfen ad deelins with im, an, in fack, had bort Angler from im as a 5-eer-old. But e didn't like im enny more than the rest of us did. An wun reeson for our dislikin im—in addishun to is bein a narsty snobb, as I've sed—was is skandlus crool way with osses.

"Not but wot e wos a verry sicksessful rider. Is cullors cum to the frunt in crorse-country events as orfen as most. But this wos freekently brort about by blaggardly crool ridin, an sech tortshur wos, in menny caises, inflicted by im on is pore beests, as ole Nick isself might be ashaimed of.

"Now sum fokes will tell yer that kindness is the only way by which yer can get a oss to do orl e noes for yer. But that is orl swipes and skittles, as the sayin is. Yer can friten im into this by croolty just as orfen as yer can coaks im into it by kindness. Of coorse, this croolty dodge is shaimful and damnerble, an no deesent-minded man would ever try it on. But that ain't sayin it isn't freekently sicksessful; as the igsperience of many brootal riders—e.g., Dingley for wun—abundantly prooves. Orl is osses went in dedly feer of im. Yer coodn't see im neer em without notisen that. Wenever e mount wun of theese pore beests, it was pittiful to see ow it tremble and shiver in evrry lim. An well it mite. Dingley ad a art of concreat. An if it sooted his purpose, or if e lorst is wool, as the sayin is, e wood ride a oss till he killed it, without hesitashun. Wy, I myself av twice seen im brake the back of is mount in a steeplechaise—wen the waiger e wos ridin for wos worth more than the oss e was ridin. An on annuther memmyrible occaishun e was neerly linched by the crowd at Worrick* for savidgely lashin an spurrin a spent oss, till it akshally fell from sheer exorstshun. Arfter that e found it proodent to be more kairful, and to try is and at sertin less open dodges; wich I'll say more about them laiter on.

"Avin deskribed Dingley, I'll now deskribe the 2 osses I've menshuned—Angler and Nettie. Angler was a fine, big oss, a bloo roan in cullor, 17 ands at the withers, an stout and strong in proporshun. E look a little bit evvy in barrel. But e ad a good turn of speed, eeven on the flat; and acrorse country, wen the goin was sticky, e wos a baddun to beet, if there ever wos. Dingley ad soled im to the guvnor (as one of is grooms arfterwards tell Joe on the strict qt) becors e ad sech a devvle of a munkey that Dingley coodn't ride im. That may av been; but if it wos, it wos orl on account of Dingley's treetment of im; Angler bein a oss wot woodn't stand croolty. But wen e wos kindly treeted, e wos mannidgeable enuff, as we proove. For Angler adn't been in our staibles six munths before e wos as gentle a beest as enny rider (wich I don't refer to them as egspecks a oss to av no more spirit than a bike; such pursons bein about) need wish to crorse.

"An now I'll tell yer about Nettie. Nettie's a pritty name, ain't it? But not prittier than this nailin little mair deserve. I ain't given to dror the long bo. And wen I say this, I'm only sayin the sober trooth—she wos the gratest bewty in oss flesh I ever see. In fack, we oners corl er the bell of the staibles. Imadgin to yerself a trim little laidy, standin bairly fourteen ands; a rich chesnut throo-out, without a fleck of enny other culler. Imadgin a barrel of ormost puffick proporshuns, covered with mussel, yet not losin by that saim wun jot of its shaipliness. Imajin legs wot Lanseer mite av been proud to put inter wun of is pickshures; and pastuns by comparison with wich the neetest ankle that wos ever sett orf by pettycuts wood look corse and clumsy. Imajine the prittiest ed that ever graiced an eekwine nek, an large brown Is, sorfter an tenderer an likwider an brillyanter than the britest pare of gal's eyes as ever maid yer art thump. If yer can imadgin orl this—wich, Mister reeder, I taik leeve to dout—yer may form some ideer of wot Nettie wos.

"An now I cum to the raice. My guvnor wos to ride Angler isself; wich is ridin wait, bein twelve stoan, zackly corryspond with wot Angler ad to carry. But for a long time e wos unsertin as to oo shood go up on Nettie. At larst, oo do yer think e pitch on? Wy, nun uther than that snobb Dingley. We in the staibles wosn't too well pleesed wen we erd that this crool broot wos to ride our favrit. But, of corse, the guvnor's wurd was lor, and nun of us daired breethe a sillyble against it. There wos no denyin neither that, as far as ridin went, Dingley was the best meejum wait steeplechaiser in Ingland at the time. An much as we ait the feller, and artless blaggard as we think im, we cooden dispewt that e wos more likely than enny wun else to pilate Nettie ome. But, as I sez to Joe, the ed groom—Joe bein an affible bloke an wun not abuv listenin to the vues of is understrappers—'Mark my words, Mr. Joseph, sir. E'll knock the mair about an arf kill er, an triten er out of er seven sences. And eeven if she win this raice, she'll never no more be enny good for anuther.' An Joe, e spitt three times on to the flore, wich wos orlns his way wen about to say sumthink waity; and then e arnswer: 'There's no use torkin', Sam. The fyat's gon forth. An wen that appen, as yer ort ter no by this time, lad as yer are, the Meedes and Pershuns ain't in it with the guvnor.'

"Well, the day of the raice cum. An a fine day it wos. An a tremenjus crowd there wos at Aintree to see it. The feeld was a big wun that eer. 23 faiced the starter, an it was sum time afor e cood get em away. But at larst the flag fell an they wos fairly orf. I won't deskribe the urly part of the raice; altho I follered it cairfully with my glarses and still remember every inch of it. It wos not until the larst ½ mile that enything notisable occur. By that time ⅘s of the feeld wos well beet, only about 5 bein left in the runnin. An it look to me—wich the guvnor afterwards bor me out in my impreshun—as if Angler, tho still goin gaim and strong, wos beginnin to feel the strain of is wait, and I sez to myself, I rekllect, 'Twon't be long before e've shot is bolt, I'll bet.' E wos then (I may remark) oldin 2nd plaice, that snobb Dingley, on Nettie, lyin close up, a few yards beind.

"At the larst jump but 2 the leeder fell and was out of it. Angler cleered it, but only just. In fack, I see is oofs graise; wich then I see, for sertin, is charnce wos up. For even if e negoshated the next leep—as, in is spent condishun wosn't ighly probbible—there wood still remain the larst and stiffest of orl, wich there ain't never no ope for an exorsted oss to cleer. Nettie was now farst drorin up. In anuther 20 strides or so she was level with Angler. But it look to me as if she, orlso, wos a trifle distressed, altho she evvidently ad mor runnin in er than pore ole Angler. An I sez to myself, 'It don't matter,' sez I 'Angler's beat, sertinly. But it's orl in the staible,' I sez, 'for Nettie's bound to win.'

"But there was dainger threttnin wich I adn't notised. Anuther oss—Orang Otang, or some sich outlandish naim—suddinly begin to moove up farst from the reer. An about ¼ mile from ome he cort our 2, and then began to forge a-ead. Gaim ole Angler maid a desperit effut to arnser is challenge, but in vane. E was now fairly beet, and was losin ground on every stride. The raice ad dissolved itself into a dool between Nettie an O. O.—wich I will enceforth so designate im, bein an orkward name to rite.

"The mair, owever, looked to av ad pritty neer enuff of it. And she seem dispose to let er challenger giv er the go-by without a struggel. Dingley used wip and spurr on er for orl e wos worth. But it ad very little effeck. Then e suddintly stop is floggin taktiks. E lay is rite and gently on er nek just abuv the withers. That wos an unexpekted thing—to see this crool blaggard coaxin. An the effeck wos wunderful. Nettie bounded forward at a farster paice, an er flaggin strides seemed ter av akwired qwite a nu life. There wos every prospeck of a ding-dong finnish. And every time that Nettie appear to flag, I see Dingley—oom I wos wotchin throo my glarses—pat the mair's nek with is rite and.

* It is to be presumed that my correspondent means Warwick. —Ed. TRUTH.

"As I've orlreddy sed, Angler ad looked to be fair beet; an I wosn payin much attenshun to im, keepin my Is fix on O. O. and Nettie. Wot wos my supprize, then, wen I suddenly ketch site of im makin a grate spirt, and gainin on the 2 leeders ands over; im wot a few sekkonds ago ad seemed to av shott is bolt, if ever oss ad. Forward e flu. The croud rored. Them was thrillin moments. Nettie and O. O. ad just cleered the larst jump, nek and nek; an up cum Angler less than 20 yards be-ind. I see the guvnor tryin to pull im together for the leep. But the gaim ole oss ad the bit between is teeth, and was beyond orl controle, as wos eesy to see.

"If yerll bleeve me—an its gospel trooth I'm tellin—Angler went edlong at that larst jump, and took it, so ter speck, in is stride. And then on e went in ot pursoot of Nettie and O. O., oo was bairly 15 yards a-ead in the strate.

"The crowd rored louder than ever as Angler ganed and ganed. An then dam if the old chap—wich was completely out of and (the guvnor tryin in vane to take im up on the orf side)—didn't make strate for the neer side, rite between Nettie and the railins. Evvry wun sorter shivvered, an I myself shut my Is, seein there was bound to be a collishun an a smash up: there bein no room on that side for Angler to get throo.

"An wen I open my Is agen, wot d'ye think I see? A site wich fill me with orror. For Angler ad cort that snobb Dingley by the arm with is teeth, and wos bitin and shakin im with savidg fury. I ope I may never see such a site agen. There was ded silence everywhere, orl the crowd, as I think, being momentry parilised with orror. The guvnor was doin all e nu to pull Angler bak. But e adn't no more power than a baib over the maddened beest. And then cum a worse thing yet, for orl in a moment, Angler stumble an cum evvily down, still grippin Dingley's arm with is teath and draggin im from the saddle with im in is forl.

"Fortchnitely, the guvnor was thrown over the oss's ed, and fell cleer an un-urt; as we soon see, wen e spring to is feat, and rush to Dingley's assistance. But Angler was before'and with im. As the oss lay on the grasse, pantin, an almost at is larst garsp, e turn back is bloodshot Is an ketch site of Dingley, lyin prostrit close beside im. E give a sharp kry ov fury. And then, with a larst effut, e role over twice and flung is ole wait on is unappy victim.

"It was a dreffle site. I've as tuff a stummock as most. But I feel sick an ill wen I see it, an my ed swim round and round. And then wot with orl the wimmen screemin, an the crowd rushin from every quarter to the sene of the axydent—it was too orful for words. An orl I can say is: Evven grant no such thing may ever appen at a raice meetin, when I'm look on, agen . . . .

"It wos sum time befor they wos aible to extrikate the crushed and lifeless Dingley from under the evvy karkis of the ded Angler. For ded they both wos; as ded as mutten; the oss appairently avin killed isself by maikin that last tremenjus, desperit effut, in is spent and exorsted stait. An it wos not for sevril ours arfterwards that I erd, from Joe's lipps, the explinashun of is sudden, savidge attak on Dingley. It was supplide by the follerin serkimstance. In the parm of Dingley's rite-and gluv, with its ed fixed in the letther, they diskuver a smorl drorinpin, the point of wich wos cuvered with blood. This leed them to inspek Nettie's nek, and there, shure enuff, just in front of the mair's rite wither, wos a lot of small punkshures, evvidently maid by this barbrious instriment.

"'There karn't be no doubt about it,' sez Joe to me, avin spitt on the flore with eaven more than is ushual emphysis, 'Angler's Is wos shrooder than the guvnor's, or than enny wun else's for that matter, and e see how that snobb Dingley—wich I won't use no wuss word of a ded man—was tortchurin the mair. An wen, in is spent condishun, e maid that wonderful spirt, wich corst im is life, it wos orl becos e wos resolve to saive suffrin bewty from the ands of er cowerdly pirsikutor.'

"That wos Joe's opinion. But I orter say, that the guvnor e uttly ridikule the idee, an corl Joe a dam fanciful idjut. It was just revenge, the guvnor sed; there bein no dout that Dingley ad treeted Angler very crool, wen e owned im, and osses, like ellyfants, bein annymals as never forgets. And that's the explinashun of the insident that wos genrally serclated an axepted.

"But, with orl du respeck to the guvnor, I rarther incline to Joe's vu. An I like to think of it—eeven at the corst of bein corled a dam fanciful idjut—as a sort of eekwine luv affare. Wich if it wosn't that, wy didn't Angler go for Dingley sooner, instedd of waitin till e wos spent, and thus riskin is charnce of a shure revenge? I ventchured to point this out to the guvnor; but e only larf and say 'Annymils orfen acks on impulse, Sam, same as the wimmen; an the impulse don't orlways take em wen and ow yer expecks. But as for your theery, its orl gammon and spinnidge, my lad; avin its orrigin in your eated imadgination. And I'd vise yer to go an cool your ed in a staible bucket till yer gets yer proper senses.' Wich, bein the guvnor, I cood'n contrydickt im. But I still olds the saim vu."

ART NOTES.

WHY is it, I wonder, that I nearly always think of Mr. Podsnap when I pay a visit to the Galleries of the Royal Institute in Piccadilly? Possibly it is because that eminently respectable Marine Insurance broker, being fully conscious that he set a brilliant social example in being particularly well satisfied with most things, and, above all other things, with himself, never could make out why everybody else was not equally well satisfied. Anyhow, it is a somewhat similar impression that the average Royal Institute Exhibition makes upon me. It persistently suggests a feeling of placid self-satisfaction on the part of its Council and its members. "We have thriven exceedingly in the Art way," they seem to say, "and are firmly of opinion that all is for the best in the very best of Picture Galleries." In the only world Mr. Podsnap would recognise, it will be remembered, too, that everybody got up at eight, shaved close at a quarter-past, breakfasted at nine, went to the City at ten, came home at half-past five, and dined at seven. And so at the Royal Institute, it seems to me, that Art has been resolved into an eminently respectable performance, with brushes and colours, on canvas and cardboard, suggestive, in some indefinite way, of getting up at eight, shaving close at a quarter-past, breakfasting at nine, and all the rest of it. Which is only another way, after all, of saying that the Eighty-second Exhibition of the Royal Institute of Painters in Water Colours is a rather humdrum and unexhilarating one. This, I should add, is primarily due to the needlessly large number of drawings which are fitted and wedged together with such ill-advised ingenuity on the available wall space.

Six hundred and forty-six water colours! How happy one might have been with the forty-six had the other six hundred only been kept discreetly away. As it is it required more time and perseverance than the ordinary critic could possibly spare to separate the sheep from the goats. Fortunately, however, there were compensatory moments for those who persisted in their quest. Wandering through the artistic Sahara, and wearied with exhaustive sketches of conventional mediocrity, depressed with repeated instances of over-elaboration, lack of unity, and inappropriate-

Look to your Drains.—Have the Drainage and Water Supply of your residences Examined and Certificated by Carter Bros., 65 Victoria-st., S.W. Consulting Sanitary Engineers Hotel Cecil, &c' ness of medium, one came now and again on delightful oases, fresh and green and grateful. It was verily like happing on a bubbling spring in a sandy waste to halt in front of such pictures as Mr R. B. Nisbet's "Waiting for the Tide," Mr. Peppercorn's masterful "Cornish Harbour," Mr. Dudley Hardy's "Last Load," and Mr. Carlton Smith's "By the Fireside," though an over-elaborate technique to some extent mars the merit of the last-named. How welcome, too, was Mr. Austen Brown's "By the Sea," daring, nay defiant, though it be in its colour scheme. Mr. Podsnap, one feels sure, would have promptly swept it behind him with that peculiar sweep of the right arm with which he so often cleared the world of its most difficult problems. "I don't want to know about it," that eminently commonplace gentleman would have said. "I don't choose to discuss it; I don't admit it." Another picture he would have swept behind him, well-nigh as a personal affront, would have been Mr. John Gulich's "Violin Concerto." This work stands out most effectively amongst the acres of weather-beaten mariners, and haystacks, and mills in a mist, and shrimpers returning, and Marys driving the cattle home by moonlight, by which it is surrounded. We are shown in it an orchestra, with endless tiers of 'celloists and bass-violists—if that be the term—and violinists, whilst in the front of the picture stands the tall, svelte figure of a young girl, lost in the rhapsody of the music she is evidently playing with marked success, for hovering over her is seen the ghostly, mysterious figure of Fame, crowning her with a garland. It is of this picture of Mr. Gulich's, I venture to say, that most visitors to the galleries of the Royal Institute are likely to carry away a vivid impression. Perhaps it is the certainty that Mr. Percy Buckman's "Artemis" would have brought a blush to the cheek of Mr. Podsnap's "young person" that made me number this drawing also amongst the comparatively small number of really good ones that were to be seen. For humour one had chiefly to depend on Mr. Edgar Bundy and Mr. Frank Dadd. And another picture which is assured of popularity is Mr. A. Chantrey Corbould's "Whoa m'lad—whoa!" a drawing of a coach-and four in difficulties at the commencement of a hill, which we know is a bad one, thanks to the ingenuity of the artist, who has painted in on the roadside, level with the kicking leaders, a board bearing the now familiar legend, "To Cyclists—This hill is dangerous." This is the sort of subject of which the public never wearies, especially when it is painted with such dash and go and intimate knowledge as Mr. Chantrey Corbould exhibits in the present instance.

MUSIC.

MUSIC AND MONEY.

THE intelligent foreigner who happened to be present at the Albert Hall last Wednesday and heard Signor Franco Leoni's "Gate of Life," must have marvelled that such a work should have been selected as the only novelty of the season by the Royal Choral Society, when so many vastly superior compositions by British musicians are still awaiting a hearing. The foreigner, and small blame to him, entirely fails to understand our insular ways. Art in this country is in the closest association with commerce. It was Gounod who first pointed out that at St. James's Hall there was one night in simultaneous progress a Monday Popular Concert, a negro minstrel entertainment, a restaurant, a ball, and a billiard match, all under one roof. This extraordinary aggregation of utterly incongruous pursuits did not surprise Londoners, who were used to it, though it struck Gounod as odd. The Albert Hall was founded for the culture of science and art. But the Albert Hall Council had, it need scarcely be said, nothing whatever to do with Signor Franco Leoni's performance. Nor, except in a sort of secondary capacity, had the Committee of the Royal Choral Society. In short, we are a commercial nation, and even in art matters we act up to our principles. It seems that when Messrs. Novello gave up their choral concerts at St. James's Hall, they entered into some sort of arrangement with the Royal Choral Society, by which the firm had a certain interest in one or two concerts. The idea, of course, was to introduce to London some of Messrs. Novello's publications, and as this eminent firm long held the control of the principal novelties of the great provincial festivals, the arrangement down to date has worked fairly well. But many more experiences such as that of last Wednesday, and the arrangement will have to be modified or readjusted.

There is, of course, nothing to offend, although there is certainly nothing to astonish, in Signor Leoni's "Gate of Life." The chief objection to its inclusion in the season's work of our premier choir is that it is utterly unfit for so vast a space as the Albert Hall and that the time devoted to it was to the exclusion of far better British music. As undertaken by a smaller choir in the provinces it might be quite in place. The choral workmanship, often in unison, is elementary enough, but, like the sugary solos and duets, it is lost in the big building. The fierce warriors of Rome, to mellifluous melody redolent of opéra bouffe, sing such soul-stirring lines as:—

> The gods we serve our lives shall crown
> With love and mirth and war's renown;
> Rejoice, the builder's work is done,
> Behold the Temple of the Sun.

They even dance, accompanying the mildest "saturnalia" with (according to Messrs. Novello's analyst) "the word "'Ah,' first in a mere whisper and later on in excited tones, sung in three octaves." Why they should thus "sing in three octaves" is a secret of the composer. Then comes a storm of so transparently unreal a character that it would hardly alarm a butterfly, whereupon the Romans illogically determine to kill Christians. It is true those worthies partly deserve their fate, by their persistent indulgence in hymns and in the bouche fermée beloved by Gounod. At this point in dramatic cantatas we usually expect a miracle. But we have none, unless it be that the voice of Miss Palliser converts to Christianity that doughty Roman centurion Mr. Ben Davies. So the Romans put the hymn singers into the arena, and to the words

> See, see! they come! The desert lions come!
> With lightning leap they bound across the sand, the Christians are gobbled up. This zoological cantata was conducted by the composer.

Far better and more important was the revival of Beethoven's "Ruins of Athens" for the first time in its integrity, save as to the transposition of one or two of the numbers. If it had been more fairly treated by conductors in days gone by, the "Ruins of Athens" might now be a popular work. It is perfectly true that Beethoven's idea of Dervish and Turkish music must be a fruitful source of amusement to the musical archæologist, and that the spectacle of a couple of gentlemen in the organ loft, the one vigorously pounding a big drum, and the other emulating Mr. "Pony" Moore on the tambourine, might, to the uninitiated, have excited a suspicion that the performers had strayed in from a neighbouring circus. But the fine voices of the gentlemen of the Albert Hall Choir told admirably in the always favourite Chorus of Dervishes—which, of course, was encored; and the Turkish March, the recently-discovered and almost Mozartian interlude for wind, the melodious Chorus of Freedom, and the final Apostrophe to Music, all went splendidly. Sir Frederick Bridge and his forces deserve full credit for a capital revival of a work which, although not a masterpiece, is one which the world would not willingly see further neglected.

The following letter from a very young lady who does not desire her name to be published speaks for itself:—

> In the issue of your paper of the 10th inst. you published a letter relating to the so-called "free scholarships" of a certain college which shall be nameless. Another of their rules is that the students holding these "scholarships" shall not withdraw without permission (which, needless to say, is never granted), unless they pay what are called withdrawal fees. Those are the fees for the current term. Have they any legal right to extort the same from students?

The Greatest of all Pianofortes.—The Steinway Pianofortes. New York and London.

No, my dear young lady; and if any such absurd demand is made upon you, you may safely refer the "director" to the personage whose name is offensive to ears polite, but who is supposed to be the patron saint of lawyers. It would, however, be interesting to learn how long this "free" scholarship fiction is to continue before it attracts the attention of the authorities, and of the managers of respectable daily papers who insert the misleading advertisements which really form the bait for the miserable gudgeon.

Mr. Robert Newman's orchestral concerts at Queen's Hall came to an end on Saturday, but an extra performance with a strong Wagner programme will be given on April 30 for the benefit of the director. This year I fear the Saturday afternoon concerts, like many similar entertainments, have been more or less hurt by the cheap Sunday symphony performances, despite the fact that, in the course of the season, Mr. Newman considerably reduced his prices of admission. The truth seems to be that the public have tasted blood with the cheap Sunday orchestral concerts, and the tendency is to reduce prices all round. On Sundays admission is free, and the best reserved seats are 3s., while on Saturday afternoons the prices range from 1s. to 7s. 6d. Yet the programmes are practically the same in each case; Mr. Wood conducts both Saturday and Sunday concerts, and the orchestra, excepting as to a few "extras," is on Saturday and Sunday almost identical. The public therefore crowd to the Sunday performances, and are apt to neglect the more expensive entertainments on Saturdays. As to the Lamoureux Concerts, the band is precisely the same as at Mr. Wood's Saturday afternoon concerts, although the prices when the French conductor directs the performance are further raised about 25 per cent., namely from 7s. 6d. to 10s. 6d. Yet many music lovers are of opinion that, on a comparison between the two, Mr. Wood would be found the better man.

There was again a falling off in the attendance at the Crystal Palace on Saturday. This may possibly be the result of the superior attractions of a football match which was in progress in the grounds. Certainly even the musical enthusiast might have preferred football to listening to the novelty, a "symphonic prelude" to an opera entitled "Kit Marlowe," in which Mr. Herbert Bedford, a youthful but clever amateur, has sought to commence his career at about the point at which Wagner left off in "Tristan und Isolde." The ways of the young in music are ever mysterious. One ambitious student starts life with a choral symphony, another with a Brobdingnagian opera which extends over six consecutive nights. Mr. Bedford will probably be a good deal more interesting when he drops Wagner, and depends upon any individuality which he himself may possess. He would also do well to try his hand at much simpler music. He might, indeed, take example from his clever wife, the gifted lady once so well known as Miss Liza Lehmann, and who has distinguished herself as the composer of the beautiful song cycle "In a Persian Garden," which is so great a favourite at the Popular Concerts. Mr. Lamond on Saturday gave a fine interpretation of Beethoven's E flat concerto, and Mr. Santley sang.

Mr. and Mrs. Henschel, fresh from triumphs in the United States, made their first appearance this season at St. James's Hall on Monday in a very interesting vocal recital. Another vocal recital of Irish songs has been given by Mr. Denis O'Sullivan. Irish music has indeed played an important part in concert affairs during the past week, and on St. Patrick's night Mr. Santley excited the wildest enthusiasm by his splendid delivery of "Who dares to speak of '98?" The Joachim quartet party have taken part in both Popular Concerts, drawing, however, a far larger audience to the Monday than to the Saturday performance. The Royal College students have produced a new Symphony in B minor, a recent work from the pen of the distinguished Italian composer, Martucci, who, when a young man twenty-one years ago, appeared at one of Signor Arditi's concerts at St. George's Hall. The symphony is very advanced and abstruse, but it cannot be taken into serious consideration until it is heard under more satisfactory conditions. At the Royal College it was simply used to play the people out, or, in other words, it was given at the fag end of a long programme, when both executants and audience were tired.

Opéra bouffe by Offenbach, which delighted our fathers, has proved to be to the present generation champagne which has lost its effervescence. Accordingly, Mr. D'Oyly Carte was wise to withdraw the "Grand Duchess" from the Savoy and to replace it on Tuesday by the "Gondoliers." There are other operas of the Gilbert and Sullivan series which might also usefully be revived, such, for example, as the "Princess Ida" and also "Ruddigore," which on its first production somehow missed its chance. The "Gondoliers," however, is most welcome, despite the fact that by its long run only seven years ago it must be still fresh in the memory of playgoers. The cast at the Savoy is, with the exception of Miss Brandram, entirely new, and, if I may judge from the dress rehearsal on Monday (for I, of course, cannot now speak of the public performance on Tuesday night), the men, at any rate, will be found more than the equals of their predecessors. It is something to have in Messrs. Kenningham and Lytton two youthful kings of the mythical Barataria, both of them, moreover, excellent vocalists; a Duke of Plaza Toro in so courtly and experienced an actor as Mr. Elton, and a Grand Inquisitor full of such high animal spirits as Mr. Passmore, particularly as his exuberance of facial gesture and by-play was checked by the watchful eye of Mr. Gilbert. The ladies will not, of course, cause us to forget Miss Decima Moore, Miss Geraldine Ulmar, and Miss Jessie Bond, although, as the contadina Gianetta, Miss Emmie Owen once more showed herself a delightful actress, an intelligent vocalist, and a dancer of rare grace. We could all once more admire Sir Arthur Sullivan's felicitous use of Italian and other dance forms, such as the tarantella, the fandango, the inimitable cachucha, and the gavotte; while Mr. D'Oyly Carte has mounted the second act so luxuriously that he evidently intends the opera for a run. Indeed, the Pinero-Carr opera, upon which Sir Arthur Sullivan is spending his "holiday" in the Riviera, cannot, I suppose, now be expected till the early autumn. To produce it in high summer, with the dead season immediately to follow, would be to court the fate of "Ivanhoe," its predecessor among serio-comic works from Sir Arthur Sullivan's pen.

LETTERS ON BOOKS.

MY DEAR MR. WYNDHAM,—You have read the life of Tennyson and discovered from it that he had but one fault—the fault Guinevere finds with King Arthur:—

> He is all fault who hath no fault at all,
> The low sun makes the colour.

You will be relieved, therefore, to find in Professor Max Müller's most interesting recollections, "Auld Lang Syne" (1), that Tennyson was mortal. Here is the Professor's account of the poet as his guest in Oxford:—

> My wife, a young housekeeper, did her best for our honoured guest. He was known to be a gourmand, and at dinner he was evidently put out when he found the sauce with the salmon was not the one he preferred. He was pleased, however, with the wing of a chicken, and said it was the only advantage he got from being Poet Laureate, that he generally received the liver-wing of a chicken. The next morning at breakfast we had rather

(1) "Auld Lang Syne." By the Right Hon. Professor F. Max Müller. With a Portrait. (London: Longmans, Green, & Co.) Price 10s 6d.
(2) "The Vintage." A Romance of the Greek War of Independence. By E. F. Benson. With a Map and Eleven Illustrations by G. P. Jacomb-Hood. (London: Methuen & Co.) Price 6s.
(3) "Her Wild Oats." By John Bickerdyke. (London: Thomas Burleigh.) Price 6s.
(4) "Dick Rivers." By Annie Thomas (Mrs. Pender-Cudlip). (London: F. V. White & Co.) Price 6s.
(5) "Sentimental Education." By Gustave Flaubert. Translated from the French, with an Introduction by D. F. Hannigan. (London: H. S. Nichols, Limited)
(6) "Harry Richmond." By George Meredith. Revised Edition. (London: Archibald Constable & Co.) Price 6s.

plumed ourselves on having been able to get a dish of cutlets, and were not a little surprised when our guest arrived to see him whip off the cover of the hot dish, and to hear the exclamation: "Mutton chops! the staple of every bad inn in England!"

Not the least interesting and suggestive story in the book is Emerson's account of his brother's votive sacrifice of himself to the service of God:—

My brother and I were both meant for the ministry in the Unitarian community. My brother was sent by my father to Germany (I believe to Gottingen) and after a thorough study of theology, was returning to America. On the voyage home the ship was caught in a violent gale, and all hope of saving the ship and the lives of the passengers was given up. At that time my brother said his prayers and made a vow that if his life should be spared he would never preach again, but give up theology altogether and earn an honest living in some other way. The ship weathered the storm, my brother's life was saved, and in spite of all entreaties, he kept his vow.

Surely this ought to find a place in a tract as another instance of a brand snatched from the burning by the very hand of Providence itself. The Professor seems to have honoured with interviews a good many crowned heads, but with the Queen he was made to realise "the divinity that doth hedge a king." While he went to Windsor by command, his portmanteau naturally went home to Oxford. As he could not appear at dinner without a wedding garment he begged Prince Leopold to excuse him to the Queen, and the horror of the Prince at being asked to go on such a monstrous mission left upon the Professor a profound impression of the discipline maintained by her Majesty over her children. I think you will like "The Vintage" (2), an interesting and admirably written romance of the Greek War of Independence, by E. F. Benson. It is an opportune rehabilitation of Greek vigour, valour, and patriotism, but, on the other hand, it shows that, at least in those days, the Greeks did not leave the Turks far behind—did not leave them behind at all—in truculence and treachery. Ferocity and faithlessness of this revolting kind seem to have been rather the rule than the exception:—

Hardly had the garrison evacuated, giving up their arms, when the representative of the Peloponnesian Senate thrust into the fire the treaty of capitulation, so that all evidence against him might be destroyed, and himself gave the signal for the massacre to begin. A pretext was easily found, and a blow given to a Greek by a Turk for insisting on searching the person of one of his wives for treasure concealed about her was enough, and in an hour no Mussulman was left alive. Women were stripped of their clothing, and, rushing into the sea to hide their shame, were shot from the shore; babies were snatched out of their mothers' arms and flung in their faces. Here in mockery of the Turkish atrocities, a man was offered the choice between Christianity and death, and, when he chose the former, was "baptised with steel," or crucified; a dozen or more were burnt alive in a house where they had run for refuge.

While the romance—and a charming romance it is—is of the author's weaving, these recurring horrors are historical, and prove that the Greeks learned in the same school that Shylock learned it, the lesson, "the villainy you teach me I will execute, and it shall go hard but I shall better the instruction." A very different war of independence is chronicled in Mr. John Bickerdyke's quaint, humorous, and delightful "Her Wild Oats" (3). In it a young farmer, incidentally and unconsciously, turns Queen's evidence against his class in its war with the labourers. Mr. Bickerdyke's sympathies are wholly and strongly with the labourers, and yet he asks and wins your sympathies with the young farmer, in spite of his self-revelation of all the narrowness and callousness of his class. It was a difficult thing to do and it is done to perfection. As for the story, it is a midsummer day dream of Titania and Bottom, which ends sadly, but inevitably, with the death of Titania. Its personages are at once natural and simple, though it is not written with the sweet simplicity which its novelist, Aunt Sophy, a delightful creation, brings to her work:—

Aunt Sophy's plan was to commence each chapter with a description of a person or a piece of scenery; then followed an incident, while there was a top-dressing of moral reflection or beautiful sentiment. It was part of her literary system to omit all adjectives from the story until each chapter was complete. She said they were like the shading in a picture, which ought to be done after the drawing had been carefully made. If they were put in at the same time as the outline, the shades—that is, the adjectives—were likely to be too dark or too light in certain places.

This is not quite the way in which Mrs. Pender-Cudlip writes her numberless novels, wherein adjectives, substantives, verbs, adverbs, and prepositions are tumbled out, like articles from a house on fire. She seems to have written "Dick Rivers" (4) as a brilliant editor wrote his leaders, "poured forth without an instant's pause or halt in either word or thought." The story itself is as slight and crude as a child's game of hide-and-seek, but at least it is readable, and can be read in an hour. I am afraid that it would take much longer than an hour to wade through the two volumes which go to the making up of the authorised edition of "L'Education Sentimentale" (5), with which Mr. D. F. Hannigan hopes to win wider recognition of Gustave Flaubert as a master of realism. Of course one recognises the difficulties which beset the translator of Flaubert, who was so eminently a "seeker after the word." But it is a little difficult to believe that he could have been made so uninspiring, so plaintively dull, even though robbed of every grace of style. It seems the more regrettable since the publishers have shown such liberality in producing the work—the translation makes two handsome volumes. For another specimen of a publisher's liberality let me commend to your notice the revised edition of George Meredith's works, of which "Harry Richmond" (6) is the latest to hand. There can be no question here of the contents being unworthy of the casket, and Messrs. Constable are entitled to the thanks of all Meredithians for the handsome and convenient form in which they have enshrined the works of the Master.—Believe me, my dear Mr. Wyndham, very sincerely yours,

DESMOND B. O'BRIEN.

GIRLS' GOSSIP.

DEAREST AMY,—There was quite a beauty show at the sale of Irish Industries at Lansdowne House last Thursday. I have seldom seen so many pretty faces collected together in one room as I did on that occasion, and there were several very lovely ones. Numbers of tall, slim girls graced the scene, looking taller and slimmer in the new skirt which so faithfully expresses the figure. Too faithfully, it must be confessed, for it turns a slight girl into a lanky one, and the two adjectives express widely different characteristics, do they not?

We awarded the palm of beauty to Lady Bective, whose graceful figure, picturesque white hair, and lovely face, always enhanced by the perfect poise of her head, were set forth by the graceful simplicity of her dress. She wore a long and clinging black gown, absolutely free from adornment or trimming of any kind, the folds falling without fret or frill to her feet. A small lace fichu was the only additional item, except that when passing from room to room the Countess donned a green cape with a deep lace collar. Her bonnet was merely a fan-shaped quilling of lace that projected beyond the hair above the brow. Lady Dufferin was in grey Irish poplin, trimmed with lace of Irish manufacture. The Marchioness of Blandford also wore grey poplin, her zouave being outlined with brown fur. The Marchioness of Hamilton, in a softly-falling black gown, trimmed with lines of white, had the neck filled in with a closely-fitting collar of rose-coloured silk and velvet.

The Duchess of Abercorn and the Marchioness of Londonderry were both much missed. Both are away from England for a similar reason—the health of their children. A daughter of the Duchess needs care and a w[illegible], and the Marchioness' second son is ill with p[illegible] at Teneriffe. It was the Duke of Abercorn who, in 1884, when he was Marquis of Hamilton, started the Baronscourt Industry, which the Duchess has managed ever since. The cottiers on the small farms round the family estate in Tyrone have no occupation after the harvest is over, and were often in sad want of the necessaries of life. But the Industry is a thriving one and keeps the wolf effectively from the door. It supplies the Army Clothing Depot at Pimlico with 14,000 pairs of socks a year, besides executing other large orders. Lady Lucan presided on Thursday and Friday at the stall where the tweeds were displayed, products of the Industry started by the Countess herself in '93. The colours of these tweeds are beautiful and the wear is almost unending, for the carding, spinning, and weaving are all done by hand, giving employment to a large number of persons in their own Mayo homes. Princess Edward of Saxe-Weimar helped at Lady Lucan's stall. Lady Kilmorey was another active saleswoman, and among other beauties were Lady Henry Bentinck, Lady Henry Fitzgerald, Lady Fingall, and Miss Paget.

Obesity.—The happy knack of forming a symmetrical contour and a perfect foundation for a well-setting gown is the especial art of Mesdames Sykes, Josephine, & Co., Anatomical Corsetières, 280, Regent-street, Oxford-circus, London, W.

The Duchess of Connaught opened the Sale on Thursday, and wore a shamrock pinned to the bodice of her dark-blue gown trimmed with black satin and jet. The Duke, who accompanied her, also wore a shamrock, which was very nice and sympathetic of him. The Duchess made several purchases, and the Duke, taking a strong fancy to an embroidered vest, bought it for his wife. The Queen had made several purchases, and all of them were on view. One was a vest and revers of cream-coloured Irish poplin embroidered in gold; another was a length of cornflower-blue tweed. Lady Lansdowne showed us the Princess of Wales's purchase, a dress-length in turquoise blue, dyed specially to her Royal Highness's own order. This is a specialty of these tweeds, that they can be sent in the natural colour of the wool ready to be re-dyed to any tint or shade to suit the purchaser's wish. Lady Lansdowne had a beautiful scarf of Limerick lace, the Queen's choice, and the Princess had also bought some lace from the Convent of the Poor Clares. The Queen had bought some sweet-worked frocks from the Irish Distressed Ladies' Fund, at whose stall there were some beautifully-worked handkerchiefs displayed. Do not you love nice, fine, embroidered handkerchiefs? I noticed a lady buying some exquisite baby linen at this stall. The prices seemed to be remarkably low. The needlework is exquisite. I noticed several very pretty silk blouses at the Irish Distressed Ladies' stall, too. They were in glacé silk of all colours, made with tucks across. This reminds me to tell you of a masterpiece in the shape of a blouse worn by a lady present. It was pale mauve silk sewn with flat tucks all across, back, front, and sleeves. A narrow band of sable passed round the neck and down the front, and a similar band of fur edged the epaulettes. The effect was very good. A tall girl in dark blue opening over an orange vest was followed by admiring glances wherever she went. Miss Claire Stopford has a typically Irish face of the highest class of beauty. She was supposed to be helping her mother, Lady Arran, and perhaps she was; but if she was busy it was in the ideal Celtic fashion, full of fun and blithe, gay insouciance.

The Ladies' Amateur Harp, Mandoline, and Guitar Band played some very good music at the foot of the grand staircase. They were all dressed in black, which had a rather lugubrious effect. We asked if they were in mourning for any one, but were told that black was chosen as the best uniform tint for so many. I suppose it must be a little difficult to select a tint that suits the taste of so many, and if each were to dress according to her own sweet will, the result might be more lively than harmonious.

Entertainments were given in the drawing-room on each day. The first was all musical. The Marchioness of Hamilton played a violin solo, and Mr. Denis O'Sullivan sang some very Irish songs. On Friday, Miss Letty Lind, Miss Juliette Nesville, and Mr. Maurice Farkoa were to contribute to the entertainment, and I have no doubt they did so, but we did not go on the second day.

Just fancy people sitting up all night in the street outside the theatre, and then sitting for hours in the theatre before the performance began, in order to secure a place at the benefit of Nellie Farren! It seems hard enough to sit up all night at home in a warm room, with a comfortable chair at one's command, but when one tries to realise what it means to keep a vigil of nine or ten hours on a March night, the result is admiration for the fortitude and endurance of our countrymen and countrywomen. There were women among these enthusiastic playgoers. How glad they must have been of the hot coffee and buttered rolls sent out early in the morning by Mr. Arthur Collins! It was the action of a good Samaritan.

The neat little subscription book and stamp album sent out in connection with the Prince of Wales's Hospital Fund with an autograph letter from the Princess of Wales to the Children of England is pretty sure to achieve considerable results. Each book is of a size to contain twenty years' subscription of 1s. or 2s. 6d. each per annum; or ten years at 5s. each per annum; or five years at 10s. per annum.

The Princess's letter is a sweet one, worded with simplicity, and yet full of heartfelt kindliness and compassion for the sufferers in hospitals. The writing is peculiarly bold and free, though not very legible, owing to the fact that every one of the short lines is looped as though they were the letter e. In the word "Commemoration" there are thirteen of these loops, and in "permanent" there are ten. I notice that her Royal Highness observes the good old Lindley Murray rule that the possessive case should be indicated by an apostrophe after a word ending in the letter s. She writes "The Prince of Wales Fund." This rule seems now to be falling into disuse. For instance, we have the St. James's and the Princess's Theatre instead of the St. James' and the Princess'.

Some of the new fashions are dreadfully hideous. One of the worst is the new variety of cape, which juts out in a large flute in the centre of the back, the flute growing wider as it descends. Two more huge folds are situated on the sides, but there is some reason in these, since there are the movements of the arms to be provided for.

You will be pleased to hear, however, that the high collar seems to be losing its hold on the affections of the feminine portion of this nation. The high hat is taking it away with it, since a low hat and a high collar have no affinity with each other. Fancy the effect of a collar that hides the ears in conjunction with a flat hat and a low coiffure. The wearer would almost look headless.

The ructions at the Savoy are going to eventuate happily for the patrons of that consummate restaurant. The outcome of the business is that the world renowned chef, Joseph, comes over from Paris this week to conduct the culinary department. 'Tis an ill wind that blows no one good.

There is a Cheshire saying that always pleases me whenever I happen to think of it: "There's nowt so queer as folks." How uninteresting—and sometimes how unlovable—human nature would be without its inconsistencies, otherwise its queerness. An amusing instance of its contradictoriness occurred the other day with Richard. Some one had gone out of the way and been put to some small expense to get for him some information he wanted. Richard, knowing him to be impecunious, sent him a cheque with his note of thanks. By next post came a most reproachful, and in fact, huffy, letter, rebuking him for thinking it necessary to send any money, but, as we afterwards discovered, the cheque was cashed the same day. Truly, there's nowt so queer as folks.

London is full of exquisite flowers. In the streets are sold carnations, pink and coral and pure white, anemones, purple, palest pink, and brightest purple, violets in great heaps, Lenten lilies, daffodils in every shade of gold, primroses, tea-roses, lily-of-the-valley, wallflowers, narcissi, and jonquils. All these are sold in the open street, and they fill the thoroughfares with colour and sweetness, and a suggestion of opulent abundance that is cheery enough.

New Spring Fashions.—Messrs. Redfern have now on view in their Showrooms a unique display of Toilettes, illustrative of the latest London and Paris fashions, and to which they invite an inspection.—26, Conduit-street, London, W.

The new straw hats are in the brightest possible colours, poppy pink, rose-pink and coral, metallic greens of every hue, lurid and livid blues, and even more numerous specimens of mauve and purple. What frights some of these lilac and strong purple tints will make of their wearers. People will say "how dreadfully bilious So-and-So looks to day! I am afraid she is losing her looks." But it will be the fault of the purple hat. However, the wearers will be none the less happy in the possession of their smart head gear, wholly unwitting what it costs them in the item of looks.

By the way, the fairest thing I have ever read about dress occurs in a delightful book, just published, by Mary E. Wilkins, called "Jerome." Of two elderly sisters the authoress says: "The Lawson sisters had always been considered dressy. Each possessed several silk gowns, a fine cashmere shawl, and a satin pelisse; each had two beautiful bonnets, one for winter and one for summer, and each possessed the value of her fine apparel to the uttermost, and realised from it a petty, perhaps, but no less a comforting illumination of spirit. Many of the lights of happiness of this world are feeble and even ignoble, but one must see to live, and even a penny dip is exalted if it save one from the darkness of despair. It is not given to every one to light his way with a sun, or a full moon, or even a star.'

It is easy to understand what a perennial joy their good clothes were to them, but few women would have the large tolerance that the writer of the book shows. Most persons would be very hard on the penny dip; and oh! what thousands they would be condemning in their narrowness.

And here is something about dress from a very different point of view. It occurs in Mrs. Campbell Praed's remarkable new novel, "The Scourge-Stick." "Now that crinoline's buried in the past, and you can always buy yourself a curly toupet, there's no excuse for unbecoming invalidism. Bless the being who invented tea-gowns! They make it so easy to manage picturesque floppiness. A pretty woman who can't keep her husband on his knees adoring is too stupid to exist. The two best safeguards against Influences are Worth and the cookery book. It's always the nice, virtuous, domestic wives who are tyrannised over or neglected—the wives whose maids make their gowns and who screw down the cook. Nobody—not even a genius—wants his wife to wear home-made dresses and economise over eggs for the puddings. The first necessity of a modern man is to dine decently; the second, to be envied by his fellow men; the third, to be amused. Who could envy a man when he owns a frump? Feed your husband; flatter him; flirt, and let him flirt."

There is the modern domestic code almost in its entirety. Are you going to conduct your own matrimonial affairs in accordance with it?

Clare sends me the following from Dublin:—

Dearest Madge,—As with everything at the end, there was, of course, a great deal too much to be done in the last week of the Castle season. Our social programme in the capital of a distressed country was almost worthy of your great capital of magnificence. It included two Viceregal State entertainments, by night, to wit: Lord Arran's installation as a Knight of St. Patrick and St. Patrick's Ball; and one State ceremonial by day: the guard mounting and trooping of the colours in the Upper Castle Yard, also in honour of St. Patrick. We certainly cannot complain that our patron Saint suffers neglect. What other national saint receives so many and such varied commemorative honours each year? No nation has a custom so universal as the wearing of the shamrock. Does the Queen of Ireland—how curious and unfamiliar, almost legendary, the title sounds—wear a shamrock on St Patrick's Day, I wonder? One almost doubts that she even knows of the custom. She, herself, indeed, seems to realise as little as we Irish do that she is the Sovereign of our country. But I am digressing, which lay to the fault of the Celtic mind that is prone to wander at its own sweet will. On Monday the Master of the Rolls and Mrs. Porter gave a ball in the Rotunda, and on Wednesday Lady Roberts was again "at home" for dancing at the Royal Hospital. On Wednesday and Thursday the Baldoyle race meeting was held. A more than sufficiency of festivity for one week, which might pleasurably and reasonably have been extended over a longer period. Only then one would not have had the exciting rush and crush, the wear and tear which all votaries of fashion seem to crave above everything. Our capital could not have boasted as it now can boast, of having given the pursuers of pleasure the opportunity of thoroughly exhausting themselves in the pursuit. It was a great chance, and we all nobly rose—or perhaps more literally with most of us, sank exhausted—to the occasion.

On Tuesday the installation of Lord Arran as a K.P., was an elaborate ceremonial. St. Patrick's Hall was filled to its fullest extent for the occasion, the men in Levee dress, and our sex in Court dress, minus the trains. The first procession that went through the Hall to the top of the room was Lady Cadogan's. She was accompanied by Lady Arran and all the lady visitors at the Castle, and the Viceregal ladies. They honoured the occasion by a great display of dresses, and, above all, jewels. Lady Cadogan wore white, with rich embroideries and trimmings of ostrich feathers, and literally blazed with diamonds, Lady Arran looked very sweet—how pretty she is still—in pale green and many brilliants. The Duchess of Manchester was magnificent, and also Lady Listowel. Most of the girls were in white, some with touches of the very popular pale blue. There was quite a bevy of them, many looking charming and pretty—Ladies Alice Montague, B. Hare, Alice Willoughby, Muriel Parsons, the Misses O Brien, Miss Crichton, and others. Lady Cadogan has been very kind to her young friends this "season;" the girl visitors have been a feature of the continuous "house parties." Lord Cadogan made an imposing entry into St. Patrick's Hall, in the long, blue cloak of the Order, with two pages, and his whole household. Most of us, it is to be feared, were more inclined to be amused than impressed by the proceedings—by the procession of Knights looking so little at home in their long cloaks, by the stagey dress of "Ulster" and his attendants, and, above all, by the procession bearing the several articles the new knight was to put on! Lord Sudeley bore the family banner, the Master of Ruthven, the sword, and some one else the helmet. You can imagine how pantomimic it looked. The junior Knights, Lords Inchiquin and Roberts, led the coming Knight up to the Chapter table. He was dressed in the robes and insignia of the Order by the senior Knights, Lords Powerscourt and Kenmare, no great experts, it must be said, in the art of tiring. A ceremonial of this kind makes one think that men have just as much taste for dress and "finery" as women. How they covet ribbons and stars, which, unlike the Victoria Cross, are not signs of personal distinction.

Lady Roberts' dance on Wednesday was charming, the great hall of the Royal Hospital makes such a lovely ballroom. Lady Cadogan and her visitors, a large party, were present, but not Lord Cadogan, to whom balls must be somewhat of a weariness.

The St. Patrick's Ball, on the next night, at the Castle was—it is needless to say since no invitations are sent out for it—the most crowded entertainment of the season. It is unique in its way since all who attend a Levee or Drawing-room are thereby entitled to go to it. The same Court dress as at the Installation was worn, though feathers and lappets are not pleasant additions to a dancing dress. Quite the contrary, indeed, as regards the latter, which are a serious cause of anxiety to others as well as their wearers in a crowded dance. The ball opened with the usual country dance, the only feature which distinguished it—as regards the dancing—from any other big Castle ball Lady Cadogan, as usual, was regally dressed and wore the national shamrock. She has been very energetic and untiring in doing the honours of all the Castle entertainments, and may well be called what she is commonly styled in Ireland "The Lady Lieutenant" Among the some of the many pretty girls were Lady Alice Montague, the Ladies Forbes, Miss Crichton, Miss Dawnay, Miss C. Saunderson, Miss M. Porter. All the visitors have dispersed now, and there is somewhat of a fashionable exodus from Dublin going on, but Easter will bring back festivity and Punchestown week. Meanwhile, you have heard the last of the Castle "season" for many long months, and perhaps you may think it just as well.—Yours ever,

Clare

One or two good recipes will not be inappropriate in this connection. This excellent little entrée can be made from the remains of cold fowl:—

The Maximum of Effect at the Minimum of Cost.—An Object Lesson in Decorating and Furnishing can be obtained by inspecting Messrs. Waring's Suites of furnished rooms at 175-181, Oxford-st. W.

First, make some good white sauce with the liquor from the stewed bones of the fowl, reserving the pieces of meat, which must be cut into pieces 1 in. long and ¼ in. thick. Boil 2 oz. of macaroni and cut it into similar pieces. Make the sauce very hot, add the yoke of an egg, a little cream, pepper, salt, and a squeeze of lemon juice. Add the pieces of chicken, the macaroni, and a tablespoonful of chopped red tongue. Oil 6 small paper cases, three parts fill them with the hot chicken preparation, put a cover of puff paste, previously baked, on the top of each, and place them in the oven for five minutes before serving. Arrange the cases on a napkin and garnish with fried parsley.

Now the game season is ended you will find this an excellent substitute for second course:—

Blanch 18 good oysters, without allowing them to boil, strain, remove the beards, and place them aside. Boil about 3 oz. of spaghetti in salted water until tender, strain, and cut it into pieces an inch long. Reduce the oyster liquor and mix it with half a pint of good tomato sauce. Make a border on a dish with three-cornered pieces of fried bread, using a little white of egg and flour to make it adhere. Make the spaghetti hot in the sauce, put a layer inside the border, sprinkle with grated Parmesan, arrange half the oysters on this, cover with spaghetti and cheese, add the other half of the oysters and the remainder of the spaghetti. Sprinkle the top with nicely-browned bread crumbs, and put the dish in a moderate oven for ten minutes to gratinate.

Soufflé of carrots is a novelty for the second course:—

Boil about six scraped carrots, cut in quarters, for half an hour in salted water; drain, and finish cooking in some good, but rather thin, brown sauce. When the carrots are done, lift them from the sauce with a slice and rub them through a hair sieve. Return the purée to the stewpan, season with salt and pepper, sprinkle with half a tablespoonful of flour, add a little of the sauce the carrots were stewed in, and stir over the fire until boiling. Now mix in the yolks of 6 eggs and the whisked whites. Put the mixture into a buttered soufflé dish and bake in a moderate oven from fifteen to twenty minutes.

And here is a novel way of preparing stewed apples:—

Wash as many apples as required, then core them nearly through. Make holes large enough to hold a teaspoonful of apricot jam in each; place them in a shallow tin, into which pour wine a quarter of an inch deep. Scatter the zest of a lemon, cut into strips as fine as possible. Serve them hot, with a dish of sponge cakes cut into finger lengths.

Ever, dear, your loving cousin, MADGE.

DIAMONDS OR OLD SILVER
For PRESENTS.
SPINK & SON

SPOONS AND FORKS 2/11 oz. BELOW STORE PRICES.
17 & 18, Piccadilly, W.
AND AT
1 AND 2, GRACECHURCH STREET, CORNHILL, E.C. Est. 1772.

"SANITAS EMBROCATION."
For Aches, Pains, Sprains, Strains, Bruises, Stiffness, Neuralgia, Lumbago, Rheumatism, and for Veterinary purposes.

"I have little doubt that 'Sanitas Embrocation' will come into prominent favour as a stable requisite and for various other purposes, human and veterinary."
(Prof.) WOODROFFE HILL, F.R.C.V.S.

In Bottles, 8d., 1s., and 2s. 6d. Of all Chemists, Stores, and
THE SANITAS CO., LIMITED, BETHNAL GREEN, E.

THE MANUFACTURING
Goldsmiths' & Silversmiths' Company,
Show Rooms: 112, Regent Street, London, W. (Adjoining Stereoscopic Company),
Supply the Public direct at Manufacturers' Cash Prices, saving Purchasers from 25 to 50 per cent.

Exquisitely Chased and Pierced Silver Dessert Dish, £10. 10s.

THE LARGEST and CHOICEST STOCK
OF SILVER PLATE
IN LONDON,
suitable for Public Testimonials, Wedding and Complimentary Presents.
AN INSPECTION INVITED. NEW ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE POST FREE.
Goods forwarded to the Country on approval. Special designs and estimates free.

THE ANCIENT WRITING PAPER OF THE PRIESTS.
NOTE PAPER, 5 Quires, 1s.
COURT ENVELOPES, 1s. per 100.
MOURNING ENVELOPES, 1s. 6d. per 100.
THIN, FOR FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE, 5 Quires, 1s.
MOURNING NOTE, 5 Quires, 1s. 6d.
HIERATICA (Regd.).
Every Sheet and Envelope Watermarked HIERATICA. Reject Imitations. Any difficulty in obtaining, send stamps to Hieratica Works, 68, Upper Thames Street, London. Samples Free. Parcels Carriage Paid.

A Feature of the Metropolis. SPIERS & POND'S
CRITERION RESTAURANT, Piccadilly Circus, London, W.
EAST ROOM. Finest Cuisine, unsurpassed by the most renowned Parisian Restaurants. Luncheons, Dinners, and Suppers, à la carte and prix fixe. Viennese Band.
GRAND HALL. Musical Dinner 3/6 per head. Accompanied by the Imperial Austrian Band.
WEST ROOM. Academy Luncheon 2/6 Diner Parisien 5/-, during both of which the renowned Mandolin Quartetteperforms.
BUFFET & GRILL ROOM. Quick service à la carte and moderate prices. Joints in each room fresh from the Spit every half-hour.
AMERICAN BAR. Service of special American Dishes, Grills, &c.
Splendid Suites of Rooms for Military and other Dinners.

TRELOAR'S ORIENTAL CARPETS

TURKEY, PERSIAN, & INDIAN CARPETS, DAGHESTAN RUGS, &c., ANTIQUE CARPETS AND RUGS.

Illustrations of Turkey Carpets sent free on Application.

TURKEY CARPETS have lately been supplied by

TRELOAR & SONS

to the following Institutions, &c.:—

The CONSERVATIVE CLUB, St. James's Street.
The UNITED SERVICE CLUB, Pall Mall.
The ROYAL MARINES, Chatham.
The FRENCH HOSPITAL, Victoria Park.
The LAW SOCIETY CLUB, Chancery Lane.
The ROYAL MARINES, Devonport.
The 2nd ROYAL WILTS REGIMENT, Portsmouth.
The 4th BATTALION KING'S ROYAL RIFLES, Aldershot.
The ROYAL MARINE ARTILLERY, Eastney.
The ROYAL MARINES, Gosport.

If favoured with inquiries we will quote price and forward on approbation any Carpets or Rugs upon receipt of reference or remittance.

TRELOAR & SONS,

68, 69, & 70, LUDGATE HILL, LONDON, E.C.

Mülhens' "Rhine Violets"

TRADE MARK.

DISTILLED FROM FRESHLY GATHERED RHINE VIOLETS.

A SCENT OF RARE FRAGRANCE.

A VERY ECHO OF NATURE.

CAUTION.

Owing to the phenomenal success of this popular Scent, some perfumers are offering essences of their own manufacture under the name of "RHINE VIOLETS." The public must not be deceived, but insist upon "MULHENS'" brand, which is distilled from the flower itself. Don't accept any bottle not bearing Ferd. Mülhens' name. This alone ensures genuineness. Ferd. Mülhens, of Cologne, is the originator of this exquisite perfume, and was the first to introduce it into England.

The Fashionable Press of London are unanimous in praise of it.

3/-, 5/6, 9/-, 20/- per bottle.

"Rhine Violet" Sachets, 2/6 each.
"Rhine Violet" Soap, 2/6 per tablet, or 7/- per box of 3 tablets.

Of most dealers in first-class Perfumes, or from 4711 Depot, 62, NEW BOND STREET, W.

THE HAIR, TEETH, AND SKIN,

Preserved and Beautified by using ROWLANDS' TOILET ARTICLES.

ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL

Is Nature's Real Restorer & Nourisher of the Hair. Without it the hair becomes dry and weak; it feeds the hair, removes scurf and harshness, and produces a strong and healthy growth; it is the best tonic and dressing for ladies' hair, and should always be used for children. Also sold in golden colour for fair and golden-haired ladies and children, and for those whose hair has become grey. Sizes, 3s. 6d., 7s., 10s. 6d.

ROWLAND'S ODONTO

is the finest dentifrice; removes all impurities from the teeth, imparts to them a brilliant polish, prevents and arrests decay, and gives a pleasing fragrance to the breath 2s. 9d.

ROWLANDS' KALYDOR allays all irritability of the skin, removes sunburn, freckles, tan, redness, roughness, &c., cures and heals all cutaneous eruptions, imparts a matchless beauty to the complexion, and a softness and whiteness to the neck, hands, and arms unattainable by any other means. Sizes, 2s. 3d. and 4s 6d.

Ask Stores and Chemists for Rowlands' Articles.

HAMPTON & SONS

ANTIQUE GALLERIES, PALL MALL EAST.

Old Furniture. | Old Porcelain.
Old Tapestries. | Old Sheffield Plate.
Old Embroideries. | Old Silver.

HAMPTON & SONS,
Limited.

FOOT'S PATENT TRUNKS

THE TRAVELLERS' DELIGHT.

EVERYTHING AT HAND WHEN WANTED.

A perfected system of sliding drawers, which renders every part of Trunk equally accessible, and enables any article to be instantly removed without disturbing remainder of contents. Avoids confusion, saves time, prevents articles being crushed. Drawers divided and made any depth to suit requirements.

Made various sizes in Compressed Cane, Wood Fibre, &c.

Prices from 40s.

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE POST FREE.

T. J. FOOT & SON, 171, New Bond St., London, W.

"TRUTH"

CAN BE OBTAINED AT

THE GALIGNANI LIBRARY,

224, RUE DE RIVOLI, PARIS.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS

THROUGH THE GOLD-FIELDS OF ALASKA TO BERING STRAITS.

By HARRY DE WINDT. With Map and 33 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, cloth, 16s.

"The story of his rescue at half-past the eleventh hour by a belated whaler is one of the most dramatic and thrilling bits of romance in real life I have read for some time."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"As interesting a book of travels as has been written these many years."—Academy.

SECOND EDITION JUST READY.

THE LIFE OF NAPOLEON III.

By ARCHIBALD FORBES. With 37 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, cloth, 12s.

"Adds to the accuracy of an historical annal the charm of romance. . . . The story of the campaign is a brilliant piece of writing. It carries the reader breathless to the closing scene at Chislehurst."—Punch.

PARIS.

By E. ZOLA. Translated by E. A. VIZETELLY. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

"It is a notable contribution to the history of our time, and . . . we believe that in the documents which he has bequeathed to posterity, the historians of the future will find the materials out of which they will construct their most faithful and telling pictures of the life of the people in the latter half of the nineteenth century. Among these documents, 'Paris' will deservedly hold a very high place."—Speaker.

Also by E. ZOLA, crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

ROME.	THE DREAM.	FAT AND THIN.
LOURDES.	DR. PASCAL.	HIS EXCELLENCY.
THE DOWNFALL.	MONEY.	THE DRAM-SHOP.

THE DISASTER.

By P. and V. MARGUERITTE. Translated by F. LEES. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

"This powerful picture . . . is among the finest descriptions of war that have been penned."—Athenæum.

NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

FORTUNE'S GATE.

By ALAN ST. AUBYN, Author of "A Fellow of Trinity." [March 31.

A WOMAN WORTH WINNING.

By G. MANVILLE FENN.

COLONEL THORNDYKE'S SECRET.

By G. A. HENTY.

"Once begun, it is not easy to withstand Mr. Henty's story until the end is reached."—Academy.

WAS SHE JUSTIFIED?

By FRANK BARRETT, Author of "Folly Morrison," &c.

"Will be read with satisfaction and pleasure."—Scotsman.

MISS BALMAINE'S PAST.

By B. M. CROKER, Author of "Beyond the Pale," &c.

"A very enchanting story. . . . Written with vivacity, all the characters developed most clearly, . . . with never a dull page, . . . 'Miss Balmaine's Past' is a very delightful novel."—Vanity Fair.

A WOMAN TEMPTED HIM.

By WILLIAM WESTALL, Author of "With the Red Eagle," &c.

"As usual, his story is cleverly told."—Athenæum.

THIS LITTLE WORLD.

By D. CHRISTIE MURRAY, Author of "A Capful o' Nails."

"Mr. Murray has never done anything better than this fine story."—Birmingham Post.

THE DEEMSTER.

By HALL CAINE. CHEAP EDITION. Medium 8vo, 6d.; cloth, 1s.

NEW THREE-AND-SIXPENNY NOVELS.

THE LAWTON GIRL.

By HAROLD FREDERIC. With Frontispiece by F. Barnard.

"One of the best, most pathetic, and, in the highest sense, most humorous books which have come even from America within the last few years."—Academy.

TALES OF TRAIL AND TOWN.

By BRET HARTE. With a Frontispiece by Jacomb-Hood.

"Quite in Bret Harte's most engaging form."—Daily Mail.

TRUE BLUE: or, "The Lass that Loved a Sailor."

By HERBERT RUSSELL.

"A remarkably spirited narrative."—Echo.

NEW TWO-SHILLING NOVELS.

THE CHRONICLES OF MICHAEL DANEVITCH. By DICK DONOVAN.

UNDER SEALED ORDERS. By GRANT ALLEN.

ROGUES AND VAGABONDS. By G. R. SIMS.

MADAME SANS-GÊNE. By E. LEPELLETIER.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

MR. WM. HEINEMANN'S New Books.

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE:

A CRITICAL STUDY.
By GEORGE BRANDES.

2 vols., Roxburghe gilt top or buckram uncut, demy 8vo, 24s. net.

The Outlook.—"Dr. Brandes's work exceeds the promise of its title, for he offers us much more than a critical study of his subject—he reconstitutes the entire social history of the age, sets the poet in his right atmosphere, and does both with remarkable learning and insight. His volumes are a perfect armoury of fact, suggestion, and criticism."

THE LIFE OF JUDGE JEFFREYS.

By H. B. IRVING.

With Three Portraits and a Facsimile. 1 vol. 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.

The Daily Telegraph.—"Mr. Irving knows how to give dramatic force and point to Jeffrey's career; the result is that from the first page to the last the book is undeniably interesting, and in places absorbing."

THE INDIAN FRONTIER WAR.

Being an Account of the Mohmund and Tirah Expeditions, 1897.
By LIONEL JAMES.

With Illustrations from Drawings by the Author, and Photographs and Maps and Plans, 1 vol. 8vo, 7s. 6d.

The Daily Telegraph.—"In the work before us Mr. James adds to his laurels by contributing to history a very important chronicle, indispensable to those who would study and understand the terrible but splendid story of last year."

THE WORKERS: AN EXPERIMENT IN REALITY.

By WALTER A. WYCKOFF.

With Illustrations. 1 vol., crown 8vo., 3s. 6d.

NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

DREAMERS OF THE GHETTO.

By I. ZANGWILL.

Mr. W. E. HENLEY in the Outlook.—"A brave, eloquent, absorbing, and, on the whole, persuasive book, whose author tells you as much, perhaps, as has before been told in modern literature. Here, I take it, is that rarest of rare things, a BOOK. As I have said, I do not wholly believe in it. But it is a book; it goes far to explain the Jew."

THE WAR OF THE WORLDS.

By H. G. WELLS, Author of "The Time Machine."

The Spectator.—"As a writer of scientific romance, Mr. Wells has never been surpassed. Even when he is most awful there is always something human about his characters. Both Poe and Mr. Wells are followers of Swift, but Mr. Wells keeps nearest to the human side of the author of Gulliver."

THE MINISTER OF STATE.

By J. A. STEUART, Author of "In the Day of Battle."

The World.—"Its qualities place it far above the novels we are accustomed to, even of the higher class. It is dramatic, romantic, and realistic."

THE BETH BOOK.

By SARAH GRAND, Author of "The Heavenly Twins."

Punch.—"The heroine is one of Sarah Grand's most fascinating creations. The story is absorbing; the truth to nature in the characters every reader will recognise."

THE TRIUMPH OF DEATH.

By GABRIELE D'ANNUNZIO.

The Pall Mall Gazette.—"A masterpiece. The story holds and haunts one. . . . A great prose poem that cannot be surpassed. The work of a master—a master whose genius is beyond dispute."

THE FOURTH NAPOLEON.

By CHARLES BENHAM.

The Saturday Review.—"A very good novel indeed. The book is worked out thoroughly; the people in it are alive,—they are interesting."

THE SCOURGE-STICK.

By Mrs. CAMPBELL PRAED.

The Daily Telegraph.—"Undeniably powerful and interesting."

THE BROOM OF THE WAR-GOD.

By H. N. BRAILSFORD.

The World.—"Quite the most vivid and most realistic picture of the lamentable campaign that we have yet met with. We follow the fortunes of the Foreign Legion with absorbed interest."

CLEO THE MAGNIFICENT.

By Z. Z., Author of "A Drama in Dutch."

The Daily Mail.—"A strong piece of work: more than commonly clever, conscientious, and sound."

GOD'S FOUNDLING.

By A. J. DAWSON, Author of "In the Bight of Benin."

The Daily Telegraph.—"The dénouement of this brilliant and powerful romance is every whit as satisfactory as its literary quality."

London: WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford-street, W.C.

SMITH, ELDER, & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

MR. GREGORY'S LETTER-BOX, 1813-30. Edited By LADY GREGORY. With a Portrait, demy 8vo, 12s. 6d.

"This is a delightful book, which places the reader on terms of respectful intimacy with great personages, and instructs him in the easiest manner conceivable about momentous events."—Athenæum.

From the World—"Lady Gregory's pages bristle with good stories. Indeed, the great difficulty of a reviewer in dealing with this fascinating book is the plethora of good things that clamour for quotation."

EGYPT IN THE NINETEENTH CENTURY; or, Mehemet Ali and his Successors until the British Occupation in 1882. By DONALD A. CAMERON, H.B.M.'s Consul at Port Said. With a Map, post 8vo, 6s.

"This is a book which was distinctly wanted. As a book of reference it should prove invaluable to journalists, and as a lucid account of how Egypt became what she was when England took her in hand, it will be instructive to every intelligent reader."—Saturday Review.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION OF GARDNER'S "HOUSEHOLD MEDICINE."

Now Ready. THIRTEENTH EDITION. With numerous Illustrations, demy 8vo, 8s. 6d.

GARDNER'S HOUSEHOLD MEDICINE AND SICK-ROOM GUIDE: A Description of the Means of Preserving Health, and the Treatment of Diseases, Injuries, and Emergencies. Revised and expressly Adapted for the Use of Families, Missionaries, and Colonists. By W. H. C. STAVELEY, F.R.C.S. England.

NEW NOVEL.

Just Published. Crown 8vo, 6s.

A SOLDIER OF MANHATTAN, and his Adventures at Ticonderoga and Quebec. By J. A. ALTSHELER, Author of "The Sun of Saratoga." Crown 8vo, 6s.

"A dashing tale of war, love, and adventure."—Academy.

London: SMITH, ELDER, & CO., 15, Waterloo-place.

NEW BOOKS.

NOW READY.

Demy 8vo, cloth, price 12s. 6d.

ARISTOCRACY AND EVOLUTION. A Study of the Rights, the Origin, and the Social Functions of the Wealthier Classes. By W. H. MALLOCK, Author of "Labour and the Popular Welfare," "Classes and Masses," &c.

NOW READY. Price 5s.

HIS GRACE O' THE GUNNE. By I. HOOPER, Author of "A Singer of Marly." Crown 8vo, cloth.

"The character painting is excellent. 'His Grace o' the Gunne,' as Kirke was nicknamed, Madam Celia, Colonel Challoner, Everard Challoner, Dickon Fleming, are clever, life-like portraits, drawn with an ease, a vigour, and a truth to nature that merits commendation. The book has a real breath of 'Flora and the country green' about it, such as we are so accustomed to note in the works of Mr. Thomas Hardy and Mr. R. D. Blackmore."—Glasgow Herald.

NOW READY. Price 3s. 6d. net.

WHO'S WHO, 1898. An Annual Biographical Dictionary. FIFTIETH YEAR OF ISSUE. Containing 1,143 New Biographies. In crown 8vo, 864 pages, bound in cloth gilt, with gilt edges and rounded corners.

"'Who's Who' is an invaluable annual. It is the handiest and best compiled book of reference of its kind that is issued from the press, and is quite indispensable to all classes of people who take any interest in public life."—Review of Reviews.

NOW READY. Second Edition.

THROUGH FINLAND IN CARTS. By Mrs. ALEC TWEEDIE. Demy 8vo, cloth. Containing Map and Eighteen full-page Illustrations. Price 15s.

"From first to last there is not a dull page in the volume, which is admirably written, well illustrated, and full of humour. It is one of the best books of travel we have read for many a year." (The book of the week)—Illustrated Sporting and Dramatic News.

NOW READY.

ROME, HANDBOOK to CHRISTIAN and ECCLESIASTICAL. By H. M. and M. A. R. T. Part II.—The Liturgy in Rome. Crown 8vo, cloth, price 5s.

"This guide-book is in its department very complete, and it is crammed full of curious learning."—Literary World.

NOW READY.

THE VITALITY OF CHRISTIAN DOGMAS. By A. SABATIER, D.D., Dean of the Faculty of Protestant Theology, Paris. Translated by Mrs. Em. Christen. With Preface by the Very Reverend the Hon. W. H. Fremantle, D.D., Dean of Ripon. Crown 8vo, 96 pages, cloth, price 1s. 6d. net.

"It is a powerful and thoughtful study of dogma in the light of modern scientific doctrine."—Scotsman.

A. & C. BLACK, Soho-square, London.

Messrs. SKEFFINGTON'S New Novels.

THIS DAY, crown 8vo, cloth, price 3s. 6d.

Fergus Hume's New Novel 'Hagar of the Pawnshop.'

THIS DAY, crown 8vo, cloth, price 3s. 6d. Frontispiece by JOHN WILLIAMSON.

Three Stories By R. Marsh.

Author of "The Beetle," in "Under One Cover:" An entirely New Collection of really Striking Stories by Eminent Authors, many of them specially written for this work."

THIS DAY, crown 8vo, cloth, price 3s. 6d., with Frontispiece by HAL LUDLOW

A. St. John Adcock's New Novel, 'The Consecration of Hetty Fleet.'

A New Novel by the Author of 'East-End Idylls.

The Daily Mail says:—"This skilfully constructed story rises artistically to a dramatic climax that comes like a thunderclap to its culmination. The workmanship and charm of the story are excellent."

The Pall Mall Gazette says:—"A fine theme worked out with the greatest restraint and delicate craftsmanship. The characters in this powerful story are admirable—there is originality, picturesqueness, and real feeling in them all."

THIS DAY, crown 8vo, cloth, price 3s. 6d.

Athol Forbes's New Book, 'Cassock and Comedy.'

The Humourous Side of Clerical Life.

A Series of most Amusing, Interesting, and Original Anecdotes and Records of the Author's Personal Experiences of Clerical Life and Work. Among the Chapters are—

Babies and Baptism. The Humours of Marriage. The Humours of Funerals. The Humours of the Sunday School. The Humours of Preachers and Preaching. Our Organists. New Curates and their Faults.

FOURTH EDITION, just out, with 4 Illustrations by JOHN WILLIAMSON, crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

Richard Marsh's Novel, 'The Beetle: a Mystery!'

The Daily Graphic says:—"'The Beetle' is the kind of book which you put down only for the purpose of turning up the gas and making sure that no person or thing is standing behind your chair—and it is a book which no one will put down until finished except for the reason above described."

The Academy says:—"This surprising and ingenious story succeeds in producing that sensation of horror which should make the flesh of even the least susceptible reader creep."

The Speaker says:—"A story of the most terrific kind is duly recorded in this extremely powerful book. The skill with which its fantastic horrors are presented to us is undeniable."

The Glasgow Herald says: "The weird horror of this Beetle grows upon the reader. It is difficult, if not impossible, to lay down this book when once begun.'

LONDON: SKEFFINGTON & SON, 163, Piccadilly, W.

Publishers to H.M. the Queen and to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales.

MURRAY MURGATROYD, JOURNALIST.

A Patriotic Story. By CHARLES MORICE. Paper covers, 1s.

"'Murray Murgatroyd, Journalist,' was a very smart fellow, and the coup that procured his translation from journalism to the House of Commons forms uncommonly good reading."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"A capital story, which well deserves its success."—Bookman.

"Very clever and original."—Birmingham Post.

"Cleverly written."—Academy.

THE VITAL QUESTION.

WHAT WILL JAPAN DO? A Forecast. By J. MORRIS, Author of "Advance Japan." Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

"He seems to have a firm, well-reasoned grasp of the main complications of the situation."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"An illuminating guide."—St. James's Gazette.

"A clever bit of constructive work."—Birmingham Post.

"This is a very bold book. We have read it with interest and satisfaction."—Consular Journal.

LAWRENCE & BULLEN, Ltd., 16, Henrietta-street, Covent Garden, London.

ON THE STŒCHIOLOGICAL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION,

ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, AND ALL THROAT AND LUNG COMPLAINTS

By JOHN FRANCIS CHURCHILL, M.D.

One Shilling, Post Free.

T. BURLEIGH, LATE DAVID STOTT, 370, OXFORD STREET.

The Sequel to "THE PRISONER OF ZENDA," by Mr. Anthony Hope, is now appearing monthly in the "Pall Mall Magazine" under the title of "RUPERT OF HENTZAU." The Sequel began in the December Number.

The APRIL NUMBER of the

PALL MALL MAGAZINE,

Edited by LORD FREDERIC HAMILTON,

Is NOW READY.

Finely Illustrated.

Price ONE SHILLING NET.

CONTENTS.

"Gossip." FRONTISPIECE.
Photogravure after the Picture by Edmund Picard.

Dreams. BEATRICE J. PRALL
Illustrated by Arthur H. Buckland.

Rufford Abbey. LORD SAVILE.
Illustrated from Special Photographs.

Pan: a Memory. DUCHESS OF LEEDS.
With Illustrations by A. van Anrooy.

The Evolution of Comfort in Railway Travelling. I. In England. Part I. G. A. SEKON.
Illustrated with Photographs.

Reflections. CHARLES D. WARD
Full-page Illustration.

"King William." HAL GODFREY.

Resurrection. F. G. BOWLES.
Illustrated by A. L. Bowley.

An Artist in Antwerp. G. R. FLETCHER, F.S.A.
Illustrated by Hanslip Fletcher.

British Army Types: XI. A Lieutenant Royal Engineers.
Drawn from Life by Arthur Jule Goodman.

Rupert of Hentzau. Chapters X.—XII. ANTHONY HOPE.
With Illustrations by Sydney Cowell.

The Record of the Gurkhas. Part II. FRED. P. GIBBON.
With Illustrations by Charles M. Sheldon.

Medusa. H. BANCROFT.

"Good Hunting." E. NESBIT.
With Illustrations by Gordon Browne.

April. BERNARD M. RAMSAY.

South London: Part IV. A Forgotten Palace. Sir WALTER BESANT.
With Illustrative Sketches by Percy Wadham.

A Careful Man: Monologue. PHŒBE HART.
Facially Illustrated by Sydney Brough.

Gossamer Threads. C. JELF-SHARP.

Prince Rupert the Buccaneer. Part I. C. J. CUTCLIFFE HYNE.
With Illustrations by G. Grenville Manton.

Five Weeks in Jerusalem. The Late Lady MILDRED BERESFORD-HOPE.
Illustrated from Photographs.

From a Cornish Window. A. T. QUILLER COUCH.
With Thumb-nail Sketches by Mark Zangwill.

Title and Contents of Vol. XIV.

Offices { LONDON: 18, Charing Cross-road, W.C.
NEW YORK: Astor-court Building.

LONDON LIBRARY,

ST. JAMES' SQUARE, S.W.

Patron—H.R.H. The PRINCE of WALES, K.G.
President.....LESLIE STEPHEN, Esq.
Vice-Presidents—Rt. Hon. W. E. GLADSTONE, the Rt. Rev. the LORD BISHOP of LONDON, HERBERT SPENCER, Esq., HENRY BARKLY, K.C.B.
Trustees—Right Hon. Sir M. GRANT DUFF, Right Hon. Sir JOHN LUBBOCK, Bart., M.P., Right Hon. EARL of ROSEBERY.

The Library contains about 170,000 Volumes of Ancient and Modern Literature, in various languages. Subscription £3 a year. Life Membership, according to Age. Fifteen Volumes are allowed to Country, and Ten to Town Members. Reading-room Open from Ten to Half-past Six. CATALOGUE, FIFTH EDITION, 2 vols. royal 8vo, price 21s.; to Members, 16s.

C. T. HAGBERG WRIGHT, Secretary and Librarian.

MESSRS. HURST & BLACKETT will publish on FRIDAY NEXT, MARCH 25th, a new and original Novel, in 1 vol., crown 8vo, 6s., entitled

MISS BETTY'S MISTAKE. By

ADELINE SERGEANT, Author of "The Claim of Anthony Lockhart," &c.

NEW NOVEL BY WINIFRED GRAHAM.

Now ready, in 1 vol. crown 8vo, 6s.

MERESIA.

By WINIFRED GRAHAM, Author of "A Strange Solution," &c.

NEW NOVEL BY LEWIS SERGEANT.

Now ready, in 1 vol. crown 8vo, 6s.

THE CAPRICE OF JULIA.

By LEWIS SERGEANT.

"In reading 'The Caprice of Julia,' one is especially struck by the excellence of the style; it is at once easy, flowing, and in phrase and tone eminently characteristic of the supposed autobiographer, the admiring young gentleman who is made to feel most keenly 'the caprice of Julia.' Altogether, the book being freshly and agreeably written, is sure to find admirers."—The Globe.

HURST & BLACKETT, Ltd., 13, Great Marlborough-street.

BOOKS TO BUY.

FAME THE FIDDLER. A REALISTIC NOVEL. By S. J. ADAIR FITZGERALD. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

"A novel of more than average merit. Cleverly written and intensely interesting throughout."—WESTERN DAILY PRESS.

"Holds the reader's attention from start to finish . . . a thoroughly convincing picture of a most interesting phase of artistic life."—GLASGOW CITIZEN.

THE MOST WEIRD AND STARTLING STORY OF THE DAY.

THE DEVIL IN A DOMINO. CHAS. L'ÉPINE. Cloth, 1s.

"May be guaranteed to disturb your night's rest. It is a gruesome, ghastly, blood-curdling, hair-creeting, sleep-murdering piece of work with a thrill on every page. Read it!"—STAR.

THE ART OF ELOCUTION AND PUBLIC SPEAKING. Crown 8vo, cloth, 1s.

Written by ROSS FERGUSON. Introduction by GEORGE ALEXANDER.

"A useful little book. We strongly recommend it to the chairmen of public companies."—AUSTRALIAN MAIL.

London: LAWRENCE GREENING & CO., 20, Cecil Ct., Charing Cross Rd

Eighth Edition, Revised, Cloth, 1s. 6d.; Paper, 1s.

THE DIETETIC CURE OF OBESITY (FOODS FOR THE FAT.) By N. E. YORKE DAVIES, L.R.Coll.Phys.Lond., &c. CONTENTS.—Part I.—What Constitutes Robust Health?: Dangerous Conditions due to Corpulency: Weak Heart and Congestive Diseases of the Corpulent: Diet—the only Safe and Permanent Cure: Diet—Safe at any age: Quack Medicines, Drugs and Purgatives, Permanently Injurious or Fatal for this purpose: Foods of Energy and of Heat—their use and ultimate elimination: Errors of Diet—Evils consequent on Food in its Relation to Work: Stimulants and Liquids in Obesity. Part II.—Dietetics of Obesity.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS:—"This work deserves careful study."—Queen. "The only safe and permanent cure of obesity."—Western Gazette. "This is the very best book on Corpulency that has ever been written."—The Lady.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's-lane W.C.

Just Published. Price 2s. 6d., post free.

GOUT AND ITS CURE. By J. COMPTON BURNETT, M.D.—"The Author has had a wide experience in Gout, and presents us with a very readable little book."—County Gentleman.—London: James Epps & Co. Ltd., 170, Piccadilly, and 48, Threadneedle-street.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

For the CIRCULATION and SALE of all the BEST

ENGLISH, FRENCH, GERMAN, ITALIAN, RUSSIAN, & SPANISH BOOKS.

TOWN SUBSCRIPTIONS from ONE GUINEA per annum.

LONDON BOOK SOCIETY (for weekly exchange of Books at the Houses of Subscribers) from TWO GUINEAS per annum.

COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTIONS from TWO GUINEAS per annum.

N.B.—Two or Three Friends may UNITE IN ONE SUBSCRIPTION, and thus lessen the Cost of Carriage.

SURPLUS LIBRARY BOOKS NOW OFFERED AT GREATLY REDUCED PRICES.

A NEW CLEARANCE LIST (100 PAGES) SENT GRATIS AND POST FREE TO ANY ADDRESS.

The List contains Popular Works in Travel, Sport, History, Biography, Science, and Fiction. Also New and Surplus Copies of French, German, Italian, and Spanish Books.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY, LIMITED,

30—34, NEW OXFORD ST.; 241, BROMPTON ROAD, S.W.; 48, QUEEN VICTORIA ST., E.C. LONDON; AND AT BARTON ARCADE, MANCHESTER.

Messrs. METHUEN have just published a new Romance of native Indian life, entitled "BIJLI THE DANCER," by J. B. PATTON. Illustrated, crown 8vo, 6s.

"A FINE, FULL BOOK."
"AS INTERESTING AS A NOVEL."

THREE YEARS IN SAVAGE AFRICA.

By LIONEL DECLE. With an Introduction by H. M. Stanley, M.P. With 100 Illustrations and Five Maps. Demy 8vo, 21s.

"One of the brightest books of travel we have ever read."—Mr. Stanley.

"Takes a permanent place among the very best books of travel; it combines solidity and liveliness, and carries the reader gaily through."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"Abounding in thrilling adventures and escapes."—Daily Telegraph.

"One of the most important additions to the literature of the Dark Continent. As a work of adventure it is worthy of the highest praise."—Outlook.

"In happy audacity of expression and sustained interest it does not fall far short of Miss Mary Kingsley's volume."—St. James's Gazette.

"A highly readable record."—Glasgow Herald.

"The honest expressions of a keen-eyed and intrepid traveller."—Scotsman.

"A book appealing powerfully to the popular imagination. Wonderfully simple and vivid, giving the impression of absolute veracity."—Globe.

EIGHT POPULAR NOVELS.
SIX SHILLINGS EACH.

SIMON DALE. ANTHONY HOPE.
BIJLI THE DANCER. JAMES BLYTHE PATTON.
BETWEEN SUN AND SAND. W. C. SCULLY.
ACROSS THE SALT SEAS. J. BLOUNDELLE BURTON.
A VOYAGE OF CONSOLATION. SARA J. DUNCAN.
THE VINTAGE. E. F. BENSON.
JOSIAH'S WIFE. NORMA LORIMER.
THE KLOOF BRIDE (3s. 6d.) ERNEST GLANVILLE.

Messrs. Methuen's Catalogue and New Book Gazette sent to any address.

METHUEN & CO., 36, Essex-street, Strand, W.C.

Price 6s.
With an Introduction by C. KEGAN PAUL.

THE CATHEDRAL.

By J. K. HUYSMANS.

Translated by CLARA BELL.

Crown 8vo, 6s.

"We know that the finest imaginative work can be built only of the primary emotions. Here, then, is a novelist who has obtained complete mastery over one of the primary emotions, precisely because it has obtained complete mastery over his own soul—the emotion of faith."—Mr. ARTHUR SYMONS, in the Saturday Review.

"This long-expected book is out at last, and bids fair to attract as much attention as its predecessors. It would be idle to deny that M. Huysmans presents some of the characteristics of a great artist. His picture of the cathedral stands out with the force and delicacy of a nocturne of Mr. Whistler."—Academy.

LONDON:
KEGAN PAUL, TRENCH, TRÜBNER, & CO., Limited,
Paternoster House, Charing Cross-road, W.C.

1/- (BY POST, 1/2½.) 1/-

QUEER STORIES
—FROM—
"TRUTH."

"TRUTH" PUBLISHING OFFICE,
10, BOLT COURT, FLEET STREET, LONDON, E.C.

STERILITY IN WOMEN: Its Causes and Curative Treatment. An Illustrated treatise based on the special practise and observation of the last 15 years. Price 3s. 6d.; post free, 3s. 8d.
London: HENRY RENSHAW, 356, Strand.

ESTATES, AUCTIONS, &c.

FLAT, HANS-CRESCENT.—Handsomely Furnished. TO BE LET, from April until end of July. 5 bedrooms, 3 reception, large hall. 300 guineas. Open to offer.—Apply to THE BELGRAVE LADIES' AGENCY, 83, Ebury-street, S.W.

FLAT, SLOANE-TERRACE MANSIONS.—TO BE LET for the Season, or longer. Perfectly furnished. 4 bed., 3 rec., bathroom, electric light. Two reliable servants could be left. Rent 10 guineas.—Apply to THE BELGRAVE LADIES' AGENCY, 83, Ebury-street, S.W.

QUEEN'S GATE.—TO BE LET, Unfurnished on lease, 7, 21, or 14 years. Double dining-room and drawing-room (parquet floors) library and boudoir (parquet). 9 bedrooms, dressing-room, bathroom (h. & c.), 3 w.c.'s (secondary staircase). Drainage thoroughly modernised two years ago. Servants' hall, housekeeper's room, &c., also 3 stall stables, double coach house. 3 rooms over for men. Rent £300 a year. Apply to THE BELGRAVE LADIES, AGENCY, 83, Ebury-street, S.W.

WILLIAM-STREET, Albert Gate, one minute from Park.—Exceptionally Well-Furnished, TO BE LET until Whitsuntide. 7 bed., 3 rec., bathroom, electric light. 25 guineas week. Excellent housemaid could be left.—Apply to THE BELGRAVE LADIES' AGENCY, 83, Ebury-street, S.W.

BRIGHTON, TO BE LET, FURNISHED.—4th Avenue, with view of the sea. Very well Furnished House. 13 bedrooms, 3 reception rooms, bathroom, with sea-water laid on. Electric light. Excellent kitchen accommodation. Drains perfect. Rent by the year 400 guineas. Open to offer. Would let for shorter or longer period. Key to King's-gardens.—Apply for order to view, BELGRAVE LADIES' AGENCY, 83, Ebury-street, S.W.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN, in all parts, receiving RESIDENT PATIENTS sent gratis, with full particulars. schools also recommended.—Medical, &c., Association, Ltd., 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C. Tel. Add., "Triform, London." Telephone No. 1,854 (Gerrard).

HOSPITALS & APPEALS.

GREAT NORTHERN CENTRAL HOSPITAL, Holloway.
UNENDOWED and VERY POOR.
PATIENTS ADMITTED FREE, sickness and poverty the only passports to relief.
£10,000 needed annually to support the work of relieving 1,400 in-patients, and 25,000 out-patients.
LEWIS H. GLENTON KERR, Secretary.

MAPLE & CO

BILLIARD MATS
BILLIARD MATS
BILLIARD MATS

In NOISELESS CORK CARPET
DURABLE LINOLEUM
RICH SOFT WILTON
LUXURIOUS AXMINSTER
THICK PILE TURKEY

Woven specially for the purpose
The Largest Stock in the World
The Lowest Prices

BILLIARD MATS at from 50/- per Set

MAPLE & CO
LONDON AND SMYRNA

"TRUTH" HOTEL LIST.

BATH.—LANSDOWN GROVE HOTEL.—Desirable residence, in beautifully wooded grounds, 400 feet above sea level, facing south, and protected from north and east. Air dry and bracing. Assembly and Pump Rooms within easy distance. Omnibus free to and from Hot Mineral Baths. Billiards, Tennis Lawn.

BONCHURCH HOTEL, Bonchurch, Isle of Wight, one mile from Ventnor Station.
A comfortable, quiet, and most beautifully-situated Hotel. Pretty garden. Good sea view.
H. RIBBANDS, Proprietor.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HOTEL MONT DORE.—South aspect. 150 rooms, electric light throughout, passenger lift, first-class cuisine, winter garden and lounge, covered tennis court. Turkish, sea-water, and medicated Baths. The Hotel is within two minutes' walk of the Golf Links.—For tariff, address W. KNEESE, Manager.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HIGHCLIFFE HOTEL. Unrivalled position, West Cliff, full south. Splendid sea view. Table d'hôte (separate tables). Supplies from Alderney Dairy Farm. Telephone 27.—J. KILNER, Proprietor.

BRIGHTON.—BEDFORD HOTEL.—Old-established. Unequalled in situation; opposite West Pier. Spacious coffee and reading rooms; sea-water service; unequalled cuisine; great variety of excellent wines. Moderate tariff. Electric light in all rooms. Passenger lift to all the floors.
GEO. HECKFORD, Manager.

BRIGHTON.—GRAND HOTEL.
Centre of Sea Front. Electric Light throughout. Lift to all floors. Bicycle room. INCLUSIVE TERMS IF DESIRED from 10s. 6d. to 15s. per day. For particulars apply to A. D. HOOK, Manager.

CARBIS BAY HOTEL, Cornwall. The very spot to obtain rest and quietude. Overlooking the finest bay in England. Mild yet bracing climate. Within easy distance of London by G. W. R. Splendid Golf Links. "A more beautiful spot for residence could hardly be imagined." —Truth.

FOLKESTONE.—BATES' HOTEL, West Cliff Gardens, and LONGFORD PRIVATE HOTEL, The Lees. Oldest established and most select Family Hotels in Folkestone. Reduced terms during Winter and Spring months. Pension (new Coffee-room) at Bates' Hotel.—G. L. HART, Proprietor. Sanitation Certified.

FOLKESTONE.—The LEAS HOTEL.—Situated in private grounds. Adjoining fashionable promenade. Sea views. Refurnished throughout. Passenger lift. Certified sanitation. Excellent cuisine. Moderate tariff. Good golf links and tennis court.

GRAND CANARY.—The Newest and Best Hotel is The METROPOLE. Facing the sea. Delightful position.
Terms most moderate.
Agents, ELDER, DEMPSTER & CO., 14, Castle-street, Liverpool, and 4, St. Mary Axe, London, E.C.

JERSEY.—GRAND HOTEL.—Beautifully situated, facing the sea, full south, and sheltered from the north-easterly winds, with all modern comforts and liberal management. Reduced winter terms from October 15th.
D. DE LEIDI, Manager.

MALVERN—The IMPERIAL HOTEL occupies the best position, and receives visitors en pension. The golf-links (18 holes) are one of the best in England. Capital stabling for hunters. Droitwich Brine, Turkish and large Swimming Bath in separate buildings.—For tariff, apply to the Proprietor, F. MOERSCHELL.

SANDGATE.—ROYAL KENT HOTEL, a favourite resort of Ruskin. An ideal summer and winter residence, delightfully situated in its own grounds, facing the sea. Redecorated and refurnished. New Coffee-room, Smoking-room, and Conservatory have recently been added. Fifteen minutes from Folkestone. Omnibus meets all trains Sandgate Station.—J. E. TANARE, Prop.

TORQUAY.—IMPERIAL HOTEL.—Under entirely New Management. New sanitary arrangements throughout. It is the largest and best-situated Hotel in Torquay, and the best winter residence on the South Coast. Visitors received en pension or à la carte. Terms moderate.
F. FISCHER Manager.

BUXTON

DERBYSHIRE.

Highest Town in England.
On the Mountain Limestone.
1,000 feet above sea level.

Centre of the picturesque Peak District. Pure Air. Charming Scenery.

HOT MINERAL-WATER BATHS FOR GOUT, RHEUMATISM, SCIATICA, &c.

NATURAL TEMPERATURE 82° FAHRENHEIT.

Finest Public Gardens at any Health Resort in Europe, with Pavilion, Theatre, Concert-Hall, Tennis, Bowls, etc. Golf Links (18 holes).

For ILLUSTRATED GUIDE, with Tariffs of the leading Hotels, Hydropathics, Boarding and Lodging Houses, send postage-stamp to THE CLERK, COUNCIL OFFICES, TOWN HALL, BUXTON, DERBYSHIRE.

A FINE HOTEL] DOVER [IN DOVER BAY

Accommodates 400 guests. Is superbly appointed, with all the comforts of a well-arranged mansion, at moderate cost. Perfect cuisine. The Dover Golf Links for use of Hotel Burlington visitors. The finest coast hotel in England. Brochure and Tariff free.

Facing the Pleasure Pier and in centre of Dover Bay.

HOTEL BURLINGTON

THE INTERNATIONAL PALACE HOTELS.

CAIRO ..... Shepheard's.
CAIRO ..... Ghezireh Palace.
NICE ..... Riviera Palace.
LISBON ..... Avenida Palace.

London Office, 14, Cockspur-street, S.W.

HASTINGS. Due South, Facing Sea.

QUEEN'S HOTEL,

LARGEST AND BEST APPOINTED.
Sunny, and most sheltered position in Hastings and St. Leonards.
ELECTRIC LIGHT. PASSENGER ELEVATOR.
Moderate Tariff. Hotel Flys attend the trains.
WILLIAM GLADE, Manager.

ILFRACOMBE.

A Charming WINTER RESORT, climate mild and equable.

The ILFRACOMBE HOTEL,

First-class Return Tickets issued from London (Waterloo), L. & S. W. R., from November to March, including seven days' bed, board, and attendance, at the Ilfracombe Hotel, £5. 5s. each, available for one month. Ask for Hotel tickets available by all trains. H. R. GROVER, Manager.

HOMBURG-LES-BAINS.

in the Taunus, at 25 minutes distance from Frankfort-on-the-Maine.
Highly renowned Health Resort. Five Mineral-water Springs.

Results absolutely certain in the Hydropathic Treatment of inflamation of the stomach and intestines, of the laryngeal catarrh, the diseases peculiar to women, complaints of the liver, as well as of hemorrhoids, gout, diabetes, scrofula, and heart diseases. Two ferruginous Springs for anæmia, constitutional weakness and the after-effects of influenza. First-class air-cure. Splendidly installed Bathing Establishments in direct connection with natural gaseous ferrugino-saline waters. Saline Baths, Pine-needle Baths, and Mud-Baths, Douches, Piscinas, Inhaling Hall. Massage and Hydropathic Establishments. Large Park. Big Forests close to the Town. Splendid "Kurhouse." Large Spaces reserved for Lawn-Tennis (26 Courts), Golf, Cricket, Croquet. International Tennis and Golf Matches. Velodrome (races), Excellent Orchestra, Operas, Comedies, Ballets, Fireworks, Luminous Fountains, Flower-Corso, Balls, Horse Races at Frankfort. Plain and Forest Hunting.

Very comfortable Lodgings at all prices. Prices reduced during the months of May, June, and September.

Summer Season from April 15th to October 15th. Winter cures. Strongly recommended for protracted stays. Low communal taxes, good schools, Empress Frederick Lyceum, perfect sanitary appliances, hydraulic canalisation. Sale and delivery of the Mineral Water all the year round. For Prospectus and Illustrated Pamphlets, apply to the Management of the Baths.

HOTELS AND BOARDING-HOUSES IN ALPHABETICAL ORDER:—

ALBION HOUSE FAMILY HOTEL. J. Fuchs.
BELLEVUE HOTEL. W. Fischer.
BLUM HOTEL. Ph. Blum.
BRUNSWICK HOTEL. T. Braunschweig.
BRISTOL HOTEL. H. Meurer.
CENTRAL HOTEL. Weckel Bros.
COURT OF ENGLAND HOTEL. R. Weber.
EAGLE HOTEL. H. Ruppel.
FREYBERG'S PRIVATE HOTEL. H. Freyberg.
GD. HOTEL OF THE FOUR SEASONS. J. C. Schweimler.
KURHOUSE RESTAURANT. J. Tappart.
METROPOLITAN HOTEL. L. Scheller.
QUISISANA HOTEL (Private). Ed. A. Zachmann.
PARK HOTEL. Conrad Rikter.
RIECHELMANN'S SAVOY HOTEL. E. Riechelmann.
ROYAL HOTEL VICTORIA. T. Bachl.
RUSSIA HOTEL. F. A. Laydig
SCHELLER HOTEL. Dornholzhausen.
STRASBURG HOTEL. P. Schmidt.
WINDSOR HOTEL. M. Muller.

£20 TOBACCONISTS COMMENCING. Illd. guide (259 pgs.), 3d. "How to open respectably £20 to £2,000." Tobacconists' Outfitting Co., Euston-rd., Ldn. Hairdressers fitted.—H. MYERS.

AMUSEMENTS.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.
Sole Lessee, Mr. Frederick Harrison.
Managers, Mr. Frederick Harrison and Mr. Cyril Maude.
EVERY EVENING, at 8.30, THE LITTLE MINISTER, by J. M. Barrie.
Miss WINIFRED EMERY and Mr. CYRIL MAUDE.
MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY and SATURDAY, at 2.30.

QUEEN'S HALL.
SUNDAY AFTERNOON CONCERTS.
EVERY SUNDAY, at 3.30.
Conductor, Mr. Henry J. Wood.
The Queen's Hall Grand Orchestra.
Admission free. Reserved seats, 2s., 3s., 1s., and 6d.

ROYAL SOCIETY of PAINTER-ETCHERS and ENGRAVERS.—ANNUAL EXHIBITION of the Society NOW OPEN at the Society's Gallery, No. 5A, Pall Mall East, from 10 to 6. Admission 1s.
A. STEWART, Secretary.

"ECCE HOMO!" Munkacsy's Sacred Masterpiece. This famous Work, containing over 70 figures, is NOW ON VIEW for the first time in London at the DOWDESWELL GALLERIES, 160, New Bond-street. Admission One Shilling. Descriptive pamphlet, 6d. post free. 315,000 people inspected the Picture during its exhibition at Budapest, often at the rate of 7,000 daily.

NEW NIAGARA. SKATING.
Morning, 9.30 to 1; Evening, 8 to 11, 3/-
Afternoon, 3 to 6.30, 5/-
Non-Skaters (Afternoon), 2/6.

BRIGHTON ICE RINK. SKATING.
Morning, 9.30 to 1 Evening, 8 to 11, 2/6
Afternoon, 3 to 6.30, 4/- Non-Skaters, in the Afternoon, 2/-
Monthly Tickets, £2 10s.
SEASON and HALF-SEASON TICKETS issued.

NATIONAL SKATING PALACE (Hengler's), 7, Argyll-street, Regent-street, W.
REAL ICE. OPEN DAILY, 10.30 a.m. to 11 p.m. Admission 3s.

OLYMPIA.
BARNUM AND BAILEY.
GREATEST SHOW ON EARTH.
LAST WEEK BUT ONE.
Positively closing the London Engagement on Saturday, April 2.
Touring the Provinces on 70 American Railway Cars, and Exhibiting the Undivided Show under 12 Mammoth Canvas Pavilions, Seating nearly 15,000 persons.

3 Circus Companies in 3 Rings.
2 Olympian Stages, 1 Huge Race-track.
2 Complete Menageries, 3 Herds of Elephants.
Museum of Living Freaks and Curiosities.
20 Funniest Clowns on Earth.
70 Horses Performing in One Ring.
400 Horses, 2 Droves Camels, Hosts of Queer Animals.
1,001 Marvellous Sights and Wonderful Objects.

LAST TWO WEEKS.
TWO GRAND EXHIBITIONS DAILY,
at 2.0 and 8.0 p.m.
Doors open at 12.30 and 6.30.

Early Gates open (Hammersmith-road) at 12.0 noon and 6.0 p.m. for 3s. seats and upwards. Early entrance fee, 6d. extra.
Owing to the stupendously large show, and the general magnitude of the Exhibitions, necessitating great preparations, the Menageries, Freak, and Horse Fair Departments can only be open from 12.0 to 4.15 p.m., and from 6.0 to 10.30 p.m.
No Promenade Tickets sold. Every ticket entitling holder to a reserved numbered seat, and admitting to all advertised departments without extra charge.
Prices.—Amphitheatre, 1s. and 2s.; Arena seats, 2s., 3s., and 4s.; Balcony seats, 3s.; Stalls, 5s., 7s. 6d.; Private Boxes, 5 and 6 seats, £3 3s.; Single box seats, 10s. 6d. Special prices for Royal Box when not engaged. Children between 4 and 10 years of age half-price to all except 1s. and 2s. seats. Box-office open from 9.0 a.m. to 9.30 p.m.; 1s. and 2s. seats on sale only after doors open. All other seats may be booked in advance at box-office and at usual libraries.

THEATRE TICKETS.—Boxes, Stalls, Balcony, and Upper Circle Seats in the best positions can be had at any office of the DISTRICT MESSENGERS' COMPANY.—Letters and telegrams, 193, Piccadilly.—Seats for every theatre. If you ever want a MESSENGER FOR ANY PURPOSE, to go any distance, at home or abroad, ask for a "DISTRICT MESSENGER." Offices in all parts of London, open Day and Night. Electric call boxes, to summon messengers, are in every first-class club, hotel, and house.

HOTELS, &c.

FOLKESTONE. (180 Apartments.)
WEST CLIFF HOTEL will REOPEN
APRIL 2nd, after extensive Alteration and Additions.
ELECTRIC LIGHT & PASSENGER LIFT.
For Tariff please address Proprietor.

AMUSEMENTS.

LYCEUM.—THE MERCHANT OF VENICE, Matinées Wednesdays and Saturdays, at 2; also Every Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday Nights, at 8. Henry Irving, Miss Ellen Terry.
WATERLOO and THE BELLS, Every Wednesday and Saturday night, at 8, Henry Irving.
Box-office (Mr. J. Hurst) 10 to 5, and 7.30 to 10. Seats also booked by letter or telegram.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.
Proprietor and Manager, Mr. HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE.
TO-NIGHT and EVERY EVENING, at 8.
JULIUS CÆSAR.
MATINEES EVERY WEDNESDAY and SATURDAY, at 2.
Box-office open 10 to 10. Seats booked from 2s. HER MAJESTY'S.

GARRICK.—Lessee, H. T. BRICKWELL.
EVERY EVENING, at 9,
A BRACE OF PARTRIDGES.
Preceded, at 8.5, by THE MUFF OF THE REGIMENT.

SAVOY THEATRE.—Every Evening, at 8.30, and Saturday Afternoons, at 2.30, will be reproduced THE GONDOLIERS, by W. S. Gilbert and Arthur Sullivan. Box-office 9 a.m. to 11 p.m.—R. D'OYLY CARTE, Manager.

COMEDY THEATRE, Panton-street, Haymarket.
Sole Manager, Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY.
EVERY EVENING, at 8.15, a New Play, in Four Acts, entitled
THE SEA FLOWER, by Arthur Law.
Messrs. John Beauchamp, Arthur Playfair, Cosmo Stuart, W. T. Lovell, Frederick Volpé, Goring, Stevenson, Henry Ford, and Charles Groves; Miss Lena Ashwell, Miss Gladys Homfrey (by kind permission of Geo. Edwardes, Esq.), and Miss Eva Moore.
Box-office open 10 to 10. COMEDY THEATRE.

PRINCESS'S.—Mr. ALBERT GILMER, Sole Manager.
ENORMOUS SUCCESS OF THE NEW MELODRAMA.
EVERY EVENING, at 8 o'clock,
HOW LONDON LIVES,
By Martyn Field and Arthur Shirley,
For which Mr. CHARLES WARNER is specially engaged.
Miss Kate Tyndall, Miss Geraldine Olliffe, Mr. Oscar Adye, Mr. Charles Garry, &c.

ST. JAMES'S.—Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER,
Sole Lessee and Manager.
EVERY EVENING, at 8 (LAST NINE NIGHTS), Shakespeare's Comedy of
MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING.
MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY and SATURDAY, at 2.
THE CONQUERORS, by Paul M. Potter, will be produced on THURSDAY, April 14 Box-plan now open 10 to 10. ST. JAMES'S.

DALY'S THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. AUGUSTIN DALY.—EVERY EVENING, and SATURDAY MATINEE. Mr. George Edwardes's Company in THE GEISHA. The book by Owen Hall. Lyrics by Harry Greenbank. Music by Sydney Jones.

COURT THEATRE, Sloane Square.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH.—TO-NIGHT, at 8.30, TRELAWNY OF THE "WELLS," by A. W. Pinero. Doors 8. Commence 8.30. Box-office now open, 10 to 10. Telephone No. 3,031. MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY, at 2.30.

VAUDEVILLE.
Sole Lessees and Managers, A. & S. GATTI.
EVERY EVENING, at 8.20,
MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY, at 2.30,
THE FRENCH MAID,
With New Songs, Dances, and Dresses.
The very successful Musical Comedy by Basil Hood and Walter Slaughter.
Box-office open 10 to 10.

CRITERION THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. CHARLES WYNDHAM.—EVERY EVENING, at 8.15, THE LIARS, by Henry Arthur Jones. Mr. CHARLES WYNDHAM, Miss MARY MOORE, and Company. MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY, at 2.30.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—EVERY EVENING, New Ballet, THE PRESS, and Sporting Sketch, THE RACE. Grand VARIETIES. Doors open at 7.45.

PALACE, Shaftesbury-avenue.—The HANDSOMEST THEATRE in EUROPE. The finest Variety Entertainment in London. Full Licence. Prices from 6d. Doors open 8.—Manager, Mr. CHARLES MORTON.

TIVOLI, Strand, London.—The Greatest Combination of Talent in London.—Open EVERY EVENING, at 7.30, and SATURDAY MATINEE, at 2.30, with a STAR PROGRAMME, embracing every Artiste of note.—Manager, Mr. VERNON DOWSETT.

LONDON PAVILION.—Signor Pepi, Charles Godfrey, Florrie Forde, Chas. E. Edwards, Jessie Lindsay, George Lashwood, Emma Pollock, Marie Collins, and many others. Prices 1s. to £3 3s.—Manager, Mr. FRANK GLENISTER.

MADAME TUSSAUD'S EXHIBITION, Baker-street Station.—Relics of H.M. Queen Victoria. Beautiful Copper-plate Etchings executed by H.M. The Queen and the late Prince Consort.—Admission 1s. Children under Twelve, 6d. Extra rooms, 6d.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—SATURDAY CONCERTS, Saturday Next, March 26. In Memorsam Ludwig Van Beethoven, who died March 26, 1827. Vocalist, Miss Marie Berg. Solo Violinist, Lady Hallé. The Crystal Palace Orchestra. Conductor, Mr. August Manns. Seats 1s to 4s

OXFORD and CAMBRIDGE BOAT RACE, by LONDON and SOUTH WESTERN RAILWAY, On SATURDAY, 26th MARCH. PUTNEY in Fifteen minutes. ORDINARY FARES charged by all Trains, Special and Ordinary. TRAINS from WATERLOO, VAUXHALL, and CLAPHAM JUNCTION to PUTNEY, BARNES and MORTLAKE, at frequent intervals, as required, from 2.0 p.m., returning after the Race.

TRAINS leave LUDGATE HILL at 11.29 a.m., 12.20, 1.35, 2.25 and 3.17 p.m. for HAMMERSMITH, arriving at 12.12 p.m., 1.3, 2.22, 3.8 and 4.1 p.m. respectively. These Trains call at Borough-road, Elephant and Castle, Walworth-road, Camberwell New-road, Loughborough Junction, Brixton and Clapham-road.

The Company's Station at Putney is very near the starting point, and Mortlake Station is within a few hundred yards of the finish of the Race.

The West End Office, 30, Regent-street; the Central Office, 9, Grand Hotel-buildings, Charing Cross, will be kept open until 10.0 p.m., and the City Office, Exeter-buildings, Arthur-street west, London Bridge, until 8.0 p.m. on Friday, 25th March, for the Sale of Barnes Bridge. and other Tickets.

CHAS. J. OWENS, General Manager.

FOR KLONDIKE,

Passengers should book to Vancouver City, terminus of the CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY. The arrival platform is the departure wharf of all Klondike steamers. Complete outfits can be purchased in Vancouver City cheaper than in the United States. Purchasers save not only in first cost, but escape all Customs duties. Remember Klondike is in Canada. All outfits purchased elsewhere pay an average duty of 30 per cent. Steamers leave Vancouver City regularly direct for the Kloudike.—Apply, CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY OFFICES, 67 and 68, King William-street, London Bridge, E.C.; 30, Cockspur-street, Trafalgar-square, W.C.; or ALLAN BROTHERS & CO., Liverpool.

Vancouver Board of Trade,
W. GODFREY, President.

TEN-GUINEA ROME TOUR.

Organised by Dr. Lunn and Mr. Perowne.

Extensions: NAPLES, FLORENCE, VENICE, RIVIERA.

Lectures by Dean Farrar. Dover-Calais Route.

SECRETARY, 5, Endsleigh Gardens, London, N.W.

JAPAN, CHINA, AUSTRALIA, HONOLULU, FIJI, NEW ZEALAND, and ROUND THE WORLD.

CANADIAN PACIFIC ROUTE,

For berths or descriptive pamphlets, apply CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY, 67 and 68, King William-street, London Bridge, or 30, Cockspur-street, Trafalgar-square, S.W.

Best is Cheapest. Fixed prices.

TRADE MARK

DR. JAEGER'S SANITARY WOOLLEN SYSTEM CO. LTD. SOLE CONCESSIONARIES. PURE WARRANTED WOOL

PROTECTION FROM CHILL.

Jaeger

PURE WOOL

Underwear, Hose, Pyjamas, Rugs, Blankets. Cashmere Sheets, Dressing Gowns, Shawls, Corsets, Cycling Outfits, Boots & Shoes, Hats and Caps, &c., &c.

"Health Culture" and Jaeger Price List Free.

3 and 4, PRINCES-STREET, CAVENDISH-SQUARE (near Regent-circus).
126, REGENT-STREET (near the Quadrant).
30, SLOANE-STREET (adjoining McPherson's Gymnasium).
456, STRAND (near Trafalgar-square).
85 and 86, CHEAPSIDE (near King-street).
TAILORING (only):—
42, CONDUIT-STREET, NEW BOND-STREET, W.

Toilet "Lanoline". For Delicate and Sensitive Skins. 6D. AND 1S.

"LANOLINE" Toilet Preparations "LANOLINE"

Darting Brand. from all Chemists.

Wholesale Depôt:—67 HOLBORN VIADUCT, LONDON.

"Lanoline" Toilet Soap For Health and Beauty of the Skin. 6D. PER TABLET. 3 IN A BOX 1S. 6D.

CARTER 6A NEW CAVENDISH ST. PORTLAND PLACE, LONDON.

ONLY ADDRESS OF ORIGINAL CARTER

LITERARY MACHINE.

For holding book, lamp, meals, &c., in any position over an easychair, bed, or sofa. Deliciously luxurious. A most useful gift. Prices from 17/6

INVALID FURNITURE.

ADJUSTABLE COUCHES and BEDS from £1. 10/-

Bed Lift £3. 10/- Reclining Boards, 25/- Walking Machines Portable W.C.'s. Electric Bells, Urinals, &c. Air & Water Beds.

Bed Rests 7/6 Leg Rests 10/- Crutches 10/6 Bed Baths 12 6 Commodes, £1. 5/-

Carrying Chairs from £1.

Breakfast in Bed Tables from 30/-

Self-Propelling Chairs from £2

BATH CHAIRS FROM £1. 5/-

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES POST FREE.

JOHN CARTER, 6a, NEW CAVENDISH ST. Portland-pl. London, W.

CLARKE'S PATENT "PYRAMID" FOOD WARMER.

INVALUABLE IN EVERY HOUSE WORTH ITS WEIGHT IN GOLD SOLD EVERYWHERE. 2/6, 3/6, 5/- AND 6/- EACH.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

Clarke's "Pyramid" & "Fairy" Light Co., Ltd., Cricklewood, London, N.W.

WATER ABSOLUTELY FREE FROM DISEASE GERMS, BY USING THE

BERKEFELD FILTER.

Full Illustrated Price List and Testimonials free on application.

A. SERVICE PIPE FROM MAIN. B. INLET TO FILTER. C. OUTLET OF FILTERED WATER. D. FLUSH TAP.

FILTER H. AS SKETCH, 42s.

SMALLER SIZE, 25s.

Extract from the Special Report to the British Medical Journal on "The Relative Efficiency of Water Filters," by Drs. Sims Woodhead and Cartwright Wood, Jan. 22nd, 1898. "Experiments were carried out with the Filter H., an exceedingly good model which seems to subserve the functions of a Filter better than any we have yet seen described. . . . The output is so large that there is no reason why such Filters should not supply sufficient water for all household requirements. These Berkefeld Filters afford complete protection against the communication of waterborne disease."—Offices and Showrooms:—

THE BERKEFELD FILTER CO., Ltd., 121, Oxford-street, London, W.

City Depot: W. SCHACHT & CO., 26, Finsbury-pavement, London, E.C.

VINOLIA TOILET REQUISITES.

4d PREMIER VINOLIA SOAP
(For Family Use).

For Delicate, Sensitive, Irritable Skins.

The CHEMIST AND DRUGGIST reports:
"An ideal soap, delightfully perfumed."

1/- per box of 3 Tablets.

6d FLORAL VINOLIA SOAP
(For Private Use).

Keeps the Skin as soft as Velvet.

The MEDICAL NEWS reports:
"Beautifully emollient and softening to the skin."

1/6 per box of 3 Tablets.

10d TOILET VINOLIA SOAP
(OTTO)

Scented with Choice Otto of Rose Perfume.

Beautifies the Complexion.

The GENTLEWOMAN reports:
"Strongly recommended to keep the skin smooth and free from roughness."

2/6 per Box of 3 Tablets.

6d BLONDEAU PERFUMES
Concentrated, Delicate, Pure.

*Vinolia Bouquet, *Marequil, *Jequilla, *Losaria, Wood Violet, White Heliotrope, Ess. Bouquet, Frangipanni, Jockey Club, Maréchal Niel, Millefleur, White Rose, Jasmin, Musk Rose, Honeysuckle, New Mown Hay, Lily of the Valley, Violet, | *Rhine Violets, | Peau d'Espagne, Rondeletia, Hyacinth, Ylang Ylang, Stephanotis, Opoponax, Patchouli, Musk, Ambergris, Amaryllis, White Lilac, Narcissus, Chypre, Violette de Parme, Mignonette, Clematis, Wallflower.

6d., 1/-, 1/3, 2/-, 3/-, and 5/- per bottle.
*These perfumes are not supplied in the 6d. quality.

1/- VINOLIA HAIR WASH

DRY. Freshens and cleanses the Hair, and preserves it free from any oily moist appearance.

MOIST. Imparts a natural gloss to the Hair.

1/- per Bottle.

Each in 3 odours: Portugal, Rose, and Violet.

1/1½ VINOLIA CREAM

For Itching. Face Spots. Eczema.

The LANCET reports:
"An emollient cream for the skin in eczema, rash, eruptions, &c."

1/1½, 1/9, 3/6, and 6/- per Box.

1/- VINOLIA POWDER

For Redness, Roughness, Toilet Nursery, &c.

The LADY'S PICTORIAL reports:
"Superseding the old-fashioned toilet powders which are apt to cause acne spots on the face by blocking up the pores of the skin."

In White, Pink, and Cream Tints.
1/-, 1/9, 3/6, and 6/- per Box.

VINOLIA SHAVING SOAP.
6d

(STICKS AND FLAT CAKES.)
Causes no Blotches.
STICKS: Premier 6d., Toilet 1/-, 1/6, 2/6, Vestal 2/-.
FLAT CAKES: Premier 1/-, Toilet 2/-, Vestal 2/6.

6d LYPSYL.

A Coralline Emollient for Dry, Rough, Cracked, or Pallid Lips.
In Rose-Red and White Tints, 6d. and 1/- a Tube.

6d VINOLIA LAVENDER WATER.

Natural and Very Lasting.

Contains the finest Essential Oils, Concentrated, therefore the Most Economical.

In 1-oz., 2-oz., 4-oz., and 8-oz. Bottles, 6d., 1/-, 2/-, and 3/6.

2d BLONDEAU CHOICE TOILET SOAPS.

Guaranteed Neutral and Pure.

1/- per Box of 6 Tablets.
(Assorted Colours and Perfumes).

6d VINOLIA DENTIFRICE

Aromatic, Tonic, Refreshing, Preservative.

Keeps the Teeth Ivory White.

Premier, in Round Box and Glass Bottle, 6d.
English—2/6.
American—1/6.

6d BLONDEAU CARBOLIC TOOTH POWDER.

Makes the Teeth White, the Breath Sweet, and the Gums strong.

In Round Metal Box, 6d. & 1/-

6d VINOLIA TOOTH PASTE.

Delicately Perfumed.

Whitens and Cleanses the Teeth, without in any way injuriously affecting the dental structure.

In Collapsable Tube, 6d.

6d BLONDEAU INEXHAUSTIBLE LAVENDER SMELLING SALTS.

These Smelling Salts are of exceptional Strength and most Refreshing. They are agreeably scented, the pleasant odour of Lavender being very pronounced.

6d. per Bottle.

6d VINOLIA EAU DE COLOGNE.

Fragrant. Refreshing.
As fine as can possibly be made.

The "Court Circular" reports:
"Vinolia Eau de Cologne we consider is absolutely unequalled for strength, purity, and delicacy of aroma."

1/-, 2/-, 3/3, and 5/6.

3d per 2-oz. Packet. VINOLIA VIOLET POWDER.

Sanitary. Antiseptic. Soothing.

Specially prepared for Toilet and Nursery use.

In 2-oz. and ¼-lb. Packets, 3d. & 6d.
In ¼-lb. Tins, 6d.

THE advice of the Doctor is undoubtedly the best you can possibly have, and when this gentleman is the Medical Officer of an important ship, he must know a great deal about Sea-Sickness. Sufferers from this distressing malady will be interested in reading what, in the opinion of several well-known Ships' Surgeons, is the best way of preventing or curing it.

ADVICE TO THE SEA-SICK

Dr. R. C. ROBERTSON, of the Anchor Line Steamer "Furnessia," says:—"My short experience has led me to consider CHLOROBROM, a most valuable remedy. Of its value as a palliative there can be no doubt. During the second stage of Sea Sickness, in which Nausea, Retching, Headache, Sleeplessness, and Prostration make life for days and weeks a real burden to many, CHLOROBROM acts in the most kindly way. Several passengers who were confirmed bad sailors, and who were ignorant of the nature of the medicine they were taking, expressed in decided terms their opinion of its good effects, and begged me to let them have a bottle to keep by them."

Dr. GEO. BARBER, Surgeon P. and O. Service, says:—"We met with the usual heavy monsoon from Bombay to Aden—six days—and I found Chlorobrom extremely useful."

PROFESSOR CHARTERIS, Professor at the University of Glasgow, had considerable experience of the effect of Cholorobrom in the treatment of Sea Sickness, and he says:—"I have no hesitation in saying that if administered in a sensible and thorough manner, Chlorobrom will effectively meet each and every symptom of the dreaded sickness."

Dr. JAMES MUNRO, of the Clan Line; Dr. MUAT, of the "Buchanan"; Dr. ARCHIBALD LEISHMAN, of the Transport "Dilwara"; Dr BELCHER, of the Cunard Service; Dr. H. JOHN BOYD, of the "City of Rome," and many others, are all impressed with the value of CHLOROBROM in Sea Sickness.

From the SOLE Proprietors and Manufacturers, BURGOYNE, BURBIDGES, & COMPY., 16, Coleman-street, London, for 2/9, 4/6, and 7/- a bottle. Travellers should send for a supply.

The Public Benefactor.

HOVIS BREAD

DISTRIBUTES HEALTH.

No loaf genuine unless stamped HOVIS.

All good class Bakers make and sell Hovis.

Hovis Flour and Biscuits can be obtained from all leading Bakers and Grocers, or 6d. and 1s. samples will be sent on receipt of stamps by—

S. FITTON & SON, Hovis Mills, Macclesfield.

SPRING CLEANING MADE EASY

BY USING

CLEANSINE, the Liquid Cleanser for Carpets, Rugs, Curtains, and all Wood Work.

A CHILD CAN USE IT, and make the Carpet look like new. Its use restores the Colour, and removes all stains and dirt. Illustrated Pamphlet sent free on receipt of self addressed wrapper. For OUR SPECIAL "FREE CLEANING" OFFER for this week only, see this week's Christian Million. Price 2s. 3d. per gallon. Send postal order to

CLEANSINE (1898), LIMITED,

119, Holland Park Avenue, Kensington, London.

Telephone, No. 90, Hammersmith.

GAMAGE'S GREAT PURCHASE

A Golden Opportunity.

11,000 20TH CENTURY LAMPS

Enamelled Black.	Nickel Plated.	Aluminium.
3/8.	4/11.	6/11.

1898 Patterns ... 7/11.

Postage 4d.

A. W. GAMAGE, Ltd., 126 to 129, Holborn, E.C.

Goddard's Plate Powder

SIX GOLD MEDALS.

Non-Mercurial.

THE BEST and SAFEST article for CLEANING SILVER and ELECTRO PLATE. Sold in Boxes, 1s., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d. each, by Grocers, Oilmen, Chemists, &c., everywhere.

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER

Prevents the Hair from falling off.
Restores Grey or White Hair to its ORIGINAL COLOUR.
Being delicately perfumed it leaves no unpleasant odour.
IS NOT a dye, and therefore does not stain the skin or even white linen.
Should be in every house where a HAIR RENEWER is needed.
Ask your Chemist or Hairdresser for

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Price 3s. 6d. per large Bottle.

Prepared only by the

ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG COMPANY, Ltd.,

33, FARRINGDON ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

FLORILINE

FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH.

IS THE BEST LIQUID DENTIFRICE IN THE WORLD.

Prevents the Decay of Teeth.
Renders the Teeth Pearly White.
Is perfectly Harmless and Delicious to the Taste.

Of all Chemists and Perfumers throughout the World 2s. 6d. per Bottle.

FLORILINE TOOTH POWDER.

Put up in Glass Jars, price 1s.

PHILLIPS'S,

WHITE KITCHEN PANS.

About	s. d.	About	s. d.
4 in. ...	0 4	12 in. ...	1 8
5 in. ..	0 5	13 in. ...	2 0
6 in. ...	0 6	14 in. ...	2 4
7 in. ...	0 7½	15 in. ...	3 1
8 in. ...	0 8½	16 in. ...	4 0
9 in. ...	0 11	17 in. ...	5 3
10 in. ...	1 2	18 in. ...	6 8
11 in. ...	1 4

New Department of KITCHEN WARES of Finest Quality, at 5 per cent. under Store Prices on their terms, Cash. The prices shown are Store Prices. We give 5 per cent. off these.

Her Majesty's Potters and Glass Manufacturers,

17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, MOUNT ST. GROSVENOR SQ. W.

WEDDING PRESENTS

BREAKFAST SETS.
LUNCHEON SETS.
DINNER SETS.
DESSERT SETS.
TEA SETS.
GLASS SETS.
TOILET SETS.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

Candles always remain same height, no waste, no dirt, no smell.

Candles cannot gutter, shades cannot take fire.

They fit in any candlestick, and exactly resemble wax candles when in use.

The saving in candles, &c., more than pays for the cost of lamps in a few weeks.

PRICE, from 4/- each, COMPLETE.

Illustrated Price List and Catalogue of Latest Novelties of Table Decoration and Lighting FREE.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

Or can be seen in great variety at the Show Rooms of THE

ARCTIC LIGHT CO.,

179, RECENT ST., LONDON, W.
(Nearly opposite Liberty's).

Wholesale Offices: 49, HATTON-GARDEN, E.C

SALE OF

SILVER PENCILS.

Having purchased a huge Stock of 6s. 6d. and 8s. Solid Silver Hall Marked Pencils at an all-round price of 1s. 9½d. each, we are clearing them as follows:—

1,020 to be Sold at 9d. each.
750 to be Sold at 1s. 3d. each.
1,892 to be Sold at 2s. 11d. each.

WATCHMAKERS' ALLIANCE LTD.,

227, Regent-st., & 184, Oxford-st., London.

"COOPER" CYCLES.

From £5 10. Competition Defied.

Latest design Frame, large Weldless Steel Tubes, Ball Bearings, Tangent Wheels, Brake, and Mud-guards, Cushion Tyres, £5 10; Pneumatic, £7 10; Ladies', with Dress and Gear Guards, from £6. Twelve months' warranty. Lists free. AGENTS WANTED

Wm. Cooper, 753, Old Kent Rd., London, S.E

"The Old Favourite."

MAX GREGER'S CARLOWITZ

SAFEST,
SOUNDEST
Dinner Wine.

PURE
HUNGARIAN BURGUNDY.

From 15/- per doz.

Of all Wine Merchants and Grocers.

See that every cork bears the brand "Max Greger." Without it the wine is not genuine.

USE ONLY

BLAISDELL PENCILS

SELF-POINTING.

ALL COLOURS. ALL GRADES.
NO WASTE. BEST LEADS.

Black Lead 1d. & 2d. Coloured Crayons 2d. & 3d.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

Sample Box of 5 Pencils 1s., Free by Post in the U.K.

BLAISDELL PENCILS, Ltd., 46, Holborn Viaduct, London, E.C.

The Best CHAINLESS Cycle!

THE BANTAM.

With Registered "Alpha" Frame.

Simple, Compact, Durable, Speedy. Thoroughly tested for four years, and greatly improved for 1898. Send for Price List and "Notes on the Bantam;" also particulars of the Crypto Safety and other patterns.

CRYPTO WORKS CO., LTD.,
29, CLERKENWELL ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

THE PATENT "RIGID-CURVE" STROP.

FOR THE HOLLOW GROUND RAZOR.

An English Gentleman, J.P., F.R.S., M.I.C.E., M.I.E.E., M.I.M.E., &c., Managing Director of a big Engineering Business, writes as follows:—"I have tried your Razor Strop, and have pleasure in sending you this Testimonial:—It is a simple and sure means of securing a proper cutting edge upon a Razor, and I am surprised that such an improvement has been so long delayed. Its advantage is, in my opinion, beyond question." Price 3s. 6d., carriage paid. Full money returned any time within a month if not approved.

A. HOWARTH, 53, Penn-road, Wolverhampton.

THE HOME and COLONIAL STORES, LIMITED,
Share Transfer and Dividend Office,
2 and 4, Paul-street, Finsbury,
London, E.C., March 17th, 1898.

NOTICE is hereby given that the TRANSFER and REGISTRATION BOOKS of the Home and Colonial Stores, Limited, will be CLOSED from the 24th to 31st inst., preparatory to payment of the usual Quarterly Dividend upon the Six per Cent. Cumulative Preference Shares. Dividend Warrants will be remitted on the evening of March 31st to all Preference Shareholders whose names are on the Register on 24th inst.

NOTICE is also given that the Directors have declared an Interim Dividend upon the Ordinary Shares for the quarter ending March 26th, of Three Shillings per Share (less Income Tax) payable on and after April 1st at the banking house of Messrs. Glyn, Mills, Currie & Co., 67, Lombard-street, where Coupon No. 3, attached to the Share Warrants to Bearer, should be lodged three clear days in advance.

By order of the Board,
ALFRED PIGOTT,
Registrar.

A REMARKABLE PIPE! Why? Because

The "MASTA" Pipe

Absolutely carries out what is claimed for it—viz., Simplicity of Construction, Perfect Freedom from Nicotine, No Choking, Cool, Dry, Sweet, Clean, & Healthful Smoking.

Prices from 1/6, 2/6, 3/6. Your Tobacconist will supply it. If any delay, write The "Masta" Patent Pipe Co., 153, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

What Smokers say:—JOHN PHILLIPS, 67, Frogmore-street, Abergavenny, Oct. 18th, 1897, writes—"Have smoked your 'Masta' Pipe for eight months. It is without doubt the Driest, Cleanest, and Best pipe I ever put in my mouth."

HAVE YOU TRIED . .
CEPHALIA
For HAY FEVER, NEURALGIC PAINS, & COLDS in the HEAD, &c.?
If not, send 13½d. for a Box to
REECE & CO., Medical Hall, Piccadilly, London.
EFFECT SIMPLY MIRACULOUS.

THE HOMACOUSTIC.

WHAT IS THE HOMACOUSTIC?

THE HOMACOUSTIC is a contrivance connected with Speaking Tubes, which entirely supersedes for indoor purposes not only the Telephone, but all other existing arrangements for indoor inter-communication.

THE HOMACOUSTIC
Is Automatic, not Mechanical. Once fixed always in Working Order. Its first cost is its last cost.

WITH THE HOMACOUSTIC
There is no blowing into pipes. The automatic whistle is always in position. One speaks and listens at the same time. The tube is closed when not in actual use. Ordinary speaking tubes can be utilised.

ONE (No. 4) HOMACOUSTIC
Places the speaker in communication with any Number of Rooms.

THE HOMACOUSTIC
Is of special value and inestimable convenience not only in business establishments, but in all Private Houses.

TESTIMONIALS.

Atlas Assurance Company, Fire and Life, 92, Cheapside, London, E.C.

Dear Sir,—I have pleasure in stating that I have had one of your Homacoustic Speaking Tube Commutators and Instruments in my room, communicating with seven departments in this office, and that I find the same to work admirably. It is a vast improvement on the old method of a separate mouthpiece for each tube, and it is an invention which I think needs only to be known to command very wide adoption.—I am, dear sir, yours faithfully,

SAML. J. PIPKIN Secretary.

The Central London Throat and Ear Hospital,
Gray's Inn-road, W.C.,
December 14, 1891.

I have much pleasure in testifying to the excellence of the principle of the Homacoustic Speaking Tube Instruments, as well as to the perfect workmanship of the tubes fitted at this Hospital.

Quite independently of sanitary reasons it is decidedly more agreeable to have a Speaking Tube by which all blowing and breathing into the face are avoided. There is no difficulty whatever in its employment.

LENNOX BROWNE, F.R.C.S.E.,
Senior Surgeon to the Hospital.

SHOW ROOMS: 6, Bruton Street, New Bond Street.

Of all Speaking-Tube Fitters, or
THE HOMACOUSTIC SPEAKING TUBE CO.

Lewis and Allenby LTD.,

193, 195, & 197, REGENT ST.,
And
60, 61, 62, 63, 64, & 65, CONDUIT ST., W.

Silk Mercers, Costumiers, &c.

High reputation for 80 years for Ladies' Dress Requirements.

Unrivalled for GENUINE QUALITY and Moderate Prices.

CHOICEST NOVELTIES FOR THE SPRING SEASON

NOW ON VIEW IN EVERY DEPARTMENT.

SERVANTS! SERVANTS!! SERVANTS!!!

FOR
THOROUGHLY RELIABLE SERVANTS
With personal characters for London or country, also foreign servants. Apply to the BELGRAVE LADIES' AGENCY,
SOLE OFFICES,
83, EBURY-STREET.

Also job servants with references taken up before recommendation can be had on the shortest notice.

LONDON AND COUNTY ADVANCE AND DISCOUNT COMPANY, Limited.—Cash advanced from £10 to £500, without preliminary fees or deductions for interest, for short or long periods, repayable by easy instalments, at moderate rates, upon approved security. Bills Discounted. Forms free. Offices, 57 and 58, Chancery-lane, W.C.—JOHN STONE, Secretary.

'ONE PIECE' STUDS
PATENTED Unbreakable.
Beautifully Formed. AVOID IMITATIONS.

No one who appreciates a nice Stud wears any other.
None Genuine Unless Stamped Patent.
Sold by all Leading Jewellers.
WHOLESALE ONLY, SAUNDERS & SHEPHERD, LONDON.

LIQUEURS OF THE GRANDE CHARTREUSE.

These delicious Liqueurs, which have come so much into public favour on account of their wonderful properties of aiding Digestion and preventing Dyspepsia, can now be had of all the principal Wine and Spirit Merchants, and all good Hotels and Restaurants throughout the Kingdom.
Sole Consignee: W. DOYLE, 35, Crutched Friars, London, E.C.

FOR COMPLAINTS of the STOMACH, LIVER, etc., DRINK
VICHY CELESTINS Spring
Sold by all Chemists, Druggists and Grocers throughout the kingdom.
Sole Importers: INGRAM & ROYLE, Ltd, 26, Upper Thames Street, LONDON, E.C.

THE SMELTING CORPORATION, Limited.

(Incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1893).—Capital, £600,000, in 600,000 Ordinary Shares of £1 each, of which 350,000 Shares are taken by the Vendors in part payment. APPLICATIONS are INVITED for 250,000 ORDINARY SHARES. The Shares will be paid for as follows:—On Application 2s. 6d.; on Allotment, 7s. 6d.; on May 1st, 5s.; on July 1st, 5s.

DIRECTORS.

The Right Hon. William Lidderdale, 2, Fenchurch-avenue, E.C., Chairman.
Henry Allhusen, M.P., Stoke Court, Bucks.
Cosmo Bevan, of 54, Lombard street, E.C.
Sir Gerald Fitzgerald, K.C.M.G. (of the Anglo-American Telegraph Company, Limited).
H. De la Rue, Six Mile Bottom, Cambridge.
Wilberforce Bryant (Chairman of Bryant and May, Limited). } Directors of the Vendor Syndicate.
H. E. Fry, of Messrs. Fry, Everitt & Co., Swansea. }

BANKERS.—Barclay & Company, Limited, 54 Lombard-street, E.C., and Branches.

SOLICITORS.

Murray, Hutchins, Stirling, & Murray, 11, Birchin-lane, E.C. (for the Company).
Dixon, Weld, & Dixons, 1, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C. (for the Vendors).

BROKERS.—Ellis & Co., 2, Royal Exchange-buildings, E.C.

AUDITORS.—Price, Waterhouse, & Co., 44, Gresham-street, E.C.

CONSULTING ENGINEER.—W. B. Devereux (of New York).

SECRETARY AND OFFICES (pro tem.).—W. J. Bessex, 95, Billiter-buildings, E.C.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

This Company is formed for the purpose of acquiring from the Burnham Syndicate, Limited, their Business and Patent Rights for the treatment of Refractory Sulphide Ores of Silver, Lead, Zinc, Gold, &c.

The assets which the Company acquires consist of—

1. The Patents held by the Burnham Syndicate, Limited, for the United Kingdom,	Victoria,

United States of America,	West Australia,
Canada,	Tasmania,
New South Wales,	Queensland,
South Australia,	Mexico.

2. The right to 80,000 fully-paid Shares of £1 each in the West Prussian Mining Company, Limited, out of a total of 310,000 Shares, subject to the performance of the obligations of the Syndicate under an Agreement, dated 7th December, 1897, by which the Syndicate sold to the Company Letters Patent relating to the invention for certain Continental countries obtained and to be obtained, with all patent rights relating to the invention, and any improvements for the whole of Europe, except the United Kingdom, and the obligations of which Agreement are to be undertaken by this Company.

3. The Vendors' interest in the smelting works at Llamsamlet, near Swansea, together with the benefit of all existing contracts for ore.

The purchase price has been fixed by the Vendors at £430,000, payable as to £80,000 in cash, and as to £350,000 in £1 fully-paid Shares. This leaves £170,000 available for the construction and extension of works and for working capital.

Refractory sulphide ores of silver, lead, zinc, &c., exist, as is well known, in practically unlimited quantities, notably in the Australian Broken Hill group of Mines, and in the United States of America. The presence of zinc in the ores prevents their treatment by ordinary methods, and the solution of this difficulty has occupied the attention of metallurgists for many years.

On 27th June, 1895, a patent for the United Kingdom was granted to Mr. H. E. Fry and others for the treatment of these ores by means of sulphate of soda and oxide of iron. The patents for the other countries were granted subsequently. The leading feature of the invention consists in smelting the ore (after roasting) with a flux prepared by mixing and melting sulphate of soda and burnt pyrites, or other such like material. This flux has the property of combining with the zinc contents of the ore, and forming therewith a liquid slag.

These Patents, including those sold to the West Prussian Mining Company, Limited, were acquired by the Burnham Syndicate, Limited, from Mr. H. E. Fry and his associates, and operations conducted by them have proved to their entire satisfaction their practical and commercial value.

A Smelting Plant has been at work at Swansea for nearly two years, but continuous operations did not commence until after January 31st, 1897. The Directors have obtained a Report from Messrs. Price, Waterhouse & Co., upon the results of the eleven months ending December 31st, 1897, which may be inspected at the Company's Offices. This Report shows that during that period 10,872 tons of ore were treated at a smelting profit of £9,521 18s. 10d., exclusive of the profit to be obtained by the desilverising of the lead. These results have been obtained with works constructed for entirely different purposes, and the expenditure incurred in adapting them during the said period has been charged as part of the cost of treatment, of which it represents a considerable portion. Moreover, there are no mechanical appliances, thus necessitating the use of hand labour throughout; and the zinc plant is two miles distant from the rest of the works. The contents of the ore treated have been on an average 31.8 oz. silver, 26.3 per cent. lead, 26 per cent. zinc, 1½dwt. gold per ton.

The Directors of this Company determined, notwithstanding the above satisfactory results, to employ an independent expert of known ability to investigate and report on the process, and selected Mr. August Raht, late Manager of Messrs. Guggenheim's Works, at New Jersey and elsewhere, for this purpose. His Report may be seen in full at the Offices of the Company.

His estimate of profits, based on the treatment of not less than 120 tons of ore per day, and containing on an average 28 oz. of silver, 27 per cent. of lead, and 22 per cent. of zinc per ton, is as follows:—

PROCEEDS OF METALS FROM ONE TON OF ORE.

	Percentage Recovered.	Quantity Recovered.	Price of Metal.	Value.
Silver ...	90 ...	25.2 oz.	28½d. per oz. (fine)	£2 19 10
Lead ...	87 ...	23.5 per cent. per ton	£12 10s. (per ton).	2 18 9
Zinc.....	70 ...	15.4 per cent. per ton	2s. 1d. (per unit).	1 12 1
					£7 10 8

Deduct cost as follows:—

Net amount paid for a ton of ore	£3 3 0
Cost of treatment per ton of ore	2 4 8
		5 7 8
Leaving an estimated profit per ton of ore of		£2 3 0

In purchasing these ores it is customary to pay for the full assay value of the silver and lead contained in them, but nothing is charged for zinc or other bye-products, and a rebate is allowed for cost of treatment, varying as a rule from £3 10s. to £3 15s. per ton, which is taken into consideration in the above estimate of the net amount paid for a ton of ore. A variation in the price of silver or lead would, therefore, not affect the profits as shown above, as the ore would be paid for at a correspondingly higher or lower price.

The selling price of zinc—viz., 2s. 1d. per unit—is that paid at present by zinc works for the oxide of zinc produced at Swansea, and is based on metallic zinc at £17 per ton.

The Directors of this Company have satisfied themselves that all necessary supplies of ore will be obtainable without difficulty on similar terms to those stated above in Mr. Raht's estimate of profits.

The following contract has been entered into by the Company:—

An Agreement for the acquisition of the property between the Burnham Syndicate, Limited, of the one part, and the Company of the other part, dated March 17th, 1898.

There are also contracts relating to the formation of the Company and the underwriting of its capital, and trade contracts, too numerous to specify, with the Burnham Syndicate, Limited, including the contracts for supply of ore, and each applicant shall be deemed by his application to have waived as against the Company, and each Director or other person authorising the issue hereof, any right or claim consequent upon the non-disclosure of their contents, or the failure to set out the dates of and the names of the parties to the several contracts respectively.

All expenses in connection with the formation of the Company up to date of allotment will be borne by the Vendors.

Applications for the Shares are to be made to Barclay & Company, Limited, 54, Lombard-street, E.C., and Branches, on the form accompanying the Prospectus.

If no allotment is made the application money will be returned in full, and when the amount allotted is less than that applied for, the balance will be applied towards the payment due on allotment. Failure to pay any instalment when due will render previous payments liable to forfeiture.

Copies of the Memorandum and Articles of Association, and of the Agreements, Valuation, and Reports can be inspected at the Offices of the Solicitors.

Prospectuses and Forms of Application can be obtained at the Offices of the Company, and from the Bankers and Brokers.

Dated March 18th, 1898.

SUN INSURANCE OFFICE
63, Threadneedle-street, London, E.C.

THE OLDEST PURELY FIRE OFFICE IN THE WORLD

SUN FIRE OFFICE FOUNDED 1710

SUM INSURED IN 1896 - £388 952,800.

PRUDENTIAL ASSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.—Holborn Bars, London.

EVERY DESCRIPTION OF LIFE ASSURANCE AND ANNUITY BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
REVERSIONS PURCHASED.

Invested Funds, £30,000,000.

The last Annual Report can be obtained on application to the Secretary.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE INSURERS.
THE IMPERIAL INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED. FIRE. Est. 1803, 1, Old Broad-st., E.C., & 22, Pall Mall, S.W. Subd. Capital, £1,200,000. Paid-up, £300,000. Total funds, over £1,500,000.—E. COZENS SMITH, Gen. Man.

BIRKBECK BANK (Estab. 1851), Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane, London. Two and a-half per cent. interest allowed on deposits, repayable on demand. Two per cent. on current accounts, on the minimum monthly balances when not below £100.
The BIRKBECK ALMANACK with particulars, post free.
FRANCIS RAVENSCROFT, Manager.

H. HALFORD and COMPANY, 70 and 71, Palmerston Buildings, Old Broad Street, London.
ESTABLISHED 1869.

Business in Stocks and Shares at close prices.
Dealings reported by wire if required.
Prompt Settlements.
Thousands of Testimonials from Clients.
Americans and Canadians a Speciality. Also Westralians and Kaffirs.
Lists of Closing Prices gratis.
Telegrams: "Monitor, London."
NO CONNECTION WITH ANY OTHER FIRM.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

NOTICE.

No Member of the Stock Exchange is allowed to advertise for business purposes, or to issue circulars to persons other than his own principals.

Persons who advertise as Brokers or Share Dealers are not Members of the Stock Exchange, or under the control of the Committee.

A List of Members of the Stock Exchange who are Stock and Share Brokers may be seen at the Bartholomew-lane Entrance to the Bank of England, or obtained on application to

EDWARD SATTERTHWAITE,
Secretary to the Committee of the Stock Exchange.
Committee Room, The Stock Exchange, London, E.C.

THE LATE EARL OF BEACONSFIELD,
SIR MORELL MACKENZIE,
OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES,
MISS EMILY FAITHFUL,
THE LATE GEN. W. T. SHERMAN, and many other persons of distinction, have testified to the remarkable efficacy of Himrod's Cure for Asthma.

Established over a Quarter of a Century.

Prescribed by the Medical Faculty throughout the world. It is used as an Inhalation and without any after bad effects. A free Sample and detailed testimonials free by post. In tins, 4s. 3d. British Depôt—46, Holborn Viaduct, London; also of NEWBERY & SONS, BARCLAY & SONS, LYNCH & CO., J. SANGER & SONS, W. EDWARDS & SON, MAY, ROBERTS, & CO., BUTLER & CRISPE, JOHN THOMPSON, Liverpool, and all wholesale Houses.

"FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE."

CLARKE'S
WORLD-FAMED
BLOOD MIXTURE

Warranted to cleanse the blood from all impurities from whatever cause arising. For Scrofula, Scurvy, Eczema, Bad Legs, Skin and Blood Diseases, Pimples and Sores of all kinds, its effects are marvellous. It is the only real specific for Gout and Rheumatic Pains, for it removes the cause from the blood and bones. Thousands of Wonderful Cures have been effected by it. In bottles, 2s. 9d. and 11s. each, of Chemists everywhere.

BEWARE OF WORTHLESS IMITATIONS.

38th ANNUAL REPORT

OF THE

Equitable Life Assurance Society

OF THE UNITED STATES.

In presenting some Abstracts from the 38th Annual Statement of this Society, together with the Revenue Account and Balance Sheet, the General Managers beg to call attention to the following particular points, which demonstrate, not merely the remarkable progress of last year, but also the careful and conservative management of the Society.

ASSETS.

The Assets now stand at £49,349,231 sterling: being an increase, over the previous year, of £4,187,992.

LIABILITIES.

The Total Liabilities, on a 4 per cent. Valuation, amount to £38,840,236.

SURPLUS.

After a careful and conservative Valuation of the Assets of the Society, and an ample provision for all liabilities under the Society's Contracts, including outstanding obligations, the Surplus has been increased to £10,508,995: being an advance, over last year's figures, of more than 1½ Millions Sterling.

INCOME.

The Premium Income of the year has been increased by over £275,000, and now stands at £7,826,695. The Interest Income has also been augmented by over £215,000. The Total Income has reached £10,089,909: being an addition of £432,266, to that of 1896.

NEW ASSURANCE.

During the year 1897, 58,796 proposals for new assurances, amounting to £36,576,244, were made to the Society. Of these 7,855 proposals for £5,102,494 were declined, and 50,941 accepted, and policies issued for 31,473,750. Policies for £944,268 were revived. Others were increased by Bonus of £231,085. This made a total issue for the year of 52,239 policies for an amount of £32,699,103.

NUMBER OF POLICIES.

There are in all 307,597 policies on the books of the Society, and in addition, 1,993 Annuity Bonds securing immediate payments of £125,327, and deferred payments of £9,852.

EXPENSES.

The expenses for the year have again been reduced.

DISBURSEMENTS.

Disbursements were as follows:—Death Claims, £2,477,742, being a decrease over 1896 of £134,615. Cash Bonuses, £488,312. In Annuities there was paid £109,551 against £90,621 the previous year. The Surrender Values, including Matured Tontines (other than Endowments), reached £1,127,247. The Matured Tontines paid, showed an increase for the year of £34,006. The Surrender Values showed a DECREASE, on previous year, of £82,702.

INCREASE OF BONUS.

In days of universal depreciation of Interest when the Bonuses of most Assurance Companies show decrease, it is highly satisfactory to be able to state that the 10 and 15-year policies, maturing in 1898, will give larger results than in 1897, while the 20-year results of 1898, will equal those of 1897.

SOCIETY'S RECORD FOR THIRTY-NINE YEARS.

The Society has paid more than £57,290,000 sterling to its Policyholders, and, in addition now holds £49,349,231 of Assets (of which £10,508,995 is Surplus to Policyholders), making a total of more than £106,600,000 sterling. This record, covering a period of less than 39 years, is over £49,100,000 more than any other Company has paid and accumulated within the corresponding period of its history.

RATE OF INTEREST.

The average rate of Interest earned on the Assets of the Society, in 1897, was £4 12s. per cent., an increase of 5s. per cent. over the average rate for several preceding years.

CHANGE IN VALUATION.

For about two years the Society has been valuing its Guaranteed Cash Value Policy on a 3 per cent. Reserve. From the 1st January, 1898, the Society's New Business is valued at either 3 per cent. or 3½ per cent., according to the Form of Policy. This Change of Valuation from a 4 per cent. to a 3½ per cent. basis is purely PROSPECTIVE in its bearing.

SURPLUS ON 4% RESERVE.
SURPLUS ON 3% RESERVE.

On a calculation that the Society will receive only 4 per cent. as its future average Rate of Interest, the Surplus, after deducting all liabilities is (as above stated) £10,508,995. Calculated on a 3 per cent. basis, after deducting all liabilities, the Surplus stands at over £6,000,000.

LARGEST SURPLUS IN THE WORLD.

The Surplus of the Society is larger, by several millions sterling, on similar computations, than that of any other Life Assurance Company.

APPORTIONMENT OF PROFITS IN 1898.

Whatever percentage of Interest the Society may receive in future, in excess of the rate assumed in the above calculation, will be computed and invested for the benefit of its Policyholders. An apportionment of profits will be made as usual to Policyholders during the year 1898, in the manner specified in their respective policies.

INVESTMENTS.

The Investments of the Society are made in the most conservative and most careful manner, in those classes of Securities prescribed by the Insurance Department of the State of New York. Last year there was a gain in the Valuation of Assets of £273,765.

BRITISH LIFE OFFICES INVEST IN AMERICAN SECURITIES.

It is a noteworthy fact that twenty of the British Life Offices, including some of the most conservative, have placed no less than SEVEN MILLIONS STERLING of their funds in Securities, in the United States, of the same character as those in which this Society's Funds are invested.

SATISFACTION WITH RESULTS:
PRACTICAL EVIDENCE.

At no period of its history has the Society been favoured with more satisfactory evidence of the sentiments of its Policyholders, in regard to Bonus results, under maturing Contracts, than during last year. These returns, whether taken in cash or paid-up value, have proved eminently profitable, either as an Investment or as Cheap Assurance. Gratifying testimony to this effect has been accorded. Practical evidence is afforded by the fact that New Assurances taken by those whose Policies have matured exceeds the original amount held by them.

NEW POLICIES:
FOUR:
IN ADDITION TO THE GUARANTEED CASH VALUE POLICY.

In addition to the guaranteed Cash Value Policy, which appeared two years ago (with which have been incorporated some special advantages), four New Policies, containing very attractive features, adapted to the Commercial and Financial requirements of the day, are issued this year. These are the 5 per cent. 20-year Coupon Debenture Policy; the Continuous Instalment Policy; the Premium Dividend Policy; and the New Endowment Policy.

Full information concerning these will be given on application, either to the Head Office or to any of the Branch Offices.

BRITISH ORGANISATION.

During the past year the Agency Department of the British Branch has been extensively reorganised, greatly extended, and increased in efficiency of management.

BRITISH BRANCH PRACTICALLY A BRITISH OFFICE.

The British Branch of the Society is practically a British Office. It issues its own policies, pays its own claims, and is self-supporting.

All British Policies are under immediate jurisdiction of the British Courts of Law.

GENERAL RESULT OF LAST YEAR'S OPERATION.

It will prove satisfactory to our Policyholders and to the community at large, to be informed that never since its organisation has the Society held so strong a financial position as in the present year. Its Surplus has been enormously increased, together with its Assets; its Liabilities have been calculated on a more stringent basis; its New Business has been largely augmented whilst Expenses have diminished; a considerable Appreciation of its Assets has also been realised; its Death Rate has been most favourable, and under many policies its Bonuses have shown increase.

SOCIETY'S STRENGTH INCREASES WITH AGE.

The above facts go to prove that the Vitality of the Society improves with its age. Expenditure and strength of Surplus, year by year, develop in due proportion. Whilst heavy disbursements to Policyholders are constantly being made, the loss to funds is more than made up, as proved by the enormous increase of Surplus last year.

A perusal of the above Statement must, it is considered, convince every impartial reader that the EQUITABLE OF THE UNITED STATES still holds the front rank in all matters of Life Assurance. Reform, combining enlightened progress with conservative management, has, from the beginning, marked the course of the Society.

INFORMATION ABOUT SOCIETY'S INVESTMENTS.

A full and detailed Statement of every item of Investment, the Mortgages and Securities of every kind, with particular information regarding Policies, Bonuses, &c., may be obtained on application at the Head Office for Great Britain and Ireland,

6, PRINCES STREET, BANK, LONDON, E.C.

A. MUNKITTRICK & W. TRIGGS,

General Managers.

Chinese Imperial Government 4½% Gold Loan

OF 1898,

FOR £16,000,000 STERLING,

Offered for Public Subscription in London and Germany.

AUTHORISED BY IMPERIAL EDICT.

Secured upon the balance of the Revenue of the Imperial Maritime Customs of the Treaty Ports of China, and also by a first charge upon the Likin Revenues of certain Ports and Districts of China as hereafter mentioned, which are to be placed forthwith under the control of the Inspector General of Chinese Imperial Maritime Customs.

Exempt from all present and future Chinese Taxes.

In Bonds to Bearer of £25, £50, £100 and £500 each, with Half-yearly Coupons attached, for interest at the rate of 4½ per cent. per annum, payable on the 1st September and 1st March.

The First Coupon will be at the full rate of 4½ per cent. per annum for six months, payable 1st September, 1898.

Principal and interest payable in London in sterling, and in Germany in the sterling equivalent at the exchange of the day.

Arrangements have been made by which the Bonds of this Loan can be inscribed at the Bank of England in terms of the accompanying memorandum.

Subscription Price in London, 90 per cent.

The Hongkong & Shanghai Banking Corporation, 31, Lombard-street, London, and the Deutsch-Asiatische Bank, Berlin, invite subscriptions for £16,000,000 Sterling Bonds of the above Loan. The price of subscription is 90 per cent., payable as follows:—

5 per cent.	on Application.
10 per cent	on Allotment.
25 per cent.	on 7th April, 1898.
25 per cent.	on 21st April, 1898.
25 per cent.	on 3rd May, 1898.
£90

The Bonds will bear interest at 4½ per cent. per annum from 1st March, 1898. Payment in full can be made on allotment under discount at the rate of 3 per cent. per annum.

It is stipulated that payment to the Imperial Japanese Government of the balance due in terms of the Treaty of Shimoneoski shall be made by the Chinese Imperial Government out of the proceeds of this loan.

The Loan is for 45 years redeemable at 100 by 45 annual drawings, through the action of an accumulative sinking fund. The Chinese Imperial Government specially undertake not to convert or to redeem this Loan otherwise than as herein specified.

The Chinese Imperial Government undertake to pay, after the first half-yearly instalment due 1st September, 1898, to the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation and the Deutsch-Asiatische Bank, by monthly instalments, the amounts necessary to cover the service of this Loan.

The Drawings will take place in London in the month of January in each year, beginning in January, 1899, before a Notary public, at the Offices of the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, and the Drawn Bonds will be paid off at 100 on the 1st March, following, after which date interest on the Bonds so drawn will cease.

The Loan has been authorised by Imperial Edict dated 2nd March, 1898, which has been officially communicated by the Tsung-li-Yamen to the British and German Ministers in Peking.

This Loan is specially secured by and charged upon the Imperial Maritime Customs Revenues of the Treaty Ports of China, subject to loans at present remaining unredeemed, and also as a first charge free from all encumbrances, on the General and Salt Likin of certain Ports and Districts situated in the Yangtsze Valley and the adjoining Province of Chekiang, as under:—

The General Likin of the Port of Soochow.
" " the Port of Kiukiang.
" " Sunghu (Shanghai Sungkiang) District.
" " the Eastern Chekiang District.
The Salt Likin of Ichang.
" " the Hupeh District.
" " the Anhui District.

The above Likin Revenues are to be placed forthwith under the control of the Inspector General of the Chinese Imperial Maritime Customs. If at any time, in consequence of a decline in Exchange or from any other cause, the said security should prove insufficient, the Chinese Imperial Government undertake to appropriate further Revenues for this purpose, to be likewise placed immediately under control of the Inspector General of the Chinese Imperial Maritime Customs.

According to an official statement of Sir Robert Hart, Bart., G.C.M.G., Inspector General of Chinese Imperial Maritime Customs, the present available balance of the Customs revenues is about 3,000,000 Haikwan Taels per annum. The above Likin revenues specially pledged for the service of this Loan are valued at 5 000,000 Haikwan Taels per annum, thus giving together 8,000,000 Haikwan Taels per annum, which, at the present exchange of 2s. 9d. per Haikwan Tael, is equal to £1,100,000 sterling, while the annual service of the present Loan is £835,232 sterling.

It is expected that, under the admistration of the Inspector General of the Chinese Imperial Maritime Customs, the Likin receipts will largely increase; a great expansion of trade is also expected to result.

In the advent of the Chinese Imperial Government negotiating for a revision of the Chinese Customs Tariff during the currency of this Loan, it is agreed on the one hand that such Tariff revison shall not be barred by the fact that the Loan is secured by the foregoing Likin revenues, and on the other hand that the Likin duties pledged for the service of this Loan shall neither be decreased nor abolished, except by arrangement made with the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation and the Deutsch-Asiatische Bank, and only then for an equivalent first charge upon increased Customs Revenue consequent upon such Tariff revision.

The Chinese Imperial Government have agreed that this Loan shall be also secured by the deposit in China, with the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation and the Deutsch-Asiatische Bank, of Customs Likin Bonds issued by the Tsung-li-Yamen and Board of Revenue, and signed by the Inspector-General of Customs. Such Customs Likin Bonds are to be handed to the said Banks against the proceeds of this Loan. The Chinese Imperial Government have further agreed that this Loan shall be also secured by the deposit with the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation and the Deutsch-Asiatische Bank in China on or before the 1st June next, of Sterling Customs Likin Bonds equal to the total amount of the Loan, principal and interest. Such Bonds will be sealed by the Chinese Superintendent of Customs at Shanghai and by the Viceroy of the Llangklang Provinces, and countersigned by the Foreign Commissioner of Customs at Shanghai. These Bonds will be available for payment of Customs and Likin duties everywhere in China.

The Chinese Imperial Government undertake that the administration of the Imperial Maritime Customs Service shall remain as at present during the currency of this Loan.

This Loan is exempt from all present and future Chinese Taxes.

Subject to Loans at present unredeemed, this Loan has priority, both as regards principal and interest, over all future Loans, Charges of Mortgages, and so long as this Loan or any part thereof shall remain unredeemed, the Chinese Imperial Government undertake that no Loan, Charge or Mortgage shall be raised or created which shall in any manner lessen or impair the security over the said Customs and Likin Revenues, so far as they are required for the service of this Loan, and that any future Loan, Charge or Mortgage charged upon the said Customs and Likin Revenues shall be made subject to this Loan, and that it shall be so expressed in every agreement for any such future Loan, Charge or Mortgage.

Applications will be received in London by THE HONGKONG & SHANGHAI BANKING CORPORATION, 31 Lombard-street, E.C., and in Germany by THE DEUTSCH-ASIATISCHE BANK, Berlin, and further on its behalf by the ROYAL GENERAL DIRECTION OF THE SEEHANDLUNGS SOCIETAT, Berlin, and by the following Bankers:—

Direction der Disconto-Gesellschaft, Berlin.
Deutsche Bank, Berlin, Hamburg, Bremen, Frankfort-on-the-Maine, and Munich.
Berliner Handels-Gesellschaft, Berlin.
Bank fur Handel und Industry, Berlin and Frankfort-on-the-Maine.
Dresdner Bank, Berlin, Dresden, Hamburg, Bremen, and Muremberg.
National Bank fur Deutschland, Berlin.
A. Schaaffhausen'scher Bankverein, Berlin and Cologne.
S. Bleichröder, Berlin.
Mendelssohn & Co., Berlin.
Robert Warschauer & Co., Berlin.
Born & Busse, Berlin.
Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, Hamburg.
Norddeutsche Bank-in Hamburg, Hamburg.
L. Behrens & Sohne. Hamburg.
Jacob S. H. Stern, Franfort-on-the-Maine.
Bayerische Hypotheken und Wechselbank, Munich.
Sal Oppenheim, Junr., & Co., Cologne.

Default in payment of any instalment at due date will render previous payments liable to forfeiture.

If no allotment is made the Deposit will be returned in full, and if only a portion of the amount applied for is allotted, the balance of the Deposit will be applied towards payment of the amount due on allotment.

Scrip Certificates to Bearer will be issued against Allotment Letters, and Bonds to Bearer sealed by either H. E. The Minister for China in London, or H. E. The Minister for China in Berlin, will, when ready, be exchanged for fully paid Scrip Certificates.

Prospectuses and forms of application may be obtained from the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, 31, Lombard-street, London, E.C., and from Messrs. Panmure Gordon, Hill, & Co., Hatton-court, London, E.C.

31, Lombard-street, London,
17th March, 1898.

Copy of Letter from His Excellency Sir Chih Chen Lo-Fêng-Luh, K.C.V.O., the Minister for China in London:—

Chinese Legation,
London, 16th March, 1898.

The Manager,
Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation,
31, Lombard-street, E.C.

Sir,—I have much pleasure in informing you that I have received a telegram from the Tsung-li-Yamen acquainting me that the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, conjointly with the Deutsch-Asiatische Bank, have been charged by the Imperial Chinese Government with the issuing of a 4½ per cent. Gold Loan of £16,000,000 sterling, and that the Imperial Edict authorising it has already been issued.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient Servant,
(Signed) Lo-Fêng-Luh,
Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of His Majesty the Emperor of China.

CHINESE IMPERIAL GOVERNMENT 4½ PER CENT. GOLD LOAN OF 1898,

For £16,000,000.

INSCRIPTION OF SCRIP AND BONDS.

Holders of Fully-paid Scrip of this Issue will have the privilege of exchanging the same for Stock free of all expense, as in the case of the £5 per Cent. Gold Loan of 1896, but they will be able to avail themselves of this privilege only until the 1st of August, 1898, after which date they will be required to pay the duty of 12s. 6d. per cent.

Transfers of the Stock will be exempt from Stamp duty, and the Dividends thereon will be paid through the post, or as otherwise directed.

Transfers will be by Deed, and ordinary forms will be accepted.

Holders of Bonds may at any time exchange their Bonds for Stock on payment of the commutation Stamp Duty—12s. 6d. per cent.

Holders of Stock may at any time exchange the same for the relative Bonds, but such holders will be liable for any Stamp Duty which may be payable in respect of the Bonds.

When the Bonds are ready, the Bank of England will surrender to the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation the Scrip which has been inscribed, and will receive in exchange the Bonds which have been allocated by the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation to such Scrip.

When this has been done the Stockholders will be informed of the numbers and denominations of the Bonds which their Stock represents, and they will be so placed in possession of information which will enable them to fill up, or cause to be filled up, the transfer deeds necessary for sale or transfer.

They will also be in a position to examine lists of drawings and to apply to the Bank of England for the capital amount of Stock representing drawn Bonds.

It will be seen from what goes before that each transfer of Stock must recite the numbers and denominations of the Bonds (or Scrip pending the issue of Bonds) which such Stock represents.

Transfers must be accompanied by the relative certificates.

Bank of England, 17th March, 1898.

For Longhand, Shorthand, Pen-and-Ink Drawing, Music-Writing, indeed, whenever a Pen is necessary, use only

Adds immeasurably to Celerity and Comfort in writing. Of all Pens most famous.

Made in 3 sizes only at
10s. 6d.
16s. 6d.
25s.
UP TO £18 18s.
POST FREE.

MABIE, TODD & BARD,
93, Cheapside, London, E.C.
95a, REGENT ST., W., and 3, EXCHANGE ST., MANCHESTER.

Estd. 1784.

Old Bushmills
PURE MALT WHISKEY.

ONE of Nature's greatest wonders is the Giant's Causeway, quite near to which the world-famed Old Bushmills Distillery is situated.

The geological formation of the adjoining country is such that barley of an extraordinary fine quality is grown there, and the water obtained from this region possesses wonderful medicinal qualities; hence the great superiority of the Whiskey made at Bushmills over any other in the World.

Old Liqueur, 51s. per doz.
* * * THREE STARS. 45s. ,, ,, Carriage Paid. Packages Free. Nett Cash.

Orders will be executed from either of the undermentioned Offices or from the accredited Agents in all parts of the World.

The Old Bushmills Distillery Co., Ltd., Hill-street, Belfast.
The Old Bushmills Distillery Co., Ltd., 42, Norfolk-street, Strand, W.C.

ATKINSON'S
EAU DE
COLOGNE

Is absolutely the finest made.
More fragrant, more lasting, and very much more refreshing than all others.
USE ONLY ATKINSON'S:
ONCE USED, ALWAYS USED.
Single Bottle 2/3 post free,
Case of 6 Bottles 11s. Carriage Paid.
OF ALL DEALERS.
J. & E. ATKINSON, Limited, 24, Old Bond Street, London,
INVENTORS OF THE CELEBRATED
"WHITE ROSE" PERFUME.
"A Charming Scent."—H.R.H. The Duchess of York.

JUNO CYCLES ARE THE VERY BEST
Any JUNO Twelve Monthly Payments.
JUNO Lady's or Gent's Safety, £12 12s., 21/- monthly; £14 14s., 24/6 monthly. JUNOS from £10, 16/8 monthly. Write for New Season's List of JUNO Cycles & Accessories, sent post free. Standard Cyclometers, 10,000 miles, 2/3. Juno Riding School.
METROPOLITAN MACHINISTS CO., LTD., 75, 76, Bishopsgate Without, E.C.; & at Piccadilly Circus, London W.

TORPID LIVER. HEADACHE.

Small Pill.
Small Dose.
Small Price.

Purely Vegetable Sugar Coated.

1s. 1½d.

FRANZ JOSEF
APERIENT WATER
Highly appreciated all over the World for Twenty Years past.
Is the Only Palatable Natural Aperient Water. SOLD EVERYWHERE. HEAD OFFICE: BUDAPEST.

OUR PUZZLES.

RULES.

1. The sum of £2. 2s. will be given every week for the best Epigram, Conundrum, Lipogram, Bouts-Rimés, or whatever the announced subject of the competition for the week may be.

2. The Puzzle Editor reserves the right, however, of dividing the above sum between two or more competitors, or of withholding the prize, should exceptional circumstances render such a course desirable.

3. The decision and award of the Puzzle Editor must be considered final and irrevocable, and, for obvious reasons, no appeal from his critical judgments can be entertained.

4. In every instance the prize will be given in money, subject to no condition whatever, except the publication of the winner's real name and address in this journal.

5. Competitors will be allowed eleven days for the composition and despatch of their efforts; but all such communications must, at the latest, be received at the Truth Office by the first post on the morning of the second Monday succeeding the publication of the subject for competition.

6. Not more than one Prize will be given a Quarter to the same competitor.

7. All New Contributors are Required to Forward with their First Answers their Real Names and Addresses for Registration; such names and addresses will not be published except in the case of Prize-winners.

8. The nom-de-plume chosen by competitors should not exceed 12, and must under no circumstances consist of more than 14, letters.

9. Competitors must on no account change their noms-de-plume they have once assumed.

10. On the announcement of the Prize-winner's nom-de-plume, the successful competitor must write and make formal application for the Prize, stating the address to which the cheque must be sent. Any competitor failing to do so within three months of winning the Prize will forfeit all claim to the same.

11. No communications can be received on post-cards, by telegraph, or by hand. They must all be sent by the time named above. All post letters addressed—

PUZZLE EDITOR OF "TRUTH," Carteret-street, Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE No. 995.—COMPLETION OF TWO GIVEN STANZAS.

Creran (real name and address will be given in due course) £2 2 0

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 993.

It will be unnecessary to delay the announcement of the result of this competition after this week; so I hope to publish the name of the prize winner in the next number of Truth.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 996.

The result of this competition will be announced when Competition No. 999 is decided.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 1,000.

This may be considered in one way an appropriate week in which to offer the usual prize of Two Guineas for

The Best Original Acrostic in Rhymed Verse on "Alfred the Great," Whose Millenary is Shortly to be Celebrated.

It will be understood that each of the fourteen lines of which the acrostic consists must commence with one of the letters to be found in "Alfred the Great." Of course, the letters must follow one another in their proper order. Each line, too, must rhyme with some other line in the acrostic. It is left to competitors to choose for themselves the tone in which their acrostics shall be written. They may be grave or gay, lively or severe, sentimental or cynical, or what not. All acrostics must reach me by the morning of Monday, April 4, at the latest.

Answers to Correspondents.

 The real name, with the address, of Vox, winner of Prize No. 994, is William Vokes, Esq., 86, Marmion-road, Clapham Common, S.W.

Scissors.—Many thanks for your letter. I think it better, however, as some of the answers in the competition have already been received, not to publish the correction you are kind enough to point out.

One Hand.—I am much obliged to you for the information you send me, and shall, if necessary, turn it to practical account.

M. M.—The lines appeared in the Anti-Jacobin.

Aldbarn.—Before your letter reached me, I had already decided on the subject of a competition for this week. But I am none the less obliged to you for your kind suggestion.

THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE No. 997.—ASSORTED SPECIMENS—GOOD AND OTHERWISE.

RESOLVING CERTAIN GIVEN LETTERS INTO A STANZA FROM BROWNING'S "SERENADE AT THE VILLA," AND WRITING A SECOND STANZA IN THE SAME STYLE AND METRE.

 I have been surprised to see that so many competitors have succeeded in finding the Browning stanza which was hidden in the collection of letters published three weeks ago. The stanza in question is the second from the lyric entitled "A Serenade at the Villa," and it runs thus;—

Not a twinkle from the fly,
Not a glimmer from the worm.
When the crickets stopped their cry,
When the owls forbore a term,
You heard music—that was I.

It will be unnecessary to repeat this verse in the subjoined answers. The second verse sent by each competitor is all that need be printed, it being understood that in all cases the hidden stanza was discovered by the following competitors:—

One who comes with song and lute
Scarce can think he comes to stay;
Haply he might add a flute,
Or banjo! playing all the day!
(Moral) Swiftly make such music mute.
The Hen.

Not a wrinkle for my fly,
I'd no trimmer, nor a worm,
When the wicker flask went dry,
When too foul the pipe a term,
You heard snoring; that was I.
E. L. T.

Every note it lingered long,
Near the threshold of your heart;
Pleading tireless. Trust is strong;
Souls, once linked, asunder start
Never—without sense of wrong.
Briony.

Through the hush my song upsprang,
As thro' darkness springs the morn;
Love in every utterance rang;
The day hasted to be born,
The night waited while I sang.
White Lion.

But you came not; then I knew
That your frowning shutters twain,
Stern duennas guarding you,
Shorn of all their love and pain,
Scarce would let the notes come through.
Yen.

Did thy lute or voice prevail,
Or the darkness plead for thee?
Lightning flash on my bed rail,
Soften the hard heart of me?
Patience, friend, love doth not fail.
Myrah.

Music out of darkness grew,
Love and night inspired the song,
Poor, indeed, the words—but true,
What cared I if right or wrong,
For above me there were you.
Knight's Pawn.

There were you, and still awake,
Though 'twas time that you should sleep;
But you fancied fancy'd take
Me at you to take a peep;
Well it did, and no mistake!
Adow.

All my heart cried out to thee,
All my hopes were breathed in song;
In the dark with none to see
Patient I stood watching long—
But never answer came to me.
Paul Ferrol.

Did you hate me? Did you say
"Will this mummer never go?
Must I keep awake till day?"
Dragged the heavy hours and lo!
Morning, eve I went away.

Or,

What becomes of all the flies,
Crickets, owls, and worm as well,
When I do not hear their cries?
When beneath the thunder spell
Silence on the garden lies?
Langlands.

Ay! but if my Che la Morte
Eyes of yours a moment filled,
If you slept the sounder for't—
Love's unrest is lightly stilled—
God wot! gladly went I short.
Physician.

I sang softly, "Thou shalt see,
And thy straining eye shall note,
When thy bark on passion's sea
Can but barely keep afloat,
That thou hast a friend in me."
Flamingo.

Music rising from below,
And the singer, I. Your friend?
Well, I'd have you call me so,
Though small matter—in the end
Much names count for—time will show.
Cushion.

But I swept the chords in vain,
And I stole a look for nought,
So I strained my heart with pain.
Nor a glance nor sign I caught,
But I sighed and sang again.
Culpepper.

No least whisper of the wind
Mingled with the lute's appeal.
Earth was dumb; the world was blind;
So might I my soul reveal,
Hope you would for once be kind.
Amaryllis.

All that night my song cleaved through
Silence black like velvet pall;
So that light should pierce to you:
Did it not—my love—at all?
Well, my heart has missed the cue.

Or,

O! but dark your windows were,
Could you hear me as I played,
Nor your casement curtains stir,
To my throbbing serenade?
Nay, my love, you were not there.

Or,

Darkness lapped your villa round;
This the silence say you heard
Knocking at your heart—a sound
Like the singing of a bird,
Aching in its cage's bound.
Postergirl.

Not a star heaven's whole dome through,
Not a moonbeam pierced the dark;
Soundless—lightless—till there grew
In your pane a wakened spark,
Music answered; that was you!
Rosalys.

Time, tho' days may die, suns set,
Ne'er from memory's sight can move
Days, whose glamour haunts me yet.
Can Time make me cease to love?
Can Time teach me to forget?
Gollywog.

'Twas my voice the stillness broke,
Stayed the brooding hand of death,
When the earth, dumb 'neath his stroke,
Lay as one who strives for breath,
Then my lute and I awoke.
Outis.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE No. 993.—ASSORTED SPECIMENS—GOOD AND OTHERWISE.

ENGLISH RENDERINGS OF THREE FRENCH STANZAS FROM "TRILBY."

 I am able this week to print a few more from among the many "Trilby" verses received.—The Puzzle Editor.

Poor Trilby—loved and good and fair,
I am her foot. Let he who will divine
What friend so tender, cherishing with care
Her memory and his love, this souvenir placed there.
Souvenir, caprice-inspired, set in a fitting shrine,
Lest breath should ravish its most lonely line.

I was a twin. My brother, where is he?
Alas, alas! Love led us far astray,
To meet again we trust and once more be
As once we were, linked through eternity,
And chastely there to rest where nothing may
Trouble sweet Trilby more—asleep alway.

Oh! tender friend, how lonely will ye be,
From Trilby's door perforce ye turn away.
And Paradise is far. On earth that tenderly
Now cradles her, where joyous once were we,
Seeking our equals, seek how well ye may,
Ye will seek vainly, ye will seek for aye.
Penea.

Poor Trilby—beautiful and good and dear!
Her little foot am I. Divine, ye bold,
What tender friend, who cherished her of old,
Thus framed of her (and of a love sincere)
This charming memory—an idle whim—
A passing breath might dim.

I was a twin; and where is now my pair?
Alas! alas! Love leads us all astray.
Eternity will reunite I pray
Those who were parted, and will gently bear
Us to a peaceful rest, where none may weep
O'er Trilby, who shall sleep.

O tender friend, if not, how will you fare?
The door is shut where once sweet Trilby dwelt,
And Paradise is far . . . but earth hath dealt
Kindly with us because she lingered there.
No easy quest has he who seeks to show
Our equals here below! Freak.

Poor Trilby! the beautiful, the good, the dear,
I am her foot. Ask, if it be desired,
What tender friend, who lately loved her here,
Enframed of her (and of a love sincere)
This sweet memorial that a whim inspired,
That at a breath shall fade!

I was a twin: twins are we no more,
Alas! alas! Love led us far astray.
Eternity, I hope, shall each to each restore,
And we shall rest, the happy pair of yore,
On a chaste couch where no trouble may Harm Trilby sleeping!

What will you do without us, tender friend?
The door is shut where Trilby dwelt,
Far, far is Paradise. And in the end,
If earth be searched a match to lend
(Earth, which was sweet to us, by her scarce felt),
The search shall be in vain! Greville.

Ah, hapless Trilby, lovely, good, and sweet!
Her foot am I. Who would may now divine
The truest friend, that for remembrance meet
(And, having loved, with love will still her greet),
Did safe surround, imprison here this fancy fine,
Which, touched, might cease to shine.

A twin was I; who knoweth thy retreat?
Through love we dwell apart, ah, brother mine!
Eternity may join as once a neat
And dainty pair we lived; we'll pace the street
No more; but calmly, in a deep cold bed recline,
Where Trilby doth not pine.

Ah, truest friend, a lonely path to beat!
The door is shut, and where she dwells, no sign,
For Paradise is far—while time doth fleet,
On earth (which once was soft, will gently treat)
Shall ne'er be found, though long the quest, of foot a line,
Oh, Trilby, like to thine!
Myrah.

Trilby—ah, sweet one, brave, and true, and fair!
Say, who that loved her here my form did trace?
The outline of her foot's perfection rare,
Witness of love which time can ne'er efface;
Yet witness frail, born of a fleeting thought,
Of summer winds the sport.

Where is my fellow? I am here alone,
Alas! through love we far apart have strayed;
Let peaceful grave for all our griefs atone:
Once more united, we shall then be laid
In quiet, where no anxious human guest
Will trouble Trilby's rest.

Are you not sad to lose us, faithful friend?
Where Trilby dwelt, the door is now shut fast,
And far from Heaven your tired steps you wend;
Yet earth dealt gently with us in the past,
And many seek with care and tears again
Our like to find—in vain. Rhymster.

Poor Trilby, cynosure of every eye,
I am her foot. Guess then, if any dare,
What gentle friend, what lover constant aye,
Enshrined in glass this charming memory,
(A lover's whim), to her and love sincere,
This trifle light as air?

Where is my twin? For once a twin had I;
Love, disuniting, joined us in despair,
To live at last, I hope, in unity
Together linked as in the days gone by,
Where none shall wake from slumber, chaste and fair,
Dear Trilby, sleeping there.

Where we are not, on whom can she rely?
But, where she lives, is barred the golden stair,
And Heaven is far—so here on earth we sigh
('Twas soft to us, on her 'twill lightly lie),
To find our peers: 'tis mere despair;
Who can with us compare? Pro.

Poor Trilby—beauteous, good, and dear!
I am her foot. Now guess who can and will,
What tender friend—so lately near her still—
Inclosed me here (in love sincere),
A charming whim begot of tender love,
Yet one the lightest breath may quick remove.

I'm one of twins. Where art thou, brother mine?
Alas! alas! 'twas love rent us in twain;
Eternity unite us may again;
And as a pair we will once more entwine
At foot of that chaste bed where neither care
Nor sorrow Trilby's sleep more trouble dare.

Oh, tender friend! bereft of us what mirth
Remains? The door is closed; Trilby lived there;
And Paradise is far; and here on earth
(To us so sweet—may it rest light on her!)
To find our fellows—seek till we go blind—
For ever may we seek, yet never find.
Ulis.

Poor Trilby, fair, and good, and dear!
I am her foot. Can you divine
What tender friend enshrined me here
In memory of his love sincere?
An inspiration!—at a breath, each line
Its beauty must resign.

But my twin brother, where is he?
By love divided though we seem,
We shall again united be
In the far off Eternity,
When Trilby sleeps where naught can mar her dream,
Beyond death's chill, dark stream.

Heaven seems so far, now Trilby's door
Is closed. Lone twin, how dost thou fare?
But one may search for evermore
This earth—lie lightly on her!—for
Such feet, yet never find another pair
Like Trilby's, small and bare. En Route.

Poor lovely Trilby, good and kind and dear;
Her foot am I. Let him divine who will
What tender friend has thus enshrinéd here
For sign of faithful love enduring still.
This souvenir, caught by caprice one day,
A breath could bear away!

I was a twin. Where is my brother gone?
Alas! 'twas love that made us stray in pain.
Eternity will find the missing one
I trust, and we shall be a pair again.
In a pure couch where, in calm rest and deep,
Trilby will sleep.

Fond friend, where will you find the banished feet?
The door is shut where Trilby passed from sight.
And Paradise is far, and earth, once sweet
To us, and which on her lies light,
Holds not our equals—seek o'er land or sea,
You seek them hopelessly!
Rubine.

Alas, poor Trilby! bonny, good, and dear,
I am thy foot—and let him guess who can,
What tender friend, who once caressed its form,
Thus framed the memory of it and love?
A whim inspired its life,
A breath will make it fade.

I was a twin. My little mate has fled,
Love came between. Alas! we lost our way.
Eternity alone can join us now,
And make us as we were of old—
A tiny pair in sheets where trouble ceases
And gentle Trilby sleeps.

Ah, dearest friend! Without thee life is blank;
The door is closed where sweetest Trilby dwelt.
That Paradise is far; and on the earth,
Which was so good to us and light to her,
We seek in vain to find such pretty twins—
We seek in vain. Tea Lamb.

Poor Trilby! beautiful, good, and dear.
I am her foot. Guess the tenderness true
Which fondly and sadly with silent tear
Enframed this sweet relic with love sincere,
Souvenir slight that caprice slightly drew
To pass as a breath with the morning dew.

I was a twin! My brother, where is he?
Alas! alas! Love severed us twain.
Reunited in realms of Eternity
A pair once more we shall happy be.
Resting together, free from pain,
Trilby will sleep in peace again.

Tender friend, how shall I live without you?
The door is closed where my Trilby lies.
Paradise is far from my saddened view,
The sweetness of earth I can ne'er renew.
Her like will never more bless my eyes;
Vain search—with my Trilby all beauty dies.
Ivy Leaves.

Oh! poor sweet Trilby—beautiful and dear!
I am her little foot. Let those divine who may
What tender friend (in some sad yester-year)
Encircled of her this sweet souvenir,
Inspired by a caprice in love's young day,
And fragile, that a breath might blow away

I was a twin. My brother, where is he?
Alas! alas! Love led us a strange quest
And far astray; but in eternity
Once more a pair, hope whispers we may be
On a pure bed, where, by no grief oppress't,
Will lie poor Trilby, sleeping, and at rest.

Oh! tender friend, can it be we shall meet?
Where Trilby dwelt is now a closéd door.
May the kind earth, which was to us so sweet
Lie lightly on her—on those little feet
Awaiting distant Heaven. Ah! nevermore
Can earth produce the loveliness they wore.
Crayon.

Poor Trilby! Beautiful, and good, and dear!
I am her foot. Who can divine shall say
What tender friend loved her with love sincere,
Yet took and framed this charming souvenir;
Capricious inspiration, that a breath's light play
Could wholly blow away.

I was a twin. Ah, whence did disappear
My brother twin? Alas! by Love's strange sway,
The matching pair has been divided here,
Eternity, I hope, will bring us near
Within that bed, where never care or trouble lay,
And Trilby sleeps for aye.

O tender friend, bereft of us, what cheer?
Your Trilby's door is fastened night and day,
And Paradise is far, and earth is drear,
(Once soft to us—now light upon her bier),
To find our like thereon—in vain, in vain you'll stray,
Seeking where'er you may.
Nell.

Poor Trilby! who to all was dear;
Her foot am I. And guess who may
Which tender friend, of love sincere
In days of yore, has 'stablished here
This sweet memorial of a day,
That lightest breath may waft away.

A twin was I. Alas! I fear
My brother fell through love astray;
But sometimes, in th' eternal sphere,
We'll meet again—once more be near
On Trilby's couch—wherefrom the ray
Of Virtue bids all malice stay.

Sweet friend, thou'rt gone, and all is drear,
For night has closed on Trilby's day.
And heaven where? Oh! earth austere,
Our gentle mother, on her bier
Rest lightly. Reader, seek alway
Our equals—we are gone, I say.
Neoptolemus.

Poor Trilby! the lovely, dear, and good!
I am her foot. Surmise who will
What fond friend, in a loving mood,
Framed of her, and with true love stood,
This charming remembrance, a whim did instill,
Which a breath would remove.

I was a twin: where is my brother?
Alas! alas! love made us part;
United, I hope, in the great "forever;"
As before, we two shall be together,
At the foot of a chaste bed, troubled by none,
Trilby the sleeping one!

Sweet friend, without us can you exist?
The door is closed where Trilby lived.
In Paradise—on earth, and far away
(Earth, dear to us, to her as bright as day).
To find our like, however hard you strived,
Your wish would be deprived. H.

Poor Trilby! good, and beautiful, and dear!
I am her foot. Guess if you will, and say
What friend, who loved her in a bygone year,
For sake of her (and of a flame sincere)
Framed this fair relic, sudden fancy wrought one day—
A breath will blow away!

Twins were we: why is not my brother here?
Alas! love bade us wander far astray.
Eternity, I hope, will bring us near;
Then once again I shall have found my peer,
Deep in a pure, untroubled bed, where they will lay
Trilby—asleep for aye!

O friend, without us is your journey drear?
Closed is the door where Trilby used to stay.
Heaven is far . . . . and on the earthly sphere
(Pleasant its soil to us, and on her bier Light will it lie) you ne'er shall find, seek as you may,
Our like in mortal clay! Beaumont.

Genuine Old Welch Dressers

(Inlaid and Carved Oak), from £6. 10s.

ILLUSTRATED PRICED CATALOGUES POST FREE.
ALL GOODS CARRIAGE PAID TO ANY STATION IN GREAT BRITAIN.

HEWETSONS,

TOTTENHAM COURT ROAD, London, W.

FARADAY & SON's

Electric Light Fittings

New Designs

(in Classic and Renaissance) for Season '98

2 & 3 BERNERS ST. LONDON W

A Great Public Boon!

LIPTON

Has commenced making EXTRACT of BEEF and FLUID BEEF, and is now offering to the Public, at his Branches and Agencies, the

Finest Quality

EXTRACT OF BEEF

EXTRACT OF BEEF & FLUID BEEF At prices which will place these most valuable articles of food

WITHIN THE REACH OF ALL.

LIPTON'S EXTRACT OF BEEF and FLUID BEEF

Are made from the finest quality of Fresh Ox Beef, under the most skilful, scientific, and practical supervision, by a process entirely his own, unquestionably making his

EXTRACT OF BEEF and FLUID BEEF

FLUID BEEF

The Finest Quality ever offered to the Public, and SAVING PURCHASERS from 25 to 35 PER CENT.

THE DAYS OF HUGE PROFITS ARE OVER!

It is admitted by everyone that LIPTON caused a revolution in the Tea Trade, and forced Tea Dealers and Merchants to REDUCE THEIR PRICES. Before LIPTON introduced his celebrated Teas, THE PUBLIC HAD TO PAY nearly double the price they are now charged by LIPTON for the Finest Teas the World can produce.

WHAT LIPTON HAS DONE IN THE TEA TRADE, LIPTON WILL DO IN THE EXTRACT OF BEEF TRADE.

LIPTON'S FLUID BEEF contains the three principal properties of meat, viz., ALBUMEN, FIBRINE, and ESSENCE OF BEEF, in equal proportions, thus making A PERFECT BEEF FOOD, and as there are no condiments nor preservatives of a foreign nature used, it will be found that THE NATURAL FLAVOUR OF THE BEEF IS RETAINED.

LIPTON'S EXTRACT OF BEEF or FLUID BEEF makes the richest Beef Tea.

They are also invaluable in the domestic economy, and will be found by all good cooks the most economical and the best for flavouring Soups, Gravies, Sauces, Entrées, &c.

UPON THE PUBLIC VERDICT Lipton will rely. One trial of his Extract of Beef and Fluid Beef, he is confident, will ensure their being used in future IN EVERY HOME.

Lipton's Extract of Beef and Fluid Beef can be obtained from Lipton's Markets and Agencies throughout the World.

CHIEF OFFICES: CITY ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

If not, you place them at a disadvantage in the Struggle for Life with the 1,000,000 Children who use it daily.
Elevenpence is a trifling Premium to pay on a Permanent Insurance of Health, Wealth, and Beauty.

SCHWEITZER'S

Cocoatina

"THE ROYAL COCOA."

Absolutely full of nourishing and sustaining properties.

"THE QUEEN has a cup of Schweitzer's Cocoatina brought to her at 7.30 a.m., and two hours later uses the same beverage at the breakfast table."—SOCIETY.

BY ORDER OF THE CZAR.—"Send immediately to office of Marshal, Imperial Court, Petersburg Winter Palace, twenty half-pound tins Schweitzer's Cocoatina — Colonel Anitschkoff."—(TELEGRAM FROM ST. PETERSBURG).

"WORTH A GUINEA A BOX."

BEECHAM'S PILLS.

FOR ALL

BILIOUS & NERVOUS DISORDERS

SUCH AS

Sick Headache, Constipation,

Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion.

Disordered Liver & Female Ailments.

SALE NOW OVER SIX MILLION BOXES YEARLY.

In boxes, 1/1½ and 2/9 each, with full directions.

Prepared only by the Proprietor.

THOMAS BEECHAM, St. Helens, Lancashire.

Sold by all Druggists and Patent Medicine Dealers everywhere.

W. & F. THORN, 19, Gt. Portland-st. W.

LONDON AGENTS.

THE STEREOSCOPIC COMPANY, 106, 108, Regent-st. W.

THE

ELSWICK

LADY'S ELSWICK.

GENTLEMAN'S ELSWICK.

1898

Elswicks are, if possible, superior to those previously made and are as perfect as money and skill can make them.

ELSWICK CYCLES are fitted with the PATTISSON HYGIENIC SADDLE.

CITY AGENTS— BENETFINK & CO. 107, 108, Cheapside, E.C.

FIRST SPECTACLES.—When these are required the advice of a very skilful optician should be taken, as, unless the spectacles used in the first instance are exactly suited to the eyes, mischief is soon done which cannot afterwards be remedied.

BROWNING'S SYSTEM OF SUITING THE SIGHT

IS ALWAYS SUCCESSFUL.

Mr. JOHN BROWNING, President of The British Optical Association, and Author of "Our Eyes," now in its 17th Edition, price 1s., 63, STRAND, LONDON, W.C. May be consulted personally free of charge.

EPPS'S COCOAINE.

COCOA-NIB EXTRACT.

(TEA-LIKE.)

The choicest roasted nibs (broken-up beans) of the natural Cocoa on being subjected to powerful hydraulic pressure, give forth their excess of oil, leaving for use a finely-flavoured powder—"Cocoaine," a product which, when prepared with boiling water, has the consistence of tea, of which it is now, with many beneficially taking the place. Its active principle being a gentle nerve stimulant, supplies the needed energy without unduly exciting the system.

Sold only in Tins.

Fleet-st. E.C. in the Parish of St. Dunstan's-in-the-West, in

· TRUTH ·

"Cultores Veritatis Fraudis Inimici."—Cicero.

No. 1109. Vol. XLIII. Thursday, March 31, 1898. Price Sixpence.

NOTICE.

The terms of Subscription to Truth, which are payable in advance, are as follows:—To any address in the United Kingdom, for 3 months, 7s.; 6 months, 14s.; and for 12 months, 28s. The Thin Paper Edition is forwarded to countries within the Postal Union for 3 months for 7s. 8d.; 6 months, 15s. 4d.; and 12 months, 30s. 8d. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to the Manager, Truth, "Truth Building," Carteret-street, S.W.

ENTRE NOUS.

THERE has been a great deal of gossip about the hurried departure of Princess Louise of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha from Cimiez, where she had taken a villa until the middle of May. The real truth is that the Queen wrote to King Leopold, before leaving Windsor, to express her regret that she would not be able to receive the Princess at Cimiez, owing to notorious circumstances, her Majesty's sorrow at the awkward situation being increased by her great and lifelong affection for the Royal family of Belgium, and by her former friendship with the Princess, who has several times been the guest of the Queen at Windsor Castle and at Buckingham Palace. King Leopold thereupon wrote to his daughter, and advised her to leave Cimiez, in order to avoid the vexation and tracasseries which must inevitably take place, the result being that Princess Louise departed on the night before the Queen arrived.

The despatch-boat of the Commander-in-Chief of the Mediterranean has been for many weeks in the service of the Duke of Saxe-Coburg, and has now taken him to Villefranche. The Duke was ill during most of the time spent in Malta, but made one public appearance on the occasion of the Polo Tournament, when he was accompanied by his physician and German A.D.C. His health is still very bad. The departure of the British ship flying a German flag was witnessed with curious feelings by the British sailors at Malta. Prince Alfred of Saxe-Coburg was with his father on board the Surprise, and attended several entertainments in Malta.

The Duke and Duchess of York are to represent the Royal Family at the marriage of Prince Christian of Denmark (eldest son of the Crown Prince) and the Duchess Alexandrina of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, which is to take place at Cannes shortly after Easter.

The Duke of Cambridge returns to Gloucester House this week from Cannes, after a stay of nearly three months on the Riviera. His sister, the Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, who has been stopping for several weeks at Mentone, will arrive in town shortly after Easter for the season, and H.R.H. intends to stay in London until the beginning of July.

The German Emperor and Empress have gone to Homburg to spend a month at the Schloss, which was formerly the residence of the Landgraves of Hesse-Homburg, and Princess Elizabeth, daughter of George III., lived there for many years. The Empress, who has been very much out of health for several months, has been ordered bracing air and a complete change, and it is highly probable that she will go to Scotland about the middle of May for a few weeks. The Queen has placed either Abergeldie Castle or Birkhall House (whichever place may be preferred) at the disposal of the Empress if she decides to visit Scotland, and nowhere in Great Britain is the air more invigorating than on Upper Deeside.

The Queen's Household-in-Waiting during April is to be constituted as follows:—Ladies of the Bedchamber: Lady Antrim, Dowager Lady Ampthill, and Dowager Lady Erroll. Lords and Grooms in Waiting: Lords Bagot, Churchill, and Clarendon; Major Harbord, General Godfrey Clerk, and Captain Walter Campbell. Equerries: Sir Arthur Bigge and Lieutenant Ponsonby. During the Queen's stay at Cimiez, Sir Arthur Bigge is acting both as Keeper of the Privy Purse and as Private Secretary to her Majesty, assisted by the other Equerries-in-Waiting. Sir Fleetwood Edwards is taking a holiday, and Sir Arthur Bigge will be absent from Court during the Queen's spring visit to Balmoral.

Lord Elgin is anxious for reasons of health to leave India in a few weeks, and I hear that he will be succeeded as Viceroy by either Lord Ashbourne, Lord Harris, or Lord Balfour of Burleigh.

Lord and Lady Cadogan are not, at present, making a long stay in England. They will spend Easter at the Viceregal Lodge, whither the Viceregal establishment moved immediately on the termination of the Castle season. During the following weeks they have many public engagements to fulfil. The Spring Cattle Show of the Royal Dublin Society will be held at Ball's Bridge in the week after Easter week. The Punchestown and Leopardstown race meetings are respectively fixed for the 26th and 27th and the 29th and 30th of April. The National race week will, as usual, bring crowds of visitors to Dublin and the neighbourhood. A large party will be entertained at the Viceregal Lodge, from which Lord and Lady Cadogan will attend the races each day in state. All the big houses in the neighbouring counties, as well as in Kildare, will be filled for the week. Sir Peter O'Brien, the Lord Chief Justice, has sufficiently recovered from his late accident—which interfered with his going on circuit—to appear again in the hunting field, and he will have a house party at Castletown for the race week.

The curiously extravagant accounts of the brilliancy of the late "Castle" season in Dublin have caused much surprise and some amusement there. The notices are very rough on Lord Cadogan's immediate Conservative predecessors, Lords Londonderry and Zetland, who certainly did the honours of Dublin Castle with at least as much brilliancy as the present Viceroy does, and did not curtail the "season." "Save me from my friends," Lord Cadogan may well exclaim. Although the age is one of advertisement, there are exalted positions which ought to be out of reach of the intrusion of the sandwich man.

It is satisfactory to hear of the triumph of a cause which has been championed in the pages of Truth. Dublin Castle climbed down some weeks ago with regard to the circular allowing cyclists to take possession of the footpaths in Ireland, issued in Sir Andrew Reed's name to the police. The circular has now been unconditionally withdrawn, and its illegality—as pointed out in these pages—acknowledged. The cyclist in Ireland is still sufficiently dangerous to life and limb without allowing him—or perhaps even more especially her—any extra privileges in that direction. Cyclists, even in the streets of Dublin, are not obliged to carry lamps at night.

The Duchess of Hamilton, who hunted in Meath during the season, has bought a hunting lodge in that county, Ardmulchan. The purchase was completed in the land court last week. Meath is rapidly gaining the position of the happiest hunting ground in Ireland, and, above all, the most fashionable. It is seldom without Royal—foreign, it is needless to say, where Ireland is concerned—patronage, as well as aristocratic. The Duke de Braganza, of Portugal, has again hunted with the Meath hounds all this season.

Parties are being entertained this week for Northampton races by Lord and Lady Spencer at Althorp, and Mr. and Mrs. Leopold de Rothschild at Ascott, while Lady Wilton and Mr. Pryor have a full house at Egerton Lodge, Melton Mowbray, for the Croxton Park meeting and the Quorn Hunt Steeplechases.

The late Lord Charles Kerr was a very famous sportsman and it may be hoped that his diary will be published, as for many years he had kept the most exact records of his angling and shooting experiences, with copious notes on the individuals with whom he had been associated at country houses. Lord Charles was a very fine shot and a beautiful fisherman. He was an excellent raconteur, and had many good stories to relate of Court life at Simla and Calcutta; and at Dublin Castle Lord Charles was a general favourite. His death is sincerely and widely lamented.

Mr. Bouverie Primrose, who died last week in his eighty-fifth year, passed the whole of his life at Edinburgh, of which he was one of the best known, most useful, and most popular citizens. Mr. Primrose took a very active part in the promotion of many charitable schemes, and he was a most enthusiastic supporter of the Volunteer movement. Mr. Primrose was appointed by the Whig Ministry in 1839 to be Receiver-General of the Post Office in Scotland, and ten years later Lord John Russell made him Secretary to the Boards of Manufactories and Fisheries, which important post he held until 1882. Edinburgh is mainly indebted to Mr. Primrose for the building and equipment of the Scottish National Gallery, and he also did much to develop the northern fisheries. He was conspicuous for his zeal, energy, and excellent judgment. Mr. Primrose had been in failing health for several years. His death will be regretted by all classes at Edinburgh, as he was one of the last survivors of the brilliant society for which that city was formerly so celebrated. Mr. Primrose had many very interesting reminiscences to relate of Jeffrey, Cockburn, Wilson, Aytoun, and other Edinburgh celebrities of fifty or sixty years ago.

Everything written by James Payn was eminently readable. It is impossible to find a dull page in one of his novels, and his essays and miscellaneous articles were always bright and interesting. His literary career extended over about forty-five years. Mr. Payn was editor of Chambers' Journal for many years, at a time when that periodical had an enormous circulation. He cordially disliked William Chambers, but was very fond of Robert, who was really the clever man of the firm. Payn has given an amusing but anything but flattering sketch of William Chambers in his novel, "For Cash Only." Payn was for a long time editor of the Cornhill Magazine, and also "reader" to Smith, Elder, & Co. He was himself a charming companion, overflowing with good talk, and full of wit and humour. The plots of his novels were always well-planned, the characters were life-like, and the dialogue was excellent. He was as conscientious a worker as his friend Wilkie Collins, always taking infinite pains with the details of his stories, such as descriptions of scenery and any technical matters.

Mr. James Payn was an almost daily frequenter of the Reform Club, but it is not strictly true, as one or two of his Press biographers have stated, that he was a regular

For the Truth Hotel List, see page 814 in the present issue.
For Hospitals and Appeals, see page 815.
For Amusements, see page 813.
For Our Puzzles, see page 829.

whist-player there, at any rate of late years. For the last ten years he was a member of the Baldwin Club, and used generally to go there for his whist. It was from the Baldwin, and not from the Reform or Athenæum, as stated by the Telegraph and Standard, that the four members used to go up to Warrington Crescent every Tuesday and Friday afternoon to make up his rubber.

DO BEES TALK?

(Vide a recent discussion in the Daily Telegraph).

As to this entomologists cannot decide,
Some think that they do, some the notion deride;
Whilst others are rather inclined to make out
That the question is one that's enshrouded in doubt.
But if on the point you would gain ample light
Just glance at the "House's" debates night by night,
Just notice—wherever the tide of speech rolls—
How you come on the names of a Bartlett and Bowles,
And then "Do "B's" talk?" should one query of you,
You can answer at once "They decidedly do!"

My dear Lieutenant of the Globe, you are just a trifle unreasonable. For many a month—if I may believe those who read your paper—you have been abusing me to your heart's content. Some months ago I ventured to suggest that certain charges of treachery that had been brought against the Afridis were absurd. On that you cursed me with journalistic bell, book, and candle, and pleasantly remarked that a person making such a suggestion as I had made was unfit for the society of decent men. Since then you have lost no opportunity of traducing my character. Of all this I have made no complaint. If it amused you, or brought a few additional coppers to the paternal till, I should be the last to object. When, however, I, on my side, take the liberty to comment upon your absurd journalistic performances, this strikes you as singularly "bad taste." You complain now that vulgar and illiterate persons are saying rude things about you in TRUTH without my knowledge. As I understand it, you want me to protect you. Well, I bear you no malice. I fear that you would never have done for the wars; but, as your skin is so tender, I have given orders that you shall be treated with more delicacy in future. When you next require correction, a lady on my staff shall attend to you.

In the meanwhile, let me urge you to amend your ways. I can most sincerely assure you that they are alike offensive to Tories and Radicals, to civilians and soldiers. If you want to fight, go to the wars by all means, but surely you must yourself perceive that mere silly bluster from a post of safety is hardly likely to commend itself, even to the most ardent of fire-eaters.

What the Globe's circulation is now I do not know. But I used to hear that it was a large one. This was due, I should fancy, to its having a great deal of news, and a small amount of editorial matter, and this latter, if perhaps a little humdrum, neither vulgar nor personal. It was then under the guidance of experienced journalists. But since you, my Lieutenant, laid down your sword and took up the pen, all this is changed. Let me, in the friendliest spirit, advise you to go back to the old lines, for, if you do not, the paper will lose its position, and—I am afraid—its circulation. Do not forget that the Globe has no monopoly, for there are now many ably-edited Tory evening papers.

Having exhausted Warwickshire Worthies, Norfolk Nobodies, Bedfordshire Bounders, and all the rest of them, Mr. Manning Press has now turned his attention to the county of Northamptonshire, and any one desirous of figuring as a "Northamptonshire Leader, social or political," may do so on furnishing the necessary materials, including a cabinet photograph, to the said Press, and ordering five and twenty copies or so of the work when published. I do not contemplate purchasing for myself a niche in this Temple of Fame, and I am glad to find, from sundry communications received, that there is sufficient intelligence among "Northamptonshire Leaders, social and political," to make Press's enterprise a more than usually doubtful one. By the way, the Northamptonshire volume is being advertised in the new name of "Bernard Beaumont, Author," but those who know Manning Press will have no difficulty in detecting him under this disguise.

I have been reading with interest a little shilling novel published by Ward, Lock, & Co., called "An Italian Fortune-hunter." The author is an Italian gentleman—Mr. De Tassinari. It deals with the marriages of English girls with Italian fortune-hunters, and gives, I think, a correct picture of the results of a good many alliances of this kind. Italians are given to falling in love, but when it comes to marrying they are essentially prosaic, and, as in France, the lady is expected to bring something—the more the better—into the joint-stock of the new establishment. Few Italian girls can do this; therefore supply and demand have to be equalised by foreign imports. Mr. De Tassinari selects Florence as the hunting ground, and gives a very good account both of the hunting and of the sort of life which is led by the captured girls in the old country houses in the neighbourhood. Some of these marriages turn out well; others do not. The result depends not only on the husband, but on the wife. The Italian husband is given to gambling. If he is weaned from the habit, he engages in a desperate attempt to remake his fortune by small economies. The wife may not be ill-treated, but her existence, when buried in the country with her new relations, and amid strange surroundings, must be at best a dreary one, especially if the husband happens to be in love with somebody else. Few English girls, after reading Mr. De Tassinari's book, will be disposed to smile on an Italian suitor.

The Morning Post one day last week contained no less than twelve advertisements of West End palmists and fortune-tellers of various classes. If any of these people practised the same line of business in a humble way at area gates, they would speedily find themselves in custody. Should a Commissioner of Police ever arise who will enforce the law without respect of persons, it will be an interesting question whether the proprietor of the Morning Post can be indicted at the same time as the fortune-tellers whose advertisements he publishes. The Morning Post, after brazening it out for several years, finally yielded to the pressure of public opinion by excluding massage advertisements from its columns. Surely it might at least rise to an equal level of virtue in regard to the fortune-tellers, who are really law-breakers, which the other people were not.

A BEAUTIFUL HOTEL AT BOURNEMOUTH.—The "ROYAL BATH." "Hôtel de Luxe of the South." Sea frontage, 1,000 ft.; grounds, 5 acres. Due south. Only Hotel on East Cliff. Moderate fixed tariff.

"FOILING" THE EXAMINER.

[The President of the Berlin University has been challenged by a student whom he had found it necessary to "plough" in a recent examination.]

O oft-plucked British Undergrad,
  Here is a welcome innovation
Which you assuredly would hail
  With an effusive approbation.
Failure would lose its sharpest sting
  Were this revenge to be allowed you:
Think with what rapture you would "pink"
  A stern examiner who'd "ploughed" you!

He might not give you marks to-day,
  But you might challenge him to-morrow,
And, with a foil's point, give him marks,
  To his protracted pain and sorrow.
Nay, you, if skilled in fence, might make Him cut an independent caper
For every "poser" placed by him
  In your examination paper.

So, since examiners are apt
  To unathletic grow and wheezy,
The innovation we report
  Would surely make exams. more easy;
And till examiners were bred
  Whose brain-force was with muscle blended,
We might with confidence expect
  To see the class lists much extended!

Professor Gardner, who holds the Chair of Archæology at Oxford, has gone to America to deliver a series of lectures to various learned societies in New York, Boston, and Philadelphia.

The General Assembly of the Church of Scotland recently appointed a committee to inquire into the "workings" of a number of Highland parishes. The Presbytery of Inverary sent a "satisfactory report" concerning all the parishes within its bounds, but the Panglossian views of these "fathers of the Church" can scarcely be reconciled with the fact that on Sunday, March 6, the congregation at the Inverary Gaelic Church consisted of three persons, including two elders, while on the 13th a vigorous whip-up resulted in an attendance of six, which, however, included neither an elder nor the precentor. It reminds one of Charles Lever's story of the Government functionary who was charged to report on the attendance at the Anglican churches in Ireland. He went to one church where there were only three persons at the Sunday morning service, consisting of the clergyman, the clerk, and the clerk's mother, and his report was as follows:—"The congregation is orderly and attentive, but not numerous."

Type-writers and Cycles, all makes, for Sale, Hire, or Exchange, at half makers' prices. MS. Type-written.—Taylor's 74, Chancery-lane, London. Established 1884.

Canon Newbolt will on Friday replace Archdeacon Sinclair as Canon-in-Residence at St. Paul's Cathedral, and he is to preach on Sunday afternoons during April. The Bishop of London has arranged to conduct the three hours' special service in the Cathedral on Good Friday. Canon Gore, who has been in residence at Westminster Abbey during the last month, will be on duty there until May 1.

A paragraph has been going round the papers which states that the rectory of Banham, Norfolk, vacant by the death of Canon Garnier, "is, perhaps, the richest living in the gift of the Crown." As a matter of fact, this benefice is in the gift of the Lord Chancellor. The income was formerly about £1,800 a year, but it has been gradually reduced by the agricultural depression, and I am informed that last year the Rector's net stipend was £330, with residence. Canon Garnier, who was a scholarly, hospitable, charitable, and very popular ecclesiastic, was a renowned cricketer when at Winchester and at Balliol. He was a son of the late Dean of Lincoln and Lady Caroline Garnier, and his grandfather was Dean of Winchester for many years.

People seem to me to take very strange and illogical views about Income Tax. I find a good Churchman writing to me now to complain that after he has given an Easter offering to his Vicar, the Vicar has to pay Income Tax upon it. "I have already paid Income Tax on what I give," he says, "and the recipient ought not to be made to pay over again on the same money." But the Income Tax authorities have nothing to do with its being "the same money." The same money may pass, in the course of trade, or in other ways, through a dozen hands in the course of a week, and be rightly taxed as the income of each individual through whose hands it passes. Income tax is a contribution which every individual has to make to the up-keep of the country, on the basis of his receipts from one source and another during the year. What a clergyman receives from the benevolence of his flock is as much income earned by him in his vocation as what I receive from the readers of Truth is the income which I earn in my humble line. Why the clergyman should be exempted, if I am to be taxed, I fail altogether to see.

The Rev. H. F. S. Adams, whose preferment to the living of Emanuel, Streatham Common, was mentioned last week, should have been described as formerly Rector of Branston. For more than three years past Mr. Adams has been Vicar of St. Paul's, Stratford, E., where he is exceedingly popular.

From the days of the Puritans downwards the Bible has been put to many queer uses. Perhaps one of the strangest of them all has just been brought under my notice. It seems that gold-leaf for decorative purposes is, as a regular matter of business, packed in little books made up of the unbound pages of Holy Writ cut to the requisite size for the purpose, and stitched together. A clergyman whose church was being redecorated told me the other day that he found the building littered with these little books, thrown away by the workmen after extracting the gold-leaf. On inquiry of one of the leading firms in the gold-leaf trade, I learn that the practice of packing the material in this way is a well-established one, and that the Bible is selected for this purpose because, as a rule, the type is more evenly set, and the printing generally finer and better executed. On the other hand, I hear from other sources that the use of the Bible is looked upon as a sort of guarantee that the leaf is of the best possible quality.

It appears that the Book of Common Prayer is also employed for the same purpose. What I should like to know is, how the Bibles and Prayer Books are obtained. The firm from whom I sought information informed me that the gold-leaf books are made up and supplied to the trade by an enterprising firm in Birmingham. My informants do not use the Bible packing themselves; but they said that if they wanted these particular books they knew an enterprising gentleman in London who also supplied them, but he was at present an invalid, and inaccessible. It is evident that the books are made up from the sheets in the condition in which they leave the press, and before they are folded. Perhaps, therefore, the printers can throw some light on the mystery.

Mr. E. S. Mostyn Pryce has sent me, "for insertion in this week's TRUTH," a somewhat lengthy letter concerning his dispute with the authorities of the Royal Victoria Hospital, at Bournemouth. I think, however, that without any injustice to Mr. Pryce, I can present his points in a shorter form. He informs me that the governess was told by the matron that she could have the advice she sought upon payment of a small donation to the hospital; that she gave such a donation and saw the house surgeon; and that at a second consultation with another member of the medical staff she was asked for her recommendation ticket. It was only then that application was made for the 5s. ticket, and the application was not made by Mr. Mostyn Pryce himself, though his name was entered on the ticket. "The ticket was afterwards given in," says Mr. Pryce, "to pay for the consultation already given;" and then followed the correspondence to which I referred last week. With regard to the non-appearance of this correspondence in the local Press, Mr. Pryce observes that the editors "civilly agreed" with him that it should not be published.

The details Mr. Pryce gives as to the circumstances under which the ticket was obtained would have had a more important bearing upon the matter had he not in his letter to the Hospital Committee taken up the position that a governess in receipt of a salary of £40 a year and her board and lodging was a proper person to receive treatment at a medical charity of this kind. The Hospital Committee disagreed with Mr. Pryce, and so do I. He complains that the letters addressed to him by the Committee were "hectoring" and "abusive," and he alludes to the "somewhat illiterate secretary" who wrote "surprized" for "surprised." It does not appear to me that there was anything objectionable in the letters which reminded Mr. Pryce that he was not a subscriber to the hospital to which his governess had been sent. Nor do I think, as he seems to do—but then I am not an Inspector of Schools—that a mistake in spelling on the part of the secretary is any serious reproach to the management of the hospital. Mr. Pryce imagines that he was in disfavour at the hospital because "he is known to have shown inclinations to homœopathy." On the other hand, I am rather inclined to conclude from his letters that Mr. Pryce himself had a prejudice against the hospital and its staff owing to his aversion to allopathy.

The Children's Hospital at Bristol has come out with flying colours from an investigation of the charges which have been made against the medical staff, the nurses, and the managing committee. The charges were preferred by a former house surgeon, and were of such gravity, and obtained such credence, that, as was pointed out in TRUTH, an inquiry by an independent tribunal was necessary for the satisfaction of the public mind and in the interests of the hospital. Such an inquiry has just been held by commissioners nominated by Lord Herschell, and the result is a complete and unequivocal acquittal of the accused parties on every count of the indictment. It was much better that the question should be thoroughly threshed out as it has been, so that no cloud of suspicion should any longer rest over the charity.

The latest thing in Irish lotteries is being run by the Convent of Mercy, Kilbeggan, West Meath, and the books of tickets are being sent out in the usual way, accompanied by the usual offer of a premium of one free ticket for every book disposed of. As showing how these things are done, here is a letter addressed by the Mother Superior to a gentleman, who was a perfect stranger, notwithstanding the familiar way in which he is addressed:—

> MY DEAR MR. ———.—Will you kindly purchase the enclosed tickets, only 2s. 6d.? We will feel very grateful, as we are in great difficulties just now, owing to the heavy debt on our convent and schools. If not in your power, will you ask some child to dispose of them?

There is an idea over here that it is a bad thing to encourage gambling among children, but I suppose that in the case of gambling for religious objects the end is held (by religious persons) to justify the means.

H. L. SAVORY & CO.'S CIGARETTES.—By Special Warrants of Appointments to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, H.R.H. the Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, H.S.H. the Duke of Teck, and the Houses of Lords and Commons. To be obtained of all the leading Houses in the trade.—Sole address, 59, Piccadilly, London, W. Specimen case of samples, containing all sizes, 2s. 6d., with price list.

The extravagant lengths to which General Officers have run of late years in "mentioning" officers in despatches is calculated to bring contempt and ridicule upon the British Army. It was Lord Wolseley who commenced this pernicious custom during his farcical campaign in Egypt. What it has grown to since was shown the other day in the case of the Tochi Valley Expedition. Sir Bindon Blood now reports of the Buner Field Force that no officers were killed, wounded, or missing after the operations; and only one of the non-commissioned officers and men was wounded, none being either killed or missing. The fighting evidently was not severe, but, positively, sixty officers are "mentioned" in the despatch, being a larger number than the Duke of Wellington "mentioned" during the whole of the Peninsular War.

The appointment of a new Commandant of the Staff College has led me to turn up the remarks published in Truth in the autumn of 1894, upon the officering of that establishment. I there came across the following significant passage in a letter written by an officer of considerable standing:—

> The post of Commandant is one, above all, requiring tact, knowledge of men, and of the world. It is alike the most responsible position and the most coveted position for officers of Colonel's rank in the Army. In other countries a similar post is never conferred on anyone who has not proved, by the successful manner in which he has commanded a regiment, that he has a natural ability for ruling men, and that his judgment can be trusted for the important task of selecting those qualified to be future staff officers. . . .
>
> In the appointment of the present Commandant all such considerations were disregarded. He came from fifteen years of uninterrupted Staff service, he had never commanded a regiment, or in fact done any regimental duty since he was a captain; moreover, beyond a fortnight's service in Egypt at the time of Tel-el-Kebir, he had never seen any war service, &c, &c., &c.

Now what of the new Commandant? Colonel Miles joined the Munster Fusiliers in 1867, and served with that regiment until 1881, when, having reached the rank of Major, he was appointed Garrison Instructor at Aldershot. Since then his military career has been passed on the Aldershot Staff, and at the War Office, in the appointments of Deputy-Assistant-Adjutant-General, Deputy-Assistant-Quartermaster-General, and Assistant-Adjutant-General. Without wishing to criticise unfairly an officer just taking up a new and important appointment, it is quite certain that if regimental command and war service are desirable in a Commandant of the Staff College, Colonel Miles is hardly the man for the post. Nor does it surprise me, while Staff College appointments are filled up on such principles, that I should have Indian Officers writing to tell me that the Indian Army does not like Staff College men, and can get on better without them.

From many quarters I have received protests against the reported intention of extending Surgeon-Major-General Gore's appointment as P.M.O. in India. Although many Service men speak in praise of the P.M.O.'s administrative ability, there seems to be a general opinion that his appointment was a job in the first instance, and that there is no good reason now why he should not make way for those whose time has come to succeed him, more especially as he has recently received a good service pension of £100 a year, to which his title was questionable. This is a fair and reasonable view of the case, which I trust will commend itself to the Indian military authorities.

The Government have at last definitely promised that the Army Medical Service is to be organised as a special Corps, and that medical officers shall hold ordinary military rank in that Corps. This will, I trust, remove some of the worst of the grievances under which the Army surgeon has been groaning so long and so loudly. Modesty forbids me to mention the share which Truth has taken in bringing about this desirable result; but should Army medical officers feel under any obligations to me on that score, I trust they will show it by relieving me for a brief period of the necessity of ventilating the grievances which they will, no doubt, continue to cherish.

The lamentable state to which the Army Medical Department has been reduced is shown by the fact that the Director-General is compelled to apply to the authorities of the London hospitals for assistance. In explanation it is stated that the large demand for Medical Officers required for duty in Egypt and Africa (South and West) has thrown a great strain upon the Army Medical Staff in this country; and, owing to the impossibility of obtaining the entire services of ordinary general practitioners, the Secretary of State for War has sanctioned the employment of a certain number of young civil surgeons to take charge of troops in the United Kingdom. This appeal to the London hospitals is, to say the least, undignified, and it is to be hoped that the great Departmental reform now promised will obviate any necessity for repeating it.

Mr. Brodrick made a promise last week that the suggested reduction of the term of office of the Director-General A.M.D. from seven years to five should receive the consideration of the Secretary of State for War. It may assist Lord Lansdowne in his deliberations if I remind him of the singular fact that there is not, at the present time, a single ex-Director-General living. The recent occupants of that post have died very shortly after retiring, which seems to show that they must have been pretty nearly used up before they came to the end of their term of office.

Is it the correct thing for a staff-sergeant M.S.C., in charge of a Station Hospital, to employ a tailor who happens to be under his care, on his own private work, paying him for the job? I hear of a case of this kind from a Depot near London, where the tailor, during the time he was in hospital, was employed in "turning" a pair of trousers for the staff-sergeant, at the modest price of one shilling. It seems to me that, for Medical Staff Corps N.C.O.s to make use of patients in hospital in this way, is a practice which must readily lend itself to abuse, and if not contrary to regulations it ought to be made so.

Savoy Hotel, Savoy Restaurant, London. Large reception-rooms for fashionable réunions. Orchestra plays daily during dinner and opera supper.

Some months back a considerable sum of money was expended in fitting up a stage and scenery in the dining-room at Herbert Hospital, Woolwich, the money coming from the Patients' Library and Recreation Fund. The ostensible object of this expenditure was to provide concerts and amateur theatrical performances for the benefit of the patients, but for some reason or other, after one very successful concert was given, the idea seems to have dropped, and the room and stage have been unused for some months, even the entertainments which have been got up for the amusement of the patients in former years having been abandoned. There is an impression among many of those connected with the Hospital that this is due to the resentment of some one in authority at a paragraph having appeared in TRUTH in reference to the unceremonious appropriation of the canteen piano for the dancing classes of the officers' children. For the sake of all concerned I trust that this impression is erroneous. At the same time it would be interesting to know why the entertainments have been dropped.

Here is another interesting story from Herbert Hospital. Some time ago one of the gardeners asked for a supply of insecticide to destroy green fly and other pests in the greenhouse, which was filled at the time with a large stock of bedding-out plants. There was no insecticide in stock, but the Medical Officer who had to deal with the application, brought his scientific knowledge to bear upon the emergency, and ordered a case of compressed sulphur dioxide to be opened in the greenhouse. The result was most satisfactory, so far as the insects were concerned, every one of them being exterminated. Unfortunately, all the plants were killed, too.

Some time ago, when doing away with the appointment of commissioned officers as paymasters of pensioners, the Indian Government ordered that such posts were to be filled by honorary commissioned and warrant officers on small salaries. This order seems to have become a dead letter in many places, numerous vacancies having been filled up by civilians who had friends at headquarters in a position to pull the strings. The last case of the kind has occurred at Vizagapatam, where a civilian has been appointed to a vacant paymastership in preference to a retired warrant officer residing in the place, who had applied for the post. The original order on this subject was a just and reasonable one, and the Government ought to see that it is carried out.

Should the War Office ever see their way to modify the present regulations regarding sergeants' pensions, I would suggest to them that it would be a more equitable arrangement if service as lance-sergeant were allowed to count towards pension. Here is a case which shows the hardship of the present rule. A man with four years' service is promoted to lance-corporal. From no fault of his own, but purely through the accidents of the Service, such as drafts coming out from the home battalion, and transfers from other regiments, he does not get promoted to full sergeant till he has completed ten years' service. He ends up his time with 11¼ years' service as full sergeant, and three years as lance-sergeant. He has practically been doing sergeant's duty for over fourteen years, and he has been seventeen years an N.C.O., but he retires with 3d. a day less pension than a man who has just completed his twelve years' service as full sergeant. Of course, the line must be drawn somewhere; and on the borderland close to either side of the line there will always be cases of comparative hardship, wherever it is drawn. But the hardship would be much less if the deduction for the full pension were more gradual—say if in the above case the man was only docked 1d. per diem instead of 3d.

I remarked last week that among the many classes of non-commissioned and warrant officers who have been specially agitating of late for a share in the increased advantages of the Army, there are some few who seem to have claims to consideration. Among such may be mentioned the squadron-sergeant-majors of cavalry, who were formerly troop-sergeant-majors. These men took their present rank without increase of pay, but with a promise held out to them that they would, in course of time, become first-class staff-sergeants, in which rank they would have had an extra 3d. a day on retirement—i.e. 2s. 9d. instead of 2s. 6d. as at present. There are large numbers of them who have gone on from that time up till now without obtaining the promised advancement—some of them men who have served from fifteen to twenty years with the rank of sergeant-major. There are not a great many of them, and to give them all the extra 3d. a day on retirement would not hurt the taxpayer much.

Here is a striking instance of the injury done to soldiers by the arbitrary way in which characters are awarded on discharge. A gunner in the Royal Artillery took his discharge in September last at Calcutta. He had completed seven and a half years' service, and had two good-conduct badges. He had not a single "drunk" recorded against him in his service, and the most serious crime in his record was one case of absent without leave for five days in September, 1892. The only other entries against him were (1) for absence for a few hours without leave; and (2) for not being properly shaved. On his discharge, however, the C.O. declined even to mark his character as "good," but consented to mark it as "latterly good." The man came home, and found, as might be expected, that he was unable to obtain civil employment with this character.

But now comes the unkindest cut of all. The man in question, whose name is W. E. Buckland, applied recently, under the new regulations, to be allowed to rejoin the colours. He received a reply from Dover on the 23rd inst. that, "on account of his character on transfer not being sufficiently satisfactory, his application to rejoin the colours could not be entertained." So that a man who has only had two or three trumpery entries against him in the whole course of his service, and has left the ranks with the maximum possible number of good conduct badges, is actually considered unfit to re-enter the Army. I hope that this case will be looked into by the official at the War Office who has the task of investigating complaints made through the columns of TRUTH. It strikes me that if the War Office are really anxious to improve the opportunities of soldiers for obtaining civil employment after discharge, they should lay down some stricter rules in regard to the giving of characters.

In a communication which I published three weeks ago on the subject of recruiting, it was suggested that to increase the present supply of soldiers it is desirable that recruiting-sergeants should work the country districts more thoroughly than is done at present. This suggestion has been endorsed by two or three of my Service readers. One of them remarks that in the present day a scarlet coat is scarcely ever seen in many country districts, even the soldiers from the villages, when home on furlough, usually going about in a blue serge fatigue jacket, which, when with the regiment, would only be worn in barracks. It is also suggested that if recruiting-sergeants go through country villages they at any rate should wear a smarter uniform. Everybody who knows anything of the subject seems to agree that the uniform has more than anything to do with drawing youngsters into the Army.

It may interest, and possibly benefit, my friend "Tommy Atkins" to see himself as others see him. For this reason I take the following criticisms on T. A. from a letter written by an officer, who seems to be genuinely solicitous for the welfare of his men :—

> I have always done my best to understand the men in my charge, to be in close touch with them, to grasp their grievances and their pleasures, and, in short, to be as much as I can their real friend and adviser. I must say that, as a rule, they are a most estimable class, with, of course, the inevitable sprinkling of "bad hats," of whom one can make nothing. The majority, however, are cheerful, contented, hard-working, and good fellows all round. My own individual command I will back for intelligence, smartness, and efficiency against any other command of the same class.
>
> But for all that "Tommy" has his delusions and his weaknesses, against which I feel qualified to warn you. For instance, do what you will, many men are firmly convinced that officers derive considerable pecuniary advantage from canteens and regimental institutes. It is a most discouraging thing to try and "run a show" for "Tommy." He will persuade himself that no one ever takes any trouble for his benefit, and consequently he gives little help in any way. Canteen waiters cheat, give trouble, and commit innumerable irregularities; they sneak coppers which ought to have gone into the tills, supply their pals with free drinks, and give the canteen committee (who often have to sit up at nights puzzling over accounts) any amount of trouble, and all because they believe that officers always cheat them when they get a chance. This is my experience.
>
> Again, if you fed "Tommy" on turtle soup and caviare he would persuade himself that it was adulterated and bad, and frequently refuse it on that ground. I have known a whole mess turn up their noses at a brand of brawn supplied for their breakfast. They flung it out of the window and sulked, and nursed the grievance for a long time. Yet at that very time the same identical brand was used and highly appreciated in the officers' mess! This is a fact. What on earth can one do in such cases?
>
> I am far from maintaining that a soldier's ration is as large as it should be. The quality is generally excellent, certainly far better than ninety per cent. of the men have been used to before enlistment. The quantity, however, would bear increase with advantage, especially the meat ration. . . .

There is some grumbling at the Guards' Depot at Caterham about an order under which barrack-room windows are to be kept fully open during the day, and partially open during the night, no fires being lit until 4 p.m. No doubt, fresh air in a barrack-room, both by day and night, is highly desirable, but it can hardly be desirable for men coming in hot from sharp exercise out of doors to sit in a draughty room without a fire, in such weather as we have been having lately. Bad colds are said to have been very prevalent at Caterham Depot during the last few weeks, and if this is so, it does not seem difficult to find the cause.

A publican at a certain garrison town recently received the following communication from the Officer Commanding the Sierra Leone Emergent Detachment Royal Artilley :—

> Complaints having reached me to the effect that my men are allowed to enter public-houses while improperly dressed, and are served with liquor, please note that, if at any time men are found on your premises improperly dressed—that is to say, without round cap, belt, and gloves—application will be made to have your house placed "out of bounds."

This is a strange way of keeping up military discipline. If the officer in question is unable to keep his detachment properly dressed by the ordinary means at his disposal, and finds it necessary to enlist the services of a publican for that purpose, the least he can do is to offer the publican a reasonable remuneration for the purpose. It would be a highly edifying spectacle to see a detachment of Artillery parading outside a public-house, and being inspected by John Barleycorn before receiving permission to enter and quench their thirst.

It was stated in TRUTH the other day, in reference to the Royal Indian Marine, that life insurance companies charge a higher premium to officers of the R.I.M. than to men in "any other service or occupation in India." The statement is contradicted by the representative of one large company, who says that, so far as he knows, no English company having a branch office in the East lays down any special rate for officers of the Indian Marine, as distinguished from other branches of the Military and Naval Services. On inquiry I find that this is undoubtedly true of certain offices. My information came from an officer of the R.I.M., so that I suppose there is some office which imposes the extra premium he mentioned. If that is really so, other officers in that particular branch of the Service should understand that they can easily insure without paying any such extra premium.

AMERICAN TOOTH CROWN COMPANY, 24, Old Bond-street, W., where the finest Experts in Dentistry from leading American Colleges are in attendance to save decayed teeth. Consultation free. Book describing work post free.

DUYSEN PIANOS are the most superb of all modern Instruments. They stand absolutely unrivalled for beauty of tone, touch, & finish. A consummate success in small grands.—LLOYD'S, 24, Mount-street, Grosvenor-square, W.

I hear that sailors serving with the Mediterranean Fleet are being swindled by representatives of English firms, who sell to them watches, chains, and jewellery, as presents for their friends at home, merely obtaining the orders by exhibiting a catalogue, with the understanding that the goods will be sent by the firm direct to the parties for whom they are intended. In one case a man paid three guineas for a watch as a present for his mother. When it arrived, the watch would not go, and on being taken to two Manchester firms to be valued, was priced by one at 15s. and by the other at 10s. It is said that the agents who sell these things are allowed to go on board the ships at Malta. If that is so, they ought to be stopped. If the orders are merely obtained from men on shore, it is most desirable that they should be warned against buying goods in this way.

It is reported from Gibraltar that a Sunday or two ago, just before leaving for a fortnight's cruise, Admiral Stephenson signalled to the Channel Squadron that Wesleyans and Presbyterians would land for Divine service at a given hour, but that Roman Catholics would not land. Such an order is bound to create a most undesirable impression, the attendance at Mass on Sunday being far more obligatory on Roman Catholics than it is upon any Protestant sect; and if such an order was really given, as to which, I believe, there is little room for doubt, the matter requires some further notice. There are something like a thousand Roman Catholics under Admiral Stephenson's command, most of them West of Ireland men. The naval authorities ashore will not allow them to have Catholic chaplains on board, and if the naval authorities afloat will not allow them to go to church on shore, such a course will not be very encouraging to recruiting, either in Ireland or any other place where Roman Catholics are numerous.

From one or two letters I have received it would seem that some of the Outdoor staff of the Excise are rather inclined to chuckle over the growls from the Chief Inspector's Department anent the recent appointment to an assistant secretaryship at Somerset House. There is an idea that favouritism is not unknown in the Chief Inspector's Department, and the discontent of the Outdoor service at the manner in which the examinations for promotion are conducted by the inspectors has by no means disappeared, though the memorial presented last year wrought some improvement. The fact that the Outdoor branch has its grievance against the Chief Inspector's Department does not, of course, make the latter's grievance as to the assistant secretaryship any the less real and substantial. At the same time, there still appears to be ground for complaint respecting the examinations for promotion, and probably it will not be removed until these examinations, like those for the Customs, are conducted by the Civil Service Commissioners. Why cannot this be done?

The Coming Easter Holidays.—Bexhill-on-Sea.—Sackville Hotel. High-class house, moderate charges and all modern improvements. Wurms' Viennese Band daily. For tariff apply Manager.

Here is the latest display of red tape from St. Martin's, le-Grand. Until a few weeks back, people who changed their addresses could have their letters re-directed by the postal authorities for a year, on duly filling up a certain form. Beyond that time the new address used to be "borne in mind as far as possible" for letters arriving for the old address. Now, however, unless a fee of one guinea is paid for a further twelve months' re-direction, communications to the old address, arriving after the first year, will go to the Dead Letter Office. To see how this works, suppose Jones, a well-known tradesman of Leeds—or some other town—changes his business from one street to another in Leeds. After the expiration of a year, if he does not choose to pay an annual guinea, letters to "Jones, Leeds," will be delivered at the new place, while if they are directed to Jones at his old address they will be shunted into the Dead Letter Office. This is really one of the finest anomalies that the G.P.O. has ever produced, and its originators must be highly pleased with it. But in the interests of the public, whom the Post Office is supposed to serve, the regulations on the point should not remain as they are.

A CAUTION TO "SIMPSON."

The British Cow is no longer in peril. For the present, at all events, the threatened invasion of the intrusive Cow of France is "off."—Morning Paper.

The swamping tidal wave of milk which was to flow from France,
No longer threatens: so the British Cow has one more chance;
Our London milkman even yet his evil ways may mend,
And something more resembling milk may to his victims vend.

Yes, if he's wise he'll take to heart the warning thus conveyed;
He'll, tardily repentant, cease from his old tricks of trade,
And recognise the important fact, at present lost on him,
That even Cockneys do not care to pay "milk" price for "skim."

As to the good old British Cow, 'twas scarcely fair to say
That she was placed in peril or had cause to feel dismay;
The good old British Cow is safe—the one that needs to quail
Is that dishonest animal that has the iron tail

How should an election of overseers be conducted? The Sunbury Urban District Council had to elect three overseers, and the Chairman put, one by one, the names of the retiring officers. Each received the votes of a majority of the Council, and the Chairman thereupon declared them duly elected, notwithstanding the fact that previous to this a fourth candidate had been proposed and seconded and a fifth proposed. A protest was made, but the Chairman refused point blank to submit any other names than the three which he first put to the meeting. The Clerk also refused to record on the minutes propositions which had not been put from the chair. It would be interesting to learn whether these proceedings were in proper order, and especially whether the election of overseers is valid.

A story is going about in Nottingham that the Mayor is to be presented with a Lambeth degree by the Archbishop of Canterbury, in recognition of his distinguished services on the occasion of the Church Congress. Should a degree be conferred on such grounds, it would only supply an additional reason for abolishing by Act of Parliament these absurd and delusive distinctions. The Lambeth degree, owing to the way in which it has been abused, has never had any value as a mark of learning or academic distinction; and if it is to be conferred by the Archbishop on any citizen who happens to render a service to the Church, in the same way that the Sovereign would bestow a knighthood, it is reduced to the level of the decorations sold by Sturman or the American degree dealers.

The procedure of the Society upon the Stanislaus seems to be imitated with tolerable success by the Bangor Town Commissioners. Last week a little discussion was started upon a statement of the rate collector that a number of ratepayers would not pay their rates because the rates of some of the Commissioners were also not paid. It was a topic which by an easy transition led from words to blows. One member knocked another member down by what is described as "a swinging blow on the temple," and then the fight quickly became general, no fewer than five Commissioners being at one time huddled in a heap on the floor, and freely striking out at each other with their fists and feet. "When the combatants regained their feet," continues the report, "each at once armed himself with the nearest available weapon;" but they seem to have had nearly enough of fighting for that day, and in a short time "pacific counsels prevailed." If it is nothing else, municipal life in Bangor—needless to say, it is the Bangor in Ireland that is referred to—is, at any rate, exciting.

Evidently the Tiverton Corporation does not aspire to be regarded as a "model employer," nor does it consider that the trust and responsibility attaching to a situation should be among the factors which determine the amount of the salary. An advertisement is appearing from the Borough Accountant's office for a clerk and collector of the gas accounts, at a salary of £1 per week; and, lest this munificent wage should fail to place him above temptation, he is required to insure his honesty by obtaining a "guarantee" of £100. Of all kinds of sweating, sweating by public bodies is surely the most odious and reprehensible.

The intelligence of the ratepayers of Cullercoats is about to be put to a curious test. At the County Petty Sessions at Tynemouth, on March 14, a certain Andrew Taylor, an insurance agent, was fined the maximum penalty of £5 for being concerned in making false statements to a relieving officer, with the object of obtaining relief from the Board of Guardians for a woman named Harrison. Within a few days of the conviction this same Taylor was actually brought forward as a candidate for a seat on the very Board which he helped the woman to impose upon! The cost of such an imposition would fall, of course, upon the ratepayers, and it will be interesting to see whether the electorate justify the opinion of their judgment which is implied by this amazing nomination.

An interesting exposition of the ways of the Irish Grand Juries was given in County Cork a few days ago at the hearing of certain applications for compensation for malicious injuries. The applicant alleged that two buildings and a rick had been successively burned by some evil-disposed person or persons, but a number of ratepayers opposed his claim, and, in addition to other witnesses, called the District Inspector of the Constabulary and two other officers, who had investigated the circumstances of the fires, and who expressed very decided opinions as to the real identity of the incendiary. The Grand Jury, however, lightly brushed aside the police evidence, and awarded the applicant compensation to the amount of £45, and this the cesspayers would have had to pay, had not the presentment been taken before the Judge at the Assizes and quashed on a technical point. The way in which the Grand Juries dispose of matters of this kind, coupled with the jobbery and corruption for which they are notorious, make it hardly surprising that their approaching abolition is hailed with delight by the Irish people.

Another very instructive incident has occurred in connection with the same Grand Jury. It seems that a resolution on the financial relations of Great Britain and Ireland was brought forward, but withdrawn at the suggestion of the foreman, Sir R. U. Penrose Fitzgerald, M.P. As a similar resolution was passed last year, the High Sheriff has felt it incumbent upon him to write a letter to the Press in order "to clear my Grand Jury from a very grave charge of inconsistency," which he attempts to do by stating that they have not in any way led him to suppose that they have changed their minds, and that the recent resolution "was withdrawn (mistakenly, perhaps) solely with the intention of obliging the foreman." "My Grand Jury"! The Grand Jury is, of course, supposed to represent the county; but apparently from the tenor of this letter it is really expected to be the mouthpiece of the views of the High Sheriff. My readers will remember that the same idea prevails in County Clare.

There have been frequent protests against the systematic and shameful overloading of the Southampton tramcars, but the scandal continues unabated, and a correspondent

Merryweathers' High-class Garden Hose is the Hose of the day. Write for samples and Lists. "Hoses bought ten years ago still in use."—Merryweathers, 63, Long-acre, London, W.C.

Gillow & Company.—The largest Stock of Furniture, of exclusively the best quality, although widely varying in cost. Designs and estimates free of cost.—406, Oxford-street, London, W.

of a local paper states that in one instance a few days ago nearly ninety passengers were packed into and upon a car constructed to carry only forty. This was on the hilly road to Shirley, and the consequent cruelty to the horses can be easily imagined. It is apparently useless to appeal to the humanity of the Company; and the police are said to be powerless. Why? Is it possible that a town like Southampton, which prides itself upon its enlightenment and its prosperity, is actually without any by-law or regulation to limit the number of persons conveyed in these vehicles? If so, it is high time the authorities rectified the omission, and put an end to a practice which is a disgrace to a civilised community.

The wonderful unanimity of police evidence is usually ascribed to perverted esprit de corps among the men; but the observations made last week by Mr. Ashby, the Chairman of the Teddington Bench, raise the question whether it may not be due to a more potent and sinister influence. In a recent case of drunkenness at Teddington a constable named Keen said he considered the defendant was not incapable of driving his horse and cart, while two other constables considered that he was incapable. The magistrates convicted, but at the same time expressed the opinion that Keen had given his evidence quite fairly. Keen has since been dismissed from the Metropolitan Police, in which he had served for fourteen years, and Mr. Ashby suggests that his dismissal is the outcome of the evidence he gave on this occasion. "If the Chief Commissioner considered it necessary," said Mr. Ashby, "that one constable should always back up the testimony of another, the less police evidence they had the better it would be for the administration of justice."

It is utterly incredible that the Chief Commissioner himself would countenance such a notion. It would be, however, idle to pretend that that feeling does not prevail in the Force, or even that it is confined merely to the rank and file, and there is nothing inherently improbable in the suggestion that Keen's dismissal was prompted indirectly, if not directly, by the motive suggested. Mr. Ashby has done good service by calling attention to the case, and unless some satisfactory explanation is forthcoming, it will greatly intensify the scepticism with which police evidence is at present regarded. The fear of dismissal from the Force would often do much to explain why one constable's story is so amazingly like another's.

The need for a Court of Criminal Appeal is strikingly shown by the case of one George Young, formerly an attendant at Gateshead Workhouse. In November, 1895, Young was convicted of a serious crime and sentenced to ten years' penal servitude—a heavy punishment, but if he was guilty scarcely too heavy. Owing to evidence which subsequently came to light, the Home Secretary in October, 1896, released Young on ticket-of-leave This was followed up last July by an order relieving him of the supervision of the police and unconditionally remitting the remainder of his sentence. No free pardon was granted, however, and in a recent letter the Home Secretary says he is unable to entertain an application for one.

Why not? It is clear that the Home Secretary would not have liberated Young, and cancelled his convict's licence, unless he had been convinced either that he was innocent or else that there was a doubt about his guilt, and in the latter case, as much as in the former, the man is surely entitled, according to the principles of English law and justice, to the free pardon for which he has applied. Up to a certain point the revision of sentences and rectification of miscarriages of justice are carried out very well by the Home Office. But in such a case as this, a properly constituted Court of Appeal would have either quashed or affirmed the conviction, and avoided a result so transparently inconclusive and illogical.

Last April I gave an account of the hard case of a man named Marshall, who having bought a cottage and garden at Ettington, near Stratford-on-Avon, as freehold property, afterwards received a demand for the payment of 2s. a year rent to Mr. Shirley, the Lord of the Manor. As the property was conveyed to him as freehold, Marshall declined to pay the rent, and he was ultimately sued by Mr. Shirley in the County Court. The Judge excluded evidence which would have set forth that the Lord of the Manor's interest in the land on which the cottage was built was abrogated by a local Enclosure Act of 1795, and judgment was given in favour of the plaintiff. Marshall was then given notice to quit, but—possibly because of certain legal difficulties which were pointed out in these columns—the notice has not been put into force. He is now, however, again summoned for a year's rent, and, as he is a poor man, I have been asked if he cannot be helped to resist what seems an exceedingly questionable claim. I can only commend the case to the consideration of the societies which are interested in the reform of the land laws. It should supply a very useful object-lesson for their propaganda.

Mr. Kershaw, who is to replace Sir John Edge as Chief Justice of the North West Provinces of India, has been for several years one of the leaders of the North Eastern Circuit, having previously practised at Leeds in the local courts. Mr. Kershaw is a sound lawyer, and his appointment has met with general approval, as he is very popular in the profession. The post is worth Rs. 60,000 a year, the headquarters being at Allahabad. Sir John Edge retires on a pension of £1,500 a year, after twelve years' service in India.

For Truth, and all other Newspapers, Magazines, and Periodicals, send your Subscriptions to Wm. Dawson & Sons, Ltd., Cannon House, Bream's-bldngs., London. (Estab. 1809.) Catalogue gratis.

Bellis's world-famed real Turtle Soup, more strengthening than any beef fluid. Glass flaçons 7/-, tins, 5/-.—Obtainable everywhere, or direct, post free. T. K. Bellis, 6, Jeffrey's-square, London.

The most notable feature of my Legal Pillory this week is the preponderance of cases in which scandalously inadequate penalties have been imposed for acts of cruelty to animals. The magistrates, paid and unpaid, seem to have overflowed with mercy for the torturers of dumb beasts. At Exeter the defendant was let off with a caution, and at Clarbeston, Southport, Chesterfield, and Liverpool, mere pecuniary penalties were inflicted, though if they had had their deserts every one of the offenders would have been sent to prison for a suitable term without the option of a fine. To understand why Justices' justice has become a by-word, it is only necessary to compare the sentences in these cases of cruelty and the cases of assault in the same column with those meted out for such crimes as the theft of a loaf, the poaching of a few rabbits, and vagrancy by sleeping out:—

Exeter City Police-court. Before Messrs. J. W. Petherick, W. H. Dunn, R. R. M. Dow, and H. Gadd. Frederick Bolton, cattle drover, charged with ill-treating four bullocks. It was stated that he beat the beasts most unmercifully and unnecessarily. Dismissed with a caution.

Clarbeston Police-court. David Davies, charged with cruelty to a mare belonging to his employer. He tore and mutilated the animal's tongue in a shocking manner, splitting it down the middle, severing about two inches of the tip of the tongue, and smashing other portions to a pulp. The Bench considered that it was a most revolting act of cruelty. Fined £4 16s. 10d., including costs.

Blackburn Police-court. Before Messrs. J. A. Watson and E. Rushton. Richard Walmisley, charged with assaulting his wife. He went home drunk and thrashed her, blackening her eye and cutting her nose. Fined £2 and costs.

Chesterfield County Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. A. Barnes, W. Barnes, C. G. Busby, and J. Pierce. William Carlton, charged with ill-treating a pony. The pony was about 30 years of age, and could scarcely walk. Defendant beat it till it fell down exhausted, thrashed it about the head till it got up again, and then ran it against a stone wall. He had been previously summoned for cruelty. Fined £2 and costs, or one month.

Portsmouth Police-court. Before Major-General C. P. Catty and Mr. B. Bramble. Patrick Gallagher, charged with assaulting Alfred Wm. Hodges. Complainant was knocked down and given some heavy blows on the head, several of his teeth being knocked out. Fined £1.

Liverpool Police-court. Before Mr. Stewart. David Rogers convicted of cruelty by starving a mare. The animal was in a shocking condition and had to be destroyed. Fined 20s. and costs.

Exeter City Police-court. Before the same magistrates. George Heale, labourer, charged with stealing a loaf of bread from a hand-cart. He said he took the loaf because he was hungry. Fourteen days.

Bedford Divisional Petty Sessions. Before Major Higgins, Major Dubertis, Messrs. L. C. R. Higgins, and W. H. Allen, and Rev. P. W. Wyatt. Wm. Westley, charged under the Poaching Prevention Act with being found in possession of rabbits and nets when searched on October 15. Fined £5, or two months.

Fareham Police-court. Before Messrs. W. H. Deane, C. E. Radclyffe, F. Stapleton-Brotherton, and Colonel H. P. Farquhar. Wm. Walker, charged with sleeping out and having no visible means of subsistence. One month.

Gosport Police-court. Before Colonel C. M. Longmore, Colonel L. G. Rodney, Messrs. P. H. Foard Harris, and G. Cooke. Thomas Stanton, charged with stealing a coat and waistcoat. Prisoner called evidence to show that he was drunk at the time he committed the theft, and that he had hitherto borne a good character. Fourteen days.

Aberdare Police-court. Before Messrs. R. H. Rhys, D. E. Williams, G. George, and Dr. D. Davies. J. McCarthy, charged with sleeping out. Seven days.

Cranbrook Petty Sessions. Wm. Jackson and Charles Smith, charged with stealing two hop poles, value 3d. Seven days each.

Leek Police-court. Before Mr. J. Robinson and other magistrates. Thomas Hodges charged with poaching three rabbits. Fined £2 7s. 6d.; in default fourteen days.

Nottingham Police-court. Before Messrs. W. Lee and J. T. Spalding. Samuel Taylor, convicted of assaulting Caroline Burton. He seized her by the throat and kicked her on the leg and on the head, causing severe bruises. The Bench said it was a very brutal assault. Fined £2, including costs.

Southport Police-court. Before Mr. T. O. Clinning and other magistrates. Joseph Marsh, coal dealer, charged with cruelty by working a horse whilst it was in an unfit state. The animal was lame, suffering from disease of the lungs, generally emaciated, and very weak. It had to be destroyed. Fined 5s. and costs.

Brackley Borough Petty Sessions. Before the Mayor and Mr. E. Hopcraft. Thomas Sayer, navvy, charged with stealing a piece of mutton from a shop. Fourteen days.

Berks Petty Sessions, Windsor. Before Messrs. T. Clarke and H. O. Tudor. John Price, a coloured man, charged with breaking a plate-glass window. Two months.

Stamford Borough Police-court. Before Messrs. H. Knott and H. T. Betts. Benjamin Pickwell, charged with sleeping out. Seven days.

Burton Police-court. Before the Mayor and other justices. Alfred Thompson, labourer, charged with stealing a piece of bacon, value 1s. 7d. Two months.

Burnley Police-court. Before Mr. W. C. Hargreaves and other magistrates. Joseph Entwistle, charged with stealing some pieces of bread from the workhouse. Some of the inmates gave him the bread, which they had saved from their own allowance, to take home to his starving children. Fourteen days.

All praise to the Goole Bench for the excellent good sense they exhibited last week in dealing with some prosecutions of small shopkeepers under the Lord's Day Observance Act of Charles II. Their worships denounced this musty old Statute as an absurdity which ought to have been long ago repealed; and they let the defendants off with fines of threepence each including costs, payable in six months' time. If magistrates would always take this course—that is, unless they refuse to convict at all—the Act would soon be dead and buried.

A man named Joseph Morrell has just been the victim of a gross and inexcusable blunder at the Aston Police-court. On February 18, Morrell was brought up on a warrant for the nonpayment of money due to his wife under a maintenance order, and the case was adjourned till March 18 for the payment of £1 12s. towards the amount claimed and for the defendant to have an opportunity of taking out a summons for the reduction of the weekly allowance to his wife. Unfortunately the record of the adjournment was indistinctly written on the magistrate's charge-sheet, and the officer who copied the entries on to the police sheet took the date to be March 8 instead of March 18. There was no sitting of the court on March 8, but on the following day the case was heard and adjudicated upon in the absence of the defendant, and he was sentenced to a month's imprisonment in default of paying the money. Three days before the 18th the defendant, who was in complete ignorance of what had been done, went to apply for the summons for the reduction of the order, whereupon he was at once arrested under the warrant which had been issued on the 9th, and committed to gaol for thirty days.

The next development of the case was on March 18, when the defendant's solicitor attended at the Court, and discovered that the matter had been disposed of on the 9th, and that his client was in prison. The solicitor protested, and intimated that he should apply for a habeas corpus—an intimation which had a prompt effect; for within a few hours he was informed by an official from the Court that Morrell had been liberated. The Aston Shallows have since refused to give any explanation of these strange and discreditable proceedings; but the wrong inflicted upon the defendant is too monstrous to be passed over without further notice. It is to be hoped, therefore, that the Home Secretary will take the matter in hand, and ascertain, first, who is to blame for the extraordinary error by which the date of the remand was altered, and the defendant tried in his absence; and secondly, by what means and under what authority he was released from gaol.

Subscriptions greatly needed by The Royal Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.—6,929 convictions this year; 7,320 last year. Address complaints of cruelty, contributions, letters, &c., to Secretary, 105, Jermyn-st., London.

The decisions given upon two recent bogus club prosecutions at Barry Dock Police-court appear from the reports to be inexplicably inconsistent. In the first case the secretary and the steward of the club were fined £40 each and costs, for selling beer without a licence. A precisely similar charge was made against the secretary and the steward of the other club, and the evidence was of precisely the same character, the police having raided the premises and found that the majority of the persons present had not qualified as members by paying their subscriptions, and that rules as to visitors and the allowance of credit had not been kept. If anything, the case against the second club seems indeed to have been the stronger of the two, for it was alleged that the steward was drunk and that the members frequently misconducted themselves; whereas no complaints of that kind were made against the first club. Nevertheless, after imposing the above-mentioned heavy penalties in the first case, the Bench dismissed the second without any penalty whatever. To reconcile the second decision with the first or with the facts, is quite impossible, and it can only be regarded as another instance of the skimble-skamble way in which justice is dispensed by the Great Unpaid.

A surprising disclosure was made in the course of a case under the Licensing Acts at Devonport last week. The defendant was convicted of having been drunk on licensed premises, and the question arose why the landlord of the house was not summoned for having supplied the man with drink. The explanation of the Chief Constable was that though he considered the landlord ought to have been summoned, the Watch Committee had decided otherwise. In Devonport, it transpires, the Watch Committee have arrogated to themselves the right to say who shall and who shall not be prosecuted for any offence under the Licensing Acts, and they are generally credited with being extremely indulgent to the publicans. The system of allowing such a body to deal in secret with cases which ought to be publicly tried is entirely irregular, and most mischievous in its results. The Chief Constable is the proper person to decide whether a prosecution should be instituted against a publican or anybody else, and if the Devonport Chief Constable has the courage of his duties and responsibilities he will in future insist upon doing this, regardless of the interference of the Watch Committee. It is true he is their servant, but he is also the servant of the State, which pays half his salary, and the Home Office can be relied upon to effectively protect him from the wrath of the publicans' friends.

An action to recover the sum of £12 2s. was recently disposed of in the City of London Court, and the plaintiff's costs have been taxed at £20 12s. 2d. What the defendant's costs are, goodness only knows. Considering that the learned Judge of the City of London Court has a morbid horror of costs, and always does his best to provide cheap justice, these figures give some idea of the monstrous scale on which County Court costs in general are assessed.

There are people who always find bad motives in the actions of those with whom they are not pleased. A defendant was brought last week before one of the City magistrates for allowing his dog to go unmuzzled in the streets. He was angry with Mr. Walter Long, as the original cause of his being fined. He therefore informed the magistrate that there is no muzzling order in Devonshire because Mr. Long's mother-in-law lives there. As a matter of fact, I believe that she does not; but that is a detail. What amused me in the accusation was its very far-fetched character. Mr. Long can muzzle or unmuzzle dogs. There is no muzzling order in Devonshire. His mother-in-law lives there. All sons-in-law hate their mothers-in-law; consequently, Mr. Long hates his. He therefore allows dogs to run about without muzzles in the county in which the lady resides, in the hope that rabies may become prevalent there, and that a mad dog may bite her, in order that she may die of hydrophobia. What could be more conclusive and self-evident?

In his warning to the public against "free gift" advertisements, the Commissioner of Police might with advantage have included sundry members of the quack fraternity—notably those who prey specially upon the deaf. Several references have been made in Truth to the Nicholson Aural Institute advertisement, which offers to the public the benefit of an apocryphal bequest of £1,000. Another quack of the same kidney trades under the name of J. H. Moore, M.D. (U.S.A.). Moore makes an offer of gratis treatment to those who wish to test his skill; but, in order to enjoy "three months' free treatment," you have to pay 32s. 6d. ("the lowest cash price") for the instrument by which the treatment is administered. It would be a good thing if the medical authorities, instead of harrying unqualified assistants, would devote themselves to obtaining some legislation for the protection of the public against the quacks who now prey on the public with impunity.

With reference to the advertisements of the man Kempe, referred to in Truth of the 17th inst., the Editor of the Illustrated Church News asks me to say that the advertisement which appeared in that paper was received in the ordinary course of business through an agent, and was stopped after its third insertion in consequence of a complaint received from one of Kempe's victims. I gladly mention this as an example to those journals which are still publishing Kempe's advertisement. There are many swindlers preying upon the deaf, but Kempe's method appears to be the most simple and unscrupulous of them all. It is, in fact, plain, undisguised thieving, and Kempe ought long since to have been dealt with by the police.

Ernest's American Cycling Skirt.—4,650 sold in New York last season, and the sale in London promises to be even greater.—185, Regent-street, London.

It is somewhat disheartening to find that the emissaries of the "Rev." J. Gamble, the Liverpool charity-monger, are still cadging about the country. A full account of this Gamble's history and philanthropic exploits was given in Truth in May last. It was there shown that, even judged by his own published account, Gamble's "Evangelistic and Social Society" was an impudent sham, the bulk of the money collected (nearly £1,600 a year) being expended on the collectors and the working expenses, Gamble himself drawing in one year £219. It was also shown that these accounts, discreditable though they were to him, had been drawn up by an accountant from whom Gamble withheld the vouchers for his expenditure; that Gamble had deliberately altered the balance-sheet in important particulars after the auditor had prepared it; that many of the facts and figures given were utterly incredible; and that Gamble's career had been one disentitling him to all credit as a dispenser of other people's charity. The Truth exposure had the effect, for the time being, of suppressing many of Gamble's collectors, and I was in hopes that the man was snuffed out. But it is necessary to go on dinning such facts again and again into the ears of the public, before any effectual impression is made.

The latest news about Gamble's collectors comes from Leeds, which has always been one of his favourite hunting grounds. A lady has been going from house to house there recently, collecting what she can get. In response to questions, she admitted that she is on a salary of 9s. per week, and that if her receipts exceed 30s., her salary rises to 12s. In other words, this collector is actually receiving 8s. for herself out of every pound which the public give her for charity, an even worse state of things than that described in my articles last year. This woman is working not only at private houses, but among shopkeepers, and she has even been round a bank collecting money from the clerks. She boasted the other day, when interviewed, of having collected 5s. in one day from the clerks at a certain bank, which shows the extent to which her receipts must run.

It may perhaps be said that people who part with their money like this to the first plausible female who comes to them in the name of charity deserve to be imposed upon. But, on the other hand, it must be remembered that Gamble's collectors are furnished with books, that they represent a charity with an imposing name, and can produce, if required, balance-sheets ostensibly vouched for by a chartered accountant; so that it is not surprising that they should deceive many people who are fairly circumspect in their almsgiving, and honestly believe that they are assisting a good work. I would suggest to the Leeds papers that they should warn their fellow-townspeople against this impudent imposture, and it seems high time that the police in various towns gave their attention to Gamble's collectors.

The fashion among professional philanthropists seems to be setting at present in favour of house-to-house collection, rather than the old system of touting by circular, which Walter Austin and others brought into such disrepute. It is easy to see that the house-to-house plan has many advantages for the shadier class of charity-monger. The impostor who begs by circular is obliged to commit himself to definite statements in writing, and should he be charged at a police-court, litera scripta manet. It is a difficult matter, on the other hand, to found a charge upon any statement made casually in the course of conversation by a personal canvasser.

Again, while it is an easy matter to chuck a begging circular into a waste-paper basket, it is often a difficult thing to say No to an importunate lady collector. If she knows her business, she can only be got rid of either by downright rudeness or a subscription; and the chances are that she gets a small contribution of some kind from five out of six of the people on whom she calls. These considerations are quite enough to explain the development of collecting by lady canvassers as shown in the case of Gamble, and in the cases of Chubb Jackson, and H. W. Street, more recently described in Truth. For the same reason it is all the more necessary that the police should keep a sharp eye on these ladies. It strikes me that most of them could be dealt with under the existing laws for repressing mendicancy. If not, those laws should be amended.

The mere mention of Klondike is sufficient to make a good number of people forget the most elementary principles of business caution. Consequently, every petty swindler takes advantage of this fascination to attempt to conjure cash out of the pocket of some dupe or other by deft or clumsy use of the word. Here is the latest specimen of this application of the swindler's art, though I can scarcely imagine that any one would be fool enough to intrust the Professor with sixpence in the hope of realising a fortune in return:—

> Grand Klondike Syndicate.
> Insignificant investments producing gigantic results.
> The promoter, Professor Carona, F.B.I.M.S., being about to form an expedition to start shortly for the purpose of acquiring some most valuable property in the richest goldfield in the world, is anxious to admit others to a share of the vast profits likely to accrue therefrom. He is therefore issuing shares of 6d. each, but any number can be taken.
> Please, therefore, send your remittance to Professor Carona, 1, Peel-place, Kensington, and then send a copy of this letter in its entirety to two friends so that they may do the same, and in their turn send it on again to two of their friends. Remember that by so doing you will enormously increase the value of your own share and your consequent chance of success.
> The subscription being so small there is no risk and unlimited prospects.
> N.B.—Please copy this word for word and send a copy to at least two friends, asking them to do the same.

How many of these snowball letters Professor Carona,

F.B.I.M.S., has sent out I do not know, but it is perfectly obvious that if the inducement proves sufficient there will be no need for the Professor to form his expedition to the Yukon—he will have discovered a Klondike much nearer home. As to Professor Carona himself, he is, I believe, a professor of the occult, making a subsistence by revelations of the character of the ordinary man as disclosed in handwriting for the modest fee of eighteenpence. In this business he has for some time past made use of 1, Peel-place, Kensington—a newsagent's shop—as an accommodation address. He is of so retiring a disposition, in fact, that in order to learn anything more about him, I have been compelled to seek the assistance of his own art. The eminent graphologist whom I have consulted informs me that the character of the writer of the letter is of no uncommon type. He appears to be constitutionally incapable of earning a livelihood by honest industry, though gifted with a certain amount of low cunning allied to an instinctive knowledge of the weaknesses of the more ignorant of his fellows. Still, he has plenty of impudence, and it is quite upon the cards that, encouraged by small successes, he will eventually embark upon some larger enterprise with disastrous results. I feel that to add any comment of my own to this luminous study of the Professor would be superfluous.

The Daily Chronicle has been publishing some interesting articles upon the life of London shop assistants. It might with advantage extend its researches into the case of the employees of some of the large "stores." Many of the rules in force at these establishments are of the most tyrannical character. The following are taken from the regulations of one large establishment owned by a limited company, and they may be accepted as typical of the conditions imposed by nearly all firms of this class:—

(1) Every assistant to permit himself or herself to be searched whenever called upon by an officer of the company

(2) Every assistant subject to instant dismissal, or instant resignation, for breach of regulations, or at the employer's will.

(3) A fine of 10s. if away through illness, unless doctor's certificate arrives before 10 a.m.

(4) No pay during illness.

(5) If late twice to be discharged.

(6) No extra pay for late work at seasons of extra pressure—e.g., during the Christmas season, when work is frequently continued till midnight.

These are not the rules of East End sweating dens, but of West End establishments doing a large trade with the richest customers in the world. It is amazing that in these days labour can be obtained on such terms.

A paragraph in last week's Truth on the subject of street noises has brought me several letters from residents in the West End complaining of the increasing nuisance caused by newspaper boys, especially in residential districts. Here is a sample from a resident in the neighbourhood of Grosvenor-square:—

No one wishes to interfere with the circulation of papers or news, but every one is complaining about the bawling and disorderly behaviour of the men and boys who sell the papers. Take this district, for instance, where the apathy and indifference of the police are greater than anywhere else. A gang, some with newspapers, some without, but all howling the same, work regularly between 8 a.m. and up to the small hours of the following morning, from Piccadilly up Bond-street, Bruton-street, across Berkeley-square, up Mount-street and the adjoining thoroughfares, and then back again to Piccadilly, running or standing in the middle of the pavement, hustling and jostling every passer-by, insulting people at the slightest opposition, and respecting neither age nor sex.

Sunday is not even a dies non, for before 9 a.m. men with barrows take up a position near the Coburg Hotel, and all through the morning, church time or not, they howl "Ob-zah-vah!" and the police simply look on and smile.

There is no doubt that this nuisance has increased, is increasing, and ought to be diminished. The proper way to deal with it is by adopting the Parisian kiosque system generally in London. In the meantime, however, the police have power to restrict the annoyance to a certain extent, or if they have not, they ought to obtain it.

Why does not the Lord's Day Observance Society enter on a crusade against Sunday labour in schools? The father of a boy at Bedford Grammar School sends me a Divinity paper which has been set at this school as one Sunday's work. It contains five stiff questions, which I should think would involve a couple of hours' steady grind. When a boy has done this, in addition to his normal allowance of chapel and prayers, it looks doubtful whether his love of Sunday, or of the Scriptures, will be increased.

I take the following from the Boston Courier. We must not laugh at the patriotic "official choir" of Americans, for is not much the same thing going on here, and are not many who, if war transpires will keep clear from "combat dire," shouting that "war has got to come, by Jinks"?—

Nightly in the village store,
Hankerin' for Spanish gore,
Chafin', like they can't hold in
For the combat to begin,
Ephra'm Guy an' Gab'el Blare,
Hi' an' Hezekiah Dare,
Joshua Zeal an' Zeb Maguire,
Snort their patriotic fire.

War's proclaimed, no matter what President McKinley's got
To declare about the thing,
For we've heered the eagle sing
Through the land's official choir—
Joshua Zeal an' Zeb Maguire,
Hi' an' Hezekiah Dare,
Ephra'm Guy an' Gab'el Blare.

War has got to come, by Jinks!
Carnage cut in sausage links
Is the pattern of remains
That is destined to be Spain's.
So hev screamed in frantic ire
Joshua Zeal an' Zeb Maguire,
Hi' an' Hezekiah Dare,
Ephra'm Guy an' Gab'el Blare.

An' when Freedom's fires are lit
An' the fight is bein' fit,
You will find in village store,
On the nail kegs as before,
Far removed from combat dire,
Joshua Zeal an' Zeb Maguire,
Hi' an' Hezekiah Dare,
Ephra'm Guy an' Gab'el Blare.

Despite the enthusiasm and unanimity of the Mansion House Conference, there is little prospect at present of success for the scheme for the acquisition of the Crystal Palace by the nation. Everybody may be willing to admit that it would be a national misfortune if the place were closed and the ground sold for building sites; but everybody may not be so ready to dip into the national purse to the tune of three-quarters of a million; more especially when the threatened calamity is no longer so imminent as it was. The provinces would probably raise strong objections to an expenditure which, though they send many thousand visitors to the Palace, would, after all, be mainly for the benefit of Londoners. There is, moreover, another scheme afoot which promises to give the Palace a fresh lease of life; and until this has been given a trial, it is hopeless to expect that any progress will be made with the proposal advocated at the conference last week.

In view of the fact that the revised treaties will next year bring foreigners in Japan under the penal jurisdiction of the Japanese Courts, the British community in that country is at present manifesting a lively interest in the accommodation of the gaols and the treatment of prisoners. Judging from an article in the Kobe Chronicle, this agitation is by no means unreasonable. The article describes the conditions under which an accused person may be incarcerated, without any possibility of obtaining bail, for from fifty to one hundred days, before he is brought to trial. The cell is a sort of cage, unheated, and unprotected from the winds in winter, and intensely hot and stuffy in summer. Prisoners of all classes—respectable and clean, filthy and degraded—are sometimes packed together so closely that there is not room for each to lie down at full length on the floor where they sleep, and the whole arrangements are loathsome and revolting in the extreme. There is, as we have lately been reminded, plenty of room for improvement in English gaols, but the Japanese appear to be in this respect in a state of primitive barbarism.

The newspapers some time since briefly recorded the refusal of the Government of Hong Kong to allow Dr. Sun Yat Sen to land in that colony. The official letter which was addressed to him is decidedly interesting. Here is the text of it:—

HongKong, Colonial Secretary's Office,
October 4, 1897.

Sir,—In reply to your letter, undated, I am directed to inform you that this Government has no intention of allowing the British colony of Hong Kong to be used as an asylum for persons engaged in plots and dangerous conspiracies against a friendly neighbouring Empire, and that in view of the part taken by you in such transactions, which you euphemistically term in your letter "emancipating your miserable countrymen from the cruel Tartar yoke," you will be arrested if you land in this colony under an order of banishment issued against you in 1896.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your obedient servant,

J. H. Stewart Lockart,
Colonial Secretary.

Dr. Sun Yat Sen is, I scarcely need explain, the Chinese reformer whose incarceration at the Chinese Embassy in London, with a view to his shipment to Pekin, created so much sensation a year or two ago. This country has, perhaps, fallen back from some of its old ideas with regard to political refugees, but still neither the law nor public opinion would tolerate such a gross outrage as the Chinese Minister attempted, and the Foreign Office had perforce to insist on the release of the prisoner. The British Government could not refuse him the right of refuge here, or allow him to be kidnapped and removed to his own land. But it is clear from the above letter that Governors of British Colonies can do things which the Government at home dare not attempt. In Hong Kong, indeed, the declaration of the House of Commons in favour of the independence of the Chinese Empire has been anticipated. In order to maintain that independence we are, it seems, to aid and abet the Chinese Emperor in his endeavours to prevent reform, and to persecute any reformer; just as we were to join in forcing the Cretans to accept the rule of the Turk in Crete.

Exaggerations have wrecked the best of causes. There was a meeting last week against gambling, intemperance, and impurity. Speaking on the first, the Rev. H. Price Hughes said that gambling, whether for a farthing, or for half-a-crown, or for any other sum, is a sin, and that no blessing will come upon money got that way. The latter phrase I do not quite understand. If a man wins a shilling, and spends it in getting a shillingsworth of food, this food, if fitted for his digestive apparatus, will nourish him, and in that sense will be blessed. God's rain, we are told, falls upon the just and the unjust. In regard to gambling, there is no sin in playing, say, a game of whist—for stakes of such an amount that their loss or gain can in no way affect the players. Nor would there be any sin in two persons betting one farthing on the colour of the next omnibus, if their means allowed them to risk the farthing. The object of the meeting was apparently to call attention to the facilities afforded to persons to risk injury to their prospects by betting on horse races. Many would agree that this is an evil, but exceedingly few would agree with Mr. Hughes' farthing creed.

Another gentleman—an Archdeacon—dealt with intemperance. He wanted, he said, Sunday closing. Now, there may be arguments in favour of this, but as a matter of temperance there is no question that it would be far better to have Saturday-evening closing. Rarely, in London, at least, is there much drinking on Sundays—certainly nothing in comparison with the drinking on Saturday evenings. In Wales, where there is Sunday closing, what has been the result? There has been more drinking on that day than heretofore. Men join together to buy a barrel of beer, and, having bought it, they proceed to drink it. Thus secret drinking is substituted for open drinking, with the result that more is drunk.

As a Radical, I believe that the inhabitants of a locality should have a right to deal as they please with matters alone affecting the locality. This is the line on which I have always urged the advocates of Temperance to fight. Those who hold that the sale of spirituous liquors should be universally prohibited may be right or wrong, but they are in the minority; whereas those who hold that the whole question of the regulations affecting the sale of spirituous liquors should be in the hands of the inhabitants of each locality are in the majority. The Temperance Surplice Shirts for evening wear, with pique fronts, 9/6, 10/6 each, made to measure.—Sampson & Co., Shirt Tailors, 268, 270, Oxford-street, London, W. Price lists forwarded.

Party have spent vast sums, and it cannot be said that they have not been zealous in their cause. But what is the result? Never was the liquor trade more powerful. This is due to the tactics of the Temperance men; and until they alter them, they are doomed to failure.

Apropos of the recent dispute respecting the administration of a parochial charity at Awre, near Gloucester, a local correspondent tells me that in the same place there is another charity for the benefit of the poor in the shape of an annual distribution of some forty tons of coal. It is understood that a load of this coal goes to the National schools, another load to the church, a third to a man employed at the church, and much of the remainder to church-goers who are comfortably off in comparison with some of their fellow-parishioners, who are not church-goers. To prevent such abuses, all charities of this kind ought to be placed in the hands of the Parish Councils or other representative local bodies; but after the result of the division last week on Mr. Strachey's motion, it is, of course, hopeless to expect any movement in that direction, so long as a Tory majority remains in the House of Commons, with a larger Tory majority behind it in the House of Lords.

The demand for legislation to repress the evils of usury becomes stronger with each successive sitting of the Select Committee. It is true that the remedies suggested by the witnesses differ in details, but all are agreed that a change in the law is required, and the general opinion seems to be that it should take the direction of registering (and possibly licensing) money-lenders, and empowering the judiciary to revise extortionate bargains. Mr. Justice Mathew in some respects goes beyond the proposals of previous witnesses. In the case of unsecured loans, he would, as I understand his evidence, make 10 per cent. the maximum rate of interest which could be recovered in a court of law; while in the case of money lent on bills of sale he would limit the interest to 5 per cent. This would at once wipe out of existence such bloodsuckers as Gordon, Shuckburgh, and Kirkwood, greatly to the benefit of the community.

It would seem from the statement of another witness, County Court Judge Snagge, that it is to the House of Lords the usurers are indebted for the facilities for deception and fraud which the bill of sale system affords. A former Bill of Sale Act required every such instrument to be attested by a solicitor, but the House of Lords removed this safeguard from the most recent Act, so that, as the Judge said, the document may now be attested by the clerk or creature of the money-lender. The result is that, though the bill of sale is supposed to be read over before it is signed, illiterate and ignorant people are constantly imposed upon as to the real terms and the real character of the document.

I observe that Mr. Justice Mathew entertained the Committee by reading one of the abusive letters which that unconscionable scoundrel, Isaac Gordon, is in the habit of addressing to his victims. The letter in question is in a printed form familiar to readers of Truth; but here is a new specimen of Gordon's engaging epistolary style. It is from a letter recently written to a tradesman at Northwich, who had borrowed £129 and paid back £154. Gordon sued him for an additional £56, and when £30 was offered in settlement he thus replied:—

> I beg to say that the writ remains strictly in full force, and I mean to put the bailiffs in and also make you bankrupt if necessary. You can consider yourself pretty fortunate that I was not in when you had the impudence and audacity to call here yesterday, as I can assure you you would have had a very warm reception had I been in, as I would have promptly sent for a policeman to have you ejected, as people of your sort should be treated just like dogs, which is also too good for them. . . . I would not lend you one more copper at present, not even to save your miserable life, even if you kept on writing me till you got black in the face.

Among the most detestable of these "predatory vermin"—I thank Judge Snagge for teaching me that phrase—are those who make a special business of ensnaring bank clerks. Here is a letter lately addressed to a clerk in the London and County Bank:—

> 31, Nickolas (sic) -lane,
> Lombard-street, E.C.,
> March 15, 1898.
>
> Dear Sir,—Your name was recently given me by a friend, and I now write you to ask you if you could do with a private advance. I can do it for you the same day as applied for with easy monthly repayments. I have an office at the above address, and can see you there at any time by appointment.
>
> Yours faithfully, A. Burton.

A bank clerk is almost invariably liable to instant dismissal if he is found dealing with a usurer, so that when he is once caught he makes an exceptionally easy subject for bleeding and blackmailing. One practitioner in this line, who calls himself "J. W. Court," has already been examined before the Select Committee. Burton's letter shows that "Court" does not enjoy a monopoly of the practice.

I hear from Mashonaland that things are not looking up in that region. My correspondent tells me that the gaoler has been fully occupied in hanging natives, but that, strange to relate, this is not increasing the affection of the natives for us. They are restless and likely soon again to break out. In the meantime, the police force is thoroughly rotten. The officers are incompetent, and the men are dissatisfied.

We frequently see general statements of the blessing that our occupation has been to Egypt. That the administration of the law is better I do not doubt, but that the individual Egyptian has materially profited is questionable, in view of the following figures from "Government of Egypt Statistical Returns: 1881-1897." The number of Egyptians in Egypt was, in 1881, 6,725,033; it is now 9,621,837. The number of foreign residents has risen from 90,886 to 112,566. The increase in the case of the former must obviously be in children, yet the taxation per head of population, which in 1881 was £1 2s. 2d. per head, is now 17s. 9d., which would make the taxation, taking the family as the unit, considerably higher. The gross receipts from taxation have gone up

Beautiful Torquay.—The Imperial Hotel has the best position, and is the leading hotel in Torquay. Grand climate. Cool in summer, warm in winter, and well known as the "Queen of Watering Places."

£1,072,943; the total receipts from all sources of revenue (and all this comes from the Egyptians) have gone up above two millions. The total revenue of the country which comes into the hands of the Government now is £11,442,937. Of this only £93,778 is spent in public instruction, as against £83,243 in 1881, although the population is half as large again. Expenditure on the army has, however, largely increased. In 1883 it was £246,914. In 1888 it was £386,138; in 1897 it was £589,347. What it amounts to when the expenditure on the Soudan expedition is included is not stated. In addition to this the Egyptians have had to pay between 1883 and 1897 £1,668,771 to us for the cost of the British garrison. Pensions cost in 1881 £279,914; in 1897 they cost £411,031. The debt is at present about what it was in 1881.

As regards the additional benefits which British commerce derives from the import of goods to Egypt through our occupation the figures are still more striking. In 1881 the imports amounted to £7,986,024; in 1897 they amounted to £10,603,672, or an increase of £2,627,648. Of this increase £976,015 is derived from tobacco and cereals and vegetables, which obviously do not come from us. Deducting these items, the increase in imports is, therefore, £1,649,633, and, in view of the way in which Germany has been cutting into the open markets, I greatly doubt whether British commerce has derived any extension in Egypt from the occupation. One item is curious. In 1881 the importation of textile goods was £3,055,868. In 1897 it was £3,526,666; but in every year previous to 1897, it had fallen below the figure of 1881.

In 1881 the exports amounted to £12,982,508; in 1897 they amounted to £12,321,219, so that there is an actual falling off. The export of cereals and vegetables is set down at £2,389,630, and the imports at £1,196,403, though why the Egyptians should at the same time export and import them is not explained.

The only persons who really seem to have gained by the occupation are the bondholders. Their bonds have gone up in price. If a prior year to 1881 be taken, every Egyptian bondholder would be shown to have gained cent. per cent. The low price of the bonds and the fall in their price were the primary causes of our occupation of the country, and in this sense the occupation may be said to have been successful. The great mass of the British nation are not, however, Egyptian bondholders.

I have often protested, on general principle, against the Premiership and the Secretaryship for Foreign Affairs being in the same hands. Now that Lord Salisbury is being denounced as a Minister not up to the Jingo mark, the Times has discovered that the real reason why the Unionists have not greatly prospered at the by-elections is that Lord Salisbury is the occupant of both these posts. He is, therefore, ordered to "devolve the work of the Foreign Office upon one of his colleagues." On which colleague it is not said. Were I to place Party before country, I should echo the ultimatum of the Times, for I am convinced that such a transfer would greatly weaken the Government. The Unionists have a gentleman in their Cabinet who, I make no doubt, awakes every day in astonishment that his transcendent qualities as a Foreign Secretary and as a Premier have not yet been recognised. He certainly, of all the Unionist Ministers, approaches the nearest to what, according to the Times and other Jingo papers, a Foreign Secretary should be. Is it on his behalf that this attack is made upon Lord Salisbury, at a time when, like many others, he is temporarily down owing to influenza?

"READY, AYE, READY!"

Scene.—The Room of the Secretary of State at the Colonial Office. The Right Honourable J*s*ph Ch*mb*rln is discovered, as the curtain rises, perusing the first leader in the "Times" for Monday last. As he reads the words,

> "Practically we have no Prime Minister and no Foreign Secretary,"

he throws down the paper, springs excitedly to his feet, and proceeds to thus give vent to his feelings:—

And if this be our parlous state to-day,
If we have neither—what's the reason, eh?
Is it because no statesman can be found
To make the British Lion's roar resound?
In England's name new triumphs to decree?
No, that is too absurd, for there is me!
Or, rather, "I" (though, at a time like this,
Bad grammar adds a kind of emphasis).

Is it that no Elisha's near to dare
Elijah's mantle (double-caped) to wear?
Are there no shoulders fit for it in fine?
Pooh! that is nonsense. Pray, are there not mine?

I can't conceive what 'tis the Times is at:
It grumbles daily; growls at this and that:
Declares the country's honour is its aim,
And yet refrains from mentioning my name.
I am prepared to freely risk my all
Should England call me—but she doesn't call;
Gladly I'd undertake her mighty task
If she would ask me—but she doesn't ask.
Mere stop-gaps muddle on, and I meanwhile,
Must mask my yearnings with a bitter smile;
They of my talent don't possess a tithe,
Yet in inaction I'm left here to writhe.
(Sounds heard without.)
But ah! a footfall! That must Jesse be,
Come in, old friend!
(Enter Mr. Jesse C*ll*ngs.)
Well, have you news for me?
What do they talk of at the clubs to-day?
Is my name mentioned?
Mr. Jesse C*ll*ngs (bitterly): Nay, dear master, nay!
Mr. Joseph Ch*mb*rl*in: Now this in strangeness surely all outstrips,
My name, by rights, should be upon all lips.
Short-sighted England! how much longer, pray,
Will you refuse to see your only way.
The Hour has struck; be wise, then, if you can,
And recognise I, Joseph, am the Man!

He throws himself again into his chair and proceeds to further vent his pent-up feelings by commencing another despatch to President Kruger—a regular "scorcher"—as the scene closes.

Charing Cross Hospital, W.C., entirely dependent on voluntary support, urgently requires help. Liabilities, £11,000. No investments.

Fresh Flowers from the Flower Farm, Wisbech, 2s. 6d. per box, paid. Also Garden Plants at grower's prices. Write for list.

SCRUTATOR.

PEACE OR WAR?

MR. CURZON has stated this to be our policy in regard to China:—

1. Maintenance of the integrity and independence of China;

2. Preservation of our treaty rights under the Treaty of Tien-tsin of 1858, viz., to pay no higher tariffs than other foreign nations, and all ports within the dominions free to our friendly ships of war;

3. Preservation of the most favoured nation rights.

We took Hong Kong, by means of war, from the Chinese. The place is at once a commercial entrepôt for our goods, and a fortified naval station for our warships. We have, a few weeks ago, agreed to Germany obtaining from China a lease of Kiao-chau as an entrepôt for German goods, and a fortified station for her warships. At present, Russia has obtained a lease of Port Arthur as a fortified station for her warships, and of Ta-lien-wan as an entrepôt for her goods. Both these places are in Manchuria, which is a territory outside China Proper, but forming part of the Chinese Empire; and Port Arthur cannot be made a safe naval fortified port, without the possession of Ta-lien-wan. Our warships are to be allowed entrance into the port of Port Arthur, precisely as Russian warships may enter the port of Hong Kong. Ta-lien-wan is to be a commercial free port, i.e., no tariff beyond that permitted by our treaties with China is to be imposed.

Russia is building a railway across Siberia, which is on the high way to completion. She has hitherto had no port on the Pacific which is free from ice in winter. Lord Salisbury and Mr. Balfour have declared that her endeavour to secure one from China is reasonable and natural. Obviously, as the port is to be the eastern terminus of her trans-Siberian railway, this railway must run through Chinese territory in order to reach the terminus. What grounds, then, have we to complain of the lease of Port Arthur and Ta-lien-wan to Russia, or of the permission granted to her to make a railway to those places? The integrity and independence of China is no more affected by these concessions, than it is by our possession of Hong Kong, or by the lease to Germany of Kaio-chau. That Russia, having the terminus of her railway in Manchuria, and having a railroad through Manchuria to that terminus, will exercise a considerable influence in that territory, I make no doubt. But this is the result of her geographical position. Our commerce with Manchuria is practically nil, because it is a country almost barbarous. If Russia exercises a civilising effect on this region we shall commercially profit, for it must not be forgotten that our commerce with Russia, notwithstanding her high tariffs, is greater than that which we have with the whole of China. What Lord Salisbury seems to have done has been to hold fast to our commercial treaties which make China Proper a free trade area. These treaties have never been contested by any foreign Power, and so long as they are not we may rest satisfied with our relations with China.

We are told by our Jingo Press that we ought to inform Russia and China that unless the lease by the latter of a commercial and a military port to the former is abrogated, we shall make this a casus belli, and every effort is being made to get up a war feeling in England by these journals.

Let us suppose that we were to declare war against Russia. What would happen? In the Far East we should sweep the sea of all Russian warships. But we should not be able to land a force in Manchuria able to cope with Russia on land. She would, therefore, remain absolute master of that country. As she has not had time to convert Port Arthur into a strong fortress, we might occupy the harbour with our ships, but we could not do more; for if we tried to entrench ourselves on land, we should find ourselves under the guns that Russia would bring up. What would happen on our Indian frontier? Russia has already a railroad by which she can move troops to within striking distance of Herat. She would mass an army there. As Herat is on the northern side of the mountains that defend our Indian North-Western frontier, the advantage in a struggle for Herat would be on the side of Russia, and Herat would fall into Russian hands. Probably she would not attempt to invade India, but we should have to be prepared for such a contingency, and this would cost us and India much money. In the Mediterranean, both we and Russia would be stalemated. We should not be able to enter the Black Sea, and Russia would not be able to leave that sea. She would comfortably, therefore, convey the products of her Southern Provinces to a market by means of her railroads and her ships or those of neutrals in the Black Sea. In the Baltic we should be able to blockade her ports. But the only result would be that she would send her products to German ports over the railroads which connect these ports with her Empire. Our carrying trade in the Black Sea and in the Baltic is worth above 20 millions to us: this we should be deprived of As a matter of fact, consequently, we should lose more by a war than Russia. She is a self-contained country, having no colonies as hostages to fortune. Our maritime supremacy would be of no benefit to us.

The silly dolts who advocate war fancy that we should have allies. Where should we find them? German and French sympathy would be on the side of Russia. Japan? She wants Corea. Russia, by agreeing to her having it, would make a friend of her, and she would remain neutral in the struggle; indeed, it seems that she has done this already. The United States? Does any one suppose that the Americans would go to war with Russia in order to aid us to hinder her from having a lease of Port Arthur? If so, they know exceedingly little of the policy of the United States. China herself would side with Russia. It must not be forgotten that Russia stood her friend when she was at the mercy of Japan. Russia, with her huge armies, and her frontier marching with that of China, is far more dangerous to China than we are. Li-Hung-Chang, the ablest of

If you want to entirely Furnish your House or select any article of Furniture or Carpet, &c., send for HEWETSONS' Illustrated Priced Catalogue.—HEWETSONS, Tottenham Court-road, London

Chinese statesmen, seems to have perceived this. We might, it is true, seize on Chinese territory. But this is contrary to our policy, which is not one of territorial expansion in the Far East. And were we to do this, Germany and France would follow suit. The result, therefore, would be that China would be split up into spheres of influence. In ours, there would be Free Trade; in those of the other Great European Powers, we should be confronted with hostile tariffs; for we are convinced Free Traders, and they are convinced Protectionists. It is doubtful whether we should really gain by securing a naval fortified post in Northern China, for many naval men hold that it is better to make Hong Kong our one naval fortress in the Far East. The war, therefore, would, so far as we are concerned, be one—to quote a French proverb—à qui gagne, perd; and any seizure of Chinese territory by us would be more to the advantage of others than to ourselves. In fighting, or in annexing territory, we should, in fact, be engaged in the folly of cutting off our nose to spite our face.

At present our military resources are heavily strained to meet the exigencies of defence, and those of our absurd policy of adventure in Africa. In a war with Russia this strain would be increased a hundredfold. In warring against Russia for Manchuria, we are warring against the logic of events. Did any sane human being doubt that the outcome of the trans-Siberian railway would be that Russia would secure a foothold in Manchuria? Lord Salisbury has recognised this as inevitable. Does any one doubt that, when this railroad is built along its entire length, this foothold will be consolidated?

Were we in the geographical position of Russia, and had we built this railroad, should we not do precisely what Russia is doing? The railroad alters the conditions of things in the Far East. It overturns the paramount position that we have occupied there owing to our naval supremacy. But we can no more alter this than we can convert dry land into sea. If we can secure that China proper shall form an area of Free Trade, we ought to rest satisfied, for this really meets all our commercial requirements. It is said that with Port Arthur Russia has China at her mercy. If this be true, she has China at her mercy already, for the possession of a port in Manchuria is not necessary to enable her to march her troops into Northern China should she feel disposed to do so. If China were an island, or if she were separated from Europe by impassable deserts, this would be, perhaps, to our advantage. But neither the one nor the other is the case. The position seems to me, mutatis mutandis, very much like that which existed when Central Asia consisted of independent Khanates. It was then urged that we should make any advance of Russia in the territory occupied by these Khanates a casus belli, because this brought her within striking distance of India. But it was recognised that such a policy would be impossible.

Lord Salisbury has had a difficult task before him. He has acted with wisdom and with caution. May he continue to pursue the same course! My only fear is lest he should give way to the clamour of his followers, and to that of those Radicals who out-Jingo the Tories in their folly. In regard to Greece I was not at one with the Premier. In Africa, he is yielding too much to his pushful colleague at the Colonial Office. In regard to China, I heartily agree with him. We must accept things as they are. Our choice is between him and Sir Ellis Ashmead-Bartlett and the crew of journalistic swashbucklers who share the views of this remarkable statesman. It is urged that we shall look contemptible in the eyes of the world, if we allow Russia to acquire ports in Manchuria after we have declared we would never, never allow it. But Lord Salisbury, who, as Premier and Foreign Secretary, is the mouthpiece of the country to the world, has never, directly or indirectly, hinted this non possumus. Far from this, he has invited Russia to secure this eastern terminus to her trans-Siberian railroad. Some of Lord Salisbury's colleagues have occasionally indulged in wild vapouring, and the Jingo newspapers have warned Russia that they have their eyes on her; and that, should she dare to follow the Premier's advice, England will shed its last drop of blood, &c., &c. But the country is not responsible for this chatter of irresponsible frivolity. Every country has its boastful swaggerers, and were each country to be bound to make good the threats of the most foolish of its citizens, the world would know no peace.

Artificial Teeth can be Cleaned by using "Dentakon." It keeps them bright, sweet, and good colour. In boxes, 1s. 6d., through Chemists, or post free.—C. Lowe & Co., Surbiton, S.W.

THE GOSPEL OF THE TOMTITS.

The President, having enunciated, at the meeting of the Council of the National Liberal Federation, the truism, that "there is a mighty task before the Liberal Party when it is victorious," and having laid it down that it must be left to the "Generals" to choose the time and the area of the fight for victory, nothing was done at Leicester beyond passing a resolution urging the rank and file of Radicals to contribute £5,000 per annum, in order to enable the Executive Committee to drill them into proper subserviency. That stalwart Radical, Alderman Thompson, as a delegate from the Kingston Association, denounced the Report of the Executive as the weakest and flabbiest of documents that ever was presented to a Liberal Association. At this the agents and wirepullers, who were very fully represented, shuddered in pious horror, and sought to drown his remarks with yells and shouts, to the indignation of the genuine delegates. But when he went on to say, that there was not enough gospel in it to satisfy a tomtit, he was greeted with cries of shame, and one ardent slave urged the President to declare the word tomtit—a word harmless, if expressive—out of order. When it was seen that Mr. Marlow, another delegate, was prepared to second him, a resolution was at once hurried through limiting speeches on the Report to two minutes!

The tomtit gospel having thus been adopted without even discussion being permitted, the meeting cheerfully passed resolutions in harmony with it. They were mere pious opinions, drawn up in vague terms. One of them protested against the foreign policy of the Ministers. Mr. Robson who moved it, thus explained it: "Lord Rosebery's threats have left no enemies, Lord Salisbury's concessions have made no friends." This cryptic utterance, having an epigrammatic jingle about it, was greatly applauded, which was all the more remarkable as the meeting had previously cheered with equal enthusiasm protests against the militarism and the bloated armaments of the Ministry. According, therefore, to the tomtit gospel, we are to inaugurate a policy of threats without the means or the intention of giving effect to them as the best means of securing the good will of foreign nations, instead of acting on the principle of give and take. The pax Britannica is to be secured by bluff and bluster.

The President opined that never had the Federation occupied a more useful position, and never had it enjoyed more thoroughly the confidence of the federated Associations. I should rather have said, that its attempt to crush out all independence of thought and action amongst Radicals has so entirely lost it their confidence, that it is generally recognised that it must be ended or mended. The high-handed proceedings of the Executive at the Council Meeting at Leicester must have accentuated this opinion. The Federation was founded to control Officialdom; it has now become its incarnation. Its modest mission is now to inculcate the doctrine that everything should be left to certain "Generals" whose names are not stated, and to knock the rank and file into shape, so that they may be converted into a blind and passive army of automata, prepared to obey the orders of these "Generals" when they stand revealed. The founder of the Federation, Mr. Chamberlain, took care to arrange its mechanism in such a fashion as would make him its autocrat. When he left the Federation, Officialdom captured it. What little popular element Mr. Chamberlain had left disappeared. Up to 1890 the General Council, which was by way of being elected by the Associations, was the executive body. In that year a sub-Committee, elected by those of the General Committee present at its annual meeting, assumed all power. It was at first, if I remember rightly, called a General Purposes Committee, and it has now become the Executive Committee, and in it all power resides, the Council and the General Committee, i.e., the affiliated Associations, being mere flies on this Executive wheel. The proceedings at Leicester wound up with a speech by Mr. John Morley, in which he enunciated some sensible views of what our Foreign policy should be, but he took good care not to say one word on behalf of the Federation. I have no doubt that he, like most Radicals, is disgusted with the hollow and pompous humbug of its proceedings, and is by no means disposed to recognise it as the centre of Radicalism. There is the making of a sound, popular, representative Association of Radicals in the Federation. But for it to become this, the members of the Federated Associations of which it is composed must popularise its machinery, and substitute themselves for the present little clique, which uses it for its own purposes.

The power of Ministers has increased, is increasing, and ought to be diminished; that of Parliament has diminished, is diminishing, and ought to be increased. Conservatives may approve; Radicals should disapprove. A Parliament is elected for seven years. During this period, provided that the Ministry called to office has a majority sufficiently large to be independent of accidents, Parliament might, for all the influence that it exercises, be called together each year for a few days to vote the Estimates in silence, and pass any Bills that the Government may deem desirable to submit to it. This is alike true whether the Liberals or the Conservatives are in office, except that, in the former case, if the Liberal Government carries a Bill in the Commons, it is thrown out or emasculated in the Lords. The Conservatives seek to obtain a majority at a General Election by promising doles out of the public Exchequer to the various interests, and, to do them justice, they fulfil their promises with that good faith that often characterises men who have obtained control of moneys that do not belong to them. The aim of the Liberals is to secure a mechanical majority, which will vote black or white as ordered. The funds for the election are provided by the sale of titles and other such devices. There is a difficulty on the Liberal side in getting candidates who can pay their electoral expenses. The Party, therefore, in most cases provides the means. Thus Liberal Officialdom establishes a hold on many of those constituting its majority. If the Party wins the election some safe Peer is disinterred who is acclaimed as the Leader, for the peculiarity of the Liberal Party is its love of a Lord individually, in contradistinction to its dislike of Lords collectively. This Peer forms a Government, composed of Peers and of gentlemen in the House of Commons who, with few exceptions, are rather what are termed Whigs than Radicals. Democratic promises made at the election are ignored. The Liberal Ministry thirsts to carry them, but the moment for doing so is never opportune. If by any chance a reform is embodied in a Bill and carried, the Ministry explains when it is thrown out by the Lords that this ought to serve as an object lesson, by which Ministers themselves are the last to profit. Those who venture to protest against this organised humbug are denounced as traitors to Liberalism. Thus, the Government of the country alternates between two gangs of office-holders, the one active for evil, the other passive for good, and the House of Commons is divided between the adherents of these two gangs. Both gangs are afraid of the advance of Democracy. The Conservative gang admits this: the Liberal gang professes to be ardent on the Democratic path, but unable to progress on it. And what is the result of all this? Popular Government is rapidly becoming a farce. The centre of political power is being removed from the House of Commons to Downing-street. The country, perceiving this, takes each day more interest in football matches than in the proceedings of its representatives, for there is a reality in the doings of the one which they do not perceive in those of the other. An election becomes nothing but a fight between the blues and the yellows. Unless the Radicals take heart, make their voices heard, and organise their forces, we shall go on from bad to worse. Never was the Radical Party so strong in numbers, never had it so little influence on the course of events.

At the bottom of all the disinclination of Officialdom to stand or fall upon a clear, outspoken, democratic issue, is the feeling that the struggle will possibly be a lengthy one, whilst a good many of our "Generals" are by no means desirous that the existing checks against democracy should be really swept away. Take the question of the Lords. The last Liberal Ministry stated that they remained in office, powerless and helpless, in order to bring home to the constituencies that the Liberal Party could do nothing—although in a majority in the Commons—until the veto of the Lords had been abolished. But when it came to the General Election this issue was shirked. Now we are told that the country requires another object lesson, and that it will never consent to put an end to this veto until the Lords have done further evil. Yet in every way that is possible, the rank and file of the Radicals have declared that they are eager at once to throw down the gauntlet. They are not such fools as the "Generals" seem to fancy. In the main they consist of working men, and working men, when they perceive that an obstacle bars the way to all advance, recognise that their first aim should be to remove it. If their "Generals" do not act on this plain, common-sense view of the exigencies of progress, they lose all confidence in them. It is therefore hardly fair on the "Generals" to profess a desire to remove the obstacle, and to throw the responsibilities of dilatory tactics on the rank and file.

THE WAR OFFICE AND THE VOLUNTEERS.

A timely illustration of the attitude of the War Office towards the Auxiliary Forces, and the disheartening conditions under which the work of the Volunteers is carried on, has just been afforded by the resignation of Lieut.-Colonel Braun, lately commanding the 4th Lancashire Volunteer Artillery. These are the facts, as narrated by the late C.O. in taking leave of the corps last week. The corps in question (which is a well-known and popular one) has been for some time in urgent need of new headquarters, which the C.O. deemed absolutely essential, not only for the proper housing of the material under his charge, but also for the efficient carrying on of the work of the corps. On taking over the command in 1896, Lieut.-Colonel Braun himself found a suitable site; secured an advantageous offer of it, went to the expense of getting out plans and specifications, and then applied to the War Office for the necessary loan. The application was refused on some legal technicality. The C.O. went to work again, nothing daunted; found another site; provided himself with new plans and specifications; and again applied for a loan. The War Office inquired how much could be raised from private sources, suggesting 20 per cent. as the minimum. Colonel Braun found that he could raise no money, and replied to that effect, at the same time strengthening his position with a strong recommendation from the local C.R.A. The application was put in on November 16, 1897. On January 25, 1898, after having had their attention again called to the subject, the War Office got so far as to send a consulting surveyor to meet the C.O. This step was followed by an offer of half the amount required. Upon this, Lieut.-Colonel Braun at once sent in his papers, by way of intimating that it was, in his opinion, impossible to carry on the work of the corps under the present conditions, and that he declined to take further responsibility.

His decision is not to be wondered at. The only matter for wonder is that more Volunteer officers do not take the same course. The present position is well put by another Volunteer officer, writing with reference to Colonel Braun's resignation:—

> The War Office appear to think it quite natural that a gentleman who aspires to command a Volunteer corps should hand them his cheque book, signed in blank, for their, not his, advantage. This may be seen by the fact that, in every corps in the kingdom, if money is required in advance of the capitation grant, or for other legitimate purposes, certain officers of that corps have to go to their own banker and make an arrangement, and give their own personal guarantee, possibly paying as much as 6 per cent. for money to carry on, because the Treasury and the War Office will not undertake to finance the corps. The country suffers financially by this, because if the War Office assumed, under proper safeguards, the risk which is at present undertaken by the banks, and advanced public money at 2½ per cent., the balance of the 5 or 6 per cent. at present paid would be at the service of the corps, and the country would get better work from the Volunteers for less money, for at present a large proportion of the capitation grant goes in paying heavy interest to private banks.

The country suffers in other ways than financially. As long as this system prevails, only wealthy men can afford to become officers of Volunteers, and only those with the longest purses can possibly take the command of a regiment. In other words, the qualification for a Volunteer officer is not military zeal or efficiency, but money. Here you have the root of the evil exemplified the other day in the case of one of the metropolitan regiments, where a Commanding Officer was proved to have paid a fee to the party who assisted him to obtain the commission, which commission he required, of course, simply for its social value. You cannot expect to get, under such conditions, any considerable number of men actuated solely by a disinterested love of soldiering. Moreover, even wealthy men, who may have taken to volunteering from public spirit or pure love of the work, resent being bled by the War Office for purposes which ought to be met out of the public purse. In the very case described above, I believe that the Colonel was a man of fairly substantial means. Probably he could have found without difficulty the whole of the money needed for the new quarters. Probably, also, the War Office had an inkling of this, and thought that by judicious handling the money might be squeezed out of him. No doubt it has been squeezed in the same way before now out of many a Volunteer officer, with more of the snob than the soldier in him, who was prepared to pay through the nose for the honour of commanding a regiment. Colonel Braun, to his credit, objected to be thus bled, and declined to place himself in the position of paying for the right to hold the Queen's Commission. In their attempt to squeeze money out of him, consequently, the War Office have simply squeezed him out of the Service.

It is much to be desired that a few more Volunteer C.O.s would follow his example, and thus force upon the War Office the necessity of either providing public money for public services, or letting the Volunteer Force die out for want of funds. The present state of things is rotten to the core. It is notorious that the tax at present laid upon officers prevents many of the most enthusiastic Volunteers from accepting commissions, and is the chief reason why the officering of the Force is in its present unsatisfactory condition. If the country accepts the services of the Volunteers, it ought to take upon itself all the incidental cost of organising them into an efficient army. Nor would the country for a moment hesitate to accept the burden, if it were frankly asked to do so. There is a strong public sentiment in favour of the Volunteers, and sentiment is backed by common-sense, for every one can see for himself that money spent upon the Volunteers, provided it were wisely and economically spent, would be a better investment than money spent on the Regular Army. In their present condition the Volunteers are of doubtful value for national defence, unless after long notice and preparation, and they would be treated as a negligeable quantity by any Great Power planning a sudden descent upon our shores. Yet an expenditure of a few hundred thousand pounds would convert them into a well-trained, well-equipped, and well-officered force. We could probably have an efficient Army of 250,000 Volunteers for less than the cost of 25,000 Regulars. But the War Office, while coming on the taxpayer every year for so many more millions sterling to increase the Line by dribblets, declines to spend an additional penny for the Volunteers, and contents itself with shabby expedients for screwing out of private pockets the money on which the whole value and efficiency of the Force depends. Why? Because, I take it, the taxpayer is regarded in Whitehall and Pall Mall as the legitimate prey of the professional soldier; and because the Volunteer is looked upon as an amateur interloper, only to be tolerated on condition that he keeps his nose out of the manger. The efforts of 200,000 citizens to qualify themselves for the defence of the country in time of peril are consequently snubbed and flouted, and their annual expenditure of time, money, and labour robbed of all practical result. The true interests of the taxpayers, and the very safety of the nation, are subordinated to the most ignoble professional jealousy and selfishness. In the brief debate on the Volunteer Vote last week, Colonel Brookfield asked the Under-Secretary-of-State for War, in so many words, "what the Volunteers are for?" Had the War Office answer been frankly given, it would have been that the Volunteers exist for their own amusement, and they must pay for their amusement themselves. Is the country content to acquiesce in that view?

CONFESSIONS OF A COMPETITION DODGER.

In Truth of the 3rd inst. some account was given of an interview which one of my staff had with a party named Smith, of 6, Station-road, Finsbury Park. Smith was at that time running a "competition," which had been extensively advertised in the newspapers all over the country. The "competition" was of a familiar character, a "£25 free cash prize" being offered, apparently for the solution of three very simple anagrams on the names of birds, but in reality as an inducement to the competitors to pay Smith 2s. for a little puzzle game, worth possibly 3d. or 4d. The gifted persons who succeeded in solving the anagrams, and duly paid their 2s. for the puzzle, were to receive their prize money at the conclusion of the competition, and Mr. Smith, with engaging frankness, informed my representative that he was determined to add sufficient money to the £25 promised to ensure that every successful competitor should receive at least one half-penny.

Scarcely had I published my interview with Mr. Smith when I became aware of another "free competition" on the same lines, run by the Harlequin Company, 14, Stroud Green-road, London, N. With a few variations in detail, the two were in general idea identical. There was a prize of £35 instead of £25; there were the names of three fish to solve instead of the names of three birds; and the new "Harlequin Kindergarten Puzzle" was to be purchased at the price of 1s. 3d., instead of the puzzle already described at the price of 2s. These being the only points of difference between the two "competitions," I sent a representative down to Stroud Green-road, to see if he could discover any connecting link between the Harlequin Company and Mr. Smith. He had no difficulty in doing so, for, just as he reached the Harlequin Company's doorway, he discovered the connecting link on the threshold in the person of Mr. Smith himself. The recognition was mutual. "Hullo, Truth!" was Mr. Smith's greeting to my representative, and "Hullo, Smith!" was the response. So overjoyed was Smith to see my representative again that he at once invited him to come upstairs and have a chat, and my representative accepted the invitation, together with an excellent cigar. The conversation which ensued was marked by so much frankness and cordiality on the part of Mr. Harlequin Smith, that I think it almost worth reproducing. Let me give first my representative's description of this harlequin:—

Mr. Smith, the Stroud Green Harlequin, is a man of middle height and undistinguished appearance, somewhere between forty and fifty years of age. He seems a shrewd man, and, judging from the gleam in his eye as he greeted me, he is endowed with a sense of humour. His person is exceedingly well nourished, and he has a general air of prosperity. He might be a flourishing pork-butcher.

"Now, what is it you want to know?" he asked.

"First I should like to know what you thought of the Truth comments upon your last venture."

"They were all right except in one particular. You underestimated the cost of the puzzles. See here——"

Mr. Smith produced an invoice, by which it appeared that the puzzle which he sold for 2s. cost him 6d.

"But that competition is all over now?" I said.

"Yes, we have closed it up."

"Did you send a halfpenny after all to each successful competitor?"

Mr. Smith paused a moment and watched with evident enjoyment the rings of smoke curling upwards.

"No; there was not sufficient to send a farthing to each winner. You see the first prize was £15, and there were 25,000 winners; you can work the figures out for yourself. So I sent the amount to the Prince of Wales' Hospital Fund."

"I suppose the Fund is not above taking this toll upon folly?" I asked.

"Oh, dear no! Here is the receipt."

"And what did the prize-winners say? Some of them grumbled, I suppose?"

"Of course they did," replied Mr. Smith, indifferently. "Some of the letters were very funny." (He smiled). "But I haven't had time to read them all."

"And the second and third prizes?" I inquired.

"The competitors who solved only one or two words fared better; 105 solved two words, and get 1s. 4d. each, twenty-two solved only one, and get 2s. 9d. each. Wait a moment, and I'll give you the circular I have sent out to all competitors."

"And now for your present venture. That is a puzzle, too, is it not?"

"Yes. Would you like one?"

I accepted the offer. The puzzle turned out to be a little book

Mortlock's (Oxford-st.), Estd. A.D. 1746.—The collection of China and Glass now on view in their Galleries fully maintains the high reputation and pre-eminence enjoyed by "Mortlock's" for the last century and a half, and well repays a visit of inspection.

of designs, and a dozen pieces of coloured cardboard with which to execute them.

"Not so elaborate as your last," I remarked.

"No," replied Mr. Smith. "We are not charging so much for it. Only 1s. 3d., postage paid."

"It goes for a penny, I suppose?"

"Yes."

"And how is it going?" I inquired.

"Not so well as it ought, and I am spending a lot of money on it. A lot of money! Over two hundred pounds last week."

"Perhaps," I suggested, "TRUTH has damaged your trade."

Mr. Smith did not think so. "TRUTH readers don't go in for these competitions."

I bowed to the compliment.

"Perhaps some of the editors of papers are following our advice and declining to take the advertisement?" I asked

"Oh, no; I have no difficulty in placing it everywhere. Sells are my agents, and look here, this is where they placed it last week."

He showed me a list of some two or three hundred papers, published all over the kingdom.

"It must be that there are too many at the game, then?"

"Perhaps it is," said Mr. Smith, a little regretfully it seemed.

I attempted to console him with the remark that he could hardly expect to get the same 25,000 fools over again in a fortnight. He was not so sure that it was impossible.

"You have changed your address?" I said.

"Yes; that is always advisable in this business."

"And you think, of course, that 'Smith & Co., Publishers,' will not be recognised in the 'Harlequin Publishing Company'?"

"You didn't recognise them, did you?" returned Mr. Harlequin.

"It is rather a risky business, isn't it?" I asked.

Mr. Smith only smiled.

"You see you have induced a large number of people to purchase a puzzle upon the belief that they had won a share in a £25 prize. Might not a magistrate take the view, seeing that you have not sent them their share, that this was obtaining money under false pretences?"

Still smiling, Mr. Smith replied:

"Oh, I have acted under legal advice. The people order the puzzle altogether apart from any possible prize; and how could I send out a fractional part of a penny? No, I don't think there are many risks of that sort."

"Well," said I, "it is not impossible that such a view might be taken."

Mr. Smith shook his head.

"Anyhow, you have not gone back upon your opinion that there are a lot of fools in the world?" I said, as I rose to depart.

Mr. Smith's smile broadened, and he seemed to enjoy the joke more than ever.

"Twenty-five thousand of them?"

Mr. Smith gently chuckled by way of answer.

"Glad to see you at any time, if you must be going," he said.

I thanked the genial Harlequin for the instruction and amusement he had afforded me. Then we shook hands heartily and parted the best of friends.

I myself am not without a sense of humour, and I fully appreciate the amusing side of Smith's performances There is something decidedly comic in this elderly Harlequin perpetually popping up in some new place, concealing his identity under a fresh alias, and extracting cash from the pockets of the public by a stroke of his wand to the tune of hundreds of pounds per week. But I see the serious side too, and it strikes me as something of a scandal that the policeman should have no part in this Harlequinade. Smith tells us that he has consulted his solicitor, and that he is quite sure about his legal position. No doubt he has taken pains to keep on the right side of the law, but as the law has shown itself equal to dealing with his latest predecessor in this line of business, Walter King, of the "Phunny" trick, there would seem to be no reason why what was sauce for the Phunny man should not be sauce for the Harlequin. The Prince of Wales's Hospital Fund is a highly deserving charity, but there is nothing in the terms of Smith's prospectus which warrants him in handing the money over to this benevolent object, instead of satisfying the claims of the competitors; and I think that if any of the disappointed ones were to place the case in the hands of the police, satisfactory results might follow.

There are other parties to the joke whose position seems somewhat questionable, viz., the newspapers all over the Kingdom who are receiving cash at the rate of £200 or £300 in a week through the agents for publishing the Harlequin's advertisements. After reading Smith's confessions, none of them can possibly entertain any doubt about their position. This man admits, without disguise, that he is simply setting traps to catch fools, and he frankly congratulates himself on having devised a fraud which the law cannot touch. His traps are set, and his frauds are perpetrated through the columns of various daily and weekly papers, the proprietors of which obligingly co-operate with Smith in defrauding their readers at the price of so many coppers a line. If they have hitherto salved their very robust consciences by pretending that they do not know the real nature of Smith's little advertisement, they can no longer apply this flattering unction after Smith's ingenuous confessions. No moral distinction can possibly exist between Smith, the avowed competition swindler, and the journalists who co-operate in his little game, knowing its nature; and it is not clear why there should be any legal distinction either.

NOTES FROM PARIS.

HANOTAUX AT THE ACADEMY.

THE Franco-Russian Alliance was again made manifest the other day at the Academy. Our President, with the Grand Duke Nicholas and the Russian Ambassador as his supporters, took his seat on the bench usually reserved for the families of récipiendaires. The President and the illustrious Russians could not have signified more plainly: "We are well satisfied with the Foreign Minister, and long may he keep his portfolio." M. Félix Faure seems to have a Mohammedan's objection to appearing in public with his wife, unless on the Grand Prix day, and at Havre, where Darby and Joan ménages are liked. At the Academy, she and Mlle. Lucie were taken up to the little niche under the cupola occupied by Mme. Thiers the day her husband's successor was received, and since by Mme. Carnot. The Empress Eugénie and her ladies filled that niche at the reception of M. Octave Feuillet. They went to see him inducted because he had in one of his novels represented Sybil, a girl of eighteen, as converting a hardened and brilliant free-thinker. The only head of the State who ever appeared before last Thursday at a public sitting of the Academy was Thiers. He did so as a member and the sponsor of the Duc d'Aumale. Our present estimable chief cannot get up to academical accomplishments. The feeling that he has not a University degree often acts as a bar to sympathy with his Ministers. A Minister who wants to please him takes care not to parade his scholarship. Perhaps this was why M. Hanotaux's discourse was so commonplace and empty. The intellectual feast he provided was a good deal in the nature of a meal at Duval's. One might have thought it the product of an anæmic brain. But, perhaps, its want of salient points, of traits of mental independence, was due to the circumstances under which he began to write it. He first set pen to paper in the man-of-war in which he and M. Faure went from Dunkirk to St. Petersburg and back. The initial paragraph was written as the vessel was passing Copenhagen on the return voyage. He had been flat-ironed on the voyage out and in the three days' stay at Peterhof. To have done a speaking likeness of Challemel-Lacour in eau-forte might not have been to the taste of the President or Czar. It was safe to tone down his picturesque asperities, seeing that he must be eulogised. The consequence was a chromo-lithograph that might have done for a bon-bon box. I could have never recognised in it, but for the white beard and erect carriage, the rebel Challemel-Lacour, who, rather than bow the knee to false gods, said, "Poverty, be thou my lot," and was for eighteen years as good as his word.

In the Paris mi-carême the crowd was at the RESTAURANT DURAND, by the Madeleine. The generous Proprietor stood them all champagne. Durand's cellar is celebrated, and the Parisians know it.

M. Hanotaux is middling and industrious. Your middling man has a much better chance of picking up good things than your man of genius. He does not strike one as having come from that very humble nest that M. de Vogüé talked of. Nothing can be smaller in the middle class professions than a notary in an insignificant country town. The office of M. Hanotaux's father, however, had one redeeming feature. The grim Castle of Beaurevoir frowned down on it. Joan of Arc was a prisoner in the donjon. There were endless vaults which Hanotaux, as a boy, explored torch in hand. All this aroused historical curiosity. When set down to copy legal papers he longed to get away to Paris and study history. The whole country was full of historical suggestion. St. Quentin was within sight. It was there that an Anglo-Spanish force under Philip II. gained the victory which was preceded by Philip's vow to build the Escurial. The Prussian invasion killed the notary of Beaurevoir. M. Hanotaux buried him under the eyes of wearers of spiked helmets. The conclusion he drew was this: What a wise statesman was Richelieu to break up the German power by his intrigues at the Congress of Westphalia! The alliance he devised broke the Teutonic current into nearly four hundred streamlets. Richelieu did not scruple to be the ally of the heretic Gustavus Adolphus. Twenty-six years later the petty notary's son lent himself to another alliance as apparently inconsistent —that of Marianne and the Czar. But he did not reveal in his academical speech this long-continued train of thought.

Perhaps the habit of peering into those endless vaults at Beaurevoir in boyhood has affected the expression of M. Hanotaux's eyes. They seem to be searching in the dark for shapes and forms that will not show themselves distinctly. His appearance is rather agreeable, and for a Frenchman filling a great situation he is still young. He owed his election to M. Faure. The President told the Academicians whom he knew that the Empress of Russia would feel particularly gratified were they to grant immortality to M. Hanotaux. How could they gainsay this? At the election, eighteen abstained and fifteen voted for him.

M. Hanotaux has a rather thin voice, with some falsetto notes. But he read well—better than he reads in the Tribune of the Chamber. Vicomte Melchior de Vogüé managed to be impertinent all round. He spoke in the presence of the head of the State of the coup d'état as "a somewhat rough police measure." But M. Faure did not see the inconvenance of this stroke of the tongue—or pen. Richelieu, to whom the Academy could refuse nothing, took M. Hanotaux by the hand and presented him. Nor was the Great Cardinal spared. "Nothing has remained of his work," and "he was a dangerous model." Words of wisdom there. But who marked them?

M. de Vogüé is long of face and figure. He was for some time in diplomacy, first serving at Constantinople and then at St. Petersburg. He "discovered" Russian literature, and brought it within the reach of Paris through translations. The Grand Duke Nicholas is also long of face and figure, with an endlessly long neck. I never saw such a neck on human shoulders. One has to go to the bird species to find its match. That of the King of Greece is short compared to it. But this Grand Duke seems an amiable, excellent, and distingué person. He is a nephew of the Queen of Hanover. M. Faure seemed pleased and proud to find himself between the Grand Duke and Prince Ouroussoff. The Russians wish for a perpetual Foreign Minister, as in Russia, and a life-President. In this way the danger would be lessened of the secrets of Franco-Russian diplomacy transpiring. It would appear that the Franco-Russian treaty contemplates the break up of the Austrian Empire, and arranges for the two allies to be in at the death.

A most interesting subject for the Boulevards has been the declaration of independence of the Princess Philip of Saxe-Coburg. Paris has learned with astonishment that she has only £1,600 a year, though her husband's fortune is valued at £4,000,000. How, then, could she help going into debt? Vienna is a frivolous place. There was Royal rank to keep up, and the Princess enjoyed appearing to the best advantage. She was here as "Mme. Leman"—a name doubtless borrowed from the loveliest lake in Europe. They say she has gone to join the romantic Doña Elvira in America. According to the papers, steps are being taken by Prince Philip in the Duchy of Coburg to obtain a divorce.

The Princesse de Joinville was the last surviving daughter-in-law of Louis Philippe. She was a prim little woman, and became prosaic and loud-voiced through living so much with almost stone-deaf people. I heard that she was pretty when she came to France as a bride. She had magnificent diamonds, which she brought with her from Brazil. The Princess was a first cousin, through the House of Austria, of the late Duchesse d'Aumale, and a niece of Marie Louise. She led a retired life at St. Firmin in the Forest of Chantilly. The only time she went into society was when the Prince de Joinville was a member of the Versailles Assembly. The late Emperor and Empress of Brazil and their daughter, as Princess Imperial, were then a good deal in Paris and greatly run after. The Princesse de Joinville as Dom Pedro's sister, shared his prestige. But when he fell, she had no patience with the blunders he had (as she thought) committed, and arranged to keep on good terms with the Government that overthrew him. She could see no beauty in European scenery. The forest trees appeared to her mere brushwood. The first time she ever saw a fall of snow was as she landed at Brest on her way from Rio to Paris. On the road she and De Joinville were snowed up. What with sea-sickness, storms in the Atlantic, snow, and frosts, her bridal voyage to Europe was a succession of miseries and horrors. She never returned to Brazil.

"Jeune demoiselle. Petite tache [or speckled peach]. 150,000 francs de dot." This sort of advertisement was more frequent a few years ago in the Paris papers than at present, though it may still be met with in society papers like the Echo de Paris or the Journal. Probably penniless suitors, eager to get wealthy all of a sudden, even with an undesirable wife as part of the bargain, have got wiser. Every trick, even the free-portrait swindle or the Spanish prison-trick, gets worn out, though the process of exposure may take years. You know what a "petite tache" is in the matrimonial agent's slang? The agent compares the young lady whom it is expedient to get married quickly, to a piece of silk, greased by accident, and placed in consequence among the job lots.

The "Petite Tache" as a new subject for the theatre, has tempted M. Fabrice Carré and that lively composer M. Victor Rogé, who have brought out a new vaudeville under that title at the Bouffes-Parisiens. The first two acts are amusing, albeit rather too childish; but the last one is distinctly good. The title itself is a pun. Anybody would think from this title that Mlle. Marguerite, the pretty heroine of the play, had a "past history." Not at all. Her mother, Mme. Bénardeau, a buxom bourgeoise of Bolbec, in Normandy, was very much frightened once upon a time by a bull, and the consequence was that Marguerite was born with two bull's horns upon her breast. These horns, to which sign a deep symbolic significance is attached by French husbands, frightened off all the young men of Bolbec. Mme. Bénardeau in her straits applied to a matrimonial agency, and Marguerite was entered in the books as a young lady with a petite tache and 150,000 francs dowry.

We are prepared on the stage to take a great deal for granted; but is this not asking too much of the playgoer's good nature? However, the author, having started with this postulate, is bound to build up his plot in consequence. There is not much of a plot, but two acts are spent pleasantly enough in bouffe dialogue. Among the candidates for Marguerite's dowry is a degenerate descendant of the Crusaders, an omnibus conductor, who drops his h's—or at least commits the equivalent mistakes in French—but is a genuine nobleman, —the Marquis de la Buche. He goes down to Bolbec, where his Parisian varnish dazzles M. and Mme. Bénardeau. De la Buche is quite happy. All he wants is the young lady's money. For 150,000 francs he would have winked not only at a "little spot," but at an eclipse of the sun. But—and this is the interesting episode of the play—as, after better acquaintance, the young omnibus conductor begins to fall seriously in love with Marguerite, the petite tache begins to vex him. He wants to know what it consists in, but is put off with vague replies. How superstitious must that Bolbec family be! At length, just when he is frantically in love, he declares he must know the tache or he will break off the match. Marguerite, who has fallen in love with her fiancé, faints, when the father, in order to let her breathe freely, opens her corsage, and, pointing to the two bull's horns, says, "Voila la petite tache."

This plot is not worthy of the name, but it serves as a support for some very easy, entertaining music. The couplets sung by M. Lamy and Mlle. Alice Bonheur are agreeably recollected.

LETTER FROM THE LINKMAN.

THOUGH the great heart of Great Britain, dear Lady Betty—the Stock Exchange—throbs excitedly, and peculative speculation is at a standstill, though the policy of Imperialism, tempered by incapacity and inconsistency, is discredited, it is possible to be frivolous! "The providential frivolity of our nature," as Goethe described that attribute, has assisted me at an anxious moment, as will be seen by the following reflections:—

1. Many imagine they are making a future when they are only making a past.

. . . . .

2. The wisdom of youth lacks confidence in self; the wisdom of age lacks confidence in others.

. . . . .

3. There is the confidence of vanity and the diffidence of vanity. Mediocrity has the confidence of vanity, and is easily encouraged; talent has the diffidence of vanity, and is easily discouraged.

. . . . .

4. We all misunderstand ourselves, and are, therefore, convinced that all misunderstand us.

. . . . .

5. "No man is a hero to his valet," but many a man is a valet to his hero.

. . . . .

6. Woman is essentially imitative; a woman may be led to any length in any direction by example.

. . . . .

7. Liberty, Equality, and Fraternity are the Faith, Hope, and Charity of political progress.

. . . .

8. There is more heart in the world than head: intellect only appeals to intellect; the heart to humanity.

* * * * *

The following misapplied misquotations may be excused at a moment when the attention of all is directed towards the Government:—

Lord Salisbury to Mr. Joseph Chamberlain.

"You may depend upon it that nobody will ever think of overthrowing me to make you Premier."

Charles II. to his brother James.

The Nation to Mr. Joseph Chamberlain.

"His Imperial fancy laid all England under tribute."

Robert Hall of Burke.

The Radicals to Mr. Joseph Chamberlain.

"Go on, my brave boy, and prosper, for your prosperity will cause the ruin of all this crowd" (the Conservatives).

Timon to Alcibiades.

Mr. Joseph Chamberlain to Mr. Curzon.

"Pray stand a little out of my sunshine."

Diogenes to Alexander the Great.

* * * * *

Sir George Baden-Powell appears to be anxious that the yachts of England should, in the event of war, be pressed into the service of the State. He might as well propose to utilise the perambulators of London for defensive purposes.

Throughout the West End it is considered to be incomprehensible that the Times and the Morning Post should have so seriously misunderstood the international situation as the tone of the leading articles which have recently appeared in those newspapers prove that they have. It is generally maintained that in this matter these journals do not reflect either the opinion of those who are well-informed or of the public. In one of the early years of his reign, Louis XIV. said, "Self-aggrandisement is the noblest as well as the pleasantest occupation of kings." More than half a century later the same king, on his death-bed, said to his successor, "I have loved war too well; do not imitate me." The time has passed—in Great Britain, certainly—when Kings, Ministers, or aristocratic combinations can make war for the purpose of self-aggrandisement, or under the impression that by so doing they may aggrandise the nation. The people take scarcely any interest in the Far Eastern question; and it must be remembered that it is the blood of the people which would be spilled, and the treasure of the people which would be spent, were there to be war. The English people are as ready to fight to-day as they have been at any period in history. They were prepared to fight to save the Armenians from massacre, and the whole nation was aroused to fury when the Emperor of Germany despatched his memorable message to President Kruger, which appeared to be a deliberate insult offered to this country. The situation in the Far East does not excite the anger of the people of England, however loudly certain London newspapers may call for war—a call, moreover, which, loud as it is, does not reach them, for they neither read the Times nor the Morning Post. The well-informed West End is equally apathetic on this subject, and it may, therefore, be predicted with confidence that war over that dispute is improbable, unless the Ministry permits itself to be influenced by certain London newspapers and by the exasperating, but evaporating, paragraph.

Through the influence of the Press we seem in danger of being governed by misinformation.

. . . . .

Oxenstiern—then Chancellor of Sweden—said to his son, "Dost thou not know, my son, with how little wisdom the world is governed?" The present time is a curious exemplification of this: the Government has muzzled the lap-dogs and contemplates loosing the dogs of war!

. . . .

There is a memorable saying, which it may be interesting to recall at this moment. Prince Alexander Gortschakoff wrote in 1856, after the Crimean War, "La Russie ne boude pas, elle se recueille." The declaration has been verified, for during the half-century which has elapsed since the words were written, Russia has gathered herself together, and now overflows with an irresistible force.

. . . . .

The Times on Monday earnestly advised Lord Salisbury to resign the office of Minister for Foreign Affairs, and in effect to become a Ministerial expression! It is certainly surprising how rapidly "the spirited policy" of the Government has been spirited away. The present Administration is continually confronted by impossibilities which suddenly become realities, and an especially irritating circumstance is that Lord Salisbury is always surreptitiously compromising. Our difficulties are bewildering. Is the Afridi rising quelled? Is India quieted? Is the plague stamped out? Are the labours of the Congress satisfactorily concluded? Is the Eastern Question closed? Are the Armenian atrocities stayed or atoned for? Greece? Is the Cretan problem solved? Is the Transvaal appeased? Is the Venezuelan dispute ended? Is the Egyptian misunderstanding with France settled? Are the West African troubles overcome? Is the expedition into the Soudan concluded? Is the Chinese problem solved? Are our relations friendly with Germany, Russia, and France? Is Ireland contented? Is trade prosperous, and is finance flourishing? The Imperial farce which was inaugurated at Krugersdorp threatens to develop into an Imperial tragedy.—Believe me to be, very truly yours,

MARMADUKE.

SPORTING NOTES.

PEOPLE who are disposed to bet on the Two Thousand will do well to restrain their speculative ardour, for if there should be another week of wintry weather several fancied candidates will certainly be backward in condition. It must be remembered that we are now within a month of the Two Thousand, the race being run a week earlier than usual. Ninus, for example, is looking very big, and it will take all the trainer's time to get Prince Soltykoff's colt properly fit in order to run at the First Spring Meeting. A very good judge indeed is convinced that Ninus will prove to be deficient in stamina, and he holds the same opinion as to Disraeli. It will not surprise me if the dark Brio proves to be the best of the Newmarket lot for the Two Thousand, but my own opinion of the race is that it will be won by Batt if he comes to the post fit and well. The Duke of Westminster's other candidate for this race and the Derby is Collar who is not likely to be seen out before Ascot if all goes right with Batt. Collar is engaged in the Prince of Wales's Stakes and in the Hardwicke Stakes, but I fancy the Duke will finally decide to reserve this colt for the Princess of Wales's Stakes of £10,000 at the First July Meeting, in which race Velasquez would have to give Collar a stone more than weight for age. The Duke's colt would have 11 lb. the best of the weights with Dieudonné, and 8 lb. with Ninus, so that his chances of success are very bright if he is tolerably smart. Collar is half-brother to Labrador, by St. Simon, and he was obviously very backward in condition when he started for the Middle Park Plate, which was his only race last year.

The money which has been rashly invested on Royal Angus and on Ormathwaite may be regarded as lost, for neither colt is at all likely to stand training.

Last year there were forty-two entries, thirty-one acceptances, and eighteen starters for the Lincolnshire Handicap of £2,000, the result being a loss to the fund of £1,055. This season there are forty-eight entries, thirty-three acceptances, and fourteen runners.

Mr. Rucker's horses are to be sold off, without reserve, by Messrs. Tattersall at Newmarket on April 14, being the Thursday in the Craven week.

When writing a fortnight ago about the Lincolnshire Handicap I predicted that the race would be won by either Voter or Prince Barcaldine, so I have no reason to be dissatisfied with the result. Voter got off badly, and he was never fairly in the race, but the American horse is certain to win an important mile handicap before many months have elapsed, and he must be followed. Prince Barcaldine was purchased for 2,000 gs. by Captain Machell at the sale of Colonel North's stud, and he subsequently passed into the possession of his present owner, for whom he won the Cleveland Handicap at Doncaster last September, when he defeated General Peace by a short head, and thereby upset one of the heaviest plunges of the year. Prince Barcaldine is a very much improved horse, but he would probably have been defeated by King Hampton if that animal had run, and the people who pronounced Mr. Rucker's steed to be the pick of the handicap when the weights appeared were really not far wrong. The form of the race was not particularly good, considering that High Treasurer, who was in receipt of 2 lb. from the winner (both being five years old), was bought in by Lord Howe for 250 gs. only after he had won the Trial Plate at the Newmarket Houghton Meeting. As to Ravensdale, who was declared almost universally to be an absolute certainty, he is an awkward horse for a boy to ride. I see that Ravensdale is now being written up for the Kempton Park Jubilee Handicap, when he has 6 st. 10 lb. to carry, but I would be sorry to take 100 to 1 about him for that race. He certainly will not beat Hermiston at the weights, and if he could not win at Lincoln with 6 st. 11 lb., I fail entirely to apprehend how he can be expected to win at Kempton Park with 6 st. 10 lb., running in very much better company. Merle and David II. will both improve presently on the form which they showed last week. I could not fancy Melange, although he had been well galloped, and he was heavily backed. He is a very handsome horse, but did not run up to his trial.

I have always been of the opinion that the City and Suburban will be won by either Chelandry or Hermiston. If the Kingsclere colt is really up to Derby form, I do not see how Chelandry can be expected to give him 5 lb. more than weight for age. It may be, however, that Hermiston will wait for Kempton Park. Bay Ronald is galloping well at Newmarket, and he is certainly one of the best handicapped horses in the race. Balsamo has been stopped in his work, and it is doubtful whether he will stand another preparation. If the City and Suburban goes to the Egerton Lodge stable, it is Nunsuch that will be the winner. Berzak is very well in on his best running, but it will be wise not to think of him until he has been tried, as nothing can be known as to his present form. Brayhead is thrown in with only 6 st. 10 lb., and this horse showed his liking for the Epsom course last year, when he won the Prince of Wales's Handicap at the Spring Meeting.

I predicted last week that Fascination would win the Molyneux Stakes at Liverpool, Carhaix the Union Jack Stakes, Canonbury the Hylton Handicap, and Devon the Bickerstaffe Stakes, and all came off. Fascination, who was heavily backed, is at present the smartest two-year-old by a long way in the Egerton Lodge stable, but I fancy we shall see the best of her in the course of the next few weeks. The Duke of Devonshire, who went to Newmarket at the beginning of last week to see Dieudonné, has not often patronised the Liverpool meeting, but on the present occasion he was one of the guests of Lord Stanley and Lady Alice Stanley at Knowsley, and had the pleasure of seeing Carhaix win his race very easily. The Duke made a good bargain when he bought this colt at Newmarket last December for 660 gs., as the race he won on Thursday was worth nearly £800. Vatel ran very badly. With Canonbury so manifestly the pick of the Hylton Handicap, it was really miraculous to find 4 to 1 betted against him, but Sirdar was a great tip of "the sharps," and the race proved no good thing for the winner after all, as he only just won from Norah Sandys. Bittern was regarded generally as a fine retriever for the numerous backers who had been defeated badly over the Grand National, but he proved a grievous delusion, as Devon won cleverly with 9 to 1 betted against him in a field of six. I mentioned Sir Blundell Maple's colt some weeks ago as having made a great improvement, and being certain to win a race early in the season. The backers of Devon would have been more numerous but for his defeat in the Chaplin Stakes at Lincoln on Monday, when he finished third to King's Messenger and Vatel with 5 lb. the best of the weights. Bittern appears to have developed a temper.

The Grand National, which was run in a snowstorm, has proved a grand benefit for the bookmakers, as the money was fairly piled upon Cathal and Ford of Fyne at the last, and the haul over Manifesto must have been very large. Nobody could possibly fancy Drogheda after his ignominious collapse at Gatwick in December. He held a good place throughout the race, and won very cleverly at the finish. Cathal is an unlucky beast, as on a former occasion he was second at Aintree, when Cloister won. Gauntlet, who was the fancy of some of the best judges of steeplechasing, ran well enough to secure the place money for which he had been backed. There were twenty-five starters, but only nine horses completed the course, one of them being Filbert, who finished fourth.

The placed horses in the Brocklesby Stakes had all been mentioned in TRUTH as being animals certain to distinguish themselves early in the season, so I am well satisfied with the issue of this race, but it may not be prudent to place implicit reliance on the form, as the wet and stormy weather and the long delay at the post may very likely have upset some of the runners. Amurath, by Janissary out of Ladykin, won very cleverly at the finish from Desmond. Mr. Raphael's colt was purchased at Newmarket last July for 410 gs. at the sale of the Howbury stud yearlings. He was well galloped some weeks ago, and he won another good trial a few days before the race was run, after which his merits were an affair of Punchinello's secret. Amurath is an improving colt, and he was much liked at Lincoln by those who inspected him in the paddock, which was a veritable pandemonium, spectators and horses being all huddled up together in chaotic confusion, while rain was falling in torrents, and a freezing wind was blowing. Amurath is not heavily engaged, and his next race will be the Newmarket Plate at the First Spring Meeting, while in the Second Spring week he is entered for the Somerville Stakes. Monopoly got off well, and she ran fast for half-a-mile, nor were there any excuses for Desmond or Sister Angela. The great "pot" at the finish was Mr. Vyner's colt Mintstalk, who was very heavily backed on the strength of a good trial with Chance Medley, but he was by no means generally admired, and if ever he develops into anything of a flyer I shall be vastly surprised. Mintstalk has an engagement at Derby this week, and he is entered for the £500 race at Newcastle on Easter Monday. Chief Warder is a powerful, massive sort of colt, who was much fancied by some of the Newmarket people, but he ran very badly indeed. He will have a chance of retrieving his reputation at the Epsom Spring Meeting, where he is engaged in the Hyde Park Plate, but I shall not be surprised if both this event and the Westminster Plate on the previous day are won by Mr. Cassel's April Morn, who is believed to be a very smart filly. The best looking two-year-old that ran at Lincoln was decidedly Desmond, Lord Dunraven's colt by St. Simon out of L'Abbesse de Jonarre, and he is a very racing-like animal, but he cannot be so smart as was supposed, as there was no excuse whatever for his defeat, and Amurath won with 7 lb. in hand. Desmond was very highly thought of as a yearling, and he has been entered for no fewer than forty-six races, but I fear he is not destined to win many of these engagements, and if he gets back his forfeits and his owner's expenses in connection with breeding and racing him he will do quite as well as most people expect. It was evidently anticipated last year that Desmond would make a good three-year-old, as twenty-seven of his engagements are for 1899 and following seasons. My own opinion is that we shall see the best (whatever that may amount to) of Desmond as a two-year old, and that he will prove to be deficient in stamina. Desmond's next engagement is the Woodcote Stakes at the Epsom Summer Meeting, a race which is likely to take a good deal of winning, as Lord Brassey's Boniface (by St. Simon out of Merry Miser, dam of Orzil), Mr. Low's colt by Rightaway out of Hall Mark, and other animals of which great things are expected will probably make their début on that occasion. The Duke of Portland's Dismay, by St. Simon out of Ismay, is decidedly racing-like, but she is a very small filly, and the best of her on the turf is likely to be seen early in the season. Dismay has more than forty engagements, and it is odd that she should have been so extensively entered, for her appearance can never have justified the chimerical expectation that she would prove a flyer, which was evidently entertained by her owner and trainer. Dismay is next in the Hyde Park Plate at Epsom, but she will very likely be reserved for the Royal Plate of £3,000 at Kempton Park, which is run on May 6, and this will be one of the richest two-year-old races of the season, as it is surpassed in value only by the £5,000 Stakes at Sandown Park in July. There is another £3,000 race at Kempton Park in October, and the Prince of Wales's Sweepstakes at Goodwood will be worth £2,600. The richest two-year-old race at Ascot is the New Stakes, value £2,140, while the Coventry Stakes will be worth £2,000.

I observe it is predicted that Amurath will probably turn out to be a "Derby horse," like Donovan and The Bard, two previous winners of the Brocklesby Stakes. It happens, however, that Mr. Raphael's colt is not entered for either the Derby or any of the great three-year-old races. As to The Bard, this horse obtained a great reputation as a two-year-old because he was placed with such consummate sagacity by Mr. Robert Peck. As a matter of fact, The Bard had no pretensions to be regarded as a first-class two-year-old, for he was some 10 lb. behind his stable companion, Philosophy, who unluckily went all to pieces after winning a few races. When The Bard ran for the Derby he met a first-class horse (Ormonde) for the first time in his career, and he was very easily beaten.

I do not understand why Amurath should be described as a colt of "unfashionable" breeding. Janissary, his sire, is not a high-priced stallion, but he is one of the very best bred horses in existence, being by Isonomy out of Jannette, by Lord Clifden, who won the Oaks and St. Leger of 1878 for the late Lord Falmouth, at whose sale, in 1884, she was purchased by the late Duchess Dowager of Montrose for 5,000 gs. Janissary was bred in 1887, but he met with some accident early in his racing career, and he never achieved anything on the turf.

I see that regret is expressed at the omission of some of the best three-year-olds of the season from the Two Thousand and Derby, Cyllene, Champ de Mars, and Cap Martin being the animals mentioned. If the writer had substituted The Baker and Hermiston for Mr. Baird's pair he would have been better advised. Cap Martin was much overrated as a two-year-old, and he has not wintered well. He would not have a 100 to 1 chance for the Derby if he was engaged in the Epsom race, and it is generally thought at Newmarket that he will prove to be of no use over any greater distance than five furlongs.

Longtown is a horse that is certain to win a good T.Y.C. handicap before long, and he would very likely have carried off the Batthyany Stakes at Lincoln, but for being practically left at the post. Longtown, as was stated some time ago in Truth, has become a roarer, and he has not a 10,000 to 1 chance for the Derby. He is a fine, slashing colt, and it is a great pity that he has gone wrong so badly.

Sais, who had been well galloped at Newmarket, was a great favourite for the Tathwell Stakes, but she failed most palpably to stay the course. Sais is in the Double Trial Plate at the Craven Meeting, but the last hundred yards of the R.M. will probably stop her, and the best plan would be to keep her for some race run over the last five furlongs of the Ab.M.

THE BOAT RACE.

It would be impossible to imagine a day worse suited for boat-racing than last Saturday. The gale was blowing straight against the tide off the boat-houses at Putney and raising a perfect sea, and it was at first doubtful whether the race could be rowed. Men who have been in training for six weeks are not the people who should be consulted as to the advisability of postponing a boat-race, as they are much too keen to get it over, and cannot be expected to take a reasonable view of the matter. The umpire should, like the umpire at a cricket match, have power to decide whether or not the race is to be postponed on account of the weather. No one could have had the slightest doubt that on Saturday winning the toss meant winning the race. Oxford won the toss, and, accordingly, Oxford won the race, and that is about all there is to be said on the subject, for it is impossible to write a long account of a race which lasted for exactly half a minute. Cambridge, who had the Surrey station, had much the worst water, and before they had rowed twenty strokes their boat was completely waterlogged. Oxford slipped away under the shelter of the Fulham embankment, and were clear before they had rowed a couple of minutes. From the steps, about two minutes from the start, to Mortlake, they kept adding to their lead, and won by very nearly a quarter of a mile. As far as one could see from the steamer, they appeared to be rowing much better than they had done during their training. The boats are now rendered practically unsinkable by placing bladders under all the seats, otherwise Cambridge must have sunk shortly after the start. The manner in which the Cambridge crew propelled their water logged craft from start to finish was worthy of the highest praise. It was about as fine an exhibition of pluck, endurance, and good rowing under the most adverse circumstances as has ever been seen. They were drenched to the skin, chilled to the bone by the coldest of Nor'-east winds, and their boat was full of water, yet they swung well together, kept perfect time, and never stopped working hard all the way. The more one watched them the more one wished that so well-coached, uniform, and plucky a crew could have had a fair chance of showing what they were worth in a fair race.

Although the defeat of Cambridge is in no way to be attributed to any failing on their part, the Oxford crew may justly attribute the extreme ease of their victory to their good watermanship. They, too, had rough water to start in, although it was not nearly so bad for them as it was for Cambridge, but they never once allowed their boat to roll, and consequently took in little or no water.

Those who have fought for fairness in making up the crew at Cambridge and for the establishment of the true style of rowing are disappointed at their luck, but by no means disheartened, for it is admitted by all that the Cambridge crew were better than any of the preceding five or six. For this alone Cambridge owes Mr. Fletcher a debt of gratitude.

By the way, a singular instance of the belief that sportsmen and others, who do a little betting, have in the run of luck came to my notice. The winning of the toss meant winning the race. Of course, mathematically, the betting as to who would win the toss was evens. But so confident were several gentlemen that Cambridge would lose the spin of the coin, that offers of five to four that Oxford would win the toss were not taken. The run of luck had been so persistently dead against Cambridge this year that these gentlemen were confident as to what would happen, and it was so.

It was certainly rough luck that the very worst weather during the last six months should have come to pass just when the Universities were meeting one another in divers events. The golf match had to be stopped, the sports were put off, an event that should have been a boat race took place between Putney and Mortlake, and the chess match was the only event that was concluded in anything like comfort. This shows the advantage of sedentary pursuits during the equinoctial gales. No date has yet been definitely fixed for the postponed sports, but it will most likely be just before the championships, which are always arranged for the first Saturday in July, which this year falls on July 2.

The University golf match was played at Sandwich. The first round was successfully got through. By way of an innovation a second round was started on. The gale rose and snow fell, balls were lost, and the players were forced to retire. Under the directions of the club secretary, these players had to finish in semi-darkness, when the Cambridge men were successful. Both teams were strong, and it is a pity that the match was not played under more favourable circumstances.

It was, perhaps, in ignorance that the Frenchmen challenged England at cross-country running. The consequence was that Mr. Herbert, the hon. sec. of the A.A.A., had to hand the challenge over to the cross-country authorities, who chose a crack team, and who certainly acted most injudiciously in requiring a certain sum for payment of expenses. The French runners would never have thought of making such a request had they been coming over here. They will have a peculiar idea of the meaning of amateur. It would be much wiser another year for the Frenchmen to ask Mr. Herbert to bring over a team which would give them a good race, and not a wholesale thrashing. That sort of thing can do the sport no good. It would be easy to select a team. The Lea and Thames men would be only too pleased to take the trip. The Frenchmen's hospitality is proverbial.

It is a matter for regret that Southampton did not succeed in the semi-final at the Crystal Palace. Notts Forest scored in the last minute, when a perfect blizzard was blowing in their favour. The referee had already stopped the game, and he should have done so again. A protest has been lodged, but has not been upheld. Some correspondents have been kind enough to point out that Southampton is not a Southern team, and therefore, they argue, it is nonsense to crack them up at the expense of North and Midland clubs. They are "pros." no doubt, and they are just as much local men as any other professional team. The reason for congratulation is that a good team can be supported in the South, and I believe that good football matches do an infinity of good. They give interest and amusement to thousands who would otherwise have nothing to do on a Saturday afternoon. I am glad, therefore, that this advantage is being appreciated in the South. Furthermore, their success is very strong evidence of the improvement that is taking place in the South. I care not where the players were born and bred, the fact remains that they have proved themselves equal and superior to those clubs which have hitherto been supposed to have a monopoly of first-class players. They could not have achieved this end unless they had been meeting good opponents all through the season. Their regular opponents have been Southern clubs, whence it follows that the class of play in the South must have improved enormously. This is also a matter for congratulation.

Despite the threat that the whole of the North of England was going over to professionalism, the Rugby County Championship has been won by Northumberland. The play of the Midland team who were opposing them was certainly disappointing, but the winning forwards played a great game, and carried all before them, even when a gale of wind was blowing against them. Taylor was in great form at half, and deserves his International Cap. Byrne at back was not playing at his best. The weather spoilt the match between Blackheath and the West of Scotland, who just won; and Newport, for the fourth time this season, was beaten by Cardiff.

MAMMON.

From MOSES MOSS to BENJAMIN BOSS.

Sunday.

MY DEAR BEN,—Everything is still in favour of the warriors and the war-rumour mongers, with the result that the Stock Markets have shown great weakness, and business has been almost at a standstill. Naturally, the public are waiting for the clouds to roll by, and in the meantime the professional operators, who are carrying much stock, have to get out of their positions as best they can.

More War Scares.

It is not for me to predict as to whether any of the squabbles in various parts of the world will finally lead to actual war. Yesterday a canard had already been current, both in New York and at the fag-end of dealings in London, that Spain had declared war against the United States. This was obviously a concocted rumour, but it had the effect of sending Spanish down heavily, and of causing a severe spasm in the American department. Then followed a very strong recovery in New York, which is, of course, reflected in London. There is a saying that in the case of a war threatening you can buy stocks safely as soon as the first shot is fired. It may well be that in the case of a Spanish-American conflict the lowest prices for American Rails have been passed, whether war break out or not, and there certainly are just now strong efforts being made to support this market. It may be considered as certain that the West African difficulty with France will be amicably settled. On this point M. Hanotaux's last statements are distinctly encouraging. That Russia will obtain the concessions which she has demanded from China is true enough, but, as it would be quite impossible for this country to lay hands upon the whole of the Celestial Empire, I really do not see why some of our great dailies should continue to shriek for action. In the City the view is now taken that the British Government will occupy certain points, which will fully assure its future position, and such measures would hardly be opposed by Russia, and would certainly not lead to war with her. I am, therefore, still inclined to think that the Far Eastern question will presently recede to the background. In the Transvaal matters appear to be settling down. The despatch of Oom Paul's famous letter has been delayed, and when it arrives it will, according to all accounts, contain a quibble about the suzerainty, but absolutely uphold the London Convention. Apart from the Spanish-American dispute, therefore, it would appear as if foreign politics were not likely to disturb the peace of the world at present, and when once the public realise the position I should think that they would no longer refrain from investing their money, especially as there are at present many very tempting opportunities, from Home Rails to American Rails, from Argentine railway stocks to South American Government securities, not to mention South African and West Australian Mining shares, while even high-class investments have given way sufficiently to tempt the cautious investor. In the Industrial department there is again a rush of new companies, and I can but repeat my warning to scan these concerns very closely before investing in them.

Money and Gilt Edged Investments.

The fear that the Money Market may experience a further rise, and all the talk about war being ahead, has dislodged further blocks of gilt-edged investment securities. A few weeks ago it was Colonial bonds and Home Railway Debenture and Preference stocks which suffered. During the past week a fall of from two to four points has been marked in British Corporation stocks, which had certainly been pushed up exceedingly high. The fact that recent issues of several leading municipalities met with so cool a reception, evidently had predisposed these stocks to a reaction. Colonial Bonds, by the way, are again lower this week. Consols have experienced several spasms, chiefly on the war rumours, and the quotation for the account is down to 111⅛. There has again been some selling of our premier security as a hedge against other "Bull" commitments; but I do not think that this practice is now so extensively followed as it used to be, owing to the short supply of stock, which renders it exceedingly difficult to buy back. Silver, after touching 26d., has declined to 25⅝d., and somehow or other it does not look as if the white metal would fall below 25d. Rupee Paper has dropped heavily to 62. The fact is that the Indian Budget is viewed very unfavourably, and so far it does not seem to be intended to tinker with a gold standard. The new Chinese Loan has proved a failure, inasmuch as the underwriters here were saddled with a large portion, only about 27 per cent. having been applied for by the British public. The price has now fallen to 2 discount, or 88, so that the underwriters, although making no loss, are minus their commission. But I dare-say the time is not far distant when they will come to their own, provided, of course, that the Far Eastern question has not to be solved by force of arms. The other Chinese Loans are quoted at 100½ for the Seven per Cent. Silver Loan, at 104½ for the Six per Cent. Gold Loan, and at 100 for the Five per Cent. Gold Loan, while Japanese bonds stand at 100. The Greek Loan is now in sight, and as it is to be guaranteed by England, Russia, and France, it will be of the nature of a gilt-edged investment, and probably find its final resting price here, as we outbid Continental capitalists for this kind of security. Discount rates for three months' Bank bills are quoted $2\frac{15}{16}$ to 3 per cent., while short money is obtainable at from 2½ to 3 per cent. The future of the market must to a great extent depend upon the action of the United States. Large withdrawals have taken place for American account, both from the Bank of France and from London, and these will probably continue for some time longer. On the other hand, Government disbursements and dividend-payments will, with the turn of the quarter, provide greater ease, and if the trouble between the United States and Spain were to be settled, money would become very easy.

Why are Home Rails Out of Fashion?

On looking at the position of Home Rails one cannot help feeling surprised at the extreme dulness of this market, especially as, in view of all the war rumours, one would think that the public would be anxious to invest their money nearer home, and in solid undertakings which continue to show good progress and further increases on the top of large gains in 1897. In several instances, moreover, on the basis of last year's dividends, a very good yield, up to 4 per cent. in Caledonian Deferred Ordinary (Coras) can be obtained. There have, of course, been the labour troubles, and there is the increase in wages and expenditure; but, in view of the large earnings, there is no reason why Home Rails should lose their popularity. Apart from the war scares and the harder money market, there must, however, be some other reason why Home Railway securities are neglected, and this may probably be found in the fashion which has set in for home industrial stocks. That, however, will probably prove only a temporary craze, and when, as cannot fail to be the case, some of the over-capitalised concerns show signs of collapse, I should not be at all surprised if investors were again to turn to the securities of our well-managed and substantial railways. The traffic increase for the past week on the whole of the lines amounted to £34,653, which brings up the gain for the eleven weeks to £463,000. The Caledonian is doing distinctly better than almost any other line, showing again an increase of £2,583 for the week, on the top of a big take in 1897, and when Coras are quoted this week ex the dividend of 2 per cent., they will doubtless tempt purchases. Advices from the Clyde report exceptional activity in the shipbuilding trade, several large Government orders for cruisers having just been placed there, and Caledonian traffics cannot therefore fail to prove very large. The North British is doing fairly well, but I do not consider North British Deferred as cheap as Coras. The stocks of the Heavy lines have displayed dulness, and even the rise in Hull and Barnsley has fizzled out again, as it is now considered that the North-Eastern has the best of the arrangement. Brighton "A" and Dover "A" have suffered from the inclement weather and from the war scares, it being, moreover, the fashion to put down these stocks with American Rails. As the latter securities are now again in the ascendant, both Brighton "A" and Dover "A" should also improve again, especially as great scarcity of stock was disclosed at the settlement. Dover "A" are undoubtedly the best purchase of the two, as the South-Eastern has already piled up an increase for the eleven weeks of £24,656. Great Northern Deferred and Great Central 1894 Ordinary are certainly tempting for a lock-up, and so are Metropolitan Districts, which are slightly easier, in sympathy with the rest of the market. Traffic increases continue to be shown from week to week, these being doubtless due to the development of the extensions. So far, the gross traffic for the eleven weeks amounts to £95,242, an increase of £4,000. Central London Railway shares have been largely dealt in, the fully-paid Ordinary being the favourite, at from $10\frac{5}{8}$ to $10\frac{7}{8}$. These stocks have been but little affected by the surrounding depression, the appointment of Sir Henry Oakley to the chairmanship having been very favourably received.

THE YANKEE MARKET—SCARES AND RALLIES.

One is forcibly reminded of the old adage "that the hour is darkest before the dawn" by the sudden change which came over the American department on Saturday. Not that it is at all certain that there will be no war between the United States and Spain. On the contrary, the position is still critical, although, now that the report of the court of inquiry into the Maine disaster has been published, the worst is known. Its exact contents, moreover, have been frequently foreshadowed, and the event is thus more than discounted. What steps the United States will take with regard to Cuba remains to be seen, but there is still hope that the actual outbreak of war can be averted. What, however, caused my introductory remarks was that strong support was forthcoming from Wall-street on Saturday. At first the market was altogether demoralised, prices dropping in all directions, while a canard gained credence for some time that Spain had declared war against the United States—a rumour which also caused extreme nervousness in London, and great weakness in quotations. The hour was dark indeed, with Milwaukee selling at $88\frac{1}{4}$, Louisville at $46\frac{1}{4}$, and other shares at similarly depreciated values. Then followed a rally which in Wall-street, where the fluctuations had been the sharpest, carried up prices from \$2 to \$8 above the lowest figures touched, and we have now Milwaukee here again at $94\frac{3}{4}$, Louisville at 51. The question, of course, is whether the improvement will be maintained, and whether it will make further progress. There has been a great deal of liquidation in New York, the Maine disaster happening at a time when a huge "Bull" account was open there. This position has now, apparently, been got rid of, and it may be assumed that the stocks are in stronger hands, and that a number of "Bears" have still to cover their commitments. After the heavy fall one would almost think that even the outbreak of war was more than discounted in the present level of prices of American Rails. After all, traffics continue on an excellent scale, and the business of the railroads has not yet suffered any check. The Spaniards are not likely to take possession of them, and, in fact, should war ensue, the railroads will probably in the first instance benefit. Nor can the issue of such a struggle be for one moment doubtful, as the United States are certain to gain the day. It will be useful at the present juncture to again give a comparison of prices, especially in view of the sharp fluctuations which have occurred, and which have in many instances wiped recent severe declines out again:—

—	Highest in 1897.	Lowest in 1897.	Price, Jan. 2, 1898.	March 21, 1898.	March 28, 1898.
Atchison	$17\frac{1}{8}$	10	$13\frac{3}{8}$	$11\frac{1}{2}$	$11\frac{7}{8}$
Do. Five per Cent. Pref.	$36\frac{1}{4}$	$17\frac{3}{4}$	$31\frac{5}{8}$	$25\frac{5}{8}$	$26\frac{1}{2}$
Canadian Pacifics	$90\frac{1}{8}$	$46\frac{3}{4}$	$83\frac{1}{8}$	85	$84\frac{1}{2}$
Central Pacific	$18\frac{1}{2}$	$7\frac{1}{2}$	$12\frac{1}{2}$	$12\frac{1}{2}$	$12\frac{3}{8}$
Denver	$15\frac{1}{2}$	$9\frac{7}{16}$	$11\frac{3}{4}$	$11\frac{7}{8}$	$11\frac{1}{2}$
Do. Pref.	$51\frac{7}{8}$	$37\frac{5}{8}$	$47\frac{1}{4}$	$45\frac{3}{4}$	$45\frac{1}{4}$
Erie	$19\frac{11}{16}$	12	$15\frac{1}{8}$	$13\frac{1}{4}$	$13\frac{1}{8}$
Do. First Pref.	$46\frac{1}{2}$	$28\frac{5}{8}$	$39\frac{3}{4}$	$35\frac{1}{4}$	$35\frac{1}{2}$
Lake Shore	183	156	$176\frac{1}{2}$	192	198
Louisville	$65\frac{1}{4}$	$43\frac{1}{8}$	$58\frac{1}{8}$	50	51
Milwaukee	$105\frac{1}{8}$	$71\frac{7}{8}$	98	92	$94\frac{3}{4}$
Missouri, Kansas, and Texas	$17\frac{3}{8}$	$10\frac{3}{4}$	13	$11\frac{3}{8}$	11
Norfolk Adjust. Pref.	50	$22\frac{1}{2}$	$48\frac{3}{4}$	47	47
North Pacific New Pref.	$61\frac{7}{8}$	$34\frac{1}{2}$	61	$62\frac{3}{4}$	$64\frac{3}{4}$
New York Central	$118\frac{1}{8}$	$95\frac{1}{8}$	$110\frac{1}{2}$	114	114
Ontario	$20\frac{9}{16}$	13	$16\frac{1}{4}$	$15\frac{1}{8}$	$14\frac{1}{2}$
Reading	$15\frac{1}{4}$	$9\frac{7}{8}$	$11\frac{1}{2}$	$8\frac{3}{4}$	$8\frac{1}{2}$
Southern Ordinary	13	$7\frac{1}{16}$	$9\frac{1}{4}$	$8\frac{1}{8}$	$8\frac{1}{8}$
Do. Pref.	39	25	$33\frac{1}{8}$	$26\frac{7}{8}$	$26\frac{3}{4}$
Union Pacific	$35\frac{7}{16}$	$19\frac{13}{16}$	$26\frac{1}{4}$	$26\frac{5}{8}$	$27\frac{3}{4}$
Wabash Pref.	$24\frac{3}{4}$	$12\frac{1}{8}$	$18\frac{1}{2}$	$15\frac{3}{4}$	$15\frac{3}{4}$

It would appear to me that such stocks as Milwaukee, Louisville, Erie, Erie First Prefs., Union Pacifics, Union Pacific Prefs., Central Pacifics, Chesapeake and Ohio, and Southern Prefs., might with advantage now be locked up to a moderate extent. Traffic returns of the leading roads are again satisfactory, as instanced by the following increases:—Milwaukee \$157,955, Missouri \$70,000, Wabash \$41,000. The weakness of the American department naturally affected the stocks of the Canadian roads adversely, notwithstanding satisfactory traffics, the increase of \$138,000 of the Canadian Pacific being more particularly favourable. Canadian Pacifics have, however, now recovered again to $84\frac{1}{2}$, Grand Trunk First Prefs. to $65\frac{3}{4}$, the Guaranteed to $72\frac{3}{4}$. It is much to be regretted that the war of rates still continues, and this certainly does not reflect credit upon the respective boards and managements.

FOREIGNERS AND SOUTH AMERICANS.

In view of the sharp tumble which Spanish bonds have experienced, the quotation dropping to $49\frac{1}{2}$, it is not surprising that Foreign stocks generally should have given way. The Paris Bourse is naturally hard hit over the fall in Spanish, and has put all its specialties down, even Rio Tinto not escaping this fate, although very favourable dividend estimates are current. Much must, of course, depend upon the issue of the Spanish-American trouble. The fall has not, however, been confined to inter-Bourse stocks, but South Americans, too, have declined heavily, the weakest position being that in Argentine railway stocks. It appears that several jobbers had loaded up with heavy blocks, and as the political scare cut off all investment orders, and caused a general set-back, these stocks had to be liquidated. My readers will recollect that a few months ago I uttered a warning against the over-speculation which had taken place in these stocks, and my fears have been only too amply borne out by events. Buenos Ayres Great Southern are 6 lower for the week at 145, Buenos Ayres and Rosario have fallen 3½ to 69, Central Argentine 3½ to 76, and Cordoba Central (Central Northern Section) Income Debentures are down to 47, Cordoba and Rosario Prefs. to 42½, Bahia Blanca and North-Western Prefs. to 51½, Argentine Government stocks are also lower, and in this instance the warlike tone of the Chilian Press appears to have aggravated the depression. It would indeed be absurd for Chili and Argentina to go to war over a simple boundary dispute, and I cannot bring myself to believe this. Prospects generally are favourable in Argentina, especially as there is no doubt now that General Costa will be elected President, and he is said to have made up his mind to place the finances of the country on a thoroughly sound basis. In the meantime, however, the Argentine Funding Loan is down to 87½, the 1886 Loan to 88¼, and the Railway Guarantee Rescission bonds have fallen to as low as 56. Uruguay bonds have, in the midst of the general depression, kept up remarkably well, although even they dropped to 44¾ for the Old Loan, from which there was a recovery to 45¼. Brazilians, too, have shown weakness, being predisposed to that by previous occurrences, and by the precarious financial outlook in Rio de Janeiro. The 1889 Loan has fallen to 53¼. Chilians are also lower, the 1886 Loan having fallen to 73. Peruvian Corporation stocks have shown a steady appearance, and Mexican Sixes also have borne the war scares remarkably well.

The Kaffir Circus—A Better Feeling.

The view is gaining ground that the liquidation in the Kaffir Circus has practically been completed, and as the news from the Transvaal is more satisfactory, it would not be surprising to see quotations gradually harden. The consensus of opinion is that President Kruger's letter will not by any means prove a formidable epistle, and that he will declare his readiness to abide by the London Convention. Concessions to the mining industry he will apparently not now make; but, on the other hand, he has not got his loan, and before he can raise any large sum of money, he will doubtless have to show some readiness to improve the position. Had the surrounding conditions been less adverse, the report of the Rand Mines meeting, which was cabled over from Johannesburg, would doubtless have caused prices to brace up. As it is, Rand Mines do not seem to be able to maintain themselves above 28, and every now and then drop back again. The news, however, is of a distinctly favourable kind. At Thursday's meeting, the Chairman reported gratifying progress, stating that the Company was now interested in two parent Companies, eight deep levels, and one syndicate, all of which were doing well. The credit to profit and loss account amounted to £1,694,632, while the value of the shareholdings had increased by £1,500,000. A first dividend of 100 per cent. would be declared during the year, and he hoped that this rate would not only be maintained, but largely increased. Special interest centres in the statement made by the Chairman that no objection was raised on the part of the board to the splitting of the shares, upon which the shareholders are to be consulted. He also mentioned that steps would be taken for the purpose of replacing black labour by white. The chief speculative business has been transacted in Consolidated Goldfields and East Rands, which have hardened slightly. Randfontein have been fairly steady, and Barnato stocks have been well supported, more especially Barnato Consols. No improvement is marked in diamond shares, De Beers being quoted 26⅓, New Jagersfontein 7½.

London and Paris Exchange, Ltd., 24, Throgmorton-street, London, E.C. This Corporation is prepared to make Advances on Mining Shares, at 6 per cent. per annum, subject to a deposit of 20 per cent. Clients by this system save the heavy contangoes usually charged.

Golden West Australia.

The West Australian market has been much agitated by the liquidation, which has been going on, of several accounts, amongst which was one of an outside broker who had been dealing very largely in "Kangaroos." Prices show moderate declines, but there was no difficulty in arranging the account, and two shares more particularly proved scarce, viz., Ivanhoe and Northern Territories. People are speculating as to who has sold all the Northern Territories, in which such a large shortage is shown. But the quotation of these has eased off to 4¼, and the Market Trust group has been somewhat lower in sympathy with the general market. At the last, however, some demand has been experienced for West Australian Joint Stock Trust Founders' shares at $\frac{13}{16}$, and it is expected that after Wednesday's meeting of the West Australian Joint Stock Trust these shares will go ahead to a considerable extent. London and Globe Finance shares receded at one time to $1\frac{5}{16}$, from which there has been a recovery to $1\frac{7}{16}$, and in view of the circular which has just been issued jointly by this Company and the British America Corporation, an advance in these shares would appear to be on the cards. The present should be an excellent opportunity to average London and Globe shares. The amalgamation of the West Australian sub-companies of the London and Globe has now been practically resolved upon by all the shareholders, and an early issue of the Standard Exploration Company is anticipated. A moderate number of crushings has been advised, as per the following list:—

—	Tons of Ore Crushed.	Oz. of Gold.	Assay of Tailings per ton.
Peak Hill Goldfield	524	2,024	—
Lady Shenton	600	1,650	19 dwt.
Queensland Menzies	100	641	—
Consolidated Murchison	372	391	—
Weld-Hercules	191	101	2 dwt.
Yalgoo Proprietary	38	29	—
Golconda	605	449	2 dwt.
Menzies Alpha	46	292	—
Australian Champion Reef	180	195	7 dwt.

The result obtained by the Peak Hill Goldfield is more particularly satisfactory, and has caused an improvement in these shares to 2¾, reacting again to $2\frac{9}{16}$, notwithstanding the alluvial trouble. The Lady Shenton crushing of 1,650 oz. is extremely satisfactory, and better than the last, while the assay of the tailings is also greater than last time. It is significant that the Queensland Menzies, the adjoining property, has a crushing of nearly 6½ oz. to the ton. According to a British Australasian cablegram from Perth (W.A.), a distinguished party visited the Lady Shenton Mine on the occasion of the opening of the railway to Menzies, when very favourable statements were made, and the opinion was expressed by the Governor that the mine was not sufficiently appreciated at present, but that shareholders could well afford to wait until the result of its operations proved its value. The cablegram concludes as follows:—

> Rayfield (consulting engineer) reports rise upon the vein on the northern boundary level No. 3. Much pleased with developments. The vein is fully 4 ft. in width. Ore payable. The winze at level No. 4 down to 23 ft.; continues to look exceedingly well. The vein is fully 5 ft. in width; first-class ore. North drift is now in 139 ft.; the vein is fully 4 ft. in width; first-class ore; heavily mineralised.

This latest news fully confirms the favourable views held here in well-informed quarters with regard to the Lady Shenton, which would in fact now perhaps stand at nearly double the present price were it not for the surrounding weakness. According to the latest cablegram received from Perth (W. A.), Sir George Shenton, the chairman of the Company, and Mr. McNeil have returned from the mine, which was found to be looking better than their most sanguine expectations. The cablegram states that eight months supply of first-class ore is in sight without further development of the property. It is stated that the lowest level and winze are now being developed with the utmost rigour with rock-boring machinery, and that the bottom of the winze is a magnificent show. As regards low-priced mines, which are at present in a very promising position, Florence should also offer an excellent opportunity, the shares being quoted only $\frac{5}{8}$. This is also the price of Golden Pike, concerning which the official cablegram fully confirms my previous information, being as follows:—

400 ft. level west cross-cut 98 ft. struck Great Boulder lode. From the assay results 8 dwt. per ton, 11 dwt., 18 dwt., 2 oz., 3 oz. 12 dwt., 4 oz. The lode is wide, and carries much mineral. 12 ft. mineral still in face.

Advices from the North-west Australian Goldfields are to the effect that crushing has been started, and that the clean-up will take place on March 28. The mill is stated to be working "splendidly," and if the output should be as "splendid" a great many disappointed shareholders in this Company will be pleased. From the Sons of Gwalia very favourable advices are to hand, reporting that the Gwalia Level No. 2 assays an average of 5 oz. per ton, while the manager adds that he has no doubt that he can improve upon this. In the level No. 1, cut No. 8, a rich chute of ore is reported, and it is understood that the mine promises exceedingly well for the future. Hannan's Brownhill shares have experienced a sharp relapse, also no doubt due to some forced closing, the price declining at one time to $7\frac{1}{8}$, from which there has been a recovery to $7\frac{3}{8}$. This is a mine which should come prominently to the front in the course of April, when the new machinery should be at work, and an important improvement is looked for. Lake View Consols have also suffered from realisations, and the quotation dropped back to $8\frac{1}{8}$, recovering to 9, which still includes the 10s. dividend. Should the March output prove satisfactory there will doubtless be a considerable rise in these shares, the news from the property continuing of a favourable character. Hannan's Props., after improving, have eased off again, although the position of this Company is very satisfactory. Great Boulder Proprietary have been a dull market in the neighbourhood of 20s., and Great Boulder Perseverance and Burbank's Birthday Gift have also been very quiet.

Sir John Forrest at Menzies—Turbulent Proceeings.

Every well-wisher of Western Australia, and every fair-thinking man, will deplore the turbulent proceedings which took place at the opening of the railway from Kalgoorlie to Menzies last week. It appears that a deputation waited upon Sir John Forrest, the Premier, at Kalgoorlie, in order to place before him the grievances of the alluvial diggers, to which I devoted a special article a week ago. Sir John Forrest very properly stated that the rights of the leaseholders must be considered, and he refused to release the two miners imprisoned for disobeying the magistrate's order to cease working the alluvial on leasehold property.. The mob thereupon committed various acts of violence, and molested the Premier on his way to the station. Fortunately, the train was in readiness to take him away, and he thus escaped from the riotous crowd. The various miners' associations absolutely disavow these disgraceful proceedings, and numerous meetings have since been held in all parts of the colony expressing sympathy with Sir John, while cablegrams have reached him from all parts of Australia, fully supporting his views. The security of leaseholds will therefore be fully maintained by the West Australian Government, and special legislation will doubtless be resorted to in the West Australian Legislature. In the meantime, it will be useful to mention some of the statements made by the Premier at the banquet at Menzies. According to the published cablegrams he drew attention to the fact that there was now a continuous line of 1,000 miles from Albany, and another of fifty miles to the goldfields of Coolgardie. He also mentioned that the water scheme, which had been started would, although costing £2,250,000, and £300,000 yearly to keep up, pay for itself within twenty years. The mines which were now worked at a loss, would, with an increased water supply, yield profits. The gold production of the colony during January last had been greater than that of Victoria and Queensland combined. The annual trade amounted in value to £10,000,000. Seven years ago there was a population of 50,000, with a revenue of £400,000. At present the population was 160,000, with a revenue of £3,000,000. The colony was, however, capable of holding millions, instead of this 160,000, inasmuch as it comprised one-third of Australia. Altogether the Premier's programme is a comprehensive one, and there is little doubt but that the whilom Cinderella amongst the Australian colonies is now leading the way.

Indian, Australasian, and British Columbian Mines.

The Indian section has shown dulness with the rest of the Mining Market, and declines have predominated, Ooregum Ordinary, Mysore West, and Mysore Reefs all giving way. In fact, this section has also had its share of forced sales. In Australian mines, other than West Australian, Broken Hill Proprietary have been firm at 44s. 6d.; but Mount Lyell and Mount Lyell North mark declines, and hardly any business has been transacted in Charters Towers mines. The only improvements in New Zealand properties occurred in Hauraki and Komata Reefs; while Waihi, Taitapu, and Preece's Point are all lower. Amongst British Columbian mines, slight improvements are marked in Klondike and Columbian Goldfields, in London and British Columbia Goldfields, and in War Eagle; but Klondike and North-West Territories have eased off. British America Corporation shares, after dropping to below par, are firmer again at 20s., and in view of the circular which has just been issued over the signature of the Marquis of Dufferin and Ava and Mr. Whitaker Wright, the prospects of this Company must be considered as most encouraging. A map of the Rossland mining camp is enclosed, on which a large number of valuable properties that have been acquired are to be found. Many of these were already mentioned in the interview with Governor Mackintosh, to which I drew attention last week. It is needless, therefore, for me to refer to these properties in detail, especially as all the shareholders have received maps and circulars. With reference to the territory of Yukon it is stated in the circular that Mr. F. G. Hinde Bowker, who has had an experience of ten years in that country, has been appointed the Yukon manager of the Corporation, with headquarters at Dawson City. Mr. Bowker is now purchasing supplies at Vancouver, and has chartered a steamer (2,000 tons) at that port to convey the goods to St. Michael's. The British Columbian Iron Works are also building for the Corporation a river steamer for use on the Yukon River, which is expected to be ready by the time the river is free from ice. A number of options have been acquired in the Yukon district, but the properties will not be taken over until their value has been demonstrated to the satisfaction of the Company's agents. One property has, however, been acquired by the British America Corporation jointly with the London and Globe, viz., a lease giving exclusive power to dredge fifty miles of river beds for a period of twenty years. Several other maps are in preparation, which will eventually be sent to the shareholders, and the statement is made that the properties have been so judiciously selected that the Corporation could dispose of them at a large profit if it desired to do so. Lord William Beresford, V.C., has joined the Board vice Mr. E. A. Hoare, who has resigned owing to ill-health. An important item of news is contained in the circular, viz., that all these properties in British Columbia have been acquired by the British America Corporation jointly and in equal shares with the London and Globe Finance Corporation. The reason for this departure is that the properties are of so valuable and extensive a character that it would have proved impossible for either Company to handle them singly. I should think that this combination of forces would bring excellent results to both undertakings.

Heering's Copenhagen Cherry Brandy. The most delicious Liqueur. Established 1818. Of all respectable Wine Merchants.

New Enterprises and Issues.

The prospectuses of the following new enterprises and issues have been placed before the public during the week:—

The New Schultze Gunpowder Company, Limited.—This Company is formed to take over the business of the Schultze Gunpowder Company, Limited, as at present carried on by them; and to further develop the business, to acquire additional leasehold land, new works, and plant. The business was established in 1869, and the profits are stated to have been for the year 1897 £28,921. The capital is fixed at £325,000, divided into Cumulative Preference and Ordinary shares of £5 each.

Chadburn's (Ship) Telegraph Company, Limited.—With a capital of £120,000, divided into 60,000 Six per Cent. Cumulative Preference and 60,000 Ordinary shares of £1 each, this Company has been formed to purchase and carry on the businesses of Chadburn & Son, Limited, and Thomas Bassnett, Limited, and to acquire certain patents, together with the leases, plant, machinery, stock, and goodwill now being carried on at the works at Liverpool and Glasgow, and the branches at Newcastle-on-Tyne, Belfast, and London.

The present net profits are stated to be over £13,000 per annum, which are likely to be greatly increased, owing to the activity in the shipping trade. The orders in hand are reported as large, and sufficient to pay the interest on the Preference shares many times over.

Dr. Tibbles' Vi-Cocoa (1898) Limited.—This Company has been formed for the purpose of acquiring, as a going concern, the business and assets of Dr. Tibbles' Vi-Cocoa, Limited, and of carrying on and extending the same. The Company acquires the leasehold premises, plant, machinery, formulæ, and all other assets of the vendor Company. The profits for the year ending November, 1897, the prospectus states, amounted to over £72,000. The capital is fixed at £400,000, divided into 200,000 Six per Cent. Cumulative Preference shares and 200,000 Ordinary shares of £1 each.

The Electric Supply Company of Western Australia, Limited.—This Company is formed with a capital of £100,000 in shares of £1 each, for the purpose of taking over from the Westralian Electric Lighting and Supply Company, Limited, the business and existing system of electric supply to the Town of Coolgardie, Western Australia.

It is doubtful whether there will be any local support for this venture, and there are plenty of Companies carrying on electric business in this country in which investors can do far better, while avoiding considerable risk.

Edwin Woodhouse & Co., Limited.—This Company has been formed to acquire the business of Messrs. Edwin Woodhouse & Co., worsted and woollen cloth manufacturers, of Farsley, near Leeds. The share capital is £195,000, and a Debenture stock of £65,000.

This issue may, I think, be safely left to investors in the North, who may know something about the business. There is nothing enticing in it.

The British and Foreign Du Bois Company, Limited.—With a capital of £150,000 this Company has been formed for the purpose of acquiring and carrying on the business of the British Du Bois Manufacturing Company, Limited, and of amalgamating with a similar business now carried on in Germany by the Du Bois Manufacturing Company, both Companies being engaged in the manufacture and sale of the "Du Bois" lead trap and other sanitary appliances.

Competition in sanitary appliances is now far too great, and fresh inventions are always cropping up, so that it would be unwise to place money in a venture of this class.

Quicksilver Mines (California, U.S.A.), Limited.—This Company has been formed to purchase and develop the Redington Quicksilver Mine, in the north-east "corner" of Napa County, California. The share capital is fixed at £150,000 in £1 shares.

There are a number of mines in a "corner" just now, although they did not start there. Investors may probably find themselves in one, if they place their money in this venture.

Huggins & Co., Limited.—This Company has been incorporated to acquire the brewery undertaking carried on by the Company of the same name which was incorporated in 1894 to carry on the brewery of John Huggins & Co., at Lion Brewhouse, Broad-street, Golden-square. The share capital is fixed at £850,000, in Ordinary and Preference shares of £10 each, and a Three and a Half per Cent. Irredeemable First Mortgage Debenture stock of £550,000.

Thomas Phillips & Company, Limited.—Capital £160,000, consisting of 16,000 Five and a Half per Cent. Cumulative Preference shares of £5 each, and 80,000 Ordinary £1 shares. The First Mortgage Debenture stock, £100,000, bearing 4½ per cent. interest is also offered for subscription. The Company has been formed to acquire as a going concern the business of Mr. Thomas Phillips, brewer, &c., of West Malling, Kent, the freehold breweries known as "The Abbey Brewery," West Malling, Kent, the "Diamond Brewery," Dover, the "Park Brewery," Camberwell, London, S.E., &c.

My Letter Box.

The following are replies to inquiries from various correspondents:—

Government, &c., Bonds.

Red Dragoon.—The Brazilian position is not encouraging. At the same time there seems to be no reason for you to sell what has been bought at high prices (1 and 2), and I think that the better plan would be to hold for a possible recovery. As regards Portuguese (3), whenever you can get a good opportunity you should clear out. As to No. 4, I could not possibly predict such a rise as that you mention in the shares of these Timber Companies. A small advance might be justified, but important competing Companies are now under way. W. S.—Do not think there would be any harm done in increasing your holding of Chilians at the present low quotations. This country has always fulfilled its obligations, and will no doubt continue to do so. Fiducia.—I see no reason why you should not invest in Mexican Six per Cent. Government bonds. They are a better investment than the railway bonds mentioned. Sutton.—The agents for German lottery bonds are generally very shady, and I could not possibly advise you with regard to their solvency. They are not really bankers, and I think you might just as well give these German lotteries a wide berth. M. S. C.—1. I do not consider these two Central American bonds worth buying, and as to Honduras (2) prospects are still very doubtful. A. M.—There seems to be some disagreement between the Chilian and Argentine Republics. I do not think it will come to anything, but political unrest always affects Government bonds. This is the chief reason why Chilians have fallen. The financial position does not seem to be at all serious.

Banks, Trusts, and Financial.

Fonds.—I have always advised my readers not to deal with outside brokers, and you have done so against my deliberate warnings. I do not think that anything can now be gained by precipitating matters, and you will be wise to wait. B. P. R.—It is a great pity that a domestic servant should be tempted by a high rate of interest. I strongly advise you to leave the money in the Post Office Savings Bank. P. E. G.—Outside brokers; have absolutely nothing to do with them, and deal only through members of the Stock Exchange. Sam.—If you are a constant reader of Truth you must know that warnings against dealing with Alexander Baring & Co., of Bath, have repeatedly appeared in its columns. I advise you to deal only through members of the Stock Exchange. A Shopkeeper.—A new and small concern, respecting the solvency of which I could not possibly give you any information. E. H. C.—I cannot reply by letter. While I have always expressed an unfavourable view concerning this new-fangled insurance office, I have never published any lengthy article dealing with it. Keen.—I take no very favourable view even now of building societies, and the best plan is to fully investigate the accounts before placing your money into them. Peter.—All depends upon whether you do not mind the heavy liability attached to the stock. There might be some chance of a recovery. Correspondent, Waterford.—Obviously, Browne, Johnson, & Co., outside syndicate touts, are not identical with Messrs. Brown, Janson, & Co., the well-known firm of bankers. You will have seen that I drew attention to the similarity of the names in Truth a fortnight ago. Gloucester.—No reason to sell.

Home Rails.

Doubtful, Tunbridge Wells.—1. Furness Railway stock is in a peculiar position. There is no quotation for it here, and on merits it ought to be higher, but when there is no market for a stock it generally remains below its real value. For this reason I cannot reply to your remaining inquiries. Byt.—I see no reason why Great Central Five per Cent. Prefs. should not be bought as an investment. Everything must, however, naturally depend upon the results of the extension to London. Hopeful.—Yes, I still think well of Great Central 1894 Ordinary. Towcester.—No; the Deferred stock ranks after the Ordinary, so that the 1894 Ordinary is far preferable. Mrs. L.—I am afraid that prospects of this railway are not very rosy, but in time it may pay, and I must leave it to you whether to sell or not. It has not been one of my recommendations. Steel.—If you want to buy Central London Railway shares you had better select the fully-paid Ordinary at 10¾, as there is no liability on these.

American and Foreign Rails.

Sidons.—It is quite impossible to give advice as regards the purchase of American railroad stocks just now. Whenever the turn comes, Nos. 1, 2, and 3 may go considerably higher, but they may also go lower in case of adverse political news. I do not advise purchase of English Sewing Cottons (4) at the present premium, and I must refer you to my remarks under "A Chapter on Industrial Stocks." Ceres.—I really cannot undertake to publish remarks on this stock until I am satisfied myself as to the likelihood of its improving. The turn has, in my opinion, not yet come. At the same time, I quite agree with you that it would be wise to hold the stock. R. R.—I cannot say that these Preference shares are absolutely safe, but they are a fair investment of the kind. J. R. X.—You should hold both your Union Pacific Ordinary, and the Preference shares which you will receive; if you can. Certainly hold the New Ordinary.

MINING SHARES.

C. H. W.—1. Yes, I advise you to hold Hendersons and buy a few more to average. II. I do not advise a purchase of these. Ajax.—Yes, I still hold the opinion that Oceana Consols will one of these days improve considerably. They are shares to be locked up. Housekeeper.—Of the shares mentioned by you West Australian Joint Stock Founders appear to look most promising just now. R. P. T.—You must remember the general weakness of the markets. The Corporation is doing well. See remarks in this week's letter. Yes, London and Globe are a good purchase. F. H. C.—1. Yes, Modderfontim are a good purchase. 2. Yes. 3. Hold, but do not buy any more. Yes, the Mining Manual of W. R. Skinner. S. E. D.—Yes, there is every prospect of an improvement. Anxious, Long Eaton.—Hold your South African shares. Lady Shentons are good for a big rise, but I cannot tell you when exactly. Holly.—1. Yes, there is a better chance in Lady Shentons. 2. I have never recommended this mine, it is disappointing. 3. Yes, London and Globe and Ivanhoe should be held for a rise. Asset.—Hold by all means. A turn is close at hand. Ashton.—No option but to hold Nos. 1—4, they will recover. Take your profit in No. 5 (Wassau). Blot.—Yes, hold No. 1. The meetings of Nos. 2 and 3 will not take place for some time yet. M. P. J.—1. Do not buy more to average yet. 2. Not just yet. Roche.—A fair investment of the kind, but no catch. Major L.—There is very little market as yet, no option but to hold. Nemo, Watford.—No, I would not buy any more now. Leeds.—1. Hold Ivanhoe for a rise, and buy more to average. 2. Ditto as regards London and Globe. Toby N.—Yes, a good purchase. Lady Shenton is the best amongst the shares mentioned. Jeff.—If you can afford it buy more London and Globe to average. H. S. Co.—There was no reason for the fall, except the general depression. You will now have received the circular. Hold. I make no charge for reply, and, in fact, refuse to do so. T. S. E. M.—The fall in London and Globe shares has been altogether exaggerated, and if it had not been for war scares and forced liquidation of some outside accounts, it would never have gone so far. The Company is doing well, and the shares should be bought. 1. No. 2. Yes, for a good rise. 3. Yes. Eldorado.—Same reply as above. You should not heed such absurd attacks, which are, moreover, altogether unjustified. J. P.—You will find that the lowest point has passed, and that there will now be a steady rise. Halifax.—Hold the West Australian shares Nos. 1—6. You should hold these too for an improvement. Bute.—There is no option but to hold such shares as No. 1, in view of the general depression in the South African market. Also hold No. 2. Suspect.—You are quite right, the expenditure of the Golden Link Consolidated Mines, Limited, is very heavy, and the gold prospects are, after all, still very much in the air. The item "London expenditure, £5,760," seems enormous, although it includes the chairman's travelling expenses (£1,250). Badford.—Quite so. Prospects were, of course, interfered with by the unrest in the Transvaal. But you should hold. Z.—All the shares, Nos. 1—4 are promising and should improve again when the present depression passes away. No, as to No. 2; yes, as to No. 5. J. F. T.—No, Taitapu are not hopeless, although they have been disappointing. L. W. M.—Most certainly, hold Simmer and Jack. Grantham.—Yes, you might buy your Londonderry shares back again. E.—You might risk it for a small amount. Knock.—1. Yes, you should buy London and Globe. 2. Amongst South Africans, East Rands, Randfonteins, and Rand Mines. Albion.—You should certainly have nothing to do with this tout, whether he offers Randfontein or anything else. There is nothing wrong with London and Globe and you should buy more to average. I cannot answer for other newspapers. Lamp.—If you hold Lady Shentons long enough you will no doubt make a good profit on them. The last crushing was 1,650 oz. from 600 tons, and to date, 26,795 oz. from 7,743 tons of ore.

INDUSTRIAL STOCKS.

W. L. M.—1. A very doubtful undertaking. 2. Everything must depend upon the future profits of the hotel, concerning which nothing is known. 3 and 7. Both doing well. 4. To some extent doubtful. 5. These should recover. 6. A fair investment of the kind. Johnny.—Very speculative; I cannot advise you. Industrial.—I really should not like to advise you on this point, but in my remarks on Industrial stocks you will find what you require. J. A. P.—Nothing is known publicly concerning this Company, which I need hardly tell you is highly speculative, and I cannot give you any further information. Arron.—I do not know anything of this concern, and should certainly not advise you to invest in it. Surveyor.—These debentures can be paid off at six months' notice at the option of the Company, and from the point of view of debentures they are not a good investment, although the price is tempting. J. S. E. M.—This appears to be a promising undertaking. Hew.—The First Debentures are officially quoted 106-8, but the Second Debentures are merely nominal at par. Regret.—No, I do not advise the purchase. J. E. B.—Not yet. Justice.—All these motor car concerns are failures, and the price is quite nominal. I warned my readers against them at the very outset. Bath, C. S.—1. Speculative, but fair of the kind. 2. No option but to hold. Prospects fair. T. H.—No option but to keep them for the present. Appleby.—No reason to sell No. 1—4. I would not buy No. 5 or 6 yet. A. C.—I am afraid that in view to the Spanish-American trouble there is little chance of these shares recovering just yet, but a change may come very suddenly.

MIXED INVESTMENTS.

Lucre.—1. I do not consider these any particular catch. 2. You should certainly hold W. A. Smelting Corporation shares, as this Company appears to have a great future in that Colony. 3. No; I do not advise a purchase of W. A. United Brewery shares. 4. Under the last arrangement the interest is to be paid in April and October, and the coupons will doubtless be met. Inquirer.—1. Hold until the actual position has been ascertained at the meeting to take place on April 21. 2. Not very promising in view of the depression in the nitrate industry. 3. Not a favourite of mine. 4. These may come right. 5. Certainly hold. 6. Do not part with Spratt's Patent now. 7. These may be all right. 8. Promising as regards the near future. Cribbage.—It is quite correct that Hampton Plains have been very stagnant of late, but you had better hold now. I feel quite sure that if you were to buy at present prices, and take up and pay for, Union Pacific, Erie Common, Norfolk Common, and Southern Common, as you propose, you would make a good deal of money in six months' time. The present war scare is the investor's opportunity, but you should not run the shares in the market. Hop Pole.—1. I do not think that these Brewery Prefs. will improve at present. 2. British America Corporation should be held for an improvement. 3. A fair Industrial investment. 4. London and Globes are now recovering, and are very promising at the present price. Saltcellar.—1. Hold for the present. 2. I do not think much of this concern. 3. Yes, you had better hold. 4. Ditto. 5. Randfontein should certainly not be sold now. 6. You might also await a possible recovery in these. Rum Tum.—I see no reason why you should now sell your investments Nos. 1 to 4. There is at present a wave of depression owing to political circumstances, and when the clouds have lifted there will be an improvement. All the shares are dividend-payers. With regard to Nos. 5, 6, and 7, I see nothing against these American railroad bonds, except that they are temporarily affected by the present war rumours; but I should not advise you to sell now. 8. Most Home Industrial Prefs. are at a very high level, and I do not advise you to invest in them just at present. 9. Yes, very risky. Annie.—No particular reason to sell No. 1; but it is not a very promising investment. 2. A fair Industrial investment. 3. No reason to sell. 4. Hold East Murchison United. 5. I do not like Russian Oil Prefs. 6. London and Globes should be held and averaged. Ivan.—1. There has been no undue delay at all yet. 2. The shares mentioned are fair Industrial investments, but no catch. Levinger.—1. I do not now advise you to sell Cycle shares at bottom prices. 2. There is a prospect of a recovery. 3. I think you can find better shares mentioned under "Golden West Australia." 4. Yes, probably. Norris, Bristol.—Your shares, Nos. 1, 2, and 3, are well selected, and when the present depression passes off they should improve. British America Corporation are a good purchase, as are also Ivanhoe. Wanderer.—I see nothing against Illinois Central Four per Cent. Gold bonds except the present war rumours. I should not recommend a purchase of the other shares mentioned, and in future please to number your inquiries, as it is not advisable to mention the name of the stocks. This is one of the conditions I make for answering inquiries. Harrods.—A. I am afraid that there is not much chance of getting anything out of this Company, unless matters improve very much. B. Impossible to tell. C. I have not heard of anything unfavourable to this Company. G. S.—1. I do not advise industrial Companies for the investment of your £2,000, as these are greatly overdone. 2. No. 3. Yes. Amongst the other undertakings mentioned by you I should think that Randfontein (7), London and Globes (9), Lady Shenton (10), Florence (11), Sons of Gwalia (12), and Glencairn (15), would be an excellent selection. R. I. U.—No; I do not advise a purchase of any of the stocks mentioned, Nos. 1 to 5, at present. Wait till the clouds roll by. Val.—1. I have no further information with regard to this bank. 2. The debentures should be reasonably secured.

A CHAPTER ON INDUSTRIAL STOCKS.

The Industrial department has also suffered from the political clouds, and business has been greatly restricted, while some forced realisations seem to indicate what will happen sooner or later, viz., that when the majority of operators will want to sell there will be very few buyers about. Even Lipton shares, which are still under the clamour of a very successful issue, showed weakness, and a large number of Preference shares were sold down to $\frac{3}{16}$ premium. The allotment in Preference shares has been more liberal than in the Ordinary, which still maintain a premium of 1, but there have evidently also been a good many stags in Liptons. The debentures are very steady at 106, and are being quietly absorbed. W.A. Timber shares maintain a good tone, although prices are slightly easier, Millar's Karri and Jarrah being quoted 3, Davies 1¾, Canning ¼ premium. The new issue of the Jarrah Timber and Wood Paving Corporation appears to have met with a favourable reception. This is really an amalgamation of a number of enterprises, viz., the Northern Estate and Lion Mill, the Central Estate and Collie Mill, the Southern Estate and 24-Mile Mill, and freehold land in Bunbury (W.A.). One of the chief points about the enterprise is, however, that it includes timber-yards in Perth and the Western Australian timber business of Messrs. Palfreman, Foster, & Co., of New Broad-street, London, E.C. The latter firm have already carried out extensive contracts for street-paving purposes, and thus a well-established connection for the sale of the timber is assured. Allsopp Ordinary have shown weakness, the quotation having at one time receded to 150, from which they rallied sharply to 153 on the scarcity of stock shown at the settlement. The financial scheme, which I criticised last week, is not at all popular in the market. A fresh set-back is marked in oil shares, Russian Petroleum having fallen to 20⅜. Threads (English Sewing Cottons) continue to dwindle, the premium being now $\frac{9}{16}$, and there has also been a relapse in Welsbach Incandescent stocks, the Ordinary being down to 108, the Preference to 99, the Deferred to 19s. Spiers & Pond have been steady at 21½, and Bovril have been dealt in to a considerable extent at 18s. 6d. for the ordinary, and at 11s. 9d. for the Deferred. Schweppes, on the other hand, have been neglected at $1\frac{3}{16}$ for the Ordinary and 10s. 6d. for the Deferred. In Lyons shares small dealings take place at 3¾. A Company which is meeting with a good deal of encouragement in the market is Chadburn's (Ship) Telegraph Company, as it deals with the amalgamation of two old-established businesses, which are connected with the shipbuilding trade. There is at present no more flourishing industry in this country than that of shipbuilding, as is fully apparent from the favourable advices that are coming to hand from the Clyde and the Tyne. The ships' telegraphs manufactured by Chadburns are now being introduced on all the vessels in course of construction, and this is evidently the case of a Company which, by the addition of a large sum to its working capital, will be able to greatly increase its business and profits. A further decline has taken place in Hudsons Bay shares, which have now dropped to 21. This is a very considerable fall from the top, and it would not be advisable for operators to commit themselves on the "Bear" tack now. Cycle shares have displayed general weakness, and business has been conspicuous by its absence. Prices have simply moved down automatically, and quotations are now for Dunlop Deferred 12s., the Ordinary 16s., Humber Ordinary 12s. 6d., the Extensions 7s., Swifts 9s. 6d., Singers 12s. 3d., Cycle Components 29s. 6d., Amalgamated Tyres 6s. 3d. So far, there is no sign of a rally. A report has been issued by the Natal Steam Coal Company, Limited, which was formed in September, 1897. Since its incorporation the company has been opening up its properties. Advices are favourable, and large profits are expected when the Company is working. A cable just to hand states that the whole of the plant will be completed during the present week, and that the April output has been sold. I should like to know how much money has been subscribed towards the capital of £150,000 in Preference and Ordinary shares of the United Breweries of Western Australia, Limited, the prospectus of which was advertised a fortnight ago. I am afraid there has been a very poor subscription on the part of the public, and the question is asked as to why the allotment has been delayed so much. I have received several communications from shareholders in the Brockie-Pell Arc Lamp, Limited, who are extremely dissatisfied with the report which has just been issued. To these, one and all, I should like to point out that I warned my readers against having anything to do with this concern when the shares were being boomed by some of my contemporaries. I have, however, no objection to giving publicity to some of the complaints, and have selected from the bundle of letters the following remarks:—

CHINA AND GLASS. — Messrs. GOODE, Artists and Designers, solicit an inspection of their collection in their recently-extended South Audley-street premises, now by far the largest and most important in Europe. Messrs. Goode guarantee the excellence of all their productions, and invite a comparison of their prices with those of any co-operative stores.

> After close on eighteen months' working the shareholders are presented with this precious document, which shows a deficit of close on £4,600 for the period, and I would ask you to cast your eye down the expenditure side of the profit and loss account, and see some of the items that go to make up the deficit: Directors' fees, £1,676 (fancy, five Directors for a small business of this kind!); salaries, £3,257 (a modest amount for their services!); and £500 for trade and office expenses. You will observe the premium on 5,000 shares (£1,250) has been brought into the revenue part of the account, but is all eaten up, too, by this blessed crew. The working capital seems to have been squandered, as the cash in hand and in bank amounts to only £697 odd, and £500 of this is for the sale of French and Belgian patents.

I cannot possibly publish the further remarks made by this correspondent, which are all of an extremely uncomplimentary character to the directors; but I fully agree that the result of the working of the business is exceedingly unsatisfactory, when compared with the rose-coloured views which have at various times been aired in the Press. I should think it would be the best plan to wind up the concern at once. A circular has been sent out by Mr. A. Howard, 286, Essex-road, London, N., at whose residence tickets were to be had at £1 each, and at 10s. for half-tickets, for participating in a drawing for prizes in shares, which I need hardly say are not of a gilt-edged description. The following is the list of prizes:—

		£	s.	£	s.
	1st Prize.
10	Dumont Coffee Preference Shares ...	80	0	105	0
5	,, ,, Ordinary ,, ...	25	0
	2nd Prize.
100	United Rhodesia Goldfields	50	0	75	0
5	Dumont Coffee Ordinary Shares ...	25	0
	3rd Prize.
50	Kent Coal Exploration Shares ...	37	10	50	0
50	Rhodesia Concession ,, ...	12	10
	4th Prize.
200	Randt Reef Fully-paid Shares — ...			20	0
	And ten prizes of
100	Randt Reef Fully-paid ... — ...			50	0

All applications for tickets had to be received by Tuesday, March 15, so I suppose this drawing will shortly take place. I wonder who will get the prizes, and what they will do with them? Much of this is, of course, absolute rubbish, and not worth the value stated. I cannot refrain from mentioning, in conclusion, that the German lottery touts have now reached China. A reader of TRUTH from Hankow sends me a circular which he has received from Mr. Albert Jarmulowsky, of Schwerin, Germany. I suppose, as the German Government has obtained a footing in the Celestial Empire, the lottery touts also wish to be in it, and their inroads might be even more dangerous than the occupation of Kiao-chau.—Your affectionate uncle,

MOSES.

P.S., TUESDAY MORNING.—Further peaceful rumours concerning the Spanish-American difficulty have caused a renewed and important improvement in Wall Street, a "Bear" squeeze on a large scale being in progress, so that prices have risen again above yesterday's London quotations. The advance in Milwaukee from the lowest point touched on Saturday now reaches nearly $8, and the improvements in other shares extend in many cases to $5 or $6. Should peace be preserved, a further substantial rise will doubtless take place, although movements in the near future will necessarily be irregular in accordance with the varying rumours. Many of the ursine commitments have not yet, however, been covered, and there is therefore the support of a "Bear" account left. The markets generally recovered materially after the carry-over, and I look more particularly in Home Rails, and in South African and Westralian mines for an all-round advance, especially when it is shown, as I have no doubt it will be shortly, that the Far Eastern question will not lead to war, even should the British Fleet occupy Chefoo, or some other point of vantage on the Chinese coast.

AMERICAN SHOES of every description. Large consignment of newest designs and make of Spring and Summer goods just to hand.—AMERICAN SHOE CO., 169, Regent-street, W.

All Rights Reserved.

QUEER STORY.

HOW WE TUBBED THE TOSHER.

THROUGHOUT the 'Varsity he was always known as The Tosher—never by any other designation; and the reason for his being singled out of an estimable, though, at that time, somewhat despised body of undergraduates, to bear the distinction of the definite article was simply, I conceive, that in sheer Toshcriness he out-Toshered all other Toshers.* He was a man of about thirty, so far as one could judge, short and puny, with weak, watery eyes, and a reasty complexion. He wore elastic-side boots—a thing which to my, perhaps, prejudiced mind always gives a man away—and between the top of them and the bottom of his shrunken inexpressibles was usually visible a hiatus of white sock. His shirts were of coloured flannel; his collars—if he had more than one, a point which commentators debated—were discoloured and yellowish; and the umbrella which he invariably carried, wet or fine, was the most obstrusively alpaca instrument that you ever beheld. Add to this that he was never, at any time of the day or night, seen abroad without his cap and gown, and you will readily understand that he soon made himself a marked man. You will readily understand, also, the complete appropriateness of his designation, The Tosher.

That he was the sort of man who is utterly out of his element at Oxford was obvious at a glance Nobody knew him. Nobody ever spoke to him. When he came to lectures, he always came alone, and sat by himself in a retired corner of the room. When he was seen walking about the town, he was never accompanied by any companion. Stay, though. He was sometimes seen out walking accompanied by sundry companions. On Sunday afternoons, in the by-ways of the Parks, and in the least frequented parts of Mesopotamia, one occasionally met The Tosher with a youngish, rather pretty little woman, walking at his side, and a toddling olive-branch attached to each hand; and from that we surmised that he was a family man—a husband and a father; a circumstance which provoked not a little mirthful derision in our bosoms. For that a man like The Tosher should have inspired the tender passion in any female breast, or that having inspired it, he should have had the courage to follow it up by matrimonial propositions, seemed to us a monstrous absurdity. But that only showed how little we young fellows understood these things, in supposing that woman sees as man sees. I know better now.

But to return to The Tosher, and to explain how I made his personal acquaintance. It all arose out of the merest accident; an accident which happened to my friend Sullock, the famous Dark-blue oar, whose name is still familiar to rowing men after twenty years, and who was then the greatest man in Oxford, being, in fact, President of the O.U.B.C. It was early in the Lent term of 187—, and Sullock, who was to occupy No. 5 thwart in the 'Varsity boat, had the misfortune to cut his hand rather badly with an oyster-knife, at a big supper given by North of "The Tavern," on the last night before the crew went into training.

The immediate result of this accident was to place Sullock hors de combat for a week or ten days; and it was one afternoon during that period, that the President, not feeling sufficiently fit to follow the eight on horseback over the "long course," which they were to row on the day in question, was persuaded by me to "do a slack" in a centre-board on the Upper River—the first time he had ever been guilty of such a thing since he came up to Oxford.

It was while we were careering from side to side of the river—ever and anon running aground in the shallows on the Port Meadow bank; for the water was low and the winds were contrary—it was, I say, while we were engaged in this tedious diversion that we first saw The Tosher in the character of an aquatic. He was seated in a dinghy, with a mortar-board on his head, his coat off, the sleeves of his flannel shirt rolled up to the elbows, and displaying two fore-arms for all the world like the drumsticks of an attenuated duckling. At that minute, he was drifting leisurely downstream; but, on catching sight of us and seeing that we had our eye on him, he suddenly bucked up, and treated us to an exhibition of the sculling art, which was obviously meant to make an impression on us.

It did. As one familiar with the Upper River, I had seen all the worst scullers that the 'Varsity could then produce, but never one quite so atrocious as The Tosher. He was working all he knew; yet I doubt whether there was sufficient force in his strokes to pull the proverbial sprat off the proverbial gridiron. His back was arched, as that of a cat cornered by a terrier; his head was bent forward and nearly lost to sight between his knees. With one scull he hardly caught the water, the other was drowned nearly to the button; and his splashing was as the splashing of a newly-arisen man taking his cold tub on a frosty morning. But what was most absurd and ludicrous about it all was that The Tosher kept casting anxious and inquiring glances in our direction, as much as to ask us what we thought of his style. Indeed, he did this so very obviously and with such evident and complete ingenuousness, that it struck us both on the instant, and tickled us not a little.

The President winked at me, and I winked at the President.

"Don't he think he's doing it just about?" sniggered my friend.

"I believe," I replied, "that he has recognised you as President of the 'Varsity Boat Club, and he wishes to attract your favourable notice by an exhibition of his powers."

"Expects me to try him for the eight—I shouldn't wonder," chuckled the President. "I say," he added, suddenly, slapping his stalwart thigh, "I say!"

I invited an explanation. Sullock unfolded to me a little plan that had flashed across his mind. The President, like John Gilpin, loved a timely—more especially if it were a practical—joke, and the idea of a huge (potential) jest had just occurred to his fertile imagination. It was to this effect: that we should take The Tosher on, by inviting him to come down to the 'Varsity Barge next morning, and there be tried for the eight.

The notion appealed to me immensely. I said, with great glee, that I would do what I could to further so excellent a jest.

"But," I ventured to remark, "do you think he'll be flat enough not to twig our little joke?"

"Not he! He's flatter than a flat iron," replied Sullock, with conviction. "Besides, even if he does happen to spot the hoax, there isn't much harm done after all, is there?"

"Well, by all means let's try it on," I said.

And so we decided. We got his address on our way back from jovial Mr. Bossom, from whom we had hired our centre-board. In reply to a question which I put to him, on the chance of his knowing The Tosher—and, indeed, no man was more likely to be familiar with the devotees of the Upper River—he answered at once, "Ah! That's Mr. Pringle, sir. I've got his address on my books. Subscribes by the term for a dinghy, he does. Simple-minded little gent, too, sir. Thinks he's getting no end of a dab at rowing. But he knows no more about it than my Aunt Martha's tom-cat. I'll step inside and copy his address for you, sir."

He suited the action to the word, and soon reappeared with The Tosher's address—some number in the Woodstock road—written on an envelope, which he handed to me; and, armed with this, we were able to send the following carefully concocted epistle (on O.U.B.C. notepaper) to The Tosher by that evening's post:—

O.U.B.C.
January 29, 187-.

Dear Sir,—I have much pleasure in inviting you to come down to the University Barge to-morrow (Wednesday) morning, at eleven o'clock prompt, in order that I may try you with a view to your possible inclusion in the VIII. As you are, perhaps,

* For the benefit of the uninitiated it may be explained that this is the slang term by which the unattached, or non-Collegiate, students are known at Oxford. It may be added, also, that at the time when these events occurred, being more than twenty years ago, there existed an absurd and snobbish prejudice against the (then) newly instituted Toshers, which even now has not entirely died out.

aware, we are in some uncertainty as to the final filling up of two places in the boat, and, from what I have heard of you from competent judges, who have seen you out on the river, and also from what I myself witnessed of the way in which you were shaping this afternoon, I am of opinion that you are worth trying for one of the vacant places.

Kindly, therefore, be at the Barge by eleven a.m. sharp, when I will arrange to take you out for tubbing practice.—Truly yours,

W. J. Sullock,
President, O.U.B C.

— Pringle, Esq.

"Think that'll fetch him?" the President asked me, after reading it aloud with evident gusto.

"'Umph," I replied. "If he's like the ungodly, 'as green as the grass,' don't you know, perhaps it may."

"That being the essential condition," chuckled the President. "He will not fail to come."

And come The Tosher did.

But I must tell you how he came and what screaming enjoyment he afforded us. Sullock and I were down at the barge in good time next morning; and we waited in anxious anticipation to see if The Tosher would come. What was our unholy joy, when, precisely as Tom was striking eleven, the victim of our little hoax made his appearance, in his inevitable mufti, and fully capped and gowned! Nobody was about; except for one of the boatmen, Sullock and I had the barge to ourselves. As The Tosher walked, with somewhat timid steps, across the gangway, the President stepped forward and greeted him effusively.

"Mr. Pringle, I am delighted to see you."

"And I—I am d—delighted to c—come!" stammered The Tosher, blinking his weak eyes nervously, and blushing to the roots of his thin hair with bashful pleasure.

"I wish we had known sooner what a dab oar you were," said the President, with a gravity that did credit to his self-control. "But, fortunately, it is not altogether too late yet. By the way, allow me to introduce my friend—himself a prominent exponent of the aquatic art—Mr. Dalloway—Mr. Pringle."

"A privilege to make your acquaintance, sir," I murmured, bowing.

"The—the privilege is all the—the other way," stammered the poor little greenhorn, who was evidently nearly beside himself with pleasurable exultation.

"Hem! We must not waste time," said the President. "You are ready to make a start, Mr. Pringle?"

"Oh, q—quite r—ready," answered The Tosher, and then he added, with a self-satisfied solemnity that made it extremely difficult for us to restrain our emotions, "I—I had an underdone beefsteak for b—b—breakfast this morning, on purpose to put me in g—g—good trim."

"Underdone?" ejaculated Sullock. "I hope it was blue, Mr. Pringle!"

"Not q—quite blue; but it was v—very pink," answered The Tosher, with the shame-faced air of one who has unwittingly confessed to a serious, though unintentional, irregularity.

"Ah! It ought to have been blue," pronounced the President. "The beefsteaks which we eat, never have more than a bowing acquaintance with Kitchener. However, no matter. We must get off. Here is the tub, and here are we. Will you row stroke, Mr. Pringle? My friend will take bow."

It was some minutes before we were duly settled in the boat. The Tosher divested himself of his gown and his coat, though still wearing his mortar-board, and then he made a request that taxed our gravity to the uttermost.

"M—may I t—tie my gown r—round the s—seat," he inquired timidly. "I—I've been rowing a great deal lately, and I'm r—rather s—sore."

Sullock bit his lip, and I thought he would fail to restrain the explosion which he was strenuously endeavouring to bottle. However, he managed to master himself, and replied with befitting seriousness:

"I am afraid not, Mr. Pringle. It would never do for a 'Varsity oar to resort to such cotton-wool practices."

"Oh, I—I beg p—pardon," said The Tosher, again blushing furiously, and bestowing his gown, with his coat, under the seat. "I—I didn't know."

"Get ready!" said the President. "Paddle!"

We proceeded, with jerky splashiness, to the mouth of the Cher (it will be remembered that in those days the "New Cut" did not exist), then turned up that narrow, sluggish little tributary.

Sullock soon gave us an easy.

"Mr. Pringle," he said, with well-assumed conviction, "if you can row as stylishly as you can paddle, you'll set the Isis on fire, and no mistake."

I saw the back of The Tosher's neck, above his yellow collar, blush a deep red with gratification; then he said, with a burst of confidence that struck me at the time as being exquisitely ludicrous, though there was something very pathetic about it, too, had we been able to see it, "I—I—I'm so glad. Do you know, ever s—since I c—came up to Oxford, it has been my—my one wish to—to g—get into the Eight, and I've practised and practised, and I knew that I was g—getting on, but I was afraid n—no one would n—notice me, and—and I can never thank you enough, sir."

"Tut—tut," said the President, choking down his laughter, "it is my business to unearth good oars. That's what I'm here for. But now we'll try a burst of rowing, at a quick stroke. Don't think me impertinent, Mr. Pringle, but may I ask if you are wearing a vest under your shirt?"

"I—I've g—got on a flannel waistcoat," replied The Tosher. "The d—doctor has told me always to wear natural wool next my skin."

"Just so. A most healthy practice. Well, I'm afraid I must trouble you, Mr. Pringle, just to whip off that shirt of yours and row in your flannel waistcoat."

"W—what?" gasped The Tosher, in a tone of horrified amazement.

"Just to whip off your shirt," repeated the President. "It's all very well paddling in a shirt. But, of course, you can't row in a shirt."

"I think I could," The Tosher ventured to protest.

"Out of the question," said the President, in an authoritative tone. "Now, would you like me to peel you; or can you get out of your shirt yourself?"

"Oh, I can do it myself—if I must," responded The Tosher, hurriedly. "I—I—supposing there should be any—any ladies about," he stammered (as he unfastened his collar), with an anxious glance towards the Christchurch meadows.

"Oh, you needn't be bashful, my dear sir. A flannel waistcoat is opaque. You'll have to row in a transparent zephyr before you've done. Come now! Hurry up!"

Thus admonished, The Tosher pulled off his shirt in hurried confusion, and stowed it with his coat and gown under his thwart. Then he grasped his oar, ready to row. And a mighty comical figure he cut, with his mortar-board still upon his head, and nothing on his puny trunk except his flannel waistcoat. But Sullock had to administer yet another shock to his sense of delicacy.

"Now," he said, "you must undo the two top buttons of your inexpressibles."

"I—I—don't think I—I can do that," remonstrated The Tosher, nervously. "It—it wouldn't be—be—decent."

"Decency be hanged!" replied the President, with his most Presidential air. "When you row, you have to swing your stomach right down between your knees; and how the devil are you to do that, sir, if you've got the article in question buttoned up tight against your midriff?"

The Tosher did not attempt to answer the unanswerable, or venture on further remonstrance; but, with an embarrassed and unhappy air, he undid the buttons.

"Now," said the President, "get ready—row."

We got ready. We rowed. But not for long. At about the fifth stroke, The Tosher caught a crab—the crabbiest crab I have ever seen caught. Our tub rolled and rocked. The Tosher made a desperate effort to right his oar, but leaning over on that side—like the ass he was

For Mosquito Bites nothing allays the irritation so quickly as Scrubb's Cloudy Fluid Ammonia, and it is an immediate remedy for Wasp or Bee Stings.

—when the gunwale was already in the water, he had capsized us all before we knew where we were, into the cold embraces of the Cherwell.

* * * * *

We neither of us saw or heard anything of the Tosher for the next week—a circumstance that occasioned us no little surprise. For to tell the truth, we had been daily expecting him to turn up at the 'Varsity Barge, and had been considering how we should break it to him gently, that he had simply been the victim of a practical joke. From the fact, however, of his not turning up, we concluded that he must somehow have discovered the hoax. And having concluded that, we thought little more about him.

But one evening—I think it was just a week afterwards—Sullock came into my rooms carrying an open letter in his hand, and wearing an unusually agitated look upon his face.

"Read that, Dall," he said, handing me the letter.

I took it, and read as follows:—

Dear Sir,—I have snatched a minute from my husband's bedside to write you this. He wishes to see you and the other gentleman who was with you when you were upset. He is dangerously ill—dying, perhaps—of pneumonia, consequent on the wetting he got the other day. Please, therefore, come at once.—Yours faithfully,

Alice Pringle.

"I say!" was all I could find to utter. "I say!"

"If," said Sullock, greatly agitated, "the poor beggar really has caught his death from——. But it's no good talking. Of course, we must go at once."

"Of course," I assented. And we started off. Neither of us spoke on the way. We were both overcome by the terrible turn that events had taken. That our little joke should have produced this tragic and awful result was a cruelly insupportable thought to both of us.

When we reached the Tosher's house, the door was opened to us by a small Marchioness, with red eyes and a rather soiled countenance. And then The Tosher's wife came down and spoke to us. The little woman's face was very grave and solemn. She fixed her eyes on Sullock with a look of the deepest reproach. She did not offer to shake hands with either of us. We saw, instinctively, from her demeanour, that she had guessed the truth—had seen through the hoax which we had perpetrated on her husband.

"I am glad you have come," she said. "The Doctor gives the worst account of my poor husband. He thinks it improbable that he will be alive at this time to-morrow." And then, she added, with a sudden quivering outburst, "How could—how could you—be—so—so—cruel?"

"Good God!" stammered poor Sullock, greatly overcome, as indeed was I, also, myself. "We never meant—we—never thought——."

"No," she exclaimed, bitterly. "You never thought—you never cared—as long as you had your joke—your joke! You knew my husband was as simple as a baby—you knew that he had no friends—n-no one to take his part—you took advantage of this. And—and—you see the result. I—I—do not envy you your feelings!"

"I can't resent what you say," cried out Sullock, in a broken voice; "though you do us an—an—injustice in supposing that we were led to practise this—this—hoax on your husband because he was without friends. But—there, I don't wish to whitewash myself. And I can only say that I'm sorry, from the bottom of my heart, that I was ever such a cad as to do what I did."

"Amen to that from me!" I added. I could not say any more. There was a lump in my throat that nearly choked me.

The Tosher's wife was silent for a minute. Then she said, looking up eagerly into Sullock's face.

"You—you—have enough good feeling, I hope to—to—wish to make any reparation to my poor husband that might be possible?"

"Heaven knows, I would do anything I could in that way," he replied, earnestly; "if there was anything to be done."

"I will tell you the exact state of the case," she exclaimed, speaking quickly and with every indication of suppressed excitement. "The danger from the pneumonia itself is over. But my husband is sinking from sheer weakness and exhaustion. He is worrying himself, too—you cannot think how much—with the idea that by—by catching a crab and upsetting the boat, he had spoiled his chance of being chosen for the eight. For he—poor guileless boy—has never guessed that you were merely hoaxing him. Now, I think that—that—if you would stoop to a pious fraud, and tell him, with your own lips, that you would have chosen him, and that—that—he must get well in order to row next year, it might—I do think it might—make a difference to his chance of rallying. Will you do this—for my sake as well as his?"

"With all my heart! With all my heart!"

"Then come upstairs," she said.

We entered The Tosher's bedroom. We found him propped up with pillows, gasping for breath. His sallow cheeks were very wan. His eyes were closed. He just opened them to greet us with a feeble smile, and stretched out a thin hand to us on the counterpane, as if in welcome.

Sullock approached, and took his wasted hand tenderly. Then he blurted out:

"I—I—say, Pringle, old man! I—I—am sorry to find you in this state, don't you know. However shall we get on without you at Putney?"

The change that came over The Tosher at these words was simply marvellous. A new brightness came into his heavy, half-closed eyes; an expression of lively joy and gladness flashed across his wan face.

"You—you—would have chosen me, then?" he cried, with an energy that had seemed impossible for so weak a man. "You—you—would—have—chosen—me?"

"Rather!" said Sullock. "And look here, don't you know, you must get well as soon as you can, so as to be in thoroughly good trim for next year!" . . . .

Whether it was the effect of the President's words, or whether the poor beggar was, perhaps, in less hopeless case than the Doctor had thought, I do not know. But from that hour The Tosher began to mend.

And the funniest thing about it was that, from the date of our visit to his bedside, there grew up the queerest sort of friendship between Sullock and The Tosher—so much so that when the little man got about again, and the Boat Race was over and forgotten, the strange spectacle was seen on the River of the President taking out The Tosher and teaching him to row in real earnest. The Tosher never got into the 'Varsity Eight, but he was consoled by rowing bow in his club boat the following year; and Sullock was rewarded by standing godfather to the next little Tosher that made its appearance.

ART NOTES.

THE ROYAL SOCIETY OF BRITISH ARTISTS.

"PRAISE! Praise! Praise!" was Mr. Pinero's impassioned advice to the critics on a certain well-remembered occasion. This is well enough in its way, but even the author of "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray" can scarcely have intended to suggest that eulogy should be bestowed at the expense of the critic's judgment. It is always pleasant to praise when one honestly can, and I am glad to be able to speak favourably of the hundred-and-ninth Exhibition at the Suffolk-street Galleries. That it is admirable as a whole I am unable to assert. But like the already historical egg of the curate in Punch, it is "excellent in parts." There is distinct promise in the work of some of the younger exhibitors, in that of Mr. E. Borough Johnson for example. The chief fault of this artist is that he is still continuing what would seem to be a round of experiments. He does not seem to have yet found out how he can use to the best advantage the talent he so undoubtedly possesses. He is too eclectic in his methods, too diffusive in his aims. He apparently has so far failed to correctly gauge either his power or its limitations. But this being allowed, there is much to commend in his work. The most important picture he exhibits at Suffolk-street is "At Closing Day," in which we see a minster church in the background, and the figure of a mower looming large in the foreground as he homeward plods his weary way across a stretch of greensward. It is not difficult to trace here the influence of Frederick Walker. The picture is reminiscent, too, in a way, of Mr. La Thangue's later work, but it contains convincing proof of Mr. Borough Johnson's individual capacity, and possesses, moreover, inherent charm. "Two Beauties" is an experiment in quite another direction, and not one, I may add, in which Mr. Johnson can be advised to persevere. His two small portraits in water-colour are wholly admirable.

Mr. J. Sanderson Wells is another exhibitor whose work may be studied with interest. And in "The Spring Time now Advances" and "The Herd Boy" Mr. Adam E. Proctor is to be seen at his very best. Mr. Tom Robertson, Mr. Haynes King, Mr. J. W. T. Manuel (with an audaciously clever portrait of Mlle. Lavallière), Mr. Walter Fowler, Mr. Hans Hansen, Mr. W. H. Y. Titcomb, and Mr. G. C. Haité all exhibit pictures which should not be overlooked by visitors to Suffolk-street. From Mr. F. Cayley Robinson there is unfortunately nothing. Perverse as he has been of late in his artistic methods it is a distinct loss to the Exhibition of the Royal Society of British Artists when he has no pictures upon its walls. What may be considered the place of honour on the west wall of the Central Gallery is assigned to Mr. A. D. McCormick's "Children of the Foam." The best part of this somewhat ambitious picture is its design. The nude sea-nymphs have considerable beauty and gracefulness of form, but they are distressingly anæmic. To judge from their appearance it must be chalk and water and not blood that they have in their veins. The portrait exhibited by Mr. Sidney Sime is delightful in colour, but "soul is lacking there."

The Vestibule is devoted to a curious collection of drawings in water-colour and pastels by three R.B.A.s, Messrs. J. W. Manuel, O. Eckhardt, and S. H. Sime. In most of these modernity in its most pronounced type is predominant. Unfortunately, in straining after realism a descent has been made in several of the drawings into mere brutality. Many of the worst features of such artists as Forain and Steinlen have been imitated, without their redeeming gift of style. I can quite understand Sir Wyke Bayliss wishing to keep such exhibits outside. But the drawings are worth looking at, especially several grotesque studies in which Mr. Sime wields the pencil of a sort of Japanese Aubrey Beardsley. There is a special treat in store for visitors to the Gallery of the Royal British Artists on April 30. On the afternoon of that day, at four o'clock, the Poet Laureate is to read extracts from certain of his poems to those who are fortunate enough to be present. I notice that it is not Mr. Austin's intention to include "Jameson's Ride" in his programme.

MUSIC.

THE REVIVED GONDOLIERS.

"THE GONDOLIERS" is welcome enough again at the Savoy. People obviously did not appreciate a drawing-room version of French opéra-bouffe, and, although I believe the "Grand Duchess' strangely enough attracted a good deal of the clerical element, who would have been rather surprised at Schneider's reading of the part of the merry Monarch of Gerolstein, yet, partly owing to Miss Florence St. John's serious illness, its withdrawal was imperative. "The Gondoliers," on the other hand, although by no means the best of the Gilbert and Sullivan series, is a typical Savoy opera. Moreover, it was the last of a long line of laughter-provoking works, for shortly after its production the Savoy triumvirate quarrelled about a carpet, and, although they once more came together again, the spell seemed to have been broken, and "The Gondoliers" was the last great success of the series. The various artists now play their parts in very different fashion from that of some of their predecessors, but, so far at any rate as the men are concerned, the change is certainly not always a disadvantage. The two great successes of the revival are the Gondolier of Mr. Kenningham, who seems to have lost the hardness of voice which at one time was a real defect, and who has vastly improved both as a singer and actor; and Miss Emmie Owen, a young lady who a very few years ago was a dancer at the establishment, and who now promises to become the leading vocalist of the company. Her voice, it is well known, was discovered by Sir Arthur Sullivan by accident, and although it still needs cultivation—and Miss Owen would certainly be wise to take some lessons in voice production—yet she sings with great natural taste and feeling, while she acts the part of Tessa more brightly and vivaciously than any of her predecessors. Mr. Passmore plays the Grand Inquisitor in the style of the low comedian, while Mr. Lytton, although by far a better vocalist than Mr. Barrington, is rather too refined for the character of the Gondolier Giuseppe. Nevertheless, and despite vocal defects in one or two of the lady performers, the revival was a genuine success, partly, no doubt, owing to its excellent stage management and to the extremely pretty and even sumptuous manner in which Mr. D'Oyly Carte has placed the opera upon the stage. Miss Perry unfortunately is not a member of the cast, and I am told also she has no part in the new opera by Pinero and Carr, to which Sir Arthur Sullivan is now setting the music. Indeed, of the old Savoy company, Miss Brandram is now the only survivor.

By the way, two or three changes in the dialogue of "The Gondoliers" can hardly be considered improvements, particularly the reference to pink pills:—

> I vow my complexion
> Derives its perfection
> From somebody's pink pills—
> Which it doesn't.

Again, Don Alhambra's rebuke of the youthful brides, who very naturally wish to accompany their husbands to the mythical Barataria, is by no means improved by the line:—"No, we must keep the place respectable." In the original, Mr. Denny used to say, "Stop, that won't do at all, we cannot have any ladies. What will her Majesty say?" which, at any rate, is in better taste. It is quite possible that these alterations may be mere gags of "irresponsible comedians," but as Mr. Gilbert was present and made no protest, it is supposed that he approved.

I learn from Mr. Robert Newman that after all he has decided to announce another series of Saturday Concerts next autumn. The Queen's Hall manager is a plucky and enterprising speculator, and it is hoped that next year he will have even better luck than this. Meanwhile his Sunday afternoon concerts, which are perhaps more successful than any symphony performances given at Queen's Hall, will be continued until further notice. The success of the Sunday concerts of course is mainly due to the cheap prices which prevail. When so excellent an orchestra as that under Mr. Wood, plays some of the finest works of the repertory at prices ranged from sixpence to three shillings, we seem to have dropped down to something very like a Continental concert scale.

I understand that Mr. Sidebotham, the member for Hyde and the only M.P. who has secured the degree of Mus. Bac. by examination, will take charge of a Bill to put an end to the sale of foreign in absentiâ musical degrees in this country. While Mr. Sidebotham is about it, he might as well include a simple provision forbidding the sale of bogus diplomas and degrees of home manufacture, mostly distributed by limited liability companies and other trading institutions, which have frequently been exposed in TRUTH. Meanwhile, Mr. Sidebotham is being backed up by the Union of Graduates in Music, an association which now includes nearly all the genuine musical graduates in this country. This body proposes to form itself into a joint-stock company, to be registered by the Board of Trade as "not for profit;" and at a general meeting held a few days ago, with Sir John Stainer in the chair, it was resolved that application should be made to the Board of Trade with this object.

A gentleman of Leek, Staffordshire, sends me the latest of Mr. Lansdowne Cottell's circulars, which now seem again to be in process of distribution to various people of whom Mr. Cottell himself cannot have the slightest knowledge. This circular contains the usual "Special Private Notice" that a ten-guinea season ticket will be issued to various "ladies and gentlemen to whom this form may be addressed" at "one guinea inclusive, nominally to defray the cost of postage and stall-keepers' fees;" or, in the alternative, you may have a twenty-five-guinea life-ticket for ten guineas. Either sum, I need hardly say, would be completely thrown away. The new circular, which is headed with the title of the "London Conservatoire of Music, Hyde Park," contains the astonishing assertion that "since its foundation many hundreds have received free tuition, resident scholarships, and introductions for engagements suitable to capacity." Last year I devoted considerable space to this precious "Conservatoire" and to Mr. Cottell, exposing the whole modus operandi and the methods by which the speculation was worked. I had a pretty considerable correspondence and interviews with numbers of Mr. Cottell's former students and others, but I am bound to say that never, during the whole of my investigations did I come across a single one "of the many hundreds who have received free tuition, resident scholarships, &c." Indeed, in every case "free" tuition meant payment of money—a species of gratuitous instruction peculiar to Mr. Cottell.

Last week there was not a single orchestral concert given in London proper, a relief appreciated by a good many people. At the Crystal Palace, however, there was a Beethoven programme on Saturday, but despite the co-operation of Lady Halle, who played the violin concerto and the Romance in F, the audience was not a large one.

Chamber Concerts have, however, been numerous, as is ordinarily the case towards the end of Lent. The Joachim Quartet Party on Saturday at St. James' Hall gave a magnificent performance of the great posthumous Quartet in A Minor, the slow movement of which is expressly stated by Beethoven to be a Pæan of Thanksgiving for his own recovery from a long illness. Messrs. Greene and Borwick have given their last concert, the popular Irish baritone winning special success with a group of national melodies. On the same evening Mme. Frickenhaus gave an interesting recital of music by several composers whose names are unfamiliar here, particularly the American musician Mr. MacDowell, M. Rée, and Mr. Dal Young. The last of the Ballad Concerts took place on Saturday, and the Popular Concerts will come to an end next Monday with a Brahms programme. The Bohemian String Quartet likewise gave their last concert on Tuesday, and the present week will see the final concerts this season of the Bach Choir and of Mr. and Mrs. Henschel.

It is now officially stated that M. Paderewski will not give a public recital in London this season except at the opening of the new Erard Hall next Saturday. M. Paderewski has been touring in the provinces, but he doubtless shares the opinion which has been expressed in some quarters that pianoforte recitals in London are at present more or less under a cloud. His great rival, Herr Rosenthal, however, does not think so, and he has already fixed several dates during the coming season. Indeed, at his first recital on Monday, when he played Schumann's "Carnaval" and Chopin's Funeral March sonata, Rosenthal drew an audience which crowded St. James's Hall.

Erard Hall will be a valuable addition to the number of small concert rooms for recitals and similar purposes. The exits have been greatly improved, a fresh staircase at the rear of the hall has been added, and the place has been licensed as safe against fire by the County Council authorities. Hitherto, at this hall concerts have been given only by "invitation," it being an axiom of English law that every man is entitled to be roasted alive or to be killed in the endeavour to escape from a burning building on the sole condition that he does not pay for his privilege. The payment of money renders death of this sort very wrong, and even illegal. Happily, the Erard Hall is now safe, and the "invitation" concerts have been abandoned in favour of ordinary recitals, money for which can be taken at the doors.

The Greatest of all Pianofortes.—The Steinway Pianofortes New York and London.

LETTERS ON BOOKS.

My dear Mr. Wyndham,—"The Disaster" (1) seems to me a more truly realistic description of the catastrophe of 1870 than Zola's "La Débacle," with which, however, it does not specially compete in either subject or treatment. While Zola looks from the point of view of a private soldier upon the disorganisation of the army of Chalons and upon the catastrophe of Sedan, the brother's Margueritte from an officer's standpoint describe the struggles of the Army of the Rhine and the colossal treachery of Bazaine. It is a most opportune book, now that journalistic wreckers at both sides of the Atlantic are trying to drag their countries into war, in order to make a few additional pence without the cost to themselves of a single tear or drop of blood. I cannot resist quoting for you Burke's denunciation of men who, safe themselves upon the sea-wall, would raise the sluices and drench continents in blood and tears:—

> A conscientious man would be cautious how he dealt in blood. He would feel some apprehension at being called to a tremendous account for engaging in so deep a play without a knowledge of the game. It is no excuse for presumptuous ignorance that it is directed by ignorant passion. I cannot conceive any existence under heaven that is more truly odious and disgusting than an impotent, helpless creature, without civil wisdom or military skill, bloated with pride and arrogance, calling for battles which he is not to fight, and contending for a violent dominion which he can never exercise.

Apropos of the Franco-German War, in a work which is a perfect galaxy of sparkling sayings, stories, &c.—Sir Mountstuart Grant Duff's "Notes from a Diary" (2)—I have just come upon the following characteristically strong and patient piece of German policy:—

> Goeben, who was so pre-eminently the tactician, as Moltke was the strategist of the German army, could have annihilated Faidherbe's forces if he had allowed that General to get between him and Paris. As, however, this apparent and momentary triumph of the French might have unfavourably affected the operations of the siege of that city, the German tactician resisted the overpowering temptation.

Here, too, is a characteristic story of Bismarck, which belongs to the same momentous period:—

> In an album where Guizot had written, "Ma longue vie m'a appris à beaucoup pardonner et à rien oublier," and Thiers had written, "Un peu d'oubli ne nuit pas à la sincérité du pardon," Bismarck subscribed, "Quant à moi, j'ai appris à tout oublier et à me faire pardonner beaucoup."

By the way, the diarist omits the most important part of the answer to the riddle, "What wind should a hungry sailor whistle for!" The answer in full runs thus, "A wind that first blows fowl, then chops, then comes in little puffs, and then brings you safe to port." While on the childish subject of puns, I must quote for you the happy answer Sir Mountstuart Grant Duff heard a little girl make, on being remonstrated with for extravagance—"for burning the candle at both ends." "Isn't that the way to make both ends meet?" Not the least interesting portion of a most interesting book, "Mr. Gregory's Letter-

(1) "The Disaster." By Paul and Victor Margueritte. Translated with an Introductory Memoir by Frederick Lees. (London: Chatto & Windus. Price 3s. 6d.)

(2) "Notes from a Dairy," 1873-1881. By the Right Hon. Sir Mounstuart E. Grant Duff, G.C.S.I. Two vols. (London: John Murray. Price 18s.)

(3) "Mr. Gregory's Letter-Box," 1813-1890. Edited by Lady Gregory. With a Portrait. (London: Smith, Elder, & Co.)

(4) "Three Years in Savage Africa." By Lionel Decle. With an Introduction by H. M. Stanley, M.P. With 100 Illustrations, and Five Maps. (London: Methuen & Co. Price 21s.)

(5) "Side-Lights on Siberia." Some Account of the Great Siberian Railroad, the Prisons, and the Exile System. By James Young Simpson, M.A., B.Sc. With Numerous Illustrations. (London: Blackwood & Sons. Price 16s.)

Box" (3), is its description of the agitation in Ireland upon the news of Napoleon's escape from Elba. An Emperor in one of Goldsmith's parables undertook to destroy his enemies utterly, but upon defeating them in a great battle, he pardoned all and promoted some. "Is this destroying your enemies utterly?" indignantly asked his Prime Minister. "Certainly; they are enemies no longer; I have made them my friends." In reading "Mr. Gregory's Letter-box," you cannot help wondering why this simple expedient for the quieting down of that "still-vexed" country never once seems to have occurred spontaneously to England. Apropos of Napoleon, here is one of Mr. Gregory's good stories. Simultaneously with the landing of George IV. in Ireland came the news of Napoleon's death at St. Helena. "Sire, your enemy is dead," were almost the first words that greeted his Majesty. "When did she die?" was his eager answer. Nor was his Majesty disappointed, since, as a matter of fact, his consort also was dead. The Napoleon of Africa, Mr. Rhodes, has due homage paid him in one of the most interesting books of travel I have read for some time, Mr. Lionel Decle's "Three years in Savage Africa" (4). The more high-handed Mr. Rhodes' methods and measures, the more highly does Mr. Decle approve of them. Mr. Decle himself supplies me with the kind of motto I should apply to the policy he approves of so enthusiastically. "Dr. Jameson," he says, "by the exercise of great tact and the exhibition of a Maxim gun, persuaded them to turn back." It is the kind of "moral suasion" which Artemus Ward suggested for his kangaroo. Another book of great political and other interest, which you would certainly enjoy, is Mr. James Young Simpson's "Side Lights on Siberia" (5). I have space only to quote for you his summing-up of the political exile question:—

1. The present condition of the political exile is not as bad as many would have us believe. This conception is largely based on their own evidence.

2. The past of the Terrorist Party is not looked back on by its members with the pride that one would have imagined and expected from them. Many are willing and frank enough to speak of the foolishness of their younger days, and there is a marked eagerness to disclaim all connection with dynamite.

3. It is an undoubted fact that many of them have made a better thing of the remnants of their lives in Siberia than they ever dreamt of making of the whole at home.

Believe me, my dear Mr. Wyndham, ever yours very sincerely,

DESMOND B. O'BRIEN.

GIRLS' GOSSIP.

DEAREST AMY,—Do you like blizzards? Or are you like me, pretty miserable when they are about? I must say that, if I must have blizzards, I prefer them in town. I know what they are in the country, blocking the dwellers in remote houses away from all communication with towns and always occurring at most inconvenient seasons, just when one happens to be "out of" supplies of some sort. The absence of flour happened to be our little catastrophe on one occasion of the kind, I remember, and I solemnly ask you, is there anything, after water, that is more likely to be missed?

In London there are always resources, and if it were not for one's grief over the poor horses that are to be seen struggling and falling, a blizzard might be a bearable evil. But then, one thinks of the poor half-clad and ill-fed men, women, and children to whom a snowstorm means a terrible aggravation of their everyday ills. And the poor dear invalids, too! Oh, yes! It is delightful to see it go away.

I saw by the Daily News that two sensible men had set the excellent example of wearing fur capes while the storm was on. They were seen in Piccadilly, and appeared to be of the world that amuses itself. A cape is much more sensible that a fur or fur-lined coat, a heavy, clogging, and unhygienic garment of which no really rational person could approve. Let me enumerate its faults. 1. The fur, not being porous, prevents ventilation, which is necessary for the functions of the skin. With the cape, there is plenty of ventilation owing to its shortness. 2. The coat tends to overheat the wearer; so much so, that when he has been battling with the wind he gets so excessively hot that he, manlike, regardless of consequences, flings it off and exposes himself to the risk of a chill. 3. The edges of the long coat become damp and convey that dampness to the hem of the trousers and thence to the socks. A chill is the probable result, and what a chill may mean in these decadent times how is it at all possible to foretell? 4. When the time comes to leave off the fur-lined coat and adopt an ordinary one, the wearer runs great risk of catching cold. I think I have summed up all the points of my indictment. They make a rather formidable array, I flatter myself.

Bee came home from a concert one night last week shivering and white, and the dread word "chill" immediately whispered itself to me. We got her to bed with a roaring fire in her room, piled nine or ten blankets over her, tucked in two hot water bottles between the sheets, and gave her a tumbler full of hot cherry brandy and water. In an hour she was all right, but if it had been a man, nothing would have persuaded him to do the sensible thing and treat his chill in time, and most likely a serious illness would have been the result. And are they not wretched creatures when they are ill? They will not keep their room, but go mooning about the house, low-spirited themselves, and productive of the deepest depression in others, especially as one can never feel quite sure as to whether their dear little tempers are all right or not. However, when things come to a crisis, and they submit themselves to illness, there is a wonderful quiet patience about them, a fortitude in enduring discomfort that makes one long to see them all right again. But in convalescence their rashness makes them very trying again. Wait till your husband has an illness (though I hope he never may!) and you will find out what it is to "struggle wiv' 'em," as Louie Freear says.

It seems hard, somehow, that cooks and others whose business in the world is to deal with food should ever be in need of it. Of course, it is hard for any one to be hungry, but when quantities of eatables pass through the hands daily, the phantom, Want, must seem a long way off, and when he does come close, his appearance must be more than ordinarily fearsome. But cooks and caterers fall on evil days just like other men, and the Cookery and Food Association has a Benevolent Fund attached to it. There is to be an "At Home" and Musical Soirée at the St. James's Hall on Tuesday evening, April 9, in aid of it. Tickets are to be 3s. 6d. each, and will cover the price of refreshments. The Entertainment Committee who have organised this "At Home" is chiefly composed of well-known London caterers. The concert is under the direction of Mr. A. B. Bailey.

The Empress Club has developed so largely that the management have taken No. 35, Dover-street, next door to the Bath Club, and is going to pull it down and rebuild it to suit the exigencies of the club. This was once the town house of the Marquis of Abergavenny, and afterwards of Mr. Robert Smith, the banker. The Empress Club has secured the freehold. It is good to see a woman's club going ahead in so satisfactory a manner, for men have always said that we are unclubbable creatures. This must go some way towards convincing them that we have within us the necessary characteristics, and that they only lay dormant for lack of opportunities to display themselves. The Empress is such a thoroughly comfortable club that it encourages all the pleasantest qualities of human nature to come and bask on the surface.

Let me whisper something to you. Judging from what

New Spring Fashions.—Messrs. Redfern have now on view in their Showrooms a unique display of Toilettes, illustrative of the latest London and Paris fashions, and to which they invite an inspection.—26, Conduit-street, London, W.

Madame E. Yorke, Ltd., 12, Clifford-street, one door from Bond-street, Court Milliners. Special French and English novelties. Smart Spring Hats.

I hear of men's clubs, I am of the opinion that women are much more amiable in their own clubland than men are in theirs. Richard is always telling us of the selfishness of Old So-and-so or the bumptiousness of Young Such-and such. Women seem to prefer to show the brighter side of their dispositions to each other. There may be a variety of vanity and even hypocrisy in this, but without such vanity and such hypocrisy how could the world go on in civilised society?

I have found out why there is such strong opposition to the doffing of the matinée hat. It is not the hat itself that is so closely clung to, but the veil; the deliciously becoming veil. If Mr. George Alexander, the doughty champion of the matinéer, would only set the millinery wits of the world to work to invent a mode whereby the veil could be retained without the hat, he would find his task of clearing away the latter quite an easy one. What a competition that would be, especially if the enterprising manager of the St. James's Theatre were to offer to give the winner a copy of every photograph he has ever had taken of himself.

We have a dear friend to whom has lately arrived a sweet little son. The visiting card of this very young gentleman came by post the other morning in company with his mother's "Thanks for kind inquiries." You never saw such a darling little card. It is an inch deep by an inch and a quarter long, and is tied to the larger card by an infinitesimal bow of white ribbon. The Christian name of the proprietor, "Rolf," is the inscription. By this means he may be said to have made his début in society. It is a pretty fashion in cards.

"Hail, gentle Spring!" quoth the poet, and spring, much too obedient, did hail to any extent, and snowed withal, and blew and rained, answering the behest of the poet with a liberality of full measure, pressed down and running over, that was highly inconvenient to many. And most especially on Boat Race-day.

We had such a delightful invitation to see the finish from a lawn at Mortlake and afterwards have tea. We received that invitation on a lovely morning and accepted it with joy, immediately dressing up the occasion with all that sunshine and balmy airs and the best of good company could do for it. After looking forward to it all the week, we had for sole consolation the opportunity of comparing our mental picture with the reality on Saturday morning. Instead of the sunshine that was to deck that emerald lawn, there were sulien grey skies, a moaning, miserable wind, and showers of the coldest and dreariest sort of rain. Even Longfellow could not have called it beautiful! We did not go, of course, but stayed at home and contemplated our contrast. Let me paraphrase the poet, and say that "Sorrow's crown of sorrow is in dreaming better things." We are so often the victims of our own imaginations.

We went to the Lyceum to see the most fascinating of Portias and the Shylockiest of all Shylocks, and really, dear, it was quite beautiful to turn in to Venice, out of the cold and wintry Strand. The weather throughout this play is of the most charming description. The exquisite blue moonlight, the gliding gondolas, the merry masqueraders, and the dainty story, delight the eyes as well as the imagination. And what a dream of colour is the Court of Justice, with its blue and brown walls, dulled to a harmony that looks as if the hand of Time alone could have evolved it. Portia's scarlet robe and cap could have no more telling background. And what a lovely heritage was Belmont! Small wonder that suitors came from all parts of the world to try their fortune with the lovely lady. Lucky Bassanio! I want to know what were the dancing little whitenesses in Portia's coiffure. Pearls or white daisy buds? Never was there a more becoming adjunct to nut-brown locks than the turquoise-sewn net of gold that held up Nerissa's "back hair." With a band of it round the head it was quite utterly too-too. Forgive me for using this now antiquated expression.

Christabel writes from Paris:—

I must describe for you some very pretty gowns I saw at Vignon's, made for a Russian Princess, who has a complete set of costumes sent over every season; this was the spring outfit, and in about two months I hope to see the summer order.

A visiting dress of pale green glacé silk, shot with mauve, was made with a plain skirt, close-fitting at the top, and flowing out gracefully at the foot. From the waistband descended at intervals some embroidery in white silk cord and gold, finishing in points. At the head of each was a little straw-coloured lace, puffed over the same shade of satin, to correspond with the bodice, where the same arrangement simulated a vest under the mauve and green silk, which opened in the front, showing the lace and satin, with revers and neckband embroidered like the points on the skirt. The sleeves were slashed at the top to show the yellow satin and lace, and were edged with embroidery. The under-petticoat was even more elaborate than the gown; it was mauve satin, brocaded with white, made with a flounce quite half a yard deep. On this flounce, at intervals, were stripes of real, yellowish lace insertion, laid on vertically. This rested on a narrow, pleated flounce of mauve silk, covered with a fall of the same rich lace.

Another dress was pale maize or apricot coloured gauze with a small indefinite pattern of black running through; this was made up over maize silk. The gauze skirt had a deep graduated flounce headed with two bands of fine white guipure insertion, with a row of very narrow black velvet above and below each band. The high bodice had alternate puffings of the gauze and bands of guipure edged with black velvet in a vandyke or V form, with tiny bows of black velvet down the front where the vandykes met; a band of guipure and velvet formed the cuffs of the long sleeves, which were gauze over silk.

The petticoat was lovely, the same rich maize tone in satin, with deep flounce of silk muslin or gauze the same shade, on which were placed two or three rows of black lace insertion going round, the edge finished with a plissé of the silk, and black lace over it.

A dark blue cloth costume in the tailor-made style struck me as very effective. The skirt was in longitudinal pleats, very small at the top and gradually widening to give width at the base. The perfect regularity of the pleats made it quite a triumph of skill. The close fitting bodice terminated with a small full basque all round, and there was a wide pleat down the back, confined by the belt, and in front were two pleats that fell free over the skirt, the belt passing under them. On these pleats were about a dozen buttons, as large as a shilling, of most expensive and rare enamel; the neckband, waistband, revers, and cuffs were embroidered in white and gold on silver cloth shot with gold, and the effect was charming.

An evening dress of black fleur de velours had a deep corselet of black guipure and jet embroidery over straw-coloured Liberty muslin. The otherwise plain skirt had a tablier of the same embroidery over straw colour as that on the corselet, but, instead of finishing at the waist in front, it made a kind of contour round the hips. The short sleeves were also straw muslin, with jetted lace over.

A very cool-looking gown was a pale-green foulard flowered with pink, the bodice made full and ornamented with little tabs of lace embroidered on cream-coloured lawn. The waistband was wide green velvet, starting in front from just below the bust, going under the arms, and coming round again to the front. The sleeves had tabs of lace on the top like the bodice. The skirt was gathered, and had a deep flounce at the back, narrowing towards the front. According to what I can learn, these deep-flounce additions will only be used for muslins and foulards and their materials; rich silks and satins will not be cut up in such a wasteful way.

Would you like to know how to make Passover bread? It is quite simple:—

Dissolve 2 oz. of butter in half a pint of hot water, add a pinch of salt, and mix it with the best Hungarian flour into a smooth,

Invalid Corsets.—Ladies in search of that gentle support, so essential at this period, should have a Surgical Corset Belt shaped by the experts, Mesdames Sykes, Josephine, & Co., The Celebrated Anatomical Corsetières, 280, Regent-street, Oxford-circus, London, W

The luxury of a bath is incomplete without the addition of Scrubb's Cloudy Fluid Ammonia, which refreshes and invigorates. Sold everywhere, but avoid injurious imitations.

elastic paste. Beat it slightly with a rolling-pin, roll it out thin, prick it thoroughly with a fork, cut it into rounds, and bake them rather quickly. They should blister and get slightly browned in patches.

Poached eggs "au gratin" is an excellent luncheon dish, one much appreciated by gentlemen :—

Poach 5 or 6 eggs very slightly, place them in a buttered fire-proof dish, pour brown sauce over, to which add a pinch of cayenne pepper, a dessert-spoonful of chopped parsley and a table-spoonful of grated cheese. Sprinkle the top thickly with grated cheese, put tiny pieces of butter here and there, and bake them a nice colour in a sharp oven.

Try this delicious sweet dish before chestnuts are out of season :—

Make some meringue mixture into rings, of one size, dry these thoroughly in the oven and allow to cool. Remove the outer husks from 20 large chestnuts, and boil them in sweetened milk and water until they will easily mash, then strain and place them aside to cool. Put a dessert-spoonful of maraschino and a table-spoonful of castor sugar to half a pint of cream and whip it until very stiff. Now place the meringue rings on the top of each other with cream between, put the remainder of the cream in the centre of the meringue, and rub the chestnuts through a wire sieve over all. Sprinkle the top with chopped pistachios, and put a compôte of oranges, flavoured with maraschino round the base.

This is a lovely gingerbread pudding, and particularly suitable for lunch on a cold day :—

Beat 6 oz. of butter and 6 oz. of fine sugar together until creamy, beat in 6 oz. of golden syrup and 3 eggs separately, mix in 6 oz. of bread crumbs, a level teaspoonful of ground ginger, the same quantity of mixed spice, and half a teaspoonful of baking-powder. Put the mixture into a greased mould and steam three hours.

Have you tried the Italian way of serving macaroni? It may be served either for lunch or dinner :—

Boil 8 oz. of Naples macaroni in salted water until it is done, but not soft, strain it, and have ready a quart of thick tomato purée, to which a table spoonful of Bovril or Liebig has been added. Season the tomato with cayenne pepper, and put a portion in a stewpan; add a layer of the macaroni and a good sprinkling of grated parmesan cheese, add the remainder of the macaroni, cheese, and tomato, toss all up on the fire, and make it quite hot. Turn the whole mass into a soup tureen and serve it on soup plates.

Ever, dear, your loving cousin, MADGE.

CIGARES DE JOY
(JOY'S CIGARETTES)
Immediately Relieve
ASTHMA, WHEEZING, CHRONIC BRONCHITIS
Chemists & Stores, box of 35, 2/6, or Post Free from WILCOX & Co., 83, Mortimer Street, London, W.
TRIAL SAMPLE FREE.

WHY DRINK INFERIOR TEA?
UNITED KINGDOM TEA COMPANY'S TEAS
DIRECT FROM THE GROWERS.
1/-, 1/3, 1/4, 1/6, 1/7, 1/9, & 2/- per lb., DELIVERED CARRIAGE PAID.
Write for Samples, sent free, taste them, and judge for yourselves. Amazing superiority in Quality! Great Economy in prices.
Offices: 21, MINCING LANE, LONDON, E.C.

ACCIDENT ASSURANCE.
ACCIDENT AND DISEASE ASSURANCE.
EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY ASSURANCE.
FIDELITY GUARANTEE.
RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE CO.,
Established 1849. Claims Paid £3,850,000.
64, CORNHILL, LONDON. A. VIAN, Secretary.

GIVEN AWAY with every 6d. & 1/- Bottle of John Bond's Crystal Palace Marking Ink
Awarded. Forty-four Gold Medals, Diplomas and Royal Appointments.
GOLD MEDAL
A voucher entitling purchasers to their Name or Monogram Rubber Stamp for marking linen or stamping paper. The name is elegantly mounted on a Nickel Silver Pen and Pencil Case, with enlarged 1s. size.
Works: 75, Southgate-road, London, N.

HAMPTON & SONS
ANTIQUE GALLERIES, PALL MALL EAST.
Old Furniture. Old Porcelain.
Old Tapestries. Old Sheffield Plate.
Old Embroideries. Old Silver.
HAMPTON & SONS, Limited.

SERVANTS!
SERVANTS!!
SERVANTS!!!
FOR
THOROUGHLY RELIABLE SERVANTS
With personal characters for London or country, also foreign servants. Apply to the BELGRAVE LADIES' AGENCY,
SOLE OFFICES,
83, EBURY-STREET.
Also job servants with references taken up before recommendation can be had on the shortest notice.

NATIONAL PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.
For Mutual Life Assurance.
Claims Paid exceed...£10,000,000
Invested Funds exceed £5,000,000
Profits divided..... £5,400,000
ENDOWMENT-ASSURANCE POLICIES ARE ISSUED COMBINING LIFE ASSURANCE AT MINIMUM COST, WITH PROVISION FOR OLD AGE. The practical effect of these Policies in the National Provident Institution is that the Member's life is assured until he reaches the age agreed upon, and on his reaching that age the whole of the Premiums paid are returned to him, and a considerable sum in addition, representing a by no means insignifiant rate of interest on his payments.
48, Gracechurch Street, London, E.C. Applications for Agencies invited.

A Feature of the Metropolis. SPIERS & POND's
CRITERION RESTAURANT, Piccadilly Circus, London, W.
EAST ROOM. Finest Cuisine, unsurpassed by the most renowned Parisian Restaurants. Luncheons, Dinners, and Suppers, à la carte and prix fixe. Viennese Band.
GRAND HALL. Musical Dinner 3/6 per head. Accompanied by the Imperial Austrian Band.
WEST ROOM. Academy Luncheon 2/6 Diner Parisien 5/-, during both of which the renowned Mandolin Quartetteperforms.
BUFFET & GRILL ROOM. Quick service à la carte and moderate prices. Joints in each room fresh from the Spit every half-hour.
AMERICAN BAR. Service of special American Dishes, Grills, &c.
Splendid Suites of Rooms for Military and other Dinners.

The Influenza Epidemic.

TO PREVENT

an attack of Influenza, now prevailing, use

HALL'S WINE (Tonic).

TO CUT SHORT

Influenza, use

HALL'S WINE

(a wineglassful three times daily, as prescribed by the medical profession).

TO CURE

the sleeplessness following Influenza, use

HALL'S WINE

(one wineglassful or more to be taken in half a tumbler of warm water at bedtime).

TO-DAY MEDICAL MEN IN ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD PRESCRIBE HALL'S WINE.

Write for a sample bottle and booklet, post-free, 6 stamps. Of licensed grocers, chemists, or wine merchants, 2s. and 3s. 6d. per bottle; or post-free from

STEPHEN SMITH & CO. Ltd. Bow, London, E.

FOR INFANTS AND INVALIDS

MELLIN'S FOOD

When prepared is similar to Breast Milk.

SAMPLES POST FREE FROM

MELLIN'S FOOD WORKS, PECKHAM, S.E.

To

LADY CYCLISTS.

A

"PIRLE" COSTUME

Always Looks Fresh.

AS IT IS

unharmed by dirt or rain,
it does not mark or shrink,
and when dried and brushed
LOOKS AS GOOD AS NEW.

FROM LEADING DRAPERS.
Or particulars from—
E. RIPLEY & SON,
LONDON OFFICE:
100c, QUEEN VICTORIA STREET.

INDISPENSABLE
For Outdoor Wear.

BENSON'S 'SPECIAL' MAKE 'LADY'S' KEYLESS LEVER

Silver Cases, £5 — 18-ct. Gold Cases, £10

Three-quarter Plate LEVER Movement, Jewelled throughout, Keyless action, with Seconds Dial. In Hunting, Half-Hunting, or Crystal Glass Cases, Monogram free

18-ct. Gold, £10. Silver, £5.
Sent Free and Safe at my risk to all parts.
Selections of Watches and Jewellery sent on approval.

Illustrated Book of Watches, Engagement Rings, Brooches, Bracelets, &c., post-free.

J. W. BENSON,
Steam Factory, LTD.
62 & 64, LUDGATE HILL,
28, Royal Exchange, E.C., and
25, Old Bond Street, LONDON, W.

MADE BY POPE
Manufacturing Co
HARTFORD,
CONN., U.S.A.

Illustrated Catalogues, showing both Chain and Chainless Models, free from European Representatives:

MARKT & CO.
25 and 26, SHOE LANE, E.C. West End Depôt: 21, BAKER STREET, W.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS

ALAN ST. AUBYN'S New Novel FORTUNE'S GATE (by the Author of "A Fellow of Trinity"), is Now Ready. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

FOR STEVENSON LOVERS. On April 5. Fcap. 4to, cloth gilt, 6s.

A LOWDEN SABBATH MORN.

By R. LOUIS STEVENSON. With 27 full-page Illustrations by A. S. Boyd.

THROUGH THE GOLD-FIELDS OF ALASKA TO BERING STRAITS.

By HARRY DE WINDT. With Map and 33 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, cloth, 16s.

"A book of fascinating interest. . . . written in a simple, vigorous, manly way. . . . at once fascinating as a story of thrilling adventure, and valuable for its accumulated information."—Birmingham Post.

LIFE OF NAPOLEON III.

By ARCHIBALD FORBES. With 37 Illustrations. Second Edition Demy 8vo, cloth, 12s.

"To say that there is not a dull page in the book, which is likewise full of good portraits, would be giving the author less than his due. It is in every sense a most graphic chronicle of stirring episodes."—Weekly Sun.

RECORDS OF OLD TIMES.

Historical, Social Political, Sporting, and Agricultural. By J. K. FOWLER. Demy 8vo, cloth, with 9 Illustrations, 10s. 6d.

"Mr. Fowler has written a book which is delightful from the beginning to the end. . . . There is not only plenty of amusement in the book, but several chapters which are really interesting, and carry you along with a breezy sense of pleasure."—St. James's Gazette.

PARIS.

By E. ZOLA. Translated by E. A. VIZETELLY. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

"In 'Paris' M. Zola is altogether at his best. . . . never has he been more vivid, more graphic, more impressive, more absorbing."—Globe.

Also by E. ZOLA.—Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

ROME.	THE DREAM.	FAT AND THIN.
LOURDES.	DR. PASCAL.	HIS EXCELLENCY.
THE DOWNFALL.	MONEY.	THE DRAM-SHOP.

THE DISASTER.

By P. and V. MARGUERITTE. Translated by F. LEES. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

"This absorbing work. . . . Not less powerful than M. Zola's 'La Débâcle.'"—Morning Post.

NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

A WOMAN WORTH WINNING.

By G. MANVILLE FENN.

COLONEL THORNDYKE'S SECRET.

By G. A. HENTY.

"Once begun, it is not easy to withstand Mr. Henty's story until the end is reached."—Academy.

WAS SHE JUSTIFIED?

By FRANK BARRETT, Author of "Folly Morrison," &c.

"As a story of strong human interest and as a study of character, the latest novel will hold rank with any that has gone before—and this is saying a great deal."—Scotsman.

MISS BALMAINE'S PAST.

By B. M. CROKER, Author of "Beyond the Pale," &c.

"A very enchanting story. . . . Written with vivacity, all the characters developed most clearly, . . . with never a dull page, . . . 'Miss Balmaine's Past' is a very delightful novel."—Vanity Fair.

A WOMAN TEMPTED HIM.

By WILLIAM WESTALL, Author of "With the Red Eagle," &c.

"There is much that is good in 'A Woman Tempted Him.' . . . The hunting scenes in England, the tobogganing and skating at the Alpine health-resort, are described with great spirit and verve."—Guardian.

NEW THREE-AND-SIXPENNY NOVELS.

SETH'S BROTHER'S WIFE.

By HAROLD FREDERIC.

"Remarkable for freshness, vigour, and truth. . . . We know of no book, whether history or romance, which brings the reader so directly into contact with the reality of American life."—Manchester Guardian.

THE LAWTON GIRL.

By HAROLD FREDERIC. With Frontispiece by F. Barnard.

"One of the best, most pathetic, and, in the highest sense, most humorous books which have come even from America within the last few years."—Academy.

TALES OF TRAIL AND TOWN.

By BRET HARTE. With a Frontispiece by Jacomb-Hood.

"Quite in Bret Harte's most engaging form."—Daily Mail.

TRUE BLUE;

or, "The Lass that Loved a Sailor." By HERBERT RUSSELL.

"A remarkably spirited narrative."—Echo.

THE SECRET OF WYVERN TOWERS.

By T. W. SPEIGHT [April 5.

NEW TWO-SHILLING NOVELS.

IS HE THE MAN? By W. CLARK RUSSELL.

THE CHRONICLES OF MICHAEL DANEVITCH. By DICK DONOVAN.

UNDER SEALED ORDERS. By GRANT ALLEN.

ROGUES AND VAGABONDS. By G. R. SIMS.

MADAME SANS-GÊNE. By E. LEPELLETIER.

THE REVOLT OF MAN. By Sir WALTER BESANT. [April 5.

TAKEN FROM THE ENEMY. By HENRY NEWBOLT, Author of "Admirals All." A New Edition. Fcap. 8vo, leatherette, 1s. [April 5.

"A capital little sketch."—Academy.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

MR. WM. HEINEMANN'S New Books.

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE:

A CRITICAL STUDY.
By GEORGE BRANDES.

2 vols., Roxburghe gilt top or buckram uncut, demy 8vo, 24s net.

The Academy.—"An admirable and exhaustive survey of its subject. A valuable contribution to Shakespearian literature."

THE LIFE OF JUDGE JEFFREYS.

By H. B. IRVING.

With Three Portraits and a Facsimile. 1 vol. 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.

The Daily Telegraph.—"The style is lively, the descriptive power considerable. From the first page to the last the book is undeniably interesting, and in places absorbing."

THE INDIAN FRONTIER WAR.

Being an Account of the Mohmund and Tirah Expeditions, 1897.
By LIONEL JAMES.

With Illustrations from Drawings by the Author, and Photographs and Maps and Plans, 1 vol. 8vo, 7s. 6d.

The Daily Telegraph.—"This record for the first time gives something like an adequate picture of the dogged resolve of the British leaders, and the splendid services of the Ghoorkas, Sikhs, Highlanders, and other arms."

SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

ROBERT HICHENS'S NEW NOVEL.

THE LONDONERS: AN ABSURDITY

By ROBERT HICHENS, Author of "The Green Carnation."

DREAMERS OF THE GHETTO.

By I. ZANGWILL.

Mr. W. E. HENLEY in the Outlook.—"A brave, eloquent, absorbing, and, on the whole, persuasive book, whose author tells you as much, perhaps, as has before been told in modern literature. Here, I take it, is that rarest of rare things, a BOOK. As I have said, I do not wholly believe in it. But it is a book; it goes far to explain the Jew."

THE WAR OF THE WORLDS.

By H. G. WELLS, Author of "The Time Machine."

The Spectator.—"As a writer of scientific romance, Mr. Wells has never been surpassed. Even when he is most awful there is always something human about his characters. Both Poe and Mr. Wells are followers of Swift, but Mr. Wells keeps nearest to the human side of the author of Gulliver."

THE MINISTER OF STATE.

By J. A. STEUART, Author of "In the Day of Battle."

The World.—"Its qualities place it far above the novels we are accustomed to, even of the higher class. It is dramatic, romantic, and realistic."

KING CIRCUMSTANCE.

By EDWIN PUGH, Author of "A Street in Suburbia." [Friday.

THE BETH BOOK.

By SARAH GRAND, Author of "The Heavenly Twins."

Punch.—"The heroine is one of Sarah Grand's most fascinating creations. The story is absorbing; the truth to nature in the characters every reader will recognise."

THE TRIUMPH OF DEATH.

By GABRIELE D'ANNUNZIO.

The Pall Mall Gazette.—"A masterpiece. The story holds and haunts one. . . . A great prose poem that cannot be surpassed. The work of a master—a master whose genius is beyond dispute."

THE FOURTH NAPOLEON.

By CHARLES BENHAM.

The Saturday Review.—"A very good novel indeed. The book is worked out thoroughly; the people in it are alive,—they are interesting."

THE SCOURGE-STICK.

By Mrs. CAMPBELL PRAED.

The Daily Telegraph.—"Undeniably powerful and interesting."

THE BROOM OF THE WAR-GOD.

By H. N. BRAILSFORD.

The World.—"Quite the most vivid and most realistic picture of the lamentable campaign that we have yet met with. We follow the fortunes of the Foreign Legion with absorbed interest."

CLEO THE MAGNIFICENT.

By Z. Z., Author of "A Drama in Dutch."

The Daily Mail.—"A strong piece of work: more than commonly clever, conscientious, and sound."

GOD'S FOUNDLING.

By A. J. DAWSON, Author of "In the Bight of Benin."

The Daily Telegraph.—"The dénouement of this brilliant and powerful romance is every whit as satisfactory as its literary quality."

London: WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford-street, W.C.

NEW BOOKS.

NOW READY. Demy 8vo, cloth, price 12s. 6d.

ARISTOCRACY AND EVOLUTION. A Study of the Rights, the Origin, and the Social Functions of the Wealthier Classes. By W. H. MALLOCK, Author of "Labour and the Popular Welfare," "Classes and Masses," &c.

"Here we have a noteworthy contribution to current thought, and the more so because a point of view is set forward which is entirely opposed to most of the contemporary ideas as to the proper constitution of society."—The Daily Chronicle.

"Such section headings as 'Inequality, Happiness, and Progress,' 'Equality and Educational Opportunity,' 'The Motives of the Exceptional Wealth Producer,' and 'The Nature and Scope of Purely Democratic Action,' convey some idea of the vital interest and importance attaching to this very noteworthy and luminous contribution to the social thought and discussion of the present day."—Daily Mail.

HIS GRACE O' THE GUNNE. By I. HOOPER, Author of "A Singer of Marly." Crown 8vo, cloth, price 5s.

"For the further developments of this thrilling tale, which culminate in a supremely heroic climax, we must claim our reader's permission to refer them to Part II. of 'His Grace o' the Gunne,' which is even more rife with sensational incident than the first half of that powerful and fascinating work."—Daily Telegraph.

"The author writes of the seventeenth century as though he had lived in it, and had not merely tried to copy the tone of the time. Lurline Kirke is no stage hero, and we trace his career with equal interest and satisfaction. 'His Grace,' to give him his nickname, is in the mire but not of it, and no one can fail to admire the fine young fellow. . . . There can be no question as to the ability displayed throughout this book."—The World.

WHO'S WHO, 1898. An Annual Biographical Dictionary. FIFTIETH YEAR OF ISSUE. Containing 1,143 New Biographies. In crown 8vo, 864 pages, bound in cloth gilt, with gilt edges and rounded corners, price 3s. 6d. net.

"'Who's Who' is an invaluable annual. It is the handiest and best compiled book of reference of its kind that is issued from the press, and is quite indispensable to all classes of people who take any interest in public life."—Review of Reviews.

ROME, HANDBOOK to CHRISTIAN and ECCLESIASTICAL. By H. M. and M. A. R. T. Part II.—The Liturgy in Rome. Crown 8vo, cloth, price 5s.

"The second volume of this useful handbook has appeared in good time for those who intend to visit Rome this spring, and the accounts it gives of the Liturgies in Rome and especially of the ceremonies of Holy Week cannot fail to be appreciated."—The Cambridge Review.

"We would recommend tourists to add to their Baedekers or Murrays (the book will go comfortably into the modern pocket) this clear and scholarly description and explanation of 'The Liturgy in Rome,' for in it they will find all that an intelligent sightseer requires to make ecclesiastical ceremonies as clear as an Italian piazza at noonday, together with the historical background, which in Rome, of all cities of the world, is indispensable."—Oxford Magazine.

THE VITALITY OF CHRISTIAN DOGMAS. By A. SABATIER, D.D., Dean of the Faculty of Protestant Theology, Paris. Translated by Mrs. Em. Christen. With Preface by the Very Reverend the Hon. W. H. Fremantle, D.D., Dean of Ripon. Crown 8vo, 96 pages, cloth, price 1s. 6d. net.

"Is really a gem of theological constructive criticism. With marvellous lucidity and penetration, Dr. Sabatier states for us here the philosophy and natural history of the dogma; its position and use in the Christian evolution.'—Christian World.

A. & C. BLACK, Soho-square, London.

MR. T. FISHER UNWIN'S LIST.

A NEW VOLUME OF "THE STORY OF THE NATIONS."

THE FRANKS: From their Origin as a Confederacy to the Establishment of the Kingdom of France and the German Empire. By LEWIS SERGEANT, Author of "The Caprice of Julia," &c. Maps, Illustrations, and Index, cloth, 5s.

"The book is finely illustrated. . . It gives a clear and philosophic estimate of the evolution from veiled beginning of modern France and Germany."—Leeds Mercury.

CHEAPER EDITION OF OLIVE SCHREINER'S GREAT WORK.

TROOPER PETER HALKETT OF MASHONALAND. By OLIVE SCHREINER, Author of "Dreams," "The Story of an African Farm," &c. Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 2s. 6d.

M. EDOUARD ROD, speaking of "Olive Schreiner" in a recent interview, said: "I am convinced that her last work, 'Peter Halkett,' is the best thing she has done. Indeed, it is one of the greatest productions of the age."

By HENRY DE R. WALKER.

AUSTRALASIAN DEMOCRACY. By HENRY DE R. WALKER. Demy 8vo, cloth gilt, 6s.

"A singularly able and impartial analysis of Australian politics. . . . Of most immediate interest is Mr. Walker's masterly analysis of the federation question.'—Newcastle Daily Leader.

MATHILDE BLIND'S POEMS.

A SELECTION FROM THE POEMS OF MATHILDE BLIND. Edited by ARTHUR SYMONS. Parchment gilt, 7s. 6d. Edition de Luxe, on Japan paper, bound in vellum, 10s. 6d. net.

"Mathilde Blind was one of the three or four women of her generation who possessed the divine spark of poetry. The little book before us will preserve what is best worth preserving."—Times.

THIRD EDITION.

Nearly 50,000 copies of this book have been sold.

HUGH WYNNE: Free Quaker, some time B.-Lieut.-Colonel on the Staff of General Washington. By Dr. S. WEIR MITCHELL. Illustrated, cloth, 6s.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN, in a letter to the Publishers, says: "In his opinion it ['Hugh Wynne'] is a remarkable study of character and history."

BY THE AUTHOR OF "SHOULD AULD ACQUAINTANCE."

THE REVELATIONS OF A SPRITE. By A. M. JACKSON. Illustrated, cloth gilt, 3s. 6d.

"Capital stories. . . . Happy the youngster who gets A. M. Jackson's amusing volume with its plentiful illustrations."—Graphic.

THE VISION, AND OTHER POEMS. By J. A. OSBORNE. With Portrait, cloth, 5s.

"This volume of poetry is well worth reading."—Aberdeen Free Press.

NIGHT ON THE WORLD'S HIGHWAY. By NARCISSE DE POLEN. Paper covers, 1s. 6d.

"The colouring . . . is delicious, reminding one of the harmonies of Orchardson."—Aberdeen Free Press.

London: T. FISHER UNWIN, Paternoster-square, E.C.

CASSELL & COMPANY'S

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

MR. MAX PEMBERTON'S NEW NOVEL.

KRONSTADT.

Being the Story of Marian Best and of Paul Zassulic, her lover, together with some account of the Russian Fortress of Kronstadt, and of those who would have betrayed it. By MAX PEMBERTON, Author of "A Puritan's Wife," "Christine of the Hills," etc. 6s.

[Ready Shortly.

NEW VOLUME BY THE AUTHOR OF "MY LORD DUKE."

YOUNG BLOOD.

By E. W. HORNUNG. 6s. [Just published.

MR. FRANK R. STOCKTON'S NEW NOVEL.

THE GIRL AT COBHURST.

By FRANK R. STOCKTON, Author of "A Story Teller's Pack," etc. Price 6s. [Ready shortly.

AN ENTIRELY NEW AND ORIGINAL WORK.

Now Ready, price 10s. 6d.

CASSELL'S FAMILY LAWYER:

A Popular Exposition of the Civil Law of England and Scotland. By A BARRISTER-AT-LAW. Complete in one vol.

CASSELL & COMPANY, LIMITED, LONDON; and all Booksellers.

HARPER & BROTHERS'

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

IMPORTANT NEW WORK JUST READY.

PICTURESQUE SICILY.

By WILLIAM AGNEW PATON, Author of "Down the Islands: a Voyage to the Caribbees." Handsomely Illustrated, gilt top, 10s. 6d.

A LARGE RE-PRINT IS NOW READY OF FRANK R. STOCKTON'S NEW NOVEL.

THE GREAT STONE OF SARDIS.

Illustrated by Peter Newell. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

"Far more entertaining than the average novel."—Morning Post.

SECOND LARGE EDITION.

MAXWELL GRAY'S NEW BOOK.

RIBSTONE PIPPINS. By MAXWELL GRAY, Author of "The Silence of Dean Maitland." Cloth gilt, 3s. 6d.

"Maxwell Gray's new story is truly delightful, and few, we imagine, will be able to resist its charm of tender gaiety."—The Speaker.

MARGARET DELAND'S NEW STORY.

See "HARPER" for APRIL.

HOW TO CYCLE IN EUROPE.

By JOSEPH PENNELL.

See "HARPER" for APRIL.

H. SETON MERRIMAN'S NEW NOVEL.

See "HARPER" for APRIL.

ENGLAND AND GERMANY.

By SIDNEY WHITMAN, F.R.G.S.

See "HARPER" for APRIL.

HARPER & BROTHERS, London and New York.

Messrs. HUTCHINSON & CO. will publish this week Joseph Hatton's New Novel, THE VICAR, and Carlton Dawe's New Novel, A BRIDE OF JAPAN.

Ready This Day.
A NEW STORY BY A NEW WRITER.

HUMPHRY.

By E. MENDHAM. 6s.

AND A NEW NOVEL
By the Author of "Scarlet and Steel."

DEARER THAN HONOUR.

By E. LIVINGSTON PRESCOTT. 6s.

"Wales should be proud of her new novelist."
NEW STORY BY THE AUTHOR OF THAT SUCCESSFUL NOVEL, "A WELSH SINGER."

TORN SAILS: A Tale of a Welsh Village.

By ALLEN RAINE. In cloth, gilt, 6s.

THE FIRST TWO REVIEWS.

"In his new story, 'Torn Sails,' Mr. Allen Raine fully maintains and strengthens the position as a novelist which his 'Welsh Singer' indicated for him. It is a tender and beautiful romance of the idyllic. A charming picture of life in a Welsh seaside village. It is something of a prose poem—true, tender, and graceful. It is also a charming picture of an interesting and by no means familiar scene of life and manners, in which the humorous traits are rich enough to enliven and brighten the whole."—Scotsman.

"The expectations aroused by 'A Welsh Singer' have not been disappointed by Mr. Raine's latest work, which is surpassingly beautiful. The absorbing interest of the whole story is the strongest tribute to the author's power of characterisation."—N.B. Daily Mail.

HUTCHINSON'S 6s. NOVELS.

TORN SAILS.	By Allen Raine.
HUMPHRY.	By E. Mendham.
DEARER THAN HONOUR.	By E. L. Prescott.
POOR MAX.	By "Iota."
THE CEDAR STAR.	By M. E. Mann.
WHEAT IN THE EAR.	By "Alien."
WOMAN AND THE SHADOW.	By Arabella Kenealy.
THE PRINCE'S DIAMOND.	By E. H. Beaman.
AGAINST THE TIDE.	By Mary A. Dickens.
WYNDHAM'S DAUGHTER.	By Annie S. Swan.

London: HUTCHINSON & CO., Paternoster-row.

ON THE STŒCHIOLOGICAL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION,

ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, AND ALL THROAT AND LUNG COMPLAINTS
By JOHN FRANCIS CHURCHILL, M.D.
One Shilling, Post Free.

T. BURLEIGH, LATE DAVID STOTT, 370, OXFORD STREET.

STERILITY IN WOMEN: Its Causes and Curative Treatment. An Illustrated treatise based on the special practise and observation of the last 15 years Price 3s. 6d.; post free, 3s 8d.
London: HENRY RENSHAW, 356, Strand.

CORNHILL MAGAZINE

FOR APRIL. PRICE ONE SHILLING.

CONTENTS:—

FIGHTS FOR THE FLAG. IV. Rodney and De Grasse at the Battle of the Saints. By the Rev. W. H. Fitchett.
AN UNCONSCIOUS REVOLUTION. By Alfred Hopkinson, Q.C.
THE GROOM'S STORY. By A. Conan Doyle.
HENRY GRATTAN, Patriot and Imperialist. By Lord Castletown.
THE ROMANCE OF A GLOVE.
SHAKESPEARE AND THE EARL OF SOUTHAMPTON. By Sidney Lee.
AT FUTUNA RECRUITING. By Frank T. Bullen.
CONCERNING CORRESPONDENCE. By E. V. Lucas.
A GREAT GOLD ROBBERY. By Bennet Copplestone.
THE TRAINING OF HOUSEWIVES. By Mrs. St. Loe Strachey.
CAMILA O'GORMAN. By F. A. Kirkpatrick.
PAGES FROM A PRIVATE DIARY.
THE CASTLE INN. Chapters XIV.-XVII. By Stanley Weyman.

London: SMITH, ELDER, & CO., 15, Waterloo-place.

NEW NOVEL BY BERESFORD FITZGERALD.

THE FATAL PHIAL.

By G. BERESFORD FITZGERALD.

Author of "An Odd Career," "A Fleeting Show," &c. Crown 8vo, cloth 6s. Second Edition.

"In G. Beresford Fitzgerald's latest novel there is presented an interesting study of a woman of remarkable character."—Scotsman.
"It will be read with avidity."—Manchester Guardian.
"The story itself shows considerable originality."—Madame.
"Is a clever story written by a man of taste and thought."—Star.

DIGBY, LONG, & CO., 18, Bouverie-street, London.

New Series. Price One Shilling.

THE ARGOSY

for APRIL contains:—

Colonel Fane's Secret. By Sydney Hodges. Chaps. XIII.-XV.—Some Memorable Duels. By Charles Bruce-Angier.—Through the Window. By the late Stone Leigh.—What it Cost. By Anna H. Drury.—In the Night Watches. By Charles W. Wood, F.R.G.S.—Fascinating Captain Ralston. By C. E. C. Weigall.—Extremes that Meet. By Christian Burke.—The Vanishers By P. W. Roose.—A True Love Story.—The Angel of Love. By Elizabeth Gibson. Milady's Maid. By George Fosbery.—For My Sake. By Isabella Fyvie Mayo. &c., &c., &c. Profusely and Beautifully Illustrated.

London: R. BENTLEY & SON, 8, New Burlington-street, W.

AN EASTER CYCLING TOUR.—A delightful trip for the Holidays. Illustrated. See Cyclists' Supplement to The Bazaar, Exchange and Mart newspaper for Monday, April 4. Order at once at any Newsagent's or Bookstall. The paper, complete with Supplement, 2d.; post free for 3d. stamps from the Office, 170, Strand, London.

BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE.

No. 990.——APRIL, 1898.——2s. 6d.

LIFE AND DEATH IN THE NIGER DELTA.
PROGRESS IN IRELAND
JOHN SPLENDID: THE TALE OF A POOR GENTLEMAN, AND THE LITTLE WARS OF LORN. BY NEIL MUNRO. CHAPS. XIX.—XXII.
THE TOWN OF THE RENEGADES: AGURAI. BY WALTER B. HARRIS.
AT THE STROKE OF THE HOUR. BY ZACK.
MRS OLIPHANT AS A BIOGRAPHER.
THE BOY FROM BALLYTEARIM. BY MOIRA O'NEILL.
ADVENTURES OF THE COMTE DE LA MUETTE.—PYRAMUS AND THISBE.—THE MOUSE-TRAP. BY BERNARD CAPES.
MEMOIRS OF A HIGHLAND LADY.
THE GUERRILLERO
THE CHINESE IMBROGLIO.
THE LOOKER-ON.—THE WORLD'S UNREST: WHY NOT THE MONEY-MARKETS—HOW WE SHOULD CUT UP: GERMAN ESTIMATE, HOW THEY WOULD CUT UP—THE INCENDIARY MAHAN: IN VIEW, GRAND AMERICAN TRANSFORMATION—PRESTIGE—THE COMPETITIVE CRITIC: MR. STEPHEN PHILLIPS.
THE DEMOCRACY AND WARS: APPEAL TO THE RADICALS.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS, Edinburgh and London.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

For the CIRCULATION and SALE of all the BEST

ENGLISH, FRENCH, GERMAN, ITALIAN, RUSSIAN, & SPANISH BOOKS.

TOWN SUBSCRIPTIONS from ONE GUINEA per annum.

LONDON BOOK SOCIETY (for weekly exchange of Books at the Houses of Subscribers) from TWO GUINEAS per annum.

COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTIONS from TWO GUINEAS per annum.

N.B.—Two or Three Friends may UNITE IN ONE SUBSCRIPTION, and thus lessen the Cost of Carriage.

SURPLUS LIBRARY BOOKS NOW OFFERED AT GREATLY REDUCED PRICES.

A NEW CLEARANCE LIST (100 PAGES) SENT GRATIS AND POST FREE TO ANY ADDRESS.

The List contains Popular Works in Travel, Sport, History, Biography, Science, and Fiction. Also New and Surplus Copies of French, German, Italian, and Spanish Books.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY, LIMITED,

30—34, NEW OXFORD ST.; 241, BROMPTON ROAD, S.W.; 48, QUEEN VICTORIA ST., E.C. LONDON; AND AT BARTON ARCADE, MANCHESTER.

AMUSEMENTS.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.
Sole Lessee, Mr. Frederick Harrison.
Managers, Mr. Frederick Harrison and Mr. Cyril Maude.
EVERY EVENING, at 8.30, THE LITTLE MINISTER, by J. M. Barrie.
Miss WINIFRED EMERY and Mr. CYRIL MAUDE.
MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY and SATURDAY, at 2.30.

SALLE ERARD. APRIL 2.
18, GREAT MARLBOROUGH-STREET,
OPENING CONCERT,
Under the Direction of Mr. W. Adlington.
April 2, at 3.30.

PADEREWSKI APRIL 2.
Will PLAY at the OPENING CONCERT,
At the SALLE ERARD,
On April 2, at 3.30.

PADEREWSKI. APRIL 2.
Only Appearance this Season,
At the OPENING CONCERT,
At the SALLE ERARD,
On April 2, at 3.30.

SALLE ERARD, APRIL 2.
OPENING CONCERT.
Tickets One Guinea each.
The proceeds will be given to the Prince of Wales's Hospital Fund.
Plan now open.
Tickets at Mr. W. Adlington, 224, Regent-street; Basil Tree's Offices, and 8, Great Marlborough-street, W.

QUEEN'S HALL.
THE BACH CHOIR.—SATURDAY at 8.
BRAHMS MEMORIAL CONCERT.
SATURDAY EVENING next, at 8 p.m.
"Nanie".....Brahms.
Concerto in B flat for Pianoforte and Orchestra.....Brahms.
Mr. LEONARD BORWICK.
Requiem.....Brahms.
Miss ALICE ESTY, Mr. FRANCIS HARFORD.

QUEEN'S HALL.
THE BACH CHOIR.—SATURDAY at 8.
BRAHMS MEMORIAL CONCERT.
Conductor—Mr. C VILLIERS STANFORD, Mus.Doc.
Tickets, 10s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 5s., 2s. 6d., 1s., of the usual Agents: CHAPPELL; TREE, St. James's Hall, and 304, Regent-street; and NEWMAN'S box office, Queen's Hall.—N. VERT, 6, Cork-street, W.

QUEEN'S HALL.
SUNDAY AFTERNOON CONCERTS.
EVERY SUNDAY, at 3.30.
Conductor, Mr. Henry J. Wood.
The Queen's Hall Grand Orchestra.
Admission free. Reserved seats, 2s., 3s., 1s., and 6d.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—SATURDAY CONCERT, Saturday, April 2, at 3. Vocalist, Miss Susan Strong. Solo Pianist, M. Gabrilowitsch. Solo Violinist, Mr. A. V. Belinki. The Crystal Palace Choir and Orchestra. Organist, Mr. Walter W. Hedgcock. Conductor, Mr. August Manns. Seats 1s. to 4s.

"ECCE HOMO!" Munkacsy's Sacred Masterpiece. This famous Work, containing over 70 figures, is NOW ON VIEW for the first time in London at the DOWDESWELL GALLERIES, 160, New Bond-street. Admission One Shilling. Descriptive pamphlet, 6d. post free. 315,000 people inspected the Picture during its exhibition at Budapest, often at the rate of 7,000 daily.

34TH ANNUAL EXHIBITION of CABINET PICTURES, by Artists of the British and Foreign Schools, is NOW OPEN at THOMAS McLEAN'S GALLERY, 7, Haymarket (next the Theatre). Admission, including Catalogue, 1s.

NEW NIAGARA. SKATING.
Morning, 9.30 to 1; Evening, 8 to 11, 3/-
Afternoon, 3 to 6.30, 5/-
Non-Skaters (Afternoon), 2/6.

BRIGHTON ICE RINK. SKATING.
Morning, 9.30 to 1 Evening, 8 to 11, 2/6
Afternoon, 3 to 6.30, 4/- Non-Skaters, in the Afternoon, 2/-
Monthly Tickets, £2 10s.
SEASON and HALF-SEASON TICKETS issued.

NATIONAL SKATING PALACE (Hengler's), 7, Argyll-street, Regent-street, W.
REAL ICE. OPEN DAILY, 10.30 a.m. to 11 p.m. Admission 3s.

Fourth Edition (Sixth Thousand), crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.
HEALTH and CONDITION in the ACTIVE and the SEDENTARY, by N. E. YORKE-DAVIES, Royal Coll. Phys. Lond., Author of "Foods for the Fat."—Contents:—Perfect health, how to attain. Deviations from health. Insidious causes of disease. Causes of premature decay. Diseases due to diet only curable by diet. Epochs in life. Exigencies of modern society. Idiosyncrasies. The foundation of health. Tight lacing, diseases from. Preservation of female beauty. A short life and a merry one. Constitutional flaws. Aristocratic ailments. The London season. The débutante. The diet of grief. Vegetarianism injurious. Ailments of mal-nutrition and of excess. Obesity, gout, acidity, leanness, indigestion, &c., &c.

Opinions of the Press.

"Those who desire a long and healthy life will perhaps find their best means of obtaining it in the study and observance of such rules as are laid down here. The book is a rational and practical guide to 'Health and Condition.'"—Morning Post.

"Full of valuable hints and suggestive warnings as to the results of improper food and insufficient exercise."—Daily Telegraph.

London: SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON, & CO., St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, Fleet-street, E.C.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

NOTICE.

No Member of the Stock Exchange is allowed to advertise for business purposes, or to issue circulars to persons other than his own principals.

Persons who advertise as Brokers or Share Dealers are not Members of the Stock Exchange, or under the control of the Committee.

A List of Members of the Stock Exchange who are Stock and Share Brokers may be seen at the Bartholomew-lane Entrance to the Bank of England, or obtained on application to

EDWARD SATTERTHWAITE,
Secretary to the Committee of the Stock Exchange.
Committee Room, The Stock Exchange, London, E.C.

AMUSEMENTS.

LYCEUM.—THE MERCHANT OF VENICE, Matinée To-day (Wednesday) and Next Saturday, at 2; also Thursday and Friday Nights this week, at 8. Henry Irving, Miss Ellen Terry.
WATERLOO and THE BELLS, To-night (Wednesday) and Next Saturday night, at 8. Henry Irving.
HOLY WEEK, April 4 to 9, the Theatre will be CLOSED.
EASTER WEEK.—Monday, Tuesday, and Saturday, WATERLOO and THE BELLS. Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday Nights, and SATURDAY MATINEE, THE MERCHANT OF VENICE.
Box-office (Mr. J. Hurst) 10 to 5, and 7.30 to 10. Seats also booked by letter or telegram. LYCEUM.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.
Proprietor and Manager, Mr. HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE.
TO-NIGHT and EVERY EVENING, at 8.
JULIUS CÆSAR.
MATINEES EVERY WEDNESDAY and SATURDAY, at 2.
Box-office open 10 to 10. Seats booked from 2s. HER MAJESTY'S.

SAVOY THEATRE.—Every Evening at 8.30, and Every Saturday Afternoon at 2.30, will be reproduced THE GONDOLIERS, by W. S. Gilbert and Arthur Sullivan. At 7.45, OLD SARAH. Box-office 9 a.m. to 11 p.m.—R. D'OYLY CARTE, Manager.

COURT THEATRE, Sloane Square.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH.—TO-NIGHT, at 8.30, TRELAWNY OF THE "WELLS," by A. W. Pinero. Doors 8. Commence 8.30. Box-office now open, 10 to 10. Telephone No. 3,031. MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY, at 2.30.

DALY'S THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. AUGUSTIN DALY.—EVERY EVENING, and SATURDAY MATINEE. Mr. George Edwardes's Company in THE GEISHA. The book by Owen Hall. Lyrics by Harry Greenbank. Music by Sydney Jones.

PRINCESS'S.—Mr. ALBERT GILMER, Sole Manager.
ENORMOUS SUCCESS OF THE NEW MELODRAMA.
EVERY EVENING, at 8 o'clock,
HOW LONDON LIVES,
By Martyn Field and Arthur Shirley,
For which Mr. CHARLES WARNER is specially engaged.
Miss Kate Tyndall, Miss Geraldine Olliffe, Mr. Oscar Adye, Mr. Charles Garry, &c.

COMEDY THEATRE, Panton-street, Haymarket.
Sole Manager, Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY.
On SATURDAY EVENING, April 16, will be produced an Original Light Comedy, in Three Acts, entitled
LORD AND LADY ALGY,
by R. C. Carton, in which Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY will make his Reappearance.
Box-office now open 10 to 5. COMEDY.

ST. JAMES'S.—Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER,
Sole Lessee and Manager.
EVERY EVENING, at 8 (LAST THREE NIGHTS), Shakespeare's Comedy of
MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING.
LAST MATINEE SATURDAY NEXT, at 2.

THE CONQUERORS, by Paul M. Potter, will be produced on THURSDAY, April 14. Box-plan now open 10 to 10. ST. JAMES'S.

CRITERION THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. CHARLES WYNDHAM.—EVERY EVENING, at 8.15, THE LIARS, by Henry Arthur Jones. Mr. CHARLES WYNDHAM, Miss MARY MOORE, and Company. MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY, and WEDNESDAY, April 13.

VAUDEVILLE.
Sole Lessees and Managers, A. & S. GATTI.
EVERY EVENING, at 8.20,
MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY, at 2.30,
THE FRENCH MAID,
With New Songs, Dances, and Dresses.
The very successful Musical Comedy by Basil Hood and Walter Slaughter.
Box-office open 10 to 10.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—EVERY EVENING, New Ballet, THE PRESS, and Sporting Sketch, THE RACE. Grand VARIETIES. Doors open at 7.45.

PALACE, Shaftesbury-avenue.—The HANDSOMEST THEATRE in EUROPE. The finest Variety Entertainment in London. Full Licence. Prices from 6d. Doors open 8.—Manager, Mr. CHARLES MORTON.

TIVOLI, Strand, London.—The Greatest Combination of Talent in London.—Open EVERY EVENING, at 7.30, and SATURDAY MATINEE, at 2.30, with a STAR PROGRAMME, embracing every Artiste of note.—Manager, Mr. VERNON DOWSETT.

LONDON PAVILION.—Signor Pepi, Charles Godfrey, Florrie Forde, Chas. E. Edwards, Jessie Lindsay, George Lashwood, Emma Pollock, Marie Collins, and many others. Prices 1s. to £3 3s.—Manager, Mr. FRANK GLENISTER.

MADAME TUSSAUD'S EXHIBITION, Baker-street Station.—Relics of H.M. Queen Victoria. Beautiful Copper-plate Etchings executed by H.M. The Queen and the late Prince Consort.—Admission 1s. Children under Twelve, 6d. Extra rooms, 6d.

THEATRE TICKETS.—Boxes, Stalls, Balcony, and Upper Circle Seats in the best positions can be had at any office of the DISTRICT MESSENGER AND THEATRE TICKET CO., LTD.—Letters and telegrams, 103, Piccadilly.—Seats for every theatre. If you ever want a MESSENGER FOR ANY PURPOSE, to go any distance, at home or abroad, ask for a "DISTRICT MESSENGER." Offices in all parts of London, open Day and Night. Electric call boxes, to summon messengers, are in every first-class club, hotel, and house.

"TRUTH" HOTEL LIST.

BONCHURCH HOTEL, Bonchurch, Isle of Wight, one mile from Ventnor Station.
A comfortable, quiet, and most beautifully-situated Hotel. Pretty garden. Good sea view.
H. RIBBANDS, Proprietor.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HIGHCLIFFE HOTEL. Unrivalled position, West Cliff, full south. Splendid sea view. Table d'hôte (separate tables). Supplies from Alderney Dairy Farm. Telephone 27.—J. KILNER, Proprietor.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HOTEL MONT DORE.—South aspect. 150 rooms, electric light throughout, passenger lift, first-class cuisine, winter garden and lounge, covered tennis court. Turkish, sea-water, and medicated Baths. The Hotel is within two minutes' walk of the Golf Links.—For tariff, address W. KNEESE, Manager.

BRIGHTON.—GRAND HOTEL.
Centre of Sea Front. Electric Light throughout. Lift to all floors. Bicycle room. INCLUSIVE TERMS IF DESIRED from 10s. 6d. to 15s. per day. For particulars apply to A. D. HOOK, Manager.

BRIGHTON.—BEDFORD HOTEL.—Old-established. Unequalled in situation; opposite West Pier. Spacious coffee and reading rooms; sea-water service; unequalled cuisine; great variety of excellent wines. Moderate tariff. Electric light in all rooms. Passenger lift to all the floors.
GEO. HECKFORD, Manager.

CARBIS BAY HOTEL, Cornwall. The very spot to obtain rest and quietude. Overlooking the finest bay in England. Mild yet bracing climate. Within easy distance of London by G. W. R. Splendid Golf Links. "A more beautiful spot for residence could hardly be imagined."—Truth.

FOLKESTONE.—The LEAS HOTEL.—Situated in private grounds. Adjoining fashionable promenade. Sea views. Refurnished throughout. Passenger lift. Certified sanitation. Excellent cuisine. Moderate tariff. Good golf links and tennis court.

FOLKESTONE.—BATES' HOTEL, West Cliff Gardens, and LONGFORD PRIVATE HOTEL, The Lees. Oldest established and most select Family Hotels in Folkestone. Reduced terms during Winter and Spring months. Pension (new Coffee-room) at Bates' Hotel.—G. L. HART, Proprietor. Sanitation Certified.

GRAND CANARY.—The Newest and Best Hotel is The METROPOLE. Facing the sea. Delightful position.
Terms most moderate.
Agents, ELDER, DEMPSTER & CO., 14, Castle-street, Liverpool, and 4, St. Mary Axe, London, E.C.

JERSEY.—GRAND HOTEL.—Beautifully situated, facing the sea, full south, and sheltered from the north-easterly winds, with all modern comforts and liberal management. Reduced winter terms from October 15th.
D. DE LEIDI, Manager.

MALVERN—The IMPERIAL HOTEL occupies the best position, and receives visitors en pension. The golf-links (18 holes) are one of the best in England. Capital stabling for hunters. Droitwich Brine, Turkish and large Swimming Bath in separate buildings.—For tariff, apply to the Proprietor, F. MOERSCHELL.

SALCOMBE (Devon).—BOLT HEAD HOTEL.—This first-class Family Hotel commands magnificent views of English Channel. Delightful cliff walks. Grand coast scenery. Admirable winter health resort. Climate mildest in England. Carriages meet trains when requested. Stabling Billiards. Special terms for winter months and for families.—Apply, Manager.

SANDGATE.—ROYAL KENT HOTEL, a favourite resort of Ruskin. An ideal summer and winter residence, delightfully situated in its own grounds, facing the sea. Redecorated and refurnished. New Coffee-room, Smoking-room, and Conservatory have recently been added. Fifteen minutes from Folkestone. Omnibus meets all trains Sandgate Station.—J. E. TANAKE, Prop.

TORQUAY.—IMPERIAL HOTEL.—Under entirely New Management. New sanitary arrangements throughout. It is the largest and best-situated Hotel in Torquay, and the best winter residence on the South Coast. Visitors received en pension or à la carte. Terms moderate.
F. FISCHER, Manager.

BURLINGTON HOTELS COMPANY, Limited.

BURLINGTON HOTEL, Cork-street, W., near Burlington Arcade. Central, quiet, and most comfortable.

BUCKINGHAM PALACE HOTEL, S.W., close to Victoria Station. Specialty, Wedding Receptions. Suites of rooms facing Buckingham Palace Gardens from 12s. per day.

London.

BURLINGTON.—The HOTEL BURLINGTON, Boscombe, Bournemouth. 200 rooms, facing sea, and protected from north and east. Acres of beautifully laid-out pleasure grounds, with abundance of winter foliage. A Winter Garden, 300 feet long, facing south, containing dining-room, and kept at a uniform temperature. Nearest approach in England to a Riviera Hotel. 135 minutes from Waterloo. Pullman Car service. East Bournemouth Station. Special Boarding terms. Excellent cuisine for above three Hotels. Tariffs on application to the Managers.

AVONDALE HOTEL & RESTAURANT

(Corner of Dover-street and Piccadilly).
MAGNIFICENT SUITES of ROOMS, including Ladies' Reception-room.
POLIAKIN'S renowned STRING BAND (three years at the Savoy) plays nightly during Dinner and Supper.
LUNCHEON, 4s.; DINNER, 10s. 6d.; SUPPER, 4s.
A SPECIAL ROYAL ACADEMY LUNCHEON at 2s. 6d. served daily.
The Wines have been most carefully selected by connoisseurs.

Manager: Mons. GARIN.
Chef de Cuisine: Mons. DUTRU.
late Savoy.

HATCHETT'S RESTAURANT.

Under entirely new management. First-class Cuisine and Unrivalled Cellar of Wines. Moderate Prices. Luncheons, Dinners, and Suppers, Table d'Hôte, Grill-room, and à la Carte. Arrangements are being made for a String Band to play nightly during Dinner and Supper.
Manager: Mons. MARXGAT.

ROYAL PAVILION HOTEL FOLKESTONE

EASTER ARRANGEMENTS

Concert Every Evening in the Winter Garden. Large Restaurant open as usual, but only a limited number of bed and sitting-rooms, to secure which early application is necessary.

The ROYAL PAVILION HOTEL occupies a sheltered position, yet close to the sea and the Boulogne Steamboat and Promenade Piers, and beautiful Undercliffe private road. Celebrated for its home-like comforts, cuisine, and wines. Electric lighting throughout. Private dairy, farm, gardens, and laundry. Hotel omnibuses meet all trains at Folkestone Central.

The New and Handsome Additional Buildings will be Opened in July.

ROYAL PAVILION HOTEL FOLKESTONE

HASTINGS. Due South, Facing Sea.

QUEEN'S HOTEL,

LARGEST AND BEST APPOINTED.
Sunny, and most sheltered position in Hastings and St. Leonards.
ELECTRIC LIGHT. PASSENGER ELEVATOR.
Moderate Tariff. Hotel Flys attend the trains.
WILLIAM GLADE, Manager.

A FINE HOTEL] DOVER [IN DOVER BAY

Accommodates 400 guests. Is superbly appointed, with all the comforts of a well-arranged mansion, at moderate cost. Perfect cuisine. The Dover Golf Links for use of Hotel Burlington visitors. The finest coast hotel in England. Brochure and Tariff free.

Facing the Pleasure Pier and in centre of Dover Bay.

HOTEL BURLINGTON

RAMSGATE.

THE GRANVILLE.

ILFRACOMBE.

THE ILFRACOMBE HOTEL

For the EASTER HOLIDAYS.

The PRINCIPAL and ONLY HOTEL on the SEASHORE.
An ideal position. Famous for its high-class Cuisine and general comfort. Unrivalled sea frontage and open surroundings. Grounds five acres. Elegant Lounge Hall. 250 rooms. Moderate tariff. Terms "en pension."
H. R. GROVER, Manager.

THE INTERNATIONAL PALACE HOTELS.

CAIRO ..... Shepheard's.
CAIRO ..... Ghezireh Palace.
NICE ..... Riviera Palace.
LISBON ..... Avenida Palace.

London Office, 14, Cockspur-street, S.W.

FOLKESTONE.

WEST CLIFF HOTEL will REOPEN

(130 Apartments)
APRIL 2nd, after extensive Alteration and Additions.
ELECTRIC LIGHT & PASSENGER LIFT.
For Tariff please address Proprietor.

GRAND HOTEL, LYNDHURST (New Forest).—Charming Hotel, recently enlarged. Beautiful grounds of 4 acres adjoin golf links. Hunting, fishing, &c. Trains met at Brockenhurst.
Mrs. HART, Manageress.

FOR KLONDIKE,

Passengers should book to Vancouver City, terminus of the CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY. The arrival platform is the departure wharf of all Klondike steamers. Complete outfits can be purchased in Vancouver City cheaper than in the United States. Purchasers save not only in first cost, but escape all Customs duties. Remember Klondike is in Canada. All outfits purchased elsewhere pay an average duty of 30 per cent. Steamers leave Vancouver City regularly direct for the Klondike.—Apply, CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY OFFICES, 67 and 68, King William-street, London Bridge, E.C.; 30, Cockspur-street, Trafalgar-square, W.C.; or ALLAN BROTHERS & CO., Liverpool.

Vancouver Board of Trade,
W. GODFREY, President.

JAPAN, CHINA, AUSTRALIA, HONOLULU, FIJI, NEW ZEALAND, and ROUND THE WORLD.

CANADIAN PACIFIC ROUTE,

For berths or descriptive pamphlets, apply CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY, 67 and 68, King William-street, London Bridge, or 30, Cockspur-street, Trafalgar-square, S.W.

LONDON AND SOUTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

EASTER HOLIDAYS.

CHANNEL ISLANDS, HAVRE, St. MALO, and CHERBOURG (via Southampton).

SPECIAL EASTERTIDE CHEAP TRIP. On 7th, 8th, 9th, and 11th April, cheap third class return tickets to GUERNSEY, JERSEY, and HAVRE, will be issued from Waterloo, Kensington (Addison-road), &c., by any ordinary Train. Return Fare, third class by rail and fore cabin by steamer, 24s. 6d. Similar tickets will be issued to ST. MALO on 8th and 11th April, and to CHERBOURG on 7th and 9th April.

SPECIAL CHEAP EXCURSIONS.

CHEAP THIRD CLASS RETURN TICKETS from London to PLYMOUTH, WADEBRIDGE, BODMIN, LAUNCESTON, HOLSWORTHY, ILFRACOMBE, BARNSTAPLE, BIDEFORD, EXETER, WEYMOUTH, DORCHESTER, BOURNEMOUTH, BATH, WELLS, RADSTOCK, SHEPTON MALLET, &c., will be issued by all trains on 7th April and subsequent days, up to and including 11th April (not to Somerset and Dorset Line Stations on 8th or 10th April), available to return up to and including 13th April.

EXCURSIONS will leave WATERLOO as under, calling at the principal Stations, on Thursday, 7th April.

At 8.0 a.m. for ANDOVER, SALISBURY, SHERBORNE, SEATON, SIDMOUTH, SALTERTON, OKEHAMPTON, &c.

At 8.0 a.m. and 1.0 p.m. for BRIDGWATER, WELLS, BURNHAM, RADSTOCK, BATH, &c.

At 8.0 a.m. and 8.5 p.m. for MARLBOROUGH, SWINDON, CHELTENHAM, &c.

At 9.15 a.m. for YEOVIL, EXETER, PLYMOUTH, BARNSTAPLE, LYNTON, ILFRACOMBE, BIDEFORD (for Clovelly), &c.

At 11.55 a.m. for SWANAGE, DORCHESTER, WEYMOUTH, PORTLAND, &c.

At 12.10 p.m. for WINCHESTER, SOUTHAMPTON (West), LYNDHURST ROAD, BROCKENHURST (for New Forest), LYMINGTON, YARMOUTH, (for Freshwater), CHRISTCHURCH, BOURNEMOUTH, POOLE, &c.

At 1.0 p.m. for LAUNCESTON, WADEBRIDGE, (for North Cornwall Coach), BODMIN, HOLSWORTHY (for Bude), &c.

The tickets issued by the above will be available to return by certain ordinary trains on 14th, 15th, or 16th April.

SPECIAL EXTRA FAST TRAINS will leave Waterloo on Thursday, 7th April, as follows:—

At 1.45 p.m. and 2.5 p.m. EXPRESS for CHRISTCHURCH, BOSCOMBE, and BOURNEMOUTH.

At 3.0 p.m. for CAMELFORD, DELABOLE, WADEBRIDE, and BODMIN.

At 4.40 p.m. for SOUTHAMPTON WEST, CHRISTCHURCH, and BOURNEMOUTH.

At 5.40 p.m. for SALISBURY, YEOVIL, EXETER, and WEST of ENGLAND LINES.

At 5.40 and 5.50 p.m. for BARNSTAPLE, ILFRACOMBE, BIDEFORD and other NORTH DEVON STATIONS; also to Stations on the SIDMOUTH and SALTERTON BRANCHES.

To the WEST OF ENGLAND, NORTH and SOUTH DEVON, and NORTH CORNWALL.

SPECIAL LATE TRAINS on THURSDAY, 7th APRIL, will leave Waterloo at 10.35 p.m. for SALISBURY, YEOVIL, and EXETER, and intermediate stations, and at 12.15 MIDNIGHT for NORTH and SOUTH DEVON and NORTH CORNWALL.

For full particulars of the Excursions to Portsmouth, Southampton, Salisbury, Bournemouth, the Isle of Wight, &c., on Good Friday; Four Days' trip to Southampton, Portsmouth, and the Isle of Wight on Saturday; Portsmouth on Easter Sunday, and to Seaton, Sidmouth, Salterton, Exmouth, Southampton, Salisbury, Bournemouth, &c., also Races at Kempton Park on Easter Monday, see bills and programmes, which can be obtained at any of the Company's Stations or London Receiving Houses, or from G. T. White, Superintendent of the Line, Waterloo Station.

CHAS. J. OWENS, General Manager.

PARIS.—THE PICTURESQUE and CHEAP ROUTE. Viâ NEWHAVEN, DIEPPE, and ROUEN.

Two Special Express Services (Week-days and Sundays).

London to Paris (1 & 2) (1, 2, 3)				Paris to London (1 & 2) (1, 2, 3)
		a.m.	p.m.			a.m.	p.m.
Victoria ...	dep.	10.0	8.50	Paris	dep.	10.0	9.0
London Bridge...	,,	10.0	9.0			p.m.	a.m.
		p.m.	a.m.	London Bridge...	arr.	7.0	7.40
Paris	arr.	7.0	7.15	Victoria ...	,,	7.0	7.50

Fares—Single: First, 34s. 7d.; Second, 25s. 7d.; Third, 18s. 7d.
Return: First, 58s. 3d.; Second, 42s. 3d.; Third, 33s. 3d.

PARIS at EASTER.—SPECIAL CHEAP 14 DAY EXCURSION (First and Second Class only), THURSDAY, April 7th, by the Day Service.—Leaving London Bridge and Victoria 10.0 a.m., and 1st, 2nd and 3rd Class by the Night Service, leaving Victoria 8.50 p.m., London Bridge 9.0 p.m. and Kensington (Addison-road, 8.5 p.m., on Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, Saturday) Sunday and Monday, April 6th to 11th.

Fares, First, 39s. 3d.; Second, 30s. 3d.; Third, 26s.

NORMANDY AND BRITTANY AT EASTER. SPECIAL CHEAP RETURN TICKETS.

TO DIEPPE viâ Newhaven from London Bridge, Victoria, Kensington (Addison-road) and Clapham Junction, by any train to Newhaven, on Thursday, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, April 7th to 10th.

Fares, First, 24s.; Second, 19s. Available for return any day up to and including April 12th.

TO CAEN, viâ Newhaven and Ouistreham, from London Bridge 9.0 p.m. and Victoria 8.50 p.m., Wednesday, Thursday, and Saturday, April 6th, 7th, and 9th.

Fares, 30s., 25s., 15s. Available for return the following Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, or Friday.

FOR FULL PARTICULARS of all above Continental Services see Handbills, or address Continental Traffic Manager, L.B. & S.C. Ry., London Bridge, S.E.

TEN-GUINEA ROME TOUR.

Organised by Dr. Lunn and Mr. Perowne.

Extensions: NAPLES, FLORENCE, VENICE, RIVIERA.

Lectures by Dean Farrar. Dover-Calais Route.

SECRETARY, 5, Endsleigh Gardens, London, N.W.

LIQUEURS OF THE GRANDE CHARTREUSE.

These delicious Liqueurs, which have come so much into public favour on account of their wonderful properties of aiding Digestion and preventing Dyspepsia, can now be had of all the principal Wine and Spirit Merchants, and all good Hotels and Restaurants throughout the Kingdom.
Sole Consignee: W. DOYLE, 35, Crutched Friars, London, E.C.

HOSPITALS & APPEALS.

GREAT NORTHERN CENTRAL HOSPITAL, Holloway
UNENDOWED and VERY POOR.

PATIENTS ADMITTED FREE, sickness and poverty the only passports to relief.

£10,000 needed annually to support the work of relieving 1,400 in-patients, and 25 000 out-patients.

LEWIS H. GLENTON KERR, Secretary.

CHARING CROSS HOSPITAL MEDICAL SCHOOL.

The SUMMER SESSION, 1898, will commence on MONDAY, MAY 2nd.

The Livingstone Scholarship (100 guineas,) the Huxley Scholarship (55 guineas,) and six other Entrance Scholarships, total value £550, are awarded annually.

Two Scholarships of the value of 60 guineas each are reserved for Students of Oxford, Cambridge, or London University.

Students who join in Summer have the same privileges as regards Scholarships, &c., as Students joining in October of the same year.

FEES.—For the five years' curriculum of study required by the various Examining Bodies and for hospital practice, 110 guineas in one sum, or 121 guineas in five instalments.

The composition fee for sons of registered medical practitioners is 100 guineas, and the fee by instalments 110 guineas in five payments.

The composition fee for Dental Students is 54 guineas, or 60 guineas payable in two instalments of 30 guineas each.

A proportionate reduction of the above Fees is made to Students who have completed part of the curriculum elsewhere.

The SCHOOL PROSPECTUS, containing full information concerning the classes, prizes, and all other arrangements connected with the Medical School, will be sent on application to the DEAN, Chandos-Street, Strand, W.C.

H. MONTAGUE MURRAY, Dean.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN, in all parts, receiving RESIDENT PATIENTS sent gratis, with full particulars. schools also recommended.—Medical, &c., Association, Ltd., 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C. Tel. Add., "Triform, London." Telephone No. 1,854 (Gerrard).

£20 TOBACCONISTS COMMENCING. Illd. guide (259 pgs.), 3d., "How to open respectably £20 to £2,000." Tobacconists' Outfitting Co., Euston-rd., Ldn. Hairdressers fitted.—H. MYERS.

The Best CHAINLESS Cycle!

THE BANTAM.

With Registered "Alpha" Frame.

Simple, Compact, Durable, Speedy. Thoroughly tested for four years, and greatly improved for 1898. Send for Price List and "Notes on the Bantam;" also particulars of the Crypto Safety and other patterns.

CRYPTO WORKS CO., LTD.,
29, CLERKENWELL ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

MAPLE & CO

BILLIARD MATS
BILLIARD MATS
BILLIARD MATS

In NOISELESS CORK CARPET
DURABLE LINOLEUM
RICH SOFT WILTON
LUXURIOUS AXMINSTER
THICK PILE TURKEY

Woven specially for the purpose
The Largest Stock in the World
The Lowest Prices

BILLIARD MATS at from 50/- per Set

MAPLE & CO

LONDON AND SMYRNA

PHILLIPS'S

Finest French Fireproof China, Brown Glaze Outside. White Inside.

COFFEE POTS & FILTERS.

	s.	d.
1 cup	1	5
2 cups	1	6
3 cups	1	9½
4 cups	2	1
5 cups	2	8
6 cups	3	3
8 cups	4	0
12 cups	5	3

For Making Coffee.

When the Coffee is made, take away the top part and put the lid on the pot.

NEW DEPARTMENT OF KITCHEN WARES of Finest Quality, at 5 per cent. under Store Prices on their terms, Cash. The prices shown are Store Prices. We give 5 per cent. of these.

HER MAJESTY'S POTTERS AND GLASS MANUFACTURERS,
17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22,
MOUNT STREET,
GROSVENOR SQUARE, W.

Wedding Presents

BREAKFAST SETS.
LUNCHEON SETS.
DINNER SETS.
DESSERT SETS.
TEA SETS.
GLASS SETS. TOILET SETS.

VALKYRIE CYCLES

HIGH-GRADE ONLY.

THE SPRINGFIELD CYCLE CO., Ltd., Sandiacre, nr. Nottingham.
London Depot: 38, Shaftesbury Avenue, W.

DUNLOP TYRES.

WIRE CYCLE SADDLE.

WOODS' PATENT.

AN IDEAL SADDLE FOR LADY OR GENTLEMAN.

NO MORE CHAFING.

SADDLE SORENESS ENTIRELY PREVENTED.

One Month's Trial Allowed.

Fitted with Felt or Leather Cover.

Prices and Testimonials on application to

THE LONGFORD WIRE CO., LTD., WARRINGTON.

Showrooms—61, ST. MARY AXE, LONDON. (Please mention this Journal.

THE

"PATTISSON"

HYGIENIC CYCLE SADDLE.

ADOPTED AS STANDARD BY
Humber & Co., Ltd.,
Elswick Cycle Co., LTD.,
Swift Cycle Co., Ltd,
John Griffiths Cycle Corporation, Ltd.
&c., &c.

REMOVES THE ONE GREAT DRAWBACK OF CYCLING, VIZ., PERINEAL PRESSURE, AND GIVES COMFORT, HEALTH, AND EASE.

From an Agent.—"The Saddle suits splendidly; in fact, the gentleman would have had to give up riding if he had not got it."

From a Lady.—"The Saddle has enabled me to ride very much farther than I could on any other I have tried, and I have tried many."

THE BRITISH "PATTISSON" HYGIENIC CYCLE SADDLE CO. LTD.
West End Agency for
HUMBER & CO. LTD. 86, NEW BOND ST. W.

(CYCLE REPAIRING & ENAMELLING WORKS): BLENHEIM ST., BOND ST., W.

HIGHEST GRADE CYCLES.

Royal Enfield

ENFIELD CYCLE CO., REDDITCH. Ltd.

LONDON—6c, Sloane-street, W.
DUBLIN—73, Grafton-street.

 Send for Catalogue.

FLORILINE

FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH

Is the BEST LIQUID DENTIFRICE in the WORLD.

PREVENTS THE DECAY OF THE TEETH.

Renders the Teeth Pearly White.

IS PERFECTLY HARMLESS AND DELICIOUS TO THE TASTE.

Is Partly Composed of Honey, and Extracts from Sweet Herbs and Plants.

Of all Chemists and Perfumers throughout the World.

2s. 6d. per Bottle.

FLORILINE TOOTH POWDER,
Only put in Glass Jars, Price 1s.

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER

Prevents the Hair from Falling off.

Restores Grey or White Hair to its ORIGINAL COLOUR.

Being delicately perfumed, it leaves no Unpleasant Odour.

IS NOT A DYE.

Should be in every House where a HAIR RENEWER is needed.

ASK YOUR CHEMIST OR HAIRDRESSER FOR

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Price 3s. 6d. per bottle.

VINOLIA TOILET REQUISITES.

4d PREMIER VINOLIA SOAP
(For Family Use).

For Delicate, Sensitive, Irritable Skins.

The CHEMIST AND DRUGGIST reports:
"An ideal soap, delightfully perfumed."

1/- per box of 3 Tablets.

6d FLORAL VINOLIA SOAP
(For Private Use).

Keeps the Skin as soft as Velvet.

The MEDICAL NEWS reports:
"Beautifully emollient and softening to the skin."

1/6 per box of 3 Tablets.

10d TOILET VINOLIA SOAP
(OTTO)

Scented with Choice Otto of Rose Perfume.

Beautifies the Complexion.

The GENTLEWOMAN reports:
"Strongly recommended to keep the skin smooth and free from roughness."

2/6 per Box of 3 Tablets.

6d BLONDEAU PERFUMES
Concentrated, Delicate, Pure.

*Vinolia Bouquet,	Rondeletia,
*Marequil,	Hyacinth,
*Jequilla,	Ylang Ylang
*Losaria,	Stephanotis
Wood Violet,	Opoponax,
White Heliotrope,	Patchouli,
Ess. Bouquet,	Musk,
Frangipanni,	Ambergris,
Jockey Club,	Amaryllis,
Maréchal Niel,	White Lilac,
Millefleur,	Narcissus,
White Rose,	Chypre,
Jasmin,	Violette de Parme,
Musk Rose,	Mignonette,
Honeysuckle.	Clematis,
New Mown Hay,	Wallflower,
Lily of the Valley,

Violet, | *Rhine Violets, | Peau d'Espagne.

6d., 1/-, 1/3, 2/-, 3/-, and 5/- per bottle.

*These perfumes are not supplied in the 6d. quality.

1/- VINOLIA HAIR WASH

DRY. Freshens and cleanses the Hair, and preserves it free from any oily moist appearance.

MOIST. Imparts a natural gloss to the Hair.

1/- per Bottle.

Each in 3 odours: Portugal, Rose, and Violet.

1/1½ VINOLIA CREAM

For Itching. Face Spots. Eczema.

The LANCET reports:
"An emollient cream for the skin in eczema, rash, eruptions, &c."

1/1½, 1/9, 3/6, and 6/- per Box.

1/- VINOLIA POWDER

For Redness, Roughness, Toilet Nursery, &c.

The LADY'S PICTORIAL reports:
"Superseding the old-fashioned toilet powders which are apt to cause acne spots on the face by blocking up the pores of the skin."

In White, Pink, and Cream Tints.
1/-, 1/9, 3/6, and 6/- per Box.

VINOLIA SHAVING SOAP.
6d

(STICKS AND FLAT CAKES.)
Causes no Blotches.
STICKS: Premier 6d., Toilet 1/-, 1/6, 2/6, Vestal 2/-.
FLAT CAKES: Premier 1/-, Toilet 2/-, Vestal 2/6.

6d LYPSYL.

A Coralline Emollient for Dry, Rough, Cracked, or Pallid Lips.
In Rose-Red and White Tints, 6d. and 1/- a Tube.

6d VINOLIA LAVENDER WATER.

Natural and Very Lasting.

Contains the finest Essential Oils, Concentrated, therefore the Most Economical.

In 1-oz., 2-oz., 4-oz., and 8-oz. Bottles, 6d., 1/-, 2/-, and 3/6.

2d BLONDEAU CHOICE TOILET SOAPS.

Guaranteed Neutral and Pure.

1/- per Box of 6 Tablets.

(Assorted Colours and Perfumes).

6d VINOLIA DENTIFRICE

Aromatic, Tonic, Refreshing, Preservative.

Keeps the Teeth Ivory White.

Premier, in Round Box and Glass Bottle, 6d.

English—2/6.

American—1/6.

6d BLONDEAU CARBOLIC TOOTH POWDER.

Makes the Teeth White, the Breath Sweet, and the Gums strong.

In Round Metal Box, 6d. & 1/-

6d VINOLIA TOOTH PASTE.

Delicately Perfumed.

Whitens and Cleanses the Teeth, without in any way injuriously affecting the dental structure.

In Collapsable Tube, 6d.

6d BLONDEAU INEXHAUSTIBLE LAVENDER SMELLING SALTS.

These Smelling Salts are of exceptional Strength and most Refreshing. They are agreeably scented, the pleasant odour of Lavender being very pronounced.

6d. per Bottle.

6d VINOLIA EAU DE COLOGNE.

Fragrant. Refreshing.
As fine as can possibly be made.

The "Court Circular" reports:
"Vinolia Eau de Cologne we consider is absolutely unequalled for strength, purity, and delicacy of aroma."

1/-, 2/-, 3/3, and 5/6.

3d per 2-oz. Packet. VINOLIA VIOLET POWDER.

Sanitary.
Antiseptic.
Soothing.

Specially prepared for Toilet and Nursery use.

In 2-oz. and ¼-lb. Packets, 3d. & 6d.
In ½-lb. Tins, 6d.

WATER SUPPLY.

Send for Illustrated List, No. 49, of

JOHN BLAKE'S Patent Self-Acting HYDRAULIC RAMS

For Raising Water for the Supply of Towns, Villages, Irrigation, Railway Stations, Mansions, Fountains, Farms, &c.
No cost for Motive Power, which is obtained from a Stream of Water passing through the Ram. No Oiling or Packing required. Made in Sizes to raise from 300 to 400,000 gallons per day. Will force to a Height of 800 feet.

Fig. A.—This Ram lifts part of the same water that works it. (Engraved from photo. of Ram which raises 250,000 gallons per day of 24 hours to medium heights, with good working fall.)

This view represents a Ram worked by impure river water, whilst pumping pure water from a well or spring and forcing it to a small reservoir on the hill, at an elevation of 532 ft. and a distance of one mile, from which reservoir the water is gravitated for fire extinguishing and general requirements of mansion, stables, farm, and village.

Fig. B.—This Ram, whilst worked by a stream of impure water, will pump clean water from a well or spring.

TESTIMONIALS.

From A. FIDLER, Esq., Assoc.M.Inst.C.E., Engineer to the Corporation of Blackburn.

Municipal Offices, Blackburn, July 2nd, 1896.

DEAR SIR,—After having had the New Hydraulic Rams at Guide working without intermission for over six months, I am now able to give you the results of the test. A pair of your Rams which we fixed in 1886 to force 16,000 gallons of water per day for the supply of the district of Guide, above our highest reservoir, pumped up much more than that quantity, and worked well until six months ago, when the consumption of water in the district having largely increased, they were superseded by a pair of your latest Patent Rams to raise 50,000 gallons per day. From a test I have recently made, I find their maximum lifting power exceeds 84,000 GALLONS PER DAY, forced through 1,295 yards of delivery pipe, against a head of 190 feet (including pipe friction). From another test made I found that both Rams supplied with 327,816 gallons per day, with a working fall of 32 feet 3 inches, pumped 47,188 gallons per day to a height of 175 feet (including pipe friction), giving 78 PER CENT. OF EFFICIENCY. The new Rams have worked well and continuously, and, having NO METALLIC CLACKS OR VALVES, their action is smooth and without shock. They are extremely simple, and readily adjusted to vary their lifting power. It requires no skill to keep them in order, or put in new working parts, when that comes to be necessary. Considering that the waste driving water from the Rams flows into a lower service reservoir, a very cheap system of supplying the high-level district is thus utilised. The work done by you is of high-class, and very creditable to you.

From COLONEL A. EGERTON, Comptroller and Treasurer of the Household of H.R.H. The Duke of Connaught.

Buckingham Palace, May 14th, 1897.

COLONEL ALFRED EGERTON has much pleasure in acquainting Mr. John Blake that the Hydraulic Ram which he supplied to the Duke of Connaught, at Bagshot Park, two years ago, has continued to work most satisfactorily.

From Messrs. WINTERTON & SONS, Estate Agents, Walton Warren, Burton-on-Trent.

May 25th, 1897.

DEAR SIR,—We are pleased to report as highly satisfactory the working of the Patent "B" Ram which you fixed, to our order, in 1895, at Oaklands Farm, Walton-on-Trent, for Richard Ratcliffe, Esq., of Stanford Hall. The Ram is worked by a small stream of impure water, and forces spring water through 1,267 yards of delivery pipe to a storage tank, 102 feet above the Ram, from which tank you laid a gravitation main and branches, having a total length of 3,645 yards; also 14 cattle troughs, and supply pipe to farm yard, with various draw-off cocks, ball valves, and other fittings. We are pleased to say that you carried out the work to our entire satisfaction, and the Ram has gone well without any cost for repairs. The Ram works very well, and we are perfectly satisfied with the work.

Yours truly, WINTERTON & SONS.

JOHN BLAKE, Limited, Oxford-street Works, ACCRINGTON, LANCASHIRE.

THE advice of the Doctor is undoubtedly the best you can possibly have, and when this gentleman is the Medical Officer of an important ship, he must know a great deal about Sea-Sickness. Sufferers from this distressing malady will be interested in reading what, in the opinion of several well-known Ships' Surgeons, is the best way of preventing or curing it.

ADVICE TO THE SEA-SICK

Dr. R. C. ROBERTSON, of the Anchor Line Steamer "Furnessia," says:—"My short experience has led me to consider CHLOROBROM, a most valuable remedy. Of its value as a palliative there can be no doubt. During the second stage of Sea Sickness, in which Nausea, Retching, Headache, Sleeplessness, and Prostration make life for days and weeks a real burden to many, CHLOROBROM acts in the most kindly way. Several passengers who were confirmed bad sailors, and who were ignorant of the nature of the medicine they were taking, expressed in decided terms their opinion of its good effects, and begged me to let them have a bottle to keep by them."

Dr. GEO. BARBER, Surgeon P. and O. Service, says:—"We met with the usual heavy monsoon from Bombay to Aden—six days—and I found Chlorobrom extremely useful."

PROFESSOR CHARTERIS, Professor at the University of Glasgow, had considerable experience of the effect of Cholorobrom in the treatment of Sea Sickness, and he says:—"I have no hesitation in saying that if administered in a sensible and thorough manner, Chlorobrom will effectively meet each and every symptom of the dreaded sickness."

Dr. JAMES MUNRO, of the Clan Line; Dr. MUAT, of the "Buchanan"; Dr. ARCHIBALD LEISHMAN, of the Transport "Dilwara"; Dr. BELCHER, of the Cunard Service; Dr. H. JOHN BOYD, of the "City of Rome," and many others, are all impressed with the value of CHLOROBROM in Sea Sickness.

From the SOLE Proprietors and Manufacturers, BURGOYNE, BURBIDGES, & COMPY., 16, Coleman-street, London, for 2/9, 4/6, and 7/- a bottle. Travellers should send for a supply.

The Purest and the Nicest.

Hovis Bread

Perfectly Self Digestive.

Hovis Bread is baked and delivered daily by all good class Bakers in the British Isles; Hovis Biscuits are sold by most Grocers and Bakers; or 6d. and 1s. Samples of Bread and Biscuits will be sent on receipt of stamps by HOVIS BREAD FLOUR Co., Ltd., Millers, Macclesfield.

The New Patent

SELF-CLOSING BRACELETS.

NEVER SLIP in whatever position placed.
Delightfully Flexible and Comfortable.
Specially Suitable for Presents; as fit any wrist.

CLOSED.

OPEN.

Made in Plain Gold, also with Gem or Watch Centre.
LARGE VARIETY OF PATTERNS.
Sold by all Leading Jewellers.
WHOLESALE ONLY, SAUNDERS & SHEPHERD, LONDON.

GAMAGE'S "SHORLAND" SHOE.

4/11 and 6/6

Black or Tan.

The "Popular" Shoe, 3s. 11d. The "Ripley" Shoe, 6s. 6d.
The "Referee" Shoe, 10s. 6d.

Send size when ordering by post. 200 Page Catalogue post free anywhere.

GAMAGE, Limited, Holborn, London, E.C.

FARADAY & SON's

Electric Light Fittings

New Designs

(in Classic and Renaissance) for Season '98

2 & 3 BERNERS St. LONDON W

Contracts now in hand include Orders for a Complete Installation of Chadburn's Telegraphs upon THIRTY-TWO of Her Majesty's Ships.
The SUBSCRIPTION LIST is NOW OPEN and will CLOSE TO-DAY, WEDNESDAY, MARCH the 30th, 1898, for Town and Country.

CHADBURN'S (SHIP) TELEGRAPH CO., LIMITED.

Registered under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1890.

CAPITAL, £120,000, divided as follows:—60,000 6 per Cent. Cumulative Preference Shares of £1 each, £60,000; 60,000 Ordinary Shares of £1 each, £60,000; of which 50,000 of each class are now offered for Subscription. The Preference Shares are entitled to a fixed Cumulative Preferential Dividend of 6 per Cent. per annum out of the profits of the Company, and also rank in respect of Capital in priority to the Ordinary Shares. The dividends thereon will be payable on the 1st of October and the 1st of April in each year, the first payment will be due on the 1st of October, 1898, and will be calculated from the date of payment of the instalments. There are no Debentures, and the Articles of Association provide that none can be issued without the consent of the Preference Shareholders, by a resolution passed at a meeting specially convened for the purpose. The Shares are payable as follows:—5s. per Share on Application; 10s. per Share upon Allotment. The Balance in One Month.

DIRECTORS.—William Chadburn, 15, Beech-lawn, Waterloo, Liverpool (Chairman and Managing Director); Thos. Bassnett, 68, Rawson-road, Seaforth, Liverpool; Restal Ratsey Bevis, Jun., 2, Boundary-road, Birkenhead, Civil Engineer; John Hardie, 11, Bothwell-street, Glasgow, Ship Owner; Hugh Muir, 7, Kelvin Grove-terrace, Glasgow, Engineer.

BANKERS.—Lloyds Bank, Limited, Lombard-street, and Branches; The Liverpool Union Bank, Liverpool.

BROKERS.—John Prust & Co., 37, Throgmorton-street, E.C.

AUDITORS.—W. H. Pannell & Co., Basinghall-street, E.C.

SOLICITORS TO THE COMPANY.—Simpson, North, Harley, & Birkett, 1, Water-street, Liverpool.

SOLICITORS FOR THE VENDORS.—Maddisons, 1, King's Arms-yard, E.C.

SECRETARY AND OFFICES (pro tem.).—E. S. G. Malins, 15, Great St. Helens, E.C.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

This Company has been formed to purchase and carry on the old-established businesses of Chadburn & Son Limited, and Thomas Bassnett, Limited, and to acquire certain patents the property of Mr. William Chadburn and Mr. Thomas Bassnett, together with the valuable leases, plant, machinery, stock and goodwill of the businesses, now being carried on in the well-appointed works at Waterloo-road, Liverpool, Bath-street, Liverpool, Paisley-street, Liverpool, Finnieston Quay, Glasgow. There are also branches with the necessary machinery for effecting repairs at Newcastle-on-Tyne, Belfast, and London.

These businesses, which are now private limited companies, have been established for more than half a century, and as the works (which employ upwards of 350 hands) have been from time to time enlarged, the profits have steadily increased.

Mr. George N. Dixon, the well-known Valuer of Liverpool, certifies the "total valuation for building, machinery, and stock belonging to Messrs. Chadburn & Son, Limited, Messrs. Thomas Bassnett, Limited, is thirty-three thousand pounds. The whole of the machinery and tools on the above premises are modern and in excellent condition, well adapted for the business that is being carried on. The stock is quite new, has been made to special order, and is ready for delivery."

Messrs. W. H. Pannell & Co. have examined the books, and certify as follows:—

13, Basinghall-street, E.C., February 16th, 1898.

To the Directors of Chadburn's (Ship) Telegraph Co., Limited.

Gentlemen,—We have examined the books relating to the businesses of Messrs. Chadburn & Son, Limited, and Messrs. Thomas Bassnett, Limited, whose annual Accounts are made up to 31st March and 7th February respectively. We certify the profits, after making proper adjustments in respect of the additional assets proposed to be acquired by your Company, to be as follows:—

For the Financial Year 1895—1896	£6,647	19	5
For the Financial Year 1896—1897	£10,208	0	4
And from the period included in the above figures to 31st December, 1897, at the rate per annum of	£13,569	2	5

No Charge has been made for either Mr. Chadburn's or Mr. Bassnett's Remuneration and Personal Expenses, Interest on Capital, or Depreciation, but all loose Tools purchased, and Repairs have been written off. We are, Gentlemen, yours faithfully, W. H. PANNELL & CO.

To pay 6% on £60,000 6% Preference Shares will require	£3,600
To pay 10% on £60,000 Ordinary Shares will require	£6,000
	£9,600

It will therefore be seen that as the profits up to the end of 1897, being periods of 10 months 3 weeks and 9 months respectively, are at the rate of £13,569 2s. 5d. per annum, the substantial sum of £3,969 2s. 5d. would be left to meet Directors' fees and other contingencies after paying ten per cent. on the Ordinary Shares.

The business of Chadburn & Son, Limited, was founded by the late Mr. C. H. Chadburn over 50 years ago, and in 1865 Mr. William Chadburn became a partner. The manufacture of Ships' Telegraphs was then commenced. These instruments have been continually improved under several patents, the latest and most important of which has recently been approved by the Admiralty for use in Her Majesty's ships. Chadburn Telegraphs are now used in most of the ships of the British Navy and the principal lines of steamers of the Mercantile Marine, including the Peninsular and Oriental, Cunard, Orient, Pacific Steam Navigation, Allan, Royal Mail, Union, North German Lloyd, Compagnie Generale Transatlantique, Hamburg-American, &c. Chadburn Telegraphs are recognised as the first in the market, and have practically no competitors. The continued increase in the demand testifies to the high quality of the workmanship and material employed in their construction. The whole safety of a ship and its crew may depend upon the precise working of the Telegraph, and the present instruments are the outcome of thirty years' experience.

The most important use of Telegraphs on board ship is as a means of communication between the officers on deck who are navigating the vessel and the engineers in the engine room, but they are also used for many other purposes, such as transmitting orders relating to steering, docking, and the working of capstans and anchors; communicating with the look-out, and conveying orders between the engine room and the boiler rooms. A list of the most important Battle Ships, Cruisers, Gunboats, Destroyers, Royal Mail, and other Steamers, upon which Chadburn's Telegraphs are used, accompanies the prospectus. Chadburn & Son, Limited, have also a large and remunerative business as manufacturers of other instruments of a nautical and general nature used in vessels of the various Navies and Mercantile Marines, many of which are of an unique scientific description. The old-established business of Thomas Bassnett, Limited, is of a similar nature and Chadburn's and Bassnett's number amongst their customers all of the principal Steamship Owners and important Ship Builders and Marine Engineers in the country.

During the past two years the capacity of the works has been very much increased (resulting, as will be seen, in a large increase in the profits), but even the latest additions have not proved sufficient, and the present plant and machinery, which are of the latest type, are quite unable to cope with the demand. There is every reason to believe that even if the plant were doubled the orders ahead would more than justify the additional expenditure. The addition of £15,000 to the working capital—which has been arranged for under the terms of the present issue—will enable the Directors to fit up additional workshops with machinery, and thus considerably increase the trade of the Company, especially abroad. Up to the present the home orders have been more than sufficient to keep the works going full time, and no attempt has been made to secure the large trade which could be done with Foreign Admiralties which usually adopt the latest improvements of the English Navy.

Copies of the Prospectus, with Form of Application for Shares, can be obtained at the Offices of the Company, or from their Bankers, Brokers, or Solicitors.

March, 1898.

CARTER 6A NEW CAVENDISH ST. PORTLAND PLACE, LONDON.

ONLY ADDRESS OF ORIGINAL CARTER

LITERARY MACHINE.

For holding book, lamp, meals, &c., in any position over an easychair, bed, or sofa.

Deliciously luxurious. A most useful gift. Prices from 17/6

INVALID FURNITURE.

ADJUSTABLE COUCHES and BEDS from £1. 10/-

Bed Lift £3. 10/-
Reclining Boards, 25/-
Walking Machines
Portable W.C.'s.
Electric Bells,
Urinals, &c.
Air & Water Beds.

Bed Rests 7/6
Leg Rests 10/-
Crutches 10/6
Bed Baths 12/6
Commodes, £1. 5/-

Carrying Chairs from £1.
Breakfast in Bed Tables from 30/-

Self-Propelling Chairs from £2

BATH CHAIRS FROM £1. 5/-

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES POST FREE.

JOHN CARTER. 6a, NEW CAVENDISH ST. Portland-pl. London, W.

These Cigarettes are the Choicest in the Market, and will be appreciated by connoisseurs. Sample Box of 25, Post Free, 2s.

THE VASSO

HIGH-CLASS TURKISH CIGARETTES.

Of the Manufacturers,

LITSICA, MARX & Co.

21, Piccadilly, 84, Strand,

Or at Head Depot-174, HIGH HOLBORN, W.C.

Price List on Application

SPIERS & POND's STORES

QUEEN VICTORIA STREET, E.C. (Opposite St. Paul's Station, L. C. & D. Ry.).

HARDWARE DEPT.

Brass Cage,

WELL LACQUERED,

15/6.

Price Book No. 50 (1,000 pages), Illustrated, Free on application.

SPIERS & POND's STORES,

Queen Victoria-st., E.C

(Opposite St. Paul's Station, L. C. & D. Ry.

MASSAGE AT HOME.

The MATTO CHAIN

Used by Sandow and all the leading Athletes, Cyclists, &c.

Recommended by the Medical Profession.

For Liver Complaints, Rheumatism, and all Nervous Disorders. Prevents Obesity.

Price 7s. 6d. each. By Post, 4d. extra. From all Chemists.

MATTO LIMITED, 32 & 34, Clerkenwell-rd. London, E.C.

SPECIAL NOTICE TO ARCHITECTS.

AN IMPORTANT INVENTION.

The HOMACOUSTIC APPARATUS (Cutmore's System).

A REVOLUTION IN SPEAKING TUBES.

Patented throughout the World. The Telephone superseded for Short Distances. The Homacoustic System is being universally adopted, and is a Leading Feature in all New Buildings.

THOUSANDS ARE IN USE.

The following are a few of the large establishments where the Homacoustic Speaking Tubes are in use:—

W. & A. GILBEY, Pantheon, Oxford-street.
JAMES WILLING, Junr., 125, Strand.
GAZE & SONS, Tourists' Bureau, Strand.
B. A. MOORE, "Cheshire Cheese," Fleet-st.
"TRUTH" Offices, Westminster.
SPIERS & POND, Limited, Head Offices.
ROBERTS & LEETE, 19 to 25, Bermondsey-street, S.E.
R. WAYGOOD & CO., Falmouth-road, S.E.
E. P. SAUNDERS & SON, 81 to 83, Cannon-street.
ALLIANCE ASSURANCE CO., Bartholomew-lane, E.C.
LONDON ASSURANCE, Royal Exchange.
OETZMANN & CO., 67 to 79, Hampstead-road, N.W.
LLOYD'S BANK, Limited, 189, Fleet-street.
— LITHGOE, Esq., 39a, Wimpole-street Oxford-street.
CAPITAL AND COUNTIES BANK, Threadneedle-street, E.C.
STRAITS INSURANCE, Change-alley, Cornhill.
KELLY & CO., London Directory. Holborn.
LONDON AND BIRMINGHAM AND SOUTH WALES BANK, Gracechurch-street, E.C.

TESTIMONIALS.

Atlas Assurance Company, Fire and Life,
92, Cheapside, London, E.C.

Dear Sir,—I have pleasure in stating that I have had one of your Homacoustic Speaking Tube Commutators and Instruments in my room, communicating with seven departments in this office, and that I find the same to work admirably. It is a vast improvement on the old method of a separate mouthpiece for each tube, and it is an invention which I think needs only to be known to command very wide adoption.—I am, dear sir, yours faithfully,

SAML. J. PIPKIN
Secretary.

The Central London Throat and Ear Hospital,
Gray's Inn-road, W.C.,
December 14, 1891.

I have much pleasure in testifying to the excellence of the principle of the Homacoustic Speaking Tube Instruments, as well as to the perfect workmanship of the tubes fitted at this Hospital.

Quite independently of sanitary reasons it is decidedly more agreeable to have a Speaking Tube by which all blowing and breathing into the face are avoided. There is no difficulty whatever in its employment.

LENNOX BROWNE, F.R.C.S.E.,
Senior Surgeon to the Hospital

Beware of Fraudulent Imitations. Infringers will be prosecuted. Send for Explanatory Pamphlet and Price List Free by Post.

THE HOMACOUSTIC COMPANY, Head Offices and Showroom, 6, Bruton-street, New Bond-street, W.

POSITIVELY PRODUCES HAIR.

STOPS IT FALLING OUT.

KEEPS IT ITS NATURAL COLOUR.

PREVENTS IT GOING GREY.

BEST FOR BEARDS AND MOUSTACHES.

"TATCHO"

[THE "GEORGE R. SIMS" HAIR RESTORER.]

GROWS BEAUTIFUL BOUNTIFUL HAIR.

MAKES WOMEN'S TRESSES SOFT AND SILKEN.

A DELIGHTFUL HAIR WASH AND TONIC.

BEST FOR THE TOILET TABLE.

"TATCHO" is sold by all Chemists and Hairdressers throughout the World in Bottles, 2s. 9d. and 5s., or can be had post-free direct from the office, 11, Farringdon-avenue, E.C., on receipt of Postal Order for 3s. or 5s. 4d. Cheques and P.O.'s should be made payable to the "George R. Sims" Hair Restorer Company, and crossed Union Bank.

"GEORGE R. SIMS" HAIR RESTORER COMPANY, Ltd., 11, Farringdon-avenue, City, E.C.

For Longhand, Shorthand, Pen-and-Ink Dra wing, Music-Writing, indeed, whenever a Pen is necessary, use only

Adds immeasurably to Celerity and Comfort in writing. Of all Pens most famous.

Made in 3 sizes only at

10s. 6d.
16s. 6d.
25s.

UP TO £18 18s.

POST FREE.

MABIE, TODD & BARD,

93, Cheapside, London, E.C.

95a, RECENT ST., W., and 3, EXCHANGE ST., MANCHESTER.

A Cup of Chocolat Suchard

accurately prepared, contains all the delicious, soothing, and restorative properties known to exist in Cocoa. Cup for cup, "Chocolat Suchard" is noted for its superiority of flavour and aroma over all other like preparations.

Chocolat Suchard

owes these characteristics not only to the choice materials it is made of, but equally so, perhaps, to the clean and careful methods by which it is uniformly prepared. The recognition of these sterling qualities has led to a largely increased consumption of Chocolat Suchard among the better classes all over the world. Beware of imitations.

All Chocolates, Cocoas and Bonbons bearing the name of Suchard are of the highest quality only.
70 YEARS' REPUTATION.

"The Old Favourite."

MAX GREGER'S

CARLOWITZ

SAFEST,
SOUNDEST
Dinner Wine.

PURE
HUNGARIAN BURGUNDY.

From 15/- per doz.

Of all Wine Merchants and Grocers.

See that every cork bears the brand "Max Greger." Without it the wine is not genuine.

USE ONLY

BLAISDELL PENCILS

SELF-POINTING.

ALL COLOURS. ALL GRADES.
NO WASTE. BEST LEADS.

Black Lead 1d. & 2d. Coloured Crayons 2d. & 3d.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

Sample Box of 5 Pencils 1s., Free by Post in the U.K.

BLAISDELL PENCILS, Ltd., 46, Holborn Viaduct, London, E.C.

THREE GOLD MEDALS.

Exquisite Models. Perfect Fit. Guaranteed Wear.

THE Y & N PATENT DIAGONAL SEAM CORSET

Will not split in the Seams nor tear in the Fabric. Made in White, Black, and all the fashionable colours and Shades in Italian Cloth, Satin, and Coutil, 4/11, 5/11, 6/11, 7/11 per pair and upwards.

CAUTION.—Every genuine Y & N Corset is stamped.

Sold by Drapers and Ladies' Outfitters in the United Kingdom and Colonies

BEST & SAFEST DENTIFRICE

SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS AND PERFUMERS IN ELEGANT CRYSTAL TOILET CASKET PRICE 2/6.

ALSO IN PATENT METALLIC BOX PRICE 1/-

PRESERVE YOUR TEETH
BY USING THE

OS TOOTH BLOCK

Established 20 years

OVER 3000 TESTIMONIALS

BEST AND SAFEST NATURAL APERIENT.

Hunyadi János

"The Prototype of all Bitter Waters."
THE LANCET.

CAUTION.

Every Bottle bears the Signature of the Proprietor, ANDREAS SAXLEHNER.

GLEBE SUGAR REFINING Co., GREENOCK, GLASGOW, & St GEORGE'S-HOUSE, LONDON, E.C.

NICOLE FRÈRES' POLYPHON MUSICAL BOX

Is the greatest novelty of the age. It plays to perfection any selections of secular or sacred music desired. It is not a toy but a delightful musical instrument. All Dealers, or write for No. 50 Catalogue, post free. From 16s. 6d. to 50 Guineas.

NICOLE FRÈRES Ltd., 21, Ely Place London, E.C.
Established 1815.

WATER ABSOLUTELY FREE FROM DISEASE GERMS, BY USING THE

BERKEFELD FILTER.

Full Illustrated Price List and Testimonials free on application.

FILTER H. AS SKETCH, 42s.

SMALLER SIZE, 25s.

Extract from the Special Report to the British Medical Journal on "The Relative Efficiency of Water Filters," by Drs. Sims Woodhead and Cartwright Wood, Jan. 22nd, 1898. "Experiments were carried out with the Filter H, an exceedingly good model which seems to subserve the functions of a Filter better than any we have yet seen described. . . . The output is so large that there is no reason why such Filters should not supply sufficient water for all household requirements. These Berkefeld Filters afford complete protection against the communication of waterborne disease."—Offices and Showrooms :—

THE BERKEFELD FILTER CO., Ltd., 121, Oxford-street, London, W.
City Depot : W. SCHACHT & CO., 26, Finsbury-pavement, London, E.C.

SALE OF

SILVER PENCILS.

Having purchased a huge Stock of 6s. 6d. and 8s. Solid Silver Hall Marked Pencils at an all-round price of 1s. 9½d. each, we are clearing them as follows :—

1,020 to be Sold at 9d. each.
750 to be Sold at 1s. 3d. each.
1,892 to be Sold at 2s. 11d. each.

WATCHMAKERS' ALLIANCE LTD.,
227, Regent-st., & 184, Oxford-st., London.

The Coming Easter Holidays.

Bexhill-on-Sea

WITHIN TWO HOURS OF LONDON.

BEXHILL-ON-SEA BEXHILL-ON-SEA

UNEQUALLED ATTRACTIONS.

SPECIAL ENGAGEMENT
OF
HERR WURM'S FAMOUS WHITE VIENNESE BAND.
FOR THE WHOLE SEASON, COMMENCING ON EASTER EVE.

FINEST GOLF LINKS
ON THE SOUTHERN COAST.

EARL DE LA WARR'S CYCLE TRACK.
(One mile in extent).

SPECIAL FEATURES
OF
BEXHILL-ON-SEA.

1. Bracing and Invigorating Climate. Good Boating and Bathing. Delightful Excursions.
2. Admirable Supply of Purest Water.
3. SPLENDID SEA FRONT under private control and entirely free from the usual Seaside nuisances.

EASTER EASTER

THE SACKVILLE HOTEL

Highest-Class Establishment,

WITH EVERY MODERN IMPROVEMENT AND LUXURY, AT MODERATE PRICES.

PROPRIETORS—Messrs. FREDERICK GEORGE & CO. FOR TARIFF APPLY TO MANAGER.

EXCELLENT TRAIN SERVICE BY L. B. & S. C. RAILWAY.

VICTORIA.	LONDON BRIDGE.	BEXHILL.
—	Dept....6 30 a.m.	Arrive...8 27 a.m.
Dept....9 50 a.m.	9 45	12 2 p.m.
12 0	—	2 19
—	12 5 p.m.	2 29
1 30 p.m.	—	3 55
—	2 5	4 0
3 23	—	5 17
—	4 5	6 6
4 30	—	6 45
—	5 5	7 9
6 50	7 0	9 28
9 45	9 55	11 54

Trains leave Bexhill for London about every hour from 6.26 a.m. to 9.29 p.m.

N.B.—Persons desiring information of any kind concerning Bexhill-on-Sea are invited to apply at Earl De La Warr's Estate Office.

The Subscription List will open Wednesday, the 30th day of March, 1898, and will close at or before Four o'clock on the following day.

HUGGINS & COMPANY, LIMITED.

(Registered under the Companies Acts, 1862-1893.)

35,000 Ordinary Shares of £10 each	£350,000
50,000 4½ per Cent. Cumulative Preference Shares of £10 each ...	500,000
3½ per Cent. First Mortgage Irredeemable Debenture Stock	550,000
	£1,400,000

The First Mortgage Irredeemable Debenture Stock will be secured by a specific mortgage on all the freehold and leasehold properties of the Company, and by a floating charge on the general undertaking, power being reserved to the Company to sell, exchange, and lease their freehold and leasehold property. In the event of any of the property being sold, the net proceeds must be applied in the purchase of hereditaments, which will be vested in the Trustees, or employed in the improvement and development of the mortgaged premises, or the erection of fixed machinery or plant, or invested in the purchase in the market of Stock of this issue, or invested in the names of the Trustees to be used for any of these purposes. The interest on the Debenture Stock will be payable on the 1st day of October and the 1st day of April in each year, but the first Interest on the Debenture Stock, which will be calculated on instalments from their date of payment, will be payable on the 1st June, 1898. If the Debenture Stock shall at any time become payable owing to the voluntary winding up of the Company, it shall be redeemed at a value to be calculated according to the average mean market value in London of the Stock during the three years immediately preceding the date when the security becomes enforceable, but so that the value shall not be less than £110 per £100 Stock.

The Preference Shares will have priority as to capital, and will be entitled to a Cumulative Preferential Dividend at the rate of 4½ per cent. per annum, payable on the 1st day of December and the 1st day of June in each year. An Interim Dividend on the Preference Shares, which will be calculated on instalments from their date of payment, will be payable on the 1st June, 1898.

11,650 Ordinary Shares, 25,000 4½% Preference Shares, and £413,600 3½% First Mortgage Irredeemable Debenture Stock will be retained for the Debenture Stock and Shareholders of the Old Company.

Issue at par of—

23,350 Ordinary Shares of £10 each,
25,000 4½% Cumulative Preference Shares of £10 each, and £136,400 3½% First Mortgage Irredeemable Debenture Stock.

PAYABLE AS FOLLOWS:—

	SHARES.	DEBENTURE STOCK.
On Application,	£1 per Share,	£10 per cent.
On Allotment,	£4 per Share,	£40 per cent.
On 31st May, 1898,	£5 per Share,	£50 per cent.

Payment in full may be made on Allotment, interest on prepayment being allowed at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum.

Of the above, 7,648 Ordinary Shares, 9,121 4½ per Cent. Preference Shares and £59,270 3½ per Cent. First Mortgage Irredeemable Debenture Stock, have been applied for by depositors, customers and other connections of the Company.

DIRECTORS.

John Frederick Huggins (Chairman).
Edward Huggins.
Herbert George Huggins.
Albert Edward Huggins.

TRUSTEES FOR THE FIRST MORTGAGE IRREDEEMABLE DEBENTURE STOCK.

Thomas Fenn. John Frederick Huggins.

BANKERS.—Lloyds Bank, Limited, 72, Lombard-street, London, E.C.
BROKERS.—Fenn & Crosthwaite, 44, Coleman-street, London, E.C.
AUDITOR.—T. P. Scrivener, F.C.A., 9, Fleet-street, London, E.C.
SOLICITORS.—Bircham & Co., 50, Old Broad-street, London, E.C., and 46, Parliament-street, S.W.; G. J. Coldham, 8, New Inn, Strand.
SECRETARY and OFFICES.—E. Giudici, Lion Brewhouse, Broad-street, Golden-square, London, W.

The Company has been incorporated to acquire the well-known brewery undertaking carried on by the Company of the same name which was itself incorporated in the year 1894 to carry on the brewery undertaking of John Huggins & Co., at Lion Brewhouse, Broad-street, Golden-square. This business had previously been in the possession of the family for over 50 years.

Since the date of incorporation of the Old Company the business has very largely increased, and it is essential that further capital should be raised for the purpose of meeting the requirements of the trade and extending business by the purchase of new properties. On the 30th September, 1893, from which date the Old Company took over the business, the Brewery premises, the freehold and leasehold properties, loans on mortgage, stock, book debts, cash balances, and other assets were valued at £310,606 8s. 1d. The corresponding items on the Old Company's books on the 30th September, 1897, stood at £812,801 3s. 5d.

The New Company will acquire the business as from the 30th day of September, 1897.

The following report has been made by Mr. T. P. Scrivener, F.C.A., who has for many years past regularly audited the books of the brewery.

Legal & General Chambers, 9, Fleet-street,
London, E.C., March 21st, 1898.

To HUGGINS & CO., LTD.

DEAR SIRS,—I hereby certify that I have examined the books and accounts of the business and find that since it was taken over by Huggins & Co, Limited (Old Company), as from the 30th September, 1893, the net profits, before charging interest and Directors' remuneration, but after providing for ample depreciation, were—

For the year ending September 30th,	1894	£27,761 15 11
" "	1895	35,110 8 0
" "	1896	45,502 1 1
" "	1897	65,532 2 11

The net assets of the Old Company, which are taken over by the New Company, as shewn by the last Balance Sheet, which I audited for the year ending 30th September, 1897, exclusive of goodwill, amounted to £812,801 3s. 5d., and were made up as follows:—

Freeholds, Leaseholds, Public Houses, Plant, &c.	£277,726 9 8
Loans to Customers on Mortgage	490,844 12 11
Stock of Malt, Hops, Book Debts, &c.	23,299 19 6
Cash at Bankers	20,930 1 4

I also certify that the net rents of Public Houses and other property, together with the interest on money lent on Mortgage, exclusive of any profit from the brewing business very largely exceed the amount required to pay the interest on the Debenture Stock.

Yours faithfully, T. P. SCRIVENER.

The sum to be reserved out of the new issue for extending the business and purchasing new properties is £300,000, on which when fully utilised it is estimated that an additional profit of £20,000 per annum will be earned.

The amount required for payment of interest on the Debenture Stock, and dividend on the Preference Shares, is £41,750.

Huggins & Company, Limited (Old Company), are the promoters, and have fixed the price at £1,100,000 (which does not include £25,000 in respect of the profits of the business from the 30th September, 1897 to the date of the agreement for sale), for the whole of the above business and assets. This is to be paid or satisfied as to £116,500 in Fully Paid Ordinary Shares £250,000 in Fully Paid 4½ per cent. Preference Shares £413,600 in 3½ per cent. First Mortgage Irredeemable Debenture Stock and the balance in cash, and they will pay the whole of the expenses of incorporation of the New Company, and the transfer of the property and business to it.

The holders of Preference Shares will be entitled to attend and vote at the General Meetings of the Company for reducing the Capital, sanctioning the sale, or altering the regulations of the Company, or any question directly affecting their rights and privileges.

There are numerous Contracts in existence of the ordinary trade character, and Subscribers will be held to have had notice thereof, and to have agreed with the Company as Trustees for the Directors and the Old Company to waive any claim they may have against them for not more fully complying with the requirements of the Companies Act, 1867.

Copies of the Memorandum and Articles of Association and the agreement dated 28th day of March, 1898, between Huggins & Company, Limited, in Liquidation, and John Frederick Huggins, Liquidator, of the first part, Huggins & Company, Limited, of the second part, and John Frederick Huggins, Edward Huggins, Herbert George Huggins and Albert Edward Huggins of the third part, and the form of First Mortgage Irredeemable Debenture Stock Certificate, and the form of the Mortgage and Trust Deed can be inspected at the Offices of Messrs. Bircham & Co., 50, Old Broad-street, E.C.

Prospectuses and Application Forms may be had at the Offices of the Company their Bankers and Brokers.

Applications should be made on the respective forms and sent to Lloyds Bank, Limited, 72, Lombard-street, E.C., accompanied by a deposit of 10 per cent. on the amount applied for. In case of no allotment, deposits will be returned in full, and when the amount allotted is less than that subscribed for, the balance of the deposit will be applied towards the payment due on allotment. Failure to pay at the due date any instalment, will render the allotment liable to cancellation, and previous payments to forfeiture.

A quotation on the Official List of the Stock Exchange for the Shares and First Mortgage Irredeemable Debenture Stock will be applied for in due course.

March 28th, 1898.

THE
LIVERPOOL & LONDON & GLOBE
INSURANCE COMPANY.
Invested Funds ... ... £9,328,708.
FIRE. LIFE. ENDOWMENTS. ANNUITIES.
Fire Insurances Effected on Most Favourable Terms.
Life Bonuses Large, either in Cash or Additions to Sum Assured.
Life Policy-holders may so insure as to participate in NINE-TENTHS OF THE PROFITS of their class.
EQUITABLE RATES. MODERATE EXPENSES.
Head Offices: 1, DALE STREET, LIVERPOOL; 7, CORNHILL, LONDON.

PRUDENTIAL ASSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.—Holborn Bars, London.
EVERY DESCRIPTION OF LIFE ASSURANCE AND ANNUITY BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
REVERSIONS PURCHASED.
Invested Funds, £30,000,000.
The last Annual Report can be obtained on application to the Secretary.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE INSURERS.
THE IMPERIAL INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED. FIRE. Est. 1803, 1, Old Broad-st., E.C., & 22, Pall Mall, S.W. Subd. Capital, £1,200,000. Paid-up, £300,000. Total funds, over £1,500,000.—E. COZENS SMITH, Gen. Man.

BIRKBECK BANK (Estab. 1851), Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane, London. Two and a-half per cent. Interest allowed on deposits, repayable on demand. Two per cent. on current accounts, on the minimum monthly balances when not below £100.
The BIRKBECK ALMANACK with particulars, post free.
FRANCIS RAVENSCROFT, Manager.

H. HALFORD and COMPANY,
70 and 71,
Palmerston Buildings,
Old Broad Street,
London.
ESTABLISHED 1869.

Business in Stocks and Shares at close prices.
Dealings reported by wire if required.
Prompt Settlements.
Thousands of Testimonials from Clients.
Americans and Canadians a Speciality. Also Westralians and Kaffirs.
Lists of Closing Prices gratis.
Telegrams: "Monitor, London."
NO CONNECTION WITH ANY OTHER FIRM.

LONDON AND COUNTY ADVANCE AND DISCOUNT COMPANY, Limited.—Cash advanced from £10 to £500, without preliminary fees or deductions for interest, for short or long periods, repayable by easy instalments, at moderate rates, upon approved security. Bills Discounted. Forms free. Offices, 57 and 58, Chancery-lane, W.C.—JOHN STONE, Secretary.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.
Clarke's "Pyramid" and "Fairy" Light Co., Ltd., Cricklewood, London, N.W.

The List of Applications will Open on Tuesday, the 29th March, 1898, and Close on or before Wednesday, the 30th March, 1898, for Town and Country.

DR. TIBBLES' VI-COCOA

(1898), LIMITED.

Incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1893.

CAPITAL - £400,000,

DIVIDED INTO

200,000 Six per Cent. Cumulative Preference Shares of £1 each	£200,000
200,000 Ordinary Shares of £1 each	200,000
	£400,000

The Preference Shares will be entitled to a fixed Cumulative Preferential Dividend of Six per cent. per annum, payable half-yearly on the 1st January and 1st July in each year, and will also be entitled to rank in respect of Capital in priority to the Ordinary Shares.

The whole of the Ordinary Shares are taken by the Vendors in part payment of the purchase money.

Issue of 200,000 Six per Cent. Cumulative Preference Shares of £1 each at par, payable as follows:—2s. 6d. per Share on Application; 7s. 6d. per Share on Allotment; 10s. per Share one month after Allotment.—Total £1.

DIRECTORS.

Alderman W. P. Treloar, J.P., Ludgate Hill, London, E.C.
J. H. Tronncer, M.D. (Deputy-Chairman of the British Empire Mutual Life Assurance Company.)
Thomas Smith (Chairman), S. T. Williamson, J. H. Osborne, C. H. Williamson, } Directors of Dr. Tibbles' Vi-Cocoa, Limited (the Vendor Company).

CONSULTING CHEMISTS.—T. Horne Redwood, F.I.C., F.C.S. A. J. de Hailes, F.I.C., F.C.S.

BANKERS.—The City Bank, Limited, Threadneedle-street, London, E.C.; and all Branches.

SOLICITORS.—Martin & Nicholson, 29, Queen-street, London, E.C.

AUDITORS.—T. Fredk. Thorne, Lancaster, & Co., Chartered Accountants, 10, Ironmonger-lane, London, E.C.

BROKERS.—Orwin, Monier-Williams & Co., 5, Tokenhouse-yard, London, E.C. F. W. Bentley & Co., Estate Buildings, Huddersfield.

SECRETARY.—G. Brooks Smalley.

REGISTERED OFFICES.—60, 61, & 62, Bunhill-row, London, E.C.

PROSPECTUS.

This Company has been formed for the purpose of acquiring, as a going concern, the well-known business and assets of Dr. Tibbles' Vi-Cocoa, Limited, and of carrying on, developing and extending the same.

The New Company acquires the leasehold premises, plant and machinery, fixtures, fittings, stock-in-trade, book debts, trade marks, formulæ and all other assets of the Vendor Company, including the valuable goodwill of the business, as from the 1st day of March, 1898, and undertakes to pay and discharge the liabilities of the Vendor Company existing at that date, amounting to £21,801 10s. 1d.

The business is carried on upon extensive, well erected and admirably adapted leasehold premises—Nos. 60, 61 and 62, Bunhill-row; Nos. 55, 56, 57 and 58, Featherstone-street, Finsbury; Henry-street, Gray's Inn-road; and Church-street, Minories.

The present business was commenced by the Vendor Company, who are the promoters of this Company, on the 6th December, 1895. A large sum of money has been judiciously expended in advertising and placing Dr. Tibbles' Vi-Cocoa before the public. There are upwards of 22,500 trade customers on the books of the Company, and it is proposed to make a liberal allotment to such of them as apply for shares.

From the way in which Dr. Tibbles' Vi-Cocoa has been received in all countries where introduced, the Directors are of opinion that a most profitable foreign trade can be developed, and it is their intention to employ a portion of the working capital provided by this issue for the further development of the trade in the Colonies and abroad.

The Directors of the Vendor Company, who have brought Dr. Tibbles' Vi-Cocoa to its present unrivalled position, continue on the New Board; and, as they take the whole of the Ordinary Shares in part payment of the purchase of the business, their confidence in its continued prosperity is clearly shown.

The first year ending 30th November, 1896, was charged with the heavy expenses incident to the establishment of the business; these expenses, added to the cost of advertising, amounted to over £40,000, and exceeded the profit on sales by the sum of £6,832 15s. 11d. The result of the subsequent trading will be seen from the following Certificates:—

1, Queen Victoria-street, Mansion House, London, E.C., 24th March, 1898.

To the Chairman and Directors of DR. TIBBLES' VI-COCOA (1898), Limited.

Gentlemen,—In accordance with your request we have made an examination of the books of Dr. Tibbles' Vi-Cocoa, Limited, from 1st December, 1896, to 28th February, 1898, and certify that the net profits have been as follows:—

For the period from 1st December, 1896, to 25th November, 1897	£72,832 15 7
The net profits from 26th November, 1897, to 28th February, 1898 (say three months) exceeded	£25,000 0 0

The above results are arrived at after charging all Advertising and other expenses, Depreciation and Bad Debts, but not Income Tax or Directors' Fees.

Yours faithfully, CHATTERIS, NICHOLS & CO., Chartered Accountants.

To the Chairman and Directors of DR. TIBBLES' VI-COCOA (1898), Limited.

Gentlemen,—We have regularly audited the books of Dr. Tibbles' Vi-Cocoa, Limited, from the commencement of the Company, and concur in the certificate of Messrs. Chatteris, Nichols & Co.

Yours faithfully, T. FREDK. THORNE, LANCASTER & CO.

March 24th, 1898. Chartered Accountants.

The amount required to pay the dividend on the Preference Shares is £12,000, whilst the certified profits of the last completed year amounted to £72,832 15s. 7d.

The purchase price has been fixed at the sum of £300,000, payable as to £200,000 in Ordinary Shares, and as to the balance in cash; leaving £100,000 as extra working capital. The new Company pays interest on the purchase-money at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum from March 1st, 1898, until completion, and takes the profits of the business from that date.

Apart from the well-known trade marks, trade names, and the valuable goodwill of the business, the assets acquired by the new Company include the stock-in-trade, book debts, plant, machinery, fixtures, fittings, furniture, utensils, leases, &c., as they stood in the books at the date of the last stock-taking, and guaranteed by the Vendor Company (after deducting the liabilities) to be of the net value of £100,436, to which should be added the extra working capital above referred to, making a total of £200,436.

The Directors intend to create a Reserve Fund out of the annual profits, and provision for this is made in the Articles of Association.

The contract of sale is dated the 24th day of March, 1898, and is made between Dr. Tibbles' Vi-Cocoa, Limited, as Vendors of the one part, and Dr. Tibbles Vi-Cocoa (1898), Limited, of the other part. The Vendors have entered into a Contract with Williamson, Murray, & Co., dated 17th March, 1898, under which the latter firm guarantee the subscription of a portion of the Capital now issued. These Contracts and the Memorandum and Articles of Association as well as the Accountants' Certificates may be inspected at the Offices of the Company's Solicitors. Williamson, Murray, & Co. have entered into sub-contracts, to which this Company is not a party.

The Vendor Company pays all expenses of, and incident to, the registration of the new Company and of this issue.

The business will be taken over subject to all existing contracts. These are of the ordinary trade character, and as they include numerous contracts with employés, agents, customers, and others, they cannot be more particularly specified. There may be also other contracts which technically fall within Section 38 of the Companies Act 1867. Applicants for shares will be deemed to have had notice thereof, and to have waived their right, if any, to be supplied with particulars of such contracts.

Application will be made to the London Stock Exchange in due course for an official quotation and settlement.

Applications for Shares may be made on the accompanying form and sent to the Company's Bankers, together with a remittance for the amount of the deposit.

Where no Allotment is made the deposit will be returned in full, and where the number of Shares allotted is less than the number applied for, the balance of the deposit will be applied towards the amount due on Allotment. Failure to pay any instalment when due will render previous payments liable to forfeiture.

Prospectuses and forms of Application can be obtained at the Offices of the Company, or from the Bankers, Brokers, or Solicitors, and from Williamson, Murray, & Co., 1, Moorgate-place, London, E.C.

60, 61, & 62, Bunhill-row, London, E.C., March 25th, 1898.

THIS FORM OF APPLICATION MAY BE USED.

To the Directors of

DR. TIBBLES' VI-COCOA (1898), Limited.

GENTLEMEN,—Having paid to the Company's Bankers the sum of £....., being a deposit of Two Shillings and Sixpence per Share on.....Six per Cent. Cumulative Preference Shares of £1 each in the above-named Company, I request you to allot me that number of Preference Shares, upon the terms of the Company's Prospectus dated March 25th, 1898, and I agree to accept the same, or any smaller number that may be allotted to me, and to make the remaining payments in respect thereof at the dates specified in the said Prospectus, and I authorise you to register me as the holder of the said Preference Shares, and I agree with the Company (as Trustee for the Directors and other persons liable) to waive any claim I may have against them for not more fully complying in the said Prospectus with Section 38 of the Companies' Act, 1867.

Please write distinctly.

Name (in full).....

Address (in full).....

Description.....

(Please say if Mrs., Miss, Rev., or other distinctive description).

Date ..... 1898.

Signature.....

The Subscription Lists will close at Four p.m. To-morrow (Friday).

THOMAS PHILLIPS & CO., LIM.

Brewers, Maltsters, &c., West Malling, Dover, and Camberwell.

Incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1893.

SHARE CAPITAL - - £160,000,

Divided into 16,000 Five and a Half per Cent. Cumulative Preference Shares of £5 each and 80,000 Ordinary Shares of £1 each,

ALSO FIRST MORTGAGE DEBENTURE STOCK £100,000
Redeemable at the Company's option (on six months' notice after June 30, 1908) at 105.

The First Mortgage Debenture stock will be secured by a First Mortgage to the Trustees for the Debenture stockholders of the whole of the Company's freehold and leasehold properties mentioned in the Valuer's Report, and by a floating charge upon the undertaking, together with all the other assets of the Company referred to in the said Report.

The Debenture stock will be registered in the Books of the Company, and will be transferable in sums of £10 and multiples thereof.

The interest on the Debenture Stock and the dividend on the Preference Shares will be payable half-yearly, in the months of January and July; the first payment, calculated from the dates fixed for payment of the instalments, being made on July 1, 1898.

The Preference Shares are preferred both as to Capital and Dividend.

ISSUE OF

£100,000 of 4½ per cent. First Mortgage Debenture Stock at par, payable
£10 per cent. on application.
40 ,, allotment.
50 ,, May 1, 1898.

and

£70,000 in 5½ per cent. Cumulative Preference Shares of £5 each at par, payable
£1 0 0 on application.
1 10 0 on allotment.
2 10 0 on May 1, 1898.

 And 70,000 Ordinary Shares of £1 each, which are taken by the Vendor in part payment of the purchase-money. The remainder of the Preference and Ordinary Shares is reserved for future issue if, and when, necessary for the provision of further working capital.

TRUSTEES FOR THE DEBENTURE STOCKHOLDERS.

The Ocean Accident and Guarantee Corporation, Limited, 40 to 44, Moorgate-street, E.C.

DIRECTORS.

Sir Edward Sullivan, Bart., 104, Pall Mall, S.W., Chairman.
George Clarke, Esq., Rayne, Braintree, Essex.
J. W. Rogerson, Esq. (Managing Director of W. & G. Bartram, Ltd., Brewers, Tonbridge, Kent.)
*Thomas Phillips, Esq., The Abbey Brewery, West Malling, Kent (Managing Director).
Humphrey Wickham, Esq., Nettlestead Court, Maidstone, Kent.
* Will join the Board after completion of purchase.

BANKERS.

London and County Banking Company, Limited, 21, Lombard-street, London, E.C.; Maidstone, and all other Branches.

BROKERS.

Messrs. Lumsden & Myers, 18, Finch-lane, and Stock Exchange, London, E.C.

SOLICITORS.

Messrs. Mellor, Smith & May, 1, Moorgate-place, London, E.C.

AUDITORS.

Messrs. Tingle, Comber & Co., Chartered Accountants, 110, Cannon-street, London, E.C.

SECRETARY.—Victor Fabini.

OFFICES.

The Abbey Brewery, West Malling, Kent.
LONDON TRANSFER OFFICE: 110, Cannon-street, London.

PROSPECTUS.

This Company has been formed to acquire as a going concern from Mr. Thomas Phillips, Brewer, Maltster, and Wine and Spirit Merchant, of West Malling, Kent, the very old-established Freehold Breweries, known as "The Abbey Brewery," West Malling, Kent, the "Diamond Brewery," Dover, and the "Park Brewery," Camberwell, London, S.E.; also seventy licensed properties held therewith, of which eighteen are Freehold, forty-two Leasehold, and ten Annual Tenancies or tied by Loan; also the Freehold Residence and 22-Quarter Freehold Malting attached to the Brewery at Dover; the Freehold Residence and 40-Quarter Leasehold Maltings attached to the Brewery at West Malling; and the Freehold Residence attached to the Brewery at Camberwell, together with the fixed plant and machinery, rolling and loose plant, consumable stores, book debts partly secured by guarantee, loans, and all other the undertaking and assets of the said business as detailed in the Valuers' report.

THE ABBEY BREWERY, WEST MALLING, KENT, comprising an area of over an acre of freehold ground, is favourably situate on the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway, between Sevenoaks and Maidstone. Established over a century ago, it was entirely rebuilt in 1891, and has since been enlarged to supply the whole of the present and constantly increasing trade, and estimates have been prepared to increase the present capacity to an output of about 1,200 barrels a week, so as to provide for the supply of new houses which the Directors intend from time to time to acquire as favourable opportunity offers. It has an unlimited and unfailing supply of the finest brewing water, obtained from an artesian well on the premises. It is well and fully equipped with the most recent and improved plant and machinery for the manufacture of beer—all the fixed vessels being composed of copper and oak.

It is the intention of the Directors to utilise the additional working capital provided by this issue in such a way as to enable them to concentrate the whole of the brewing operations of the Company at the Abbey Brewery, thus effecting an enormous economy in the general working expenses that have hitherto been incurred.

The Wine and Spirit trade can be developed, and attention will be paid to this department.

THE DIAMOND BREWERY, DOVER, with its Malting, Residence, gardens and yards comprising a freehold of over an acre in extent, is situate at Maxton, the most rapidly rising residential suburb of Dover. Established in 1849, its trade has increased largely. The proximate construction of a National Harbour of Refuge by the Government (contracts for which, at a cost of £3,500,000, have already been signed) must tend considerably to increase the importance and population of the town, with a consequent enhancement of the prosperity of the business.

THE PARK BREWERY, CAMBERWELL, LONDON, S.E., occupying a Freehold area of about half an acre, has excellent offices, cellarage, store rooms, and stables. The Brewery was established in 1851, and has an excellent trade. The premises are well suited and adapted for use as Stores, for the London trade, and it is the intention of the Directors to use them for this purpose.

VALUATION.—The above-mentioned Property has been surveyed and reported on by Messrs. Bromley, Son, & Kelday, Brewery Valuers and Accountants, of 21, Finsbury-pavement, London, E.C., and their Report, addressed to the Directors of this Company, will be found in extenso herewith. From a perusal thereof it will be seen that, exclusive of goodwill, the value of the three Breweries with the Freehold and Leasehold houses attached, together with the value of the Fixed Plant, Rolling and Loose Plant, and Fixtures, is £215,105 16 0 to which must be added the extra working Capital provided by this issue, viz. 30,000 0 0 making a total of £245,105 16 0
as security for the £100,000 Debenture stock.

Messrs. Bromley, Son, & Kelday state that "in the above valuation we do not include any goodwill"; and "many of the houses have a large premium value, which does not enter into our calculations."

From the foregoing extracts it will be observed that the actual assets of the Company—exclusive of goodwill—exceed in value the amount of the purchase price.

PROFITS.—Messrs. Bromley, Son, & Kelday further state in their report that the net average annual profits for the past two years have amounted to upwards of £12,730 5s., and that in their opinion this amount will be considerably increased when the projected alterations and improvements in working arrangements are effected.

Interest on the Debenture Stock (£100,000 at 4½ per cent.) will absorb .. £4,500
Dividend on the Preference Shares issued (£70,000 at 5½ per cent.) will absorb 3,850
£8,350

It will thus be noticed that, assuming no increase of business, the Interest on the Debenture Stock and the Dividend on the Preference Shares are exceedingly well covered. Mr. Thomas Phillips takes the present issue of Ordinary Shares in part payment of the purchase consideration.

MANAGEMENT.—Mr. Thomas Phillips has agreed to further identify himself with the success of the enterprise, by undertaking to act as Managing Director for a period of not less than three years, and the constitution of the directorate is sufficient guarantee that the interests of the subscribers to this issue will be adequately protected.

WORKING CAPITAL.—The capitalisation of the Company will permit the introduction of £30,000 as working capital from the present issue, and £20,000 from future issues. This will be utilised to effect the arrangements and alterations referred to above, and to support the natural development of the Company's resources.

PURCHASE PRICE.—The Vendor (who is the promoter of the Company, and as regards the Dover and Camberwell properties is reselling to the Company at a profit) has fixed the purchase price for the properties previously referred to at £210,000, payable as to £70,000 by the allotment to him of Ordinary Shares and, as to the balance, in cash, or partly in cash and partly in Debenture Stock and/or Preference Shares, at the option of the Company, the stock-in-trade, loans, and book debts being taken by the Company at a price to be agreed or determined by valuation. The Vendor undertakes to apply in the ordinary way for one-third of the Debenture Stock and Preference Shares now offered for subscription, but will not be entitled to preferential allotment. The Vendor also agrees to pay all the expenses of the formation of this Company and this issue up to the first general allotment. Conveyancing charges and stamp duties will be paid by this Company.

Application will be made in due course to the Committee of the Stock Exchange for a settlement in, and quotation of, the Debenture Stock and Preference Shares.

CONTRACTS.—The following Contracts have been entered into, viz.:—

(1) Contract, dated March 29, 1898, between Thomas Phillips of the one part, and this Company of the other part, being the Contract for sale to this Company of all the property and assets enumerated in the schedule thereto.

(2) Contract, dated March 29, 1898, between Thomas Phillips of the one part, and this Company of the other part, being the Contract under which Mr. Phillips acts as Managing Director of the Company.

In addition to the above, there are the contracts under which the said Thomas Phillips acquires the Dover and Camberwell properties, and numerous contracts with employees, customers, manufacturers, and others; also contracts relating to the formation of this Company, underwriting the capital now offered, and otherwise, which may fall within Section 38 of the Companies Act, 1867. Applicants for Debenture Stock or Preference Shares are to be deemed to have notice of such contracts, and to have agreed with the Company as trustees for the Dircetors, and any other persons liable, to waive any claim they may have, for not more fully complying with the requirements of Section 38 of the Companies Act, 1867, or otherwise, and applications will only be received on this footing.

The Memorandum and Articles of Association of the Company, the Draft of the Trust Deed securing the Debenture Stock, the Valuers' Report and Certificate, and the above-mentioned Contracts for Sale and appointment of Managing Director, may be inspected by intending applicants at the Offices of the Company's Solicitors.

Applications for Debenture Stock and Preference Shares should be made on the accompanying forms, and forwarded to the Bankers, or any of their branches, with a remittance for the amount of deposit.

Where no allotment is made the deposit will be returned without deduction, and where the amount of Debenture stock or number of shares allotted is less than that applied for, the surplus will be credited in reduction of the amount payable on allotment, and any excess returned to the applicant.

Prospectuses with forms of application may be obtained from the Bankers, Brokers, Solicitors, and Auditors, or at the offices of the Company.

March 29, 1898.

THOMAS PHILLIPS & COMPANY, LIMITED.

Incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1893.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR FIVE AND A HALF PER CENT. CUMULATIVE PREFERENCE SHARES.

To the Directors of
THOMAS PHILLIPS & COMPANY, LIMITED.

GENTLEMEN,—Having paid to your Bankers the sum of £..... as a deposit of £1 per Share on Application for.....5½ per Cent. Cumulative Preference Shares of £5 each, I request you to allot me that number of such Shares, and I agree to accept the same, or any smaller number that may be allotted to me upon the terms of the Company's prospectus, dated March 29, 1898, and to pay £1 10s. per Share on Allotment, and £2 10s. per Share on May 1, 1898, as provided by the Prospectus, and I declare that I waive any fuller compliance with Section 38 of the Companies Act, 1867, or otherwise, than that contained in such Prospectus.

Please write distinctly and give full Permanent Address.
Name (in full) .....
Description or Title .....
Address .....
Date.....1898.
Signature.....

THOMAS PHILLIPS & COMPANY, LIMITED.

Incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1893.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR FIRST MORTGAGE FOUR AND A HALF PER CENT. DEBENTURE STOCK.

To the Directors of
THOMAS PHILLIPS & COMPANY, LIMITED.

GENTLEMEN,—Having paid to your Bankers the sum of £..... as a deposit of £10 per cent. on £..... First Mortgage Four and a Half per Cent. Debenture Stock, I request you to allot me that amount of such Debenture Stock, and I agree to accept the same, or any smaller amount that may be allotted to me, upon the terms of the Company's Prospectus, dated March 29, 1898, and to pay £40 per cent. on allotment, and £50 per cent. on May 1, 1898, as provided by the Prospectus, and I declare that I waive any fuller compliance with Section 38 of the Companies Act, 1867, or otherwise, than that contained in such Prospectus.

Please write distinctly and give full Permanent Address.
Name (in full) .....
Description or Title.....
Address.....
Date.....1898.
Signature.....

The Subscription List will be Opened on Monday, the 28th March, 1898, and will Close on or before Wednesday, the 30th, at 10 a.m. for Town and Country.

NO PART OF THIS ISSUE HAS BEEN UNDERWRITTEN OR GUARANTEED.

THE NEW SCHULTZE GUNPOWDER COMPANY, LIMITED.

Registered under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1893.

SHARE CAPITAL - - £325,000,

DIVIDED INTO

32,500 Five per Cent. Cumulative Preference Shares of £5 each...	£162,500
32,500 Ordinary Shares of £5 each	£162,500
	£325,000

Of which 10,000 Five per Cent. Cumulative Preference Shares and 10,000 Ordinary Shares will be allotted as fully paid to the Vendor in part payment of the Purchase Money, and the balance of 22,500 Preference Shares (£112,500), and 22,500 Ordinary Shares (£112,500) is now offered for subscription at par, payable as follows:—

10s. per Share on Application; £2. 10s. per Share on Allotment; £2 per Share on 3rd May, 1898.

The Preference Shares rank in priority to the Ordinary Shares both as to Capital and Divdend, and the Articles of Association provide that no Mortgage Debentures or Debenture Stock, or other charge can be created to rank before this Issue without the consent of the Preference Shareholders, given by an Extraordinary Resolution at a meeting called for the purpose.

The first Preference Dividend will be payable 1st July, calculated on the amounts from time to time paid up, and it is intended thereafter that the Dividend on the Preference Shares shall be payable Quarterly.

DIRECTORS.

The Hon. JOHN SCOTT MONTAGU, M.P., Chairman.
ARCHIBALD STUART WORTLEY, Esq.
WALTER F. SMITH, Esq., Managing Director } Directors of the Vendor Company.
G. W. MELVILLE DALE, Esq. }
R. W. S. GRIFFITH, Esq., Superintendent of the Works.

Bankers.—UNION BANK OF LONDON, LIMITED, 2, Princes-street, E.C., and Branches.
Solicitors.—SLAUGHTER & MAY, 18, Austin Friars, London, E.C.
Auditors.—TURQUAND, YOUNGS, BISHOP, & CLARKE, 41, Coleman-street, London, E.C.
Brokers.—PIM, VAUGHAN, & CO., 1, Drapers-gardens, London, E.C.
Secretary.—W. W. CLAY, Esq.
Registered Offices.—32, Gresham-street, London, E.C.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

This Company is formed to take over as from the first day of January last the business of the Schultze Gunpowder Company, Limited, as at present carried on by them; and for the further development of the business, to acquire additional leasehold land, new works and plant, hereafter referred to.

The business of the Schultze Gunpowder Company, Limited, was established in 1869, and has earned a world-wide reputation for the excellence of its gunpowder. It was the first smokeless sporting powder manufactured in this country, and is now the leading sporting nitro compound.

The works of the Company are situated at Eyeworth, Hampshire, in the heart of the New Forest, and occupy a unique and most convenient site of about 43 acres held on lease direct from the Crown for a term of 21 years from the 25th March, 1891.

In view of the ever-increasing volume of the business, an important extension is now in progress, whereby the manufacturing capacity will be at once doubled, and provision for still further developments as the same become necessary. This is accomplished by the acquisition of a new and very convenient leasehold site, upwards of seven acres in extent, adjacent to the London and South Western Company's line, and connected by siding with their station at Redbridge.

This new Nitrating Factory (upon which, including the cost of site, the Vendor undertakes to spend whatever may be necessary up to £10,000) will, it is anticipated, be completed and equipped in time to perform its part of the season's operations.

Arrangements have been made to retain the services of the whole of the present staff including, for a period of five years, those of Mr. Walter F. Smith, the Managing Director of the Company, and of Mr. R. W. S. Griffith, who has had entire charge of the works during the last 24 years. Perfect continuity of the management which has been so successful in the past has thus been secured.

The development of the business during the last six years has been very rapid and the profits have increased proportionately.

The profitable nature of the business, its present extent, and its powers of expansion are sufficiently shown by the following Certificate of Messrs. Turquand, Youngs, Bishop, & Co., who have examined the books of the Company for the period above-mentioned.

The following is a copy of their Certificate:—

41, Coleman-street, London, E.C.
15th March, 1898.

Schultze Gunpowder Company, Limited,

We have examined the books of the Schultze Gunpowder Company, Limited, for the six years from 1st January, 1892, to 31st December, 1897, and find therefrom that the profits of the Company, after deducting any profit made by the American and Canadian agencies, and Interest received or profit made on investments of the Company, which are not included in the proposed sale of the business, were as under:—

Year ending 31st December,	1892	... ...	£ 7,380 3	7
,, ,,	1893	... ...	9,245 14	6
,, ,,	1894	... ...	11,663 12	1
,, ,,	1895	... ...	13,859 8	0
,, ,,	1896	... ...	19,409 3	3
,, ,,	1897	... ...	28,921 10	9

The profits as above stated are after deducting fees for Directors and Auditors, and allowance for depreciation.

TURQUAND, YOUNGS, BISHOP & CLARKE,
Chartered Accountants.

In estimating the probabilities of future profits, the rapid growth of the business during the past few years might fairly be taken into account. Without, however, making any allowance for this, the figures (based on the profits of the last year as shown in the Accountant's certificate) work out as follows:

To pay a Dividend of 5 per cent. on the Preference Shares	8,125 0 0
To pay a Dividend of 8 per cent. on the Ordinary Shares	13,000 0 0
	£21,125 0 0
Leaving a Balance for Reserves, or further Dividend of	7,796 10 9
	£28,921 10 9

The purchase price which is to be paid by this Company to the vendor (who has agreed to acquire the properties from the Schultze Gunpowder Company, Limited, and is re-selling at a profit) includes the whole of the Leasehold Land, Buildings, Plant, Machinery, Stock-in-Trade, Tools, Stores, &c., at Eyeworth; also the recently acquired Leasehold Site at Redbridge, and the works in progress thereon, together with the Goodwill, Secret Processes, Trade Marks, &c., and the Book debts due to the Company (less trade liabilities as upon the 31st December last, which are to be paid by the new Company and which amount to £3,242 6s. 4d.), and the benefit of trading since that date, has been fixed by the Vendor at £317,000, payable as to £50,000 in Preference Shares, £50,000 in Ordinary Shares, and the balance in cash.

The Stock-in-Trade and Book Debts estimated as good, will with the balance of the present issue provide a working capital of over £40,000, which should be ample for all purposes.

The Directors desire, however, to intimate that they especially invite applications from the Gun Trade and from Sportsmen generally, and that the same will be favourably entertained.

The following Contracts have been entered into, viz.: (1)—A Contract dated the 12th day of January, 1898, and made between The Schultze Gunpowder Company, Limited, of the one part, and Robert Austin, the Vendor, of the other part, and (2)—a Contract dated the 21st day of March, 1898, and made between Robert Austin, the Vendor, of the one part, and The New Schultze Gunpowder Company, Limited, of the other part; (3)—a Contract dated the 21st day of March, 1898, and made between Walter Fryer Smith of the one part and The New Schultze Company, Limited, of the other part; (4)—a Contract dated the 12th day of January, 1898, and made between Richard William Smith Griffith of the one part and Robert Austin of the other part.

These Contracts, the Accountants' Certificates, and the Memorandum and Articles of Association can be seen by applicants for Shares at the Offices of the Solicitors to the Company.

The Vendor has agreed to pay all the expenses of the formation of the Company up to the allotment of Shares.

Various trade contracts, agreements, and engagements relating to the ordinary business of the Company, and the engagement of the staff, have been entered into. All applicants for shares shall be deemed to have full notice of the last mentioned contracts, agreements, and engagements, and applications will be received only upon the footing that the applicants are to be deemed to agree with the Company (as Trustees for the Directors and other persons liable) to waive production of any further particulars of the said contracts, agreements, and engagements, and also any claims such applicants may have, owing to any want of full compliance with the requirements of Section 38 of the Companies Act, 1867, in relation thereto.

A settlement and quotation for both Classes of the Shares on the London and Birmingham Stock Exchanges will be applied for in due course.

Applications for Shares should be made on the forms accompanying the Prospectus, and forwarded to the Bankers of the Company with remittance for the amount of the deposit.

If the whole amount applied for be not allotted, the surplus paid on deposit will be appropriated towards the amount due on allotment. Where no allotment is made the deposit will be returned in full.

Prospectuses and Form of application for Shares may be obtained at the offices of the Company, or at the offices of its Bankers, Brokers, Solicitors, or Auditors.

March, 1898.

This Form may be filled up and forwarded to the Company's Bankers, with Cheque for 10s. per Share applied for.

THE NEW SCHULTZE GUNPOWDER COMPANY, LIMITED.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR SHARES.

To the Directors of THE NEW SCHULTZE GUNPOWDER COMPANY, LIMITED.

Gentlemen,—Having paid to the Company's Bankers the sum of £..... ..... being a deposit of 10s. per Share on application for..... (state whether Preference or Ordinary) Shares of £5 each in the above Company, I request you to allot me that number of Shares upon the terms of the Prospectus, and I hereby agree to accept the same or any less number, and I authorise you to place my name upon the Register of Members in respect of the Shares so allotted to me, and I agree to pay the further instalments upon such allotted Shares as required by the terms of such Prospectus, and I also agree with the Company, as Trustee for the Directors and other persons liable, to waive any claim I may have against them for not more fully complying in the said Prospectus with the requirements of Section 38 of the Companies Act, 1867.

Ordinary Signature .....

NOTE. Name (in full) .....

Please write very (Mr., Mrs. or Miss) distinctly. Address (in full).....

Profession or Business .....

Date 1898

N.B.—The Prospectus and form of Application for Shares can also be obtained from the principal Gunmakers throughout the United Kingdom.

Pattisons' Whisky, like a British Ironclad, is at home in all "Waters."

Ask for { "PATTISONS'" and Schweppe. "PATTISONS'" and Soda. "PATTISONS'" and Apollinaris. "PATTISONS'" and St. Ronans.

SINGER

MODÈLE DE LUXE

(Registered Trade Mark)

CYCLES

IMPORTANT NOVELTIES FOR 1893. 1898 Lists Free.

SINGER CYCLE CO. LTD. COVENTRY
LONDON: 17, HOLBORN VIADUCT.

IF YOU COUGH USE . .

GERAUDEL'S PASTILLES.

Let your lungs be filled with the vapour of Norwegian Pine Tar, which they give off whilst dissolving in the mouth. The efficacy of Pine Tar in all affections of the Throat and Lungs is well known; the best mode of applying it is by inhalation, and the mouth makes the best inhaler.

ALL CHEMISTS SELL THEM.

A MASTER KEY of this SIZE

Can be made to open any number of Locks. Many Ladies and Gentlemen have the whole of their locks so arranged that a MASTER KEY, so small as to be worn in a finger-ring or locket, will open every lock they possess—from their Dressing Bags, Trunks, Jewel Cases, Despatch Boxes, &c., to the Front Door, Wine Cellar, Park Gates, &c. Just think of the Convenience! The locks are made in suites, each suite with its own key, so that the ladies' maid or valet can open the luggage, the butler the wine cellar, and so on, but the suite keys are of no use for any but their own series.

BRAMAH JEWEL SAFES,

BURGLAR AND FIRE RESISTING, SPECIALLY ADAPTED FOR BED AND DRESSING ROOMS.

Specialities in fitted Suite Cases and Dressing Bags, Jewel Cases, Despatch and Deed Boxes, Bramah Street Door Latches, with small keys, Bramah Padlocks for Bicycles, with Leather-covered Chains, &c. &c.

New Illustrated Catalogues Post Free.

For Prices and Particulars apply to

NEEDS & CO. Late

Bramah & Co.

Sole Manufacturers of the real Bramah Locks.

100, NEW BOND STREET,
LONDON, W.

A Master Key Signet Ring (Open).

OUR PUZZLES.

RULES.

1. The sum of £2. 2s. will be given every week for the best Epigram, Conundrum, Lipogram, Bouts-Rimés, or whatever the announced subject of the competition for the week may be.

2. The Puzzle Editor reserves the right, however, of dividing the above sum between two or more competitors, or of withholding the prize, should exceptional circumstances render such a course desirable.

3. The decision and award of the Puzzle Editor must be considered final and irrevocable, and, for obvious reasons, no appeal from his critical judgments can be entertained.

4. In every instance the prize will be given in money, subject to no condition whatever, except the publication of the winner's real name and address in this journal.

5. Competitors will be allowed eleven days for the composition and despatch of their efforts; but all such communications must, at the latest, be received at the Truth Office by the first post on the morning of the second Monday succeeding the publication of the subject for competition.

6. Not more than one Prize will be given a Quarter to the same competitor.

7. All New Contributors are Required to Forward with their First Answers their Real Names and Addresses for Registration; such names and addresses will not be published except in the case of Prize-winners.

8. The nom-de-plume chosen by competitors should not exceed 12, and must under no circumstances consist of more than 14, letters.

9. Competitors must on no account change their noms-de-plume they have once assumed.

10. On the announcement of the Prize-winner's nom-de-plume, the successful competitor must write and make formal application for the Prize, stating the address to which the cheque must be sent. Any competitor failing to do so within three months of winning the Prize will forfeit all claim to the same.

11. No communications can be received on post-cards, by telegraph, or by hand. They must all be sent by the time named above. All post letters addressed—

PUZZLE EDITOR OF "TRUTH," Carteret-street, Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 993.

I am compelled to hold over the announcement of the Prize-winner's name in this competition for another week.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 996.

The result of this competition will be announced when Competition No. 999 is decided.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 997.

It has been decided to award the Prize in this Competition to Rosalys, who, having formed the given letters into the following stanza—being the second from Browning's "A Serenade at the Villa":—

Not a twinkle from the fly,
Not a glimmer from the worm.
When the crickets stopped their cry,
When the owls forbore a term,
You heard music—that was I.

Wrote as a complementary stanza the subjoined five lines:—

Not a star heaven's whole dome through,
Not a moonbeam pierced the dark;
Soundless—lightless—till there grew
In your paue a wakened spark,
And music answered—that was you!

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 1,001.

The usual Prize of Two Guineas is offered this week for

The Best Original Anagram made out of the letters in the words "The Franco-Russian Alliance in the Far East."

The Anagrams should be made if possible to bear some allusion more or less direct to current events. Competitors may send in more than one Anagram, and all answers must reach me by the morning of Monday, April 11, at the latest.

Answers to Correspondents.

Nellie H.—Let me thank you very much for your original suggestion.

Langlands.—Quite so; the fifth line of your first stanza should have been printed "Morning, ere I went away."

Raymur.—I am much obliged to you for your suggestions and will give them the attention they certainly deserve.

D. B. K.—Very many thanks. Your idea is well worth thinking out.

THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE No. 998.—ASSORTED SPECIMENS—GOOD AND OTHERWISE.

EPIGRAMMATIC DEFINITIONS OF "SMART SOCIETY."

Pleasure's treadmill.—Lucia.
Frocks et præterea nihil!—Crock.
The drones in life's hive.—Briony.
The paradise of fools.—Gollywog.
Skating, prating, mating, and hating.—Mushroom.
1. City swindles, West-end scandals. 2. Scheming in the City, squandering in Mayfair. 3. High collars and low necks.—Albula.
Preserves with the scum attached.—Malabar.
1. Fuss and feathers. 2. Bubbles blown and bubbles burst.—C. M. P.
I, myself, I!—Boythorpe.
The society one regards with envy tempered by hope.—Mona.
1. The survival of the fittest. 2. Fashion's Maelstrom. 3. Passion, fashion, flirtation. 4. A fairy palace of dazzling light to those outside. 5. Not unlike other places to those within.—Pennywig.
A coterie of wit and fashion.—La Plata.
Dress—more or less.—Hunter.
Corinth.—C. F. Reid.
1. A dress circle. 2. A coterie ruled by fashion and fashioned by rule. 3. A society well bred and ærated.—Sceptic.
Upper crust, well puffed.—Bertha.
1. The glass of fashion with up-to-date reflections. 2. An invisible net, inside which are the smart, outside are the outsiders.—Bel Demonio.
The feverish offspring of a loveless union between old blood and new money.—Drywell.
Humbug.—Psycho.
A conspiracy against the manhood of every one of its members (Emerson).—Menar.
Mash, dash, and flash.—Sissie.

The latest in everything, from authors, preachers, and musicians to bonnets and poodles.—Felsberg.
1. The last in fashion, and the bold in form. 2. The world, the flesh, and—the woman. 3. Men—feebly fast; women—with a past! 4. Dress, dinners, and devilment.—Flitters.
Bubbles on the top of vulgarity, set in effervescence by a few drops of blue blood and some pounds of gold dust.—Sir P. Felis.
The Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, according to Lord Chesterfield.—Sahib.
1. Froth and sparkle rising to the top of the social waves. 2. Glitter and dash—society splash.—Risk.
1. The paradise of parasites. 2. The Mecca of snobs. 3. A brilliant satellite, hollow at the core, and girdled by snobs.—Selah.
1. The dress circle. 2. The show room in the social fabric. The "swell" mob-ilised. 3. Qualified members of an association under the Companies Act, Limited. 4. A phase of original sin in evolution. 5. The inner circle to which people are admitted less for what they are than what they wear. 6. The Band-boy Brigade.—Merle.
Flash! Splash! Crash!—Affery.
Grand and Rand people.—Leaf Rule.
The place where working for pleasure is the only work in which pleasure is taken, where vice is an amusement, and poverty a crime.—Barney.
Humbugs.—Tortu Foulque.
1. Vain folk, fixed up with a front seat in their own conceit. 2. Vain folk, who ape the air and vamp the virtues of good society.—Ooloo.

Dress, diversion, dinner, and the devil.—Gille Ban.
Fool's Paradise.—Lover of Truth.
Rush, crush, and gush.—Z. Z. Z. Z.
1. Where socialibility gives place to exclusiveness, and exclusiveness yields only to wealth. 2. The triumvirate of wealth, rank, and beauty.—Nota Bene.
Smart society is a self-styled circle of so-called swells.—Extra Cover.
Too much smartness, and too little society.—Alpha.
Smart society is a revolving press, apt at times to be a bit loose, but furnished with plenty of screw.—'98.
1. The over-dressed, over-fed, and over-fêted. 2. Fashion's ephemera.—Dilaram.

1. Some model dames,
Some noble knights;
Some lovely frames—
Some moral frights.

2. The "Inner Circle" of the constitutional railway. 3. Everybody who is anybody.—Georgina.
Smart society thinks itself the élite, but the élite do not think themselves smart society.—Bad Luck.
The appearance of artful peeresses and peers of art.—V. C.
That portion of society devoted to dress, dancing, and divorce.—Floré.
1. Where everybody is somebody, and anybody is nobody. 2. Where everybody knows everybody, and nobody knows nobody.—Cynic.
The survival of the fastest. Underbred and overfed.—Twins.

Flocks, stocks, shocks.—Glossaire.

Rustle and hustle.—M. Janson.

High-collared or in low-shaped dresses decked,
Incontrovertibly the same—stiffnecked.
Mongaroo.

The safety valve of respectability.—Bridge.

The looking-glass in which its devotees rejoice to see their own reflections.—Mat.

Brag and grab.—Bethy.

1. The "fine birds that fine feathers make" and that "flock together." 2. The noble army of martyrs to fashion.—Echo.

1. The polished horde. 2. The gilded clique. 3. The Bauble-shoppers.—Wildcat.

The front rank of the army of fashion—whence most fall.—Homnis.

Smart society seeks variety, stifles piety, sounds satiety.—Anna Karenina.

1. An element in which money floats and empty purses go under. 2. An ether all would breathe though it asphixiate.

3. To dine, to dress, envy, fawn, and flatter;
An endless dance linked to endless chatter.
Myrah.

Smart society lives for self, chiffons, scandal, speculation, and show.—Zero.

A set of manlings marvellously dight,
In dress, deportment, speech, and appetite,
Who think themselves above their fellows raised;
So there's my answer, and the Lord be praised.
(The Lord be praised, but why on earth they pose Above their fellows, goodness only knows.)
W. Nevermore.

The lucky few on pleasure bent,
To work for whom is the sole intent,
Of the millions who here are sent.
Pria.

A region where they toil not, neither do they spin, yet where the fashionable dress, the rounds of visiting or entertaining, with functions innumerable from morn till night, seem to suggest that pleasure-seekers must work hard after their manner.—Esperanza.

A charmed and envied circle marked by exclusiveness, yet not free from a touch of vulgarity. Push, gush, rush, crush.—Excelsior.

1. The effervescence of worldliness. 2. The masquerade of respectability. 3. The school for scandal. 4. A snare and a delusion. 5. Pain's pyrotechny. 6. The social quicksand. 7. Affluence at the prow and frivolity at the helm. 8. The dashing light brigade. 9. Misguided amenity. 10. The cult of ultra fashion. 11. The carnival of prosperity.—A. E. L.

The vaporous part of life,
Which floats from its realities;
The mist which hides the toilers in the strife,
And wreathes round trivialities.
Azile.

Cheery, cheeky, and courted.—Hope.

Pert, pretty, and purse-proud.—Blossom.

A self-constituted, social clique, courting notoriety, noted for its smart clothes, lax morals, and indifferent manners.—Scorpio.

Pretty frocks! Many shocks!—Pendragon.

Where twopence-halfpenny looks down on twopence.—Aldbarn.

1. A society for promoting one's own pleasure. 2. The dress-circle at a comedy. 3. The light brigade. 4. Fin-de-siècle in the swim.—Wild Thyme.

F.R.S. and K.C.B.,
Feathers and plush and £ s. d.,
Lace and stars from 'cross the sea,
Make a "smart Society."
Sinora.

1. Foolish, fast, fashionable folk. 2 The dregs of good, and the froth of inferior society. 3. The scum which rises on the top of society. 4. An imitation of real society. 5. The impudence of many, and the tolerance of one. (H.R.H.). 6. Old aristocracy run to seed, mingling with the new plutocracy. 7. Men and women, without manners, who worship Mammon. 8. New dust, old rust.—D. G. B.

1. Fun, folly, "chic," variety,
And well-dressed impropriety.

2. Mayfair's merry go-round. 3. The burial place of propriety.—Spero.

Society, self nominated, smart—
Motley mummers—each plays petty part—
Grown children after some new plaything dart—
Good appetite, no conscience, a bad heart!
J. McGrigor Allan.

1. The attar distilled from millions of crushed roses. 2. The gilded weathercock on a condemned steeple. 3. A hollow way of living, occasionally needing a "Holloway" corrective. 4. The nation of shopkeepers' spoilt darlings.

5. On world, flesh, de'il,
Their hope is stayed,
Though ever leal
To church—parade!
Robert Martin.

1. Fashion's frivolity. 2. The laughing stock, wonder, and puzzle of the world. 3. A refuge for the rude, cynical, restless, and frivolous. 4. A socialised clique, whose watchword is "exclusiveness." 5. Fashion's slave. 6. A 'sociable,' in which are seated face to face the butterflies of fashion. 7. The safety buoy of fashion's follies. 8. The rock upon which many reputations have been wrecked. 9. Fashion's company exercising those graces which adorn the social state. 10. Is a pair of scales, its members the weights, conventionalism holds the balance which, in many cases, curiously makes the lighter scale appear the heavier. 11. A crucible which separates the base metal from the true. 12. A select set to which Bon ton, rank, and plausibility is the masterkey.—Go-ahead.

1. We shield our members from all sin
In ways of all variety;
Dishonour is fame, if you are akin
To—smart society.

2. We make the law for rich and poor,
Of course with all propriety,
Ensuring "Justice" for the sore,
In—smart society.

3. And so it will be to the end,
Perhaps, too, in Eternity!
"We exist by right," so don't intend
To lose our smart society.
P. P.

"The hideous education of this world, where in one evening are committed in thoughts, and words, more crimes than are punished in courts of justice; where ridicule destroys the grandest Ideas; where to be thought able, one must see justly. And there to see justly is to believe in nothing, neither in sentiments, nor in men, nor even in events; there false events are concocted. There to see justly one must weigh each morning a friend's purse, to know how artfully to place onesself above whatever may happen; meantime to admire nothing, neither works of art, nor noble actions; and to ascribe as a motive for all things—personal interest." (Paul de Kock).—J. McGrigor Allan.

Qualily in the abstract.—Angersteen.

All sorts and conditions of men—and women.—Seaton.

Fireflies flashing after an ignis fatuus.—A. E. L.

1. The small circle squared by riches. 2. Dress, ducats, and donkeys.—Malignant.

A THIN PAPER EDITION OF "TRUTH" IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY,
AND CAN BE OBTAINED ON ORDER OF ALL NEWSAGENTS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.
PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

To all Countries included in the Postal Union:—

Three Months ...	£0 7 8
Six Months ...	0 15 4
Twelve Months ...	1 10 8

And to any address in the United Kingdom—Three Months, 7s.; Six Months, 14s.; Twelve Months, 28s.

PATENT FAST DYED KHAKI MATERIALS.

Absolutely Fast to Washing.
Stand any amount of wear.

Most useful for all kinds of wear
by Ladies, Gentlemen, and Children.

Contractors to
H.M. WAR OFFICE and INDIA OFFICE.

WOOL.
SERGES.
FLANNELS.
CORDS.
LEG BANDAGES.

COTTON.
DRILLS.
SERGE.
CORDS.

Price List and Patterns Free on application to
E. SPINNER & CO., MANCHESTER AND BOMBAY, Sole Agents.

FRANZ JOSEF
APERIENT WATER

Highly appreciated all over the World for Twenty Years past.

Is the Only Palatable Natural Aperient Water. SOLD EVERYWHERE. HEAD OFFICE: BUDAPEST.

Genuine Old Welch Dressers

(Inlaid and Carved Oak), from £6. 10s.

ILLUSTRATED PRICED CATALOGUES POST FREE.
ALL GOODS CARRIAGE PAID TO ANY STATION IN GREAT BRITAIN.

HEWETSONS,

TOTTENHAM COURT ROAD, London, W.

PARISIAN

FONDANTS, CHOCOLATES, and BONBONS of the finest quality and from the first makers in Paris.
EASTER EGGS.
Depôt des Chocolats de la Maison.
F. MARQUIS (Passage de Panoramas) PARIS.

S. SAINSBURY,

176 and 177, STRAND, LONDON.

ESTABLISHED 1839.
Third door west of Norfolk-st., connecting the Strand and Thames Embankment.
Lists on application.

JUNO CYCLES ARE THE VERY BEST

Any JUNO Twelve Monthly Payments.
JUNO Lady's or Gent's Safety, £12 12s., 21/- monthly; £14 14s., 24/6 monthly. JUNOS from £10, 16/8 monthly. Write for New Season's List of JUNO Cycles & Accessories, sent post free. Junos shipped to all parts of the world. Large discount.
METROPOLITAN MACHINISTS CO., LTD., 75, 76, Bishopsgate Without, E.C.; & at Piccadilly Circus, London, W.

"COOPER" CYCLES.

From £5 10. Competition Defied.
Latest design Frame, large Weldless Steel Tubes, Ball Bearings, Tangent Wheels, Brake, and Mud-guards, Cushion Tyres, £5 10; Pneumatic, £7 10; Ladies', with Dress and Gear Guards, from £6. Twelve months' warranty. Lists free. AGENTS WANTED
Wm. Cooper, 753, Old Kent Rd., London, S.E.

THE PATENT "RIGID-CURVE" STROP.

FOR THE HOLLOW GROUND RAZOR.
An English Gentleman, J.P., F.R.S., M.I.C.E., M.I.E.E., M.I.M.E., &c., Managing Director of a big Engineering Business, writes as follows:—"I have tried your Razor Strop, and have pleasure in sending you this Testimonial:—It is a simple and sure means of securing a proper cutting edge upon a Razor, and I am surprised that such an improvement has been so long delayed. Its advantage is, in my opinion, beyond question." Price 3s. 6d., carriage paid. Full money returned any time within a month if not approved.
A. HOWARTH, 53, Penn-road, Wolverhampton.

ENORMOUS DEMAND

There can be no surer sign of popularity than the enormous demand all over the country for

LIPTONS DELICIOUS TEAS.

They are appreciated everywhere for their delicate flavour and exquisite aroma, and undoubtedly have attained the pinnacle of fame.

LIPTONS CONTROL THE TEA MARKET.

£50,513 11s. 5d.

REPRESENTS DUTY ON OVER 1,300 TONS OF TEA, and is the WORLD'S RECORD DUTY CHEQUE for Tea paid to Her Majesty's Customs, London, by Lipton, for his week's clearance. IT SPEAKS FOR ITSELF, and represents considerably more than half the entire quantity of Tea used per week in the whole of Great Britain.

LIPTONS TEAS

HAVE THE

LARGEST SALE IN THE WORLD.

ROYAL APPOINTMENT.
LIPTON,
Tea Merchant by Special Appointment to Her Majesty The Queen.

BUY FROM THE GROWERS.
THE FINEST TEA THE WORLD CAN PRODUCE.
PER 1/7 LB.
NO HIGHER PRICE.
RICH, PURE, AND FRAGRANT.
PER 1/- AND 1/4 LB.

LIPTON, LTD.,

TEA, COFFEE, AND COCOA PLANTERS, CEYLON.
THE LARGEST TEA, COFFEE, AND PROVISION DEALERS IN THE WORLD.

CHIEF OFFICES: CITY ROAD, LONDON.

BRANCHES AND AGENCIES THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.

Ceylon Offices and Tea and Coffee Shipping Warehouses: PRINCE STREET, and MADDEMA MILLS, CINNAMON GARDENS, COLOMBO.
Indian Offices and Shipping Warehouses: HARE STREET, CALCUTTA.

THE MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY OF NEW YORK.

RICHARD A. McCURDY, President.

Policy-holders in the "Mutual" enjoy the advantages of

SECURITY.—

Assets, 1897, exceed	£52,000,000
Surplus, 1897, exceeds	7,250,000

ADAPTABILITY.—

LIFE INSURANCE.
INVESTMENT.
INCOME.

PROMPTITUDE.—

Claims paid in London immediately on receipt of satisfactory proof.

LIBERALITY.—

Bonuses have, in many cases, trebled the original sum.
Surrender values of unique liberality paid.

Detailed information supplied on application.

Head Office for the United Kingdom:

17 & 18, CORNHILL, LONDON, E.C.

D. C. HALDEMAN, General Manager.

BOVRIL

Contains in a highly concentrated and easily digestible form the direct nourishment of

PRIME OX BEEF

and fortifies the system against

COLDS, CHILLS,
AND INFLUENZA.

BOVRIL, LIMITED, LONDON,
Food Specialists and Hospital Purveyors.
CONTRACTORS TO
HER MAJESTY'S AND FOREIGN GOVERNMENTS.
Chairman:
The Right Honourable LORD PLAYFAIR, G.C.B., LL.D.

SCHWEITZER'S

Cocoatina

"THE ROYAL COCOA."

Absolutely full of nourishing and sustaining properties.

"THE QUEEN has a cup of Schweitzer's Cocoatina brought to her at 7.30 a.m., and two hours later uses the same beverage at the breakfast table."—SOCIETY.

BY ORDER OF THE CZAR.—"Send immediately to office of Marshal, Imperial Court, Petersburg Winter Palace, twenty half-pound tins Schweitzer's Cocoatina—Colonel Anitschkoff."—(TELEGRAM FROM ST. PETERSBURG).

"WORTH A GUINEA A BOX."

BEECHAM'S PILLS.

FOR ALL

BILIOUS & NERVOUS DISORDERS

SUCH AS

Sick Headache, Constipation,
Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion.
Disordered Liver & Female Ailments.

SALE NOW OVER SIX MILLION BOXES YEARLY.

In boxes, 1/1½ and 2/9 each, with full directions.

Prepared only by the Proprietor.

THOMAS BEECHAM, St. Helens, Lancashire.

Sold by all Druggists and Patent Medicine Dealers everywhere.

FIRST SPECTACLES.—When these are required the advice of a very skilful optician should be taken, as, unless the spectacles used in the first instance are exactly suited to the eyes, mischief is soon done which cannot afterwards be remedied.

BROWNING'S SYSTEM OF SUITING THE SIGHT
IS ALWAYS SUCCESSFUL.

Mr. JOHN BROWNING, President of The British Optical Association, and Author of "Our Eyes," now in its 17th Edition, price 1s., 63, STRAND, LONDON, W.C. May be consulted personally free of charge.

THE MOST NUTRITIOUS COCOA.

EPPS'S

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.

COCOA

FOR BREAKFAST AND SUPPER.

• TRUTH •

"Cultores Veritatis Fraudis Inimici."—Cicero.

No. 1110. Vol. XLIII. Thursday, April 7, 1898. Price Sixpence.

NOTICE.

The terms of Subscription to Truth, which are payable in advance, are as follows:—To any address in the United Kingdom, for 3 months, 7s.; 6 months, 14s.; and for 12 months, 28s. The Thin Paper Edition is forwarded to countries within the Postal Union for 3 months for 7s. 8d.; 6 months, 15s. 4d.; and 12 months, 30s. 8d. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to the Manager, Truth, "Truth Building," Carteret-street, S.W.

ENTRE NOUS.

THE Queen will stay at Cimiez until Tuesday, April 26, when her Majesty is to leave Nice for Cherbourg, and will arrive at Windsor Castle on the evening of Thursday, April 28. According to present arrangements the Queen is to leave Windsor for Balmoral on Friday, May 20, and her Majesty will stay in Scotland until after Ascot races.

The Princess of Wales, who is on a visit to the King and Queen of Denmark at Copenhagen, where the Empress Dowager of Russia is also staying at the Royal palace, will be accompanied on her return to England by Princess Maud, as Prince Charles of Denmark is going away for several months on a cruise in the Mediterranean in the warship Tzar, which is commanded by his uncle, Prince Waldemar. Princess Victoria of Wales has left Sandringham to spend a few weeks at Cromer for the benefit of her health.

The Prince of Wales and the Duke and Duchess of York are to spend Easter at Sandringham, and on Monday they will all drive to East Winch, near Lynn, to attend the West Norfolk Hunt Club Races. The Prince leaves Sandringham next Wednesday morning for Newmarket, but he will return after the races on Friday, and is to entertain a small party at the Hall until Monday, the 18th, when H.R.H. comes to town for the season. The Prince of Wales will be again at Newmarket for the First Spring Meeting (25th to 29th) and the Duke of Cambridge is expected down both weeks.

The Drawing Room which is to be held at Buckingham Palace on Tuesday, May 10, will be held by the Queen herself, so far as the reception of the entrée company is concerned, while the general presentations will be left to the Princess of Wales, who, according to present arrangements, will hold the fourth and last Drawing Room of the season a few days later. These functions are likely to be very full, and the Queen has ordered that the number of presentations at each is to be strictly limited to two hundred, besides those from the Diplomatic circle and from the entrée.

A permanent separation between the Grand Duke and Grand Duchess of Hesse is in process of arrangement, all efforts to bring about a reconciliation between the young couple (who have been married for less than four years) having entirely failed. I hear that the Queen takes the part of her granddaughter in these painful disputes.

Many curious things in connection with Royalty happen under a Conservative Government. Comment is still rife on the extraordinary circumstance that at this critical time, while the Commander-in-Chief of the Mediterranean Squadron is at Malta, his despatch-boat, H.M.S. Surprise, has been lying for many days in the harbour of Villefranche, with the Duke of Saxe-Coburg, a Prince owing allegiance to the German Emperor, on board, together with the Hereditary Prince of Saxe-Coburg and several other German officers. Apart from the awkwardness, under certain contingencies, of the British ship flying the German flag, it seems strange that the Emperor of the "consecrated person" does not allow the use of his admiral's despatch-boats to the Princes of his Empire—especially when they are his own uncles.

The young Duke of Albany, who has been for some years a pupil at a private school in the New Forest, where his cousin, Prince Alexander of Battenberg, is also being educated, is to join Prince Arthur of Connaught at Eton after the Easter holidays.

A correspondent writes:—

Your Paris correspondent is mistaken in stating that when the Princesse de Joinville arrived in France from the Brazils in 1843 she was "snowed up" on her way from Brest to Paris. The Prince and Princesse de Joinville reached France in the month of August, and they proceeded direct to the Chateau of Eu in Normandy to visit the King and Queen, while a week later the Prince went to England, accompanied by his brother, the Duc d'Aumale, on a visit to the Queen and Prince Albert at Windsor Castle.

The Princesse de Joinville was then very handsome, and she had a large fortune (about 250,000) and a huge estate in Brazil. She was a perfect ingénue, and shortly after her arrival at Eu, Louis Philippe had the Ministers and a large party to meet her at dinner, but she found a long formal entertainment very tiresome, so she suddenly got up from the table and danced about the room pour se désennuyer.

Lady Cadogan returned to Ireland at the end of last week. She will be joined by Lord Cadogan at the Viceregal Lodge before Easter, where they will remain until after the Punchestown race meeting. Some dinners and a small dance will be given at the Viceregal Lodge while the Punchestown party is assembled there. Lady Cadogan, as well as the Viceroy, has shown an example in crossing the Irish Channel which may be pointed out as encouraging in view of the approaching tourist season. In Elizabethan times Burton gave the Irish Sea a bad name as one "wherein there is nought to be expected but tempestuous storms and troublesome waves." In Queen Victoria's time, the troubles and tempests have been more on land, perhaps, and the short journey across the Irish Sea is now generally made without any disturbance and with much comfort.

In early life Lord Strafford was a great protégé of Lord Palmerston and Lord Granville, and he was expected to achieve a brilliant political career, but the high expectations of his friends were not realised, although the leading Whigs of that day did everything possible to push him. Lord Strafford really had no taste for the hurly-burly of public life. He was devoted to literature and art, and was an excellent judge of pictures, and fond of sporting in a quiet way. His father was for many years an owner of racehorses and a prominent member of the Jockey Club, and he was General Peel's partner in the ownership of Orlando, winner of the sensational Derby of 1844.

Lord Strafford is succeeded by his brother, Sir Henry Byng, and the Rev. Francis Byng, formerly chaplain to the Speaker, becomes next heir to the title and estates. Sir Henry Byng has been a member of the Household for more than a quarter of a century, and he is at present the senior of the Queen's Equerries-in-Ordinary, a post which he must now resign, and her Majesty will appoint him to be an extra Equerry. Sir John McNeill, who has just been appointed Bath King at Arms, becomes senior Equerry. Sir Henry will probably be succeeded by one of the Grooms-in-Waiting—either Lord William Cecil or Colonel Brown—the place being worth £500 a year, with two and a half months of annual duty at Court.

The late Lord Cawdor was one of the most popular landlords in Great Britain, and a remarkable tribute to his many excellent qualities in this respect was paid before the Welsh Land Commission. He owned large estates both in Scotland and in South Wales, and did everything in his power to promote agriculture in the districts with which he was connected. Lord Cawdor farmed extensively, and his stud of Clydesdales and his herd of black cattle were widely celebrated. A Tory and a Churchman, Lord Cawdor was just as generous and considerate to Dissenters and Radicals as to members of his own party. He will be much and long lamented and missed in South Wales, where he lived during the greater part of the year at Stackpole, his beautiful place on the coast, near Tenby. Lord Cawdor sat in the House of Commons for nineteen years, and during Sir Robert Peel's second Administration he was précis writer to Lord Aberdeen at the Foreign Office. For many years past Lord Cawdor had lived a quiet but thoroughly useful life at his two country seats, and he was seldom seen in London.

The Annual Exhibition of the Royal Amateur Art Society is to be held at No. 1, Belgrave-square, on May 11, 12, 13, and 14, and will be opened on the first day by Princess Christian. In connection with it there will be a loan exhibition of portraits and sketches in pencil and water-colour by Sir Thomas Lawrence and the late Mr. George Richmond, R.A., and I am asked to suggest that any possessors of drawings by either of these artists who may be willing to lend them should communicate with Lady Newton, 20, Belgrave-square.

'TWAS THE VOICE OF THE OYSTER.

The Oyster is again being made an object of suspicion as a source of contamination and infection.—Morning Paper.

'Twas the voice of the Oyster, I heard him complain:
"They've begun to attack and asperse me again!
Once more they declare, in opprobrious terms,
I effusively reek with malarial germs.
Yes, 'reek' 's the word used, though I'd put this to you,
Pray, why do I reek so—supposing I do?"
And, tossing whatever may serve as its head,
That Oyster sat angrily up in its bed.

"They say we're 'infected,' well, that may be so;
But who is to blame, is what I want to know.
Men make us a bed—(and you cannot deny
That we in the same willy-nilly must lie)—
They next o'er that bed, in a quantity large,
Their sewage and garbage proceed to discharge;
And then, in a way that our anger inflames,
Call us 'pestilent molluscs,' and other bad names.

"Just look!" cried the Oyster, "you'll see at a glance
That man does not give us a ghost of a chance.
Above all suspicion we're eager to be,
The cleanest of shellfish that breed in the sea;
We want to be equally toothsome and safe,
But, soaking in sewage, we helplessly chafe.
Just look for yourself, and deny if you can
That the Oyster is scurvily treated by man!"

So I glanced at its bed, and I saw with one eye
Gassy bubbles and foul-looking scum floating by;
The waves all around, dyed a terrible tint,
Of a nameless putridity gave a strong hint;
And the Oyster tucked up, so to speak, in its bed,
On the microbes of muck automatic'lly fed;
And I cried, as I turned from the horrible sight,
"You are right, most ill-treated of bivalves, you're right!"

If the Society for the Protection of Birds takes under its wing the lowly sparrow, it might do worse than turn its attention to Hightown, in Lancashire. So vindictive are the inhabitants of this township towards the sparrow that they cheerfully submit to a voluntary rate of a penny in the pound for the purpose of bringing about his extermination. The money is devoted to the payment of a reward of one halfpenny for every bird that is shot, and the over-

For the Truth Hotel List, see page 882 in the present issue.
For Hospitals and Appeals, see page 880.
For Amusements, see page 881.
For Our Puzzles, see page 893.

seers have just reported that in the past ten months the number killed was upwards of 6,000. I believe there is some controversy among ornithologists as to the real character and habits of the sparrow. Those who regard him as a harmless, necessary bird, rather a friend of the farmer than otherwise, should endeavour to enlighten the people of Hightown. But I have no desire to open a discussion on this moot point in TRUTH.

If the Imperial Institute is not eventually put to some useful purpose, it will not be for want of suggestions as to the best way of utilising it. I am indebted to a lady for one more proposal in this direction. It is that the Institute should be turned into a national Walhalla for the reception of the statues and monuments which at present adorn Westminster Abbey, and any others that may have hereafter to be added to them. There is no doubt that we shall have to find premises for this purpose sooner or later, as was seen by Mr. Shaw Lefevre's project for erecting such a building at Westminster. The Imperial Institute is an imposing building, and has plenty of space, and is so far very suitable. The disadvantage that it is very much out of the way would not matter in this case, for if a national Walhalla were erected, I do not suppose any one would ever go to look at it, wherever it was situated.

There is a little journal called Ashore and Afloat, which is, I believe, published by the Royal Naval Temperance Society. I should be glad if the Editor would inform me on what date the accounts are settled, as it would enable me to relieve the minds of one or two contributors who are anxious on the point. It seems that the Editor asks Service readers to contribute "travellers' tales and sailors' yarns" from their own personal experience, and payment at the usual rate is promised. I find, however, that one story which was sent in in March, 1897, and another in November last, have neither of them yet been paid for, notwithstanding several applications on the subject. This seems rather long credit from literary men on the lower deck, and it is to be hoped that "the usual rate" of payment is proportionately high.

The trick lately played by Truman Press at Barnet has been repeated by the proprietors of a weekly paper in a Midland city. Advertisements were issued announcing the forthcoming publication of a new journal, and giving its intended title, which was entirely different from any previously in use in the town. A week or two afterwards the promoter of this new sheet was sent for by the proprietors of an existing weekly, and informed that they had registered his proposed title. He asked when this was done, and the reply was "within the last twelve months." Subsequent inquiry showed, however, that, as a matter of fact, the title had only been registered on the day of the interview—a fortnight after the advertisements had appeared. Some correspondence followed, and the solicitor to the promoter of the new paper eventually wrote to the firm who had registered the title, pointing out that his client had a prior claim to it, and stating also that he would bring out his paper under that title. In reply the firm at once dropped the old title of their journal, and published it under the title selected and advertised for the rival enterprise.

Registration, as I have before explained, does not give an exclusive right to a title. Such a right can only be acquired by use and reputation, and if the promoter of the newspaper in this instance had cared to go to the cost of legal proceedings, he could probably have obtained an injunction preventing the other parties from using the title which he had advertised. But, as a protection from such mean and contemptible practices, it would, of course, be much cheaper and simpler for persons who intend to produce a newspaper to first take the precaution of registering the title themselves.

There has been a long-pending dispute between the Scotch Kirk and the Duke of Atholl as to Dunkeld Cathedral. This building is an important and interesting national monument, but the Duke of Atholl claims it as his own private property, and has always done so on the strength of a charter alleged to have been granted to one of his ancestors by the Crown. It turns out that this supposed charter is merely a Royal warrant granted by the Prince Regent in 1811 ("at his Court at Carlton House"), and countersigned by Mr. Spencer Percival, by which the choir is granted to the parish of Dunkeld to be used as a church, while nearly £1,000 of the public money was given to the then Duke of Atholl for repairs to the structure, and it was stipulated that future Dukes should keep the fabric in proper repair "in time coming." The Duke now treats the cathedral as if it were his own absolute property, and a part of it is devoted to secular uses. The cathedral needs to be restored, and, unless the Duke of Atholl is prepared to undertake the work, the Crown had better resume possession of the building, and then the Kirk authorities can open a public subscription for the necessary repairs. The Duke actually regards the cathedral as being within the grounds of his own house, and asserts that there is no public right of way either to the church or to the parish burial ground which surrounds it. This is a very remarkable state of affairs, and remarkably unsatisfactory, and it ought to be altered without any more discussion.

The Rev. Charles Sinclair, brother of Lord Caithness, who has been for several years curate of Hornsey, and who was formerly at Kensington under the Bishop of Peterborough, is fortunate in having been presented by Mr. Higford to the rectory of Hempstead, near Gloucester, which is the richest living in that diocese, being of the net value of about £900 a year, with residence, and quite a small parish. Mr. Sinclair has been in Orders for seven years.

The election of Canon Kirkpatrick to the Mastership of Selwyn College, in succession to the late Bishop Selwyn, places the Regius Professorship of Hebrew at Cambridge, with stall in Ely Cathedral annexed, at the disposal of Lord Salisbury. Canon Kirkpatrick was appointed by Mr.

Gladstone in 1882, after the death of Dr. Jarrett, who was a great pluralist, holding also a rich living in Norfolk for over fifty years.

I hear that there are now numerous marriages at St. George's Chapel, Albemarle-street. In order to meet the difficulty of a Proprietary Chapel of the Church of England not being a licensed place for marriages, the civil service is first performed at the Registry Office, and this is followed by the religious service at the Chapel. It may be an open question whether there should be these Proprietary Chapels. But they exist, and as a Bill is now before the House of Commons to allow marriages to be celebrated in Nonconformist places of worship, common-sense suggests that its provisions should be extended to all places of worship.

The secretary of the American Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions has been interviewed by a reporter of the New York World, with reference to the statements in TRUTH concerning the American cemetery at Jerusalem. The secretary proved remarkably uncommunicative. He went so far as to say that his board had "deemed it expedient to change the location of the cemetery," a somewhat disingenuous admission of the fact that the ground has been disposed of at a high price, and the remains of the dead transferred to the English cemetery. But he had nothing to say in reply to the allegation that the bodies dug up were packed piecemeal in small boxes and heaped together in a common grave or pit at the English cemetery. Nor would the secretary answer two plain questions—first, whether the sale of the ground and removal of the bodies were carried out secretly to evade the Turkish law, and secondly, whether the sole object of the transaction was to put money in the coffers of the mission. The only conclusion from the secretary's reticence is that the charges that have been made are true. It is absurd to suggest, as he seems to have done, that the Board have not yet had time to properly investigate the scandal. Complaints were made to them, but without effect, some time before the matter was mentioned in TRUTH.

Probably the clergy (of all denominations) are, taking them all round, the worst enemies of religion. Most educated people in these days are agreed that the performance of sacred music is calculated to inspire and stimulate religious sentiment. This, however, is the way a reverend gentleman at West Bromwich, in his parish magazine, fulminates against a proposed performance of "The Messiah" on the Wednesday in Holy Week :—

> We trust that Holy Week and Good Friday will be well observed by all Churchmen connected with the old Church ; and that none of them will be found at the concert which is to be held in the Town Hall on the Wednesday in the Holy Week, the anniversary of the day on which our Lord was betrayed. If they are unwilling to make use of the daily services provided for them by the Church, they may at least abstain from amusements which are most dishonouring, at such a time, to our blessed Lord. The only way to put a stop to such offences against Christian decency is for Churchmen to absolutely withdraw from societies responsible for such actions, unless they receive the most explicit assurance that in the future such offences will not be repeated.

Everybody is at liberty to approve or disapprove of such performance as that here referred to. It is a matter of personal feeling. But for those who disapprove to denounce in such language as this those who differ from them, is the rankest and most un-Christian intolerance. There is really no difference between the spirit of this utterance and that of the Scottish Elder who predicts the damnation of the man who goes for a walk on the Sawbath, or the British Sabbatarian who considers that religion would be insulted if a working man were allowed to look at the pictures in our public galleries on Sunday.

The wiliest and most experienced of advertising tradesmen may well envy the talents of those enterprising gentlemen, Messrs. Lunn & Perowne. This firm has now got hold of a clergyman, the Vicar of St. John's, Stratford, who is also a Freemason. Some months ago he was employed to puff in advance among the Masonic fraternity the forthcoming Masonic function at King Solomon's Quarries, and the advantages of booking per Lunn & Perowne for that ceremony. The function over, the reverend brother is now sending out from his vicarage another circular, beginning thus :—

> DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I have received so very many letters (hundreds in all), from Brethren in all parts of the world, asking for information as to the cruise organised by Brother J. T. Woolryeh Perowne and Brother H S Lunn, in January last, to which I acted as chaplain, that I venture to ask you to inform any members of your lodge who might be interested, that it was eminently successful in every respect, and I believe gave thorough satisfaction, &c., &c.

The reverend Mason then goes on to describe the cruise in detail, enlarging on the comforts and facilities afforded by the Brethren of the organising agency, and even noting that "we had smooth seas nearly the whole time," as though Brother Perowne and Brother Lunn were able to command the winds and the waves, as well as the services of Bishops, Deans, and Freemasons. All this, of course, is merely leading up to the announcement that other cruises are now being arranged by the twin Brethren, with an eye to which a post-card for orders is enclosed. I do not know what the Masonic community at large may think of this method of using Masonry as an instrument for trade advertisement, but there can hardly be two opinions as to the part which many of the clergy now think fit to play as side-showmen in this tourist agency line.

It may be a comfort to gamblers of strong Protestant views to hear that a Protestant Orphanage in Transylvania is placing on the English market tickets for a lottery that it is getting up. Some of the tickets are being sent to the English Clergy—with an eye, I hope, to their benevolent rather than their sporting proclivities—accompanied by a circular in this style :—

> REVEREND SIR!
>
> BELOVED BROTHER IN CHRIST!
>
> According to the latest statistics there exist at the present time in Hungary 460 children, orphans of fathers who worked in the service of our Lord, leaving behind them their helpless little ones exposed to the struggles, trials, and temptations of life. In remembrance of the touching and tender words of our Saviour Jesus Christ: "And whoso shall receive one such little child in My name receiveth Me" (Matt. xviii. 5), we decided on taking charge of these little ones. . . . . .
>
> In this assurance, Reverend Sir, I request you kindly, and in all brotherly trust, to forward the accomplishment of the means

"HÔTEL BURLINGTON," AT SUNNY BOSCOMBE. (200 rooms). Every luxury. Delightful grounds. Magnificent golf links. Sea-water baths. Moderate charges.—Bournemouth East Station.

we have in view by means of the purchase of the enclosed series of four lots issued on the subjoined system of play, and to send by postal order as soon as possible the sum of 8 crowns (5sh 12d) (sic) to the Managing Council of the Transylvanian Evangelical Reformed Diocese in Kolozsvar.

The party who signs this is the Bishop of the said Evangelical Reformed Diocese. There seems to be some divergence of views on the question of gambling between the Evangelical party at home and in Hungary.

There is a widespread feeling of dissatisfaction, not by any means confined to the Curates' Union, at the decision of the managers of the Queen Victoria Clergy Sustentation Fund to confine the benefits of the Fund to the beneficed clergy. The decision is an alteration of the purpose of the charity as originally formulated, and to that extent a breach of faith with the subscribers. The Fund was the outcome of a resolution passed in 1895 at the Norwich Church Congress, where it was expressly stated that the proposed fund should include all the clergy. At the Shrewsbury Church Congress the following year Lord Egerton of Tatton, chairman of the Executive Committee of the Fund, stated in so many words that the scheme was to cover "the whole field of the labourers in Christ's vineyard, and though it commences with the beneficed clergy, the unbeneficed are not excluded from its care." Many who have contributed have doubtless done so upon the faith of these representations, and probably similar representations have been made on many occasions when collections have been made, or the objects of the Fund have been under discussion. To exclude assistant curates from the benefits is therefore as unfair to the subscribers as it is unjust to the curates.

An appeal was sent to me the other day inviting my contribution to the very latest memorial. In my humble judgment, the memorial business is being greatly overdone. No sooner does a person die than at once it occurs to every one who has a charitable or ornamental axe to grind, that the departed one should be used as a whetstone, and the world at large is circularised for money in aid of this or that object—possibly very excellent, but with which the connection of the person in whose name the appeal is made is of the shadowest. People are getting tired of this sort of post-mortem cadging. It is felt that if a person wishes his memory to live by a gift to a charity, he should himself have left a legacy for that purpose. That he approved of it and supported it when alive, is no reason why his friends and his acquaintances should keep his memory green by subscribing in his name to it when he is dead. Charity not only covers a great many sins, but a great deal of nonsense; and it is high time that this special form of nonsense should be abated. If any one feels inclined to relieve his sadness at the loss of a friend by benefiting some institution, by all means, let him. But I protest against the practice of a few friends forming themselves into a committee, and pestering others with circulars asking them to subscribe, or the still more common practice of parties connected with some religious or charitable institution using the death of some well-known man as a lever for raising cash.

Among the many seductive circulars which have been issued in reference to Klondike, not the least interesting is one emanating from the East-End Gospel Mission, Glasgow. This circular, which bears the signatures of five-and-twenty committee men, states that the Mission is organising an expedition of about eighty men to leave Glasgow early in the spring. "The members are all solemnly pledged to vows of allegiance to Christ's kingdom on earth, and as labourers in His vineyard." When I read this, I concluded that the eighty were being sent forth as missionaries to preach and convert the miners and residents of Klondike—a very fruitful soil I dare say for the Gospel labourer. But on further perusal this does not seem to be the idea at all. The circular goes on to say that:—

> Each man will work during the ordinary working hours, and is pledged and bound to contribute ten per cent. of his earnings (or 2s. in the pound) towards expenses, and as additional security for the repayment of advances and interest. . . .
>
> Towards the furtherance of this object, we confidently appeal to those having the cause of Christ's Kingdom at heart, and the furtherance thereof, to assist us in our laudable undertaking either by donations, or subscriptions on loan, to be repaid with ten per cent. interest, thus enabling us to equip the expedition with ample provisions, clothing, &c., for two years, and, at the same time, leave sufficient at home so that the mission work shall not suffer. We thank God for what he has done in the past, and we praise and glorify his holy name for what he is going to do in the future. . . .
>
> We will certainly dig for gold, but the gold so obtained will be for the alleviation of distress and sowing the seed of eternal life on barren soil.

So that the labourers are going to leave the vineyard for a time for the goldfields, in the hope of picking up there a little capital for the renewal of their agricultural operations. I confess I should like to know more of the Mission which is organising this remarkable evangelistic operation. As at present advised, I cannot honestly recommend the ten per cent. debentures of this latest Klondike Syndicate as a promising investment, either in a financial or a spiritual sense.

I am asked by the Hon. Secretary of the Prince of Wales's Hospital Fund for London to explain that when that Fund received a contribution of £15 from Mr. "Harlequin" Smith, as mentioned in last week's TRUTH, they were quite unaware of the true source of the donation. It seems that Smith sent on his undistributed prize money with an ordinary contributor's form, signed "Smith & Co., publishers, 6, Station-road, Finsbury Park," and he naturally did not explain any further details. I never supposed that the officers of the Hospital Fund knew the precise nature of the gift; nor did I suggest that, had they done so, it would have made any difference. If a charitable institution were once to begin inquiring how the money it receives has been earned, I don't know where it would land itself.

The following amounts have reached me towards the deficit of the Toy Fund:—A. W. B., £1 2s 6d.; J. S. £5 5s.; M. A. D., £5.

The Maximum of Effect at the Minimum of Cost.—An Object Lesson in Decorating and Furnishing can be obtained by inspecting Messrs. WARING'S Suites of furnished rooms at 175-181, Oxford-st. W.

An unusual domestic difficulty is at present troubling a certain Line infantry regiment, the name of which wild horses should not drag from me. It seems that the Commanding Officer, in the exercise of his taste and discretion, recently took to himself a wife from behind the bar of certain licensed premises much frequented by the rank and file of the regiment. Such a fact speaks highly for the charms and virtues of the lady, and also for the courage and devotion of the gallant officer; but this view of the matter is unfortunately not the one which is taken by the officers' wives of the regiment. Difficulties of this kind always arise when you have ladies to deal with. If the Colonel had consulted me before taking this bold step, I should have said, "My dear Sir, as a man you have a perfect right to marry whom you please, but as the Colonel of a regiment you have to consider other people besides yourself. More particularly you should reflect upon the future relations of your wife with the wives of your brother officers. If you wish to marry the lady, you ought to leave the regiment. Take your choice between the two alternatives." If the Colonel were to consult me now, I should say, "My dear friend, before you married there were two courses open to you. Now there is only one." But the Colonel has not consulted me.

It strikes me that Colonel Hewson, of the Army Pay Department, who got into trouble in Malta the other day for refusing to sign his deposition before a Maltese magistrate, set an uncommonly bad example to his native fellow-subjects in that island. The facts seem to have been that Colonel Hewson gave evidence in English upon a charge against a Maltese, and that his evidence was, as usual, transcribed by the magistrate in Italian. By the law of Malta, as sanctioned by the Queen in Council, the witness has to sign his deposition when it has been transcribed. Colonel Hewson declined to do this, on the ground that he did not understand the language. The magistrate insisted on his signing, but offered to take a note of his objection. The Colonel still persisted in his refusal, unless he were allowed to add his own protest in English. The magistrate then gave him twenty-four hours' time for consideration, at the end of which period the Colonel appeared in court with the Criminal Code in his hand, admitted that the law compelled him to sign, but again refused to comply with the magistrate's order.

On this the magistrate sentenced the Colonel to three days' imprisonment for contempt. The Governor, by reason of the prerogative of mercy, cancelled the order, and immediately released the prisoner. Questioned on this point in Parliament last week, Mr. Chamberlain stated that he proposed to communicate with the Governor of Malta with a view to amending the law. That may be desirable, but for an officer of high rank, holding the Queen's commission, to set in a colony like Malta the example of defying the law, merely because he does not approve of it, and for the Governor to promptly revoke his sentence, seems a trifle undesirable. Had a native Maltese adopted a similar method of signifying his disapproval of any law, would the result have been similar?

Writing with reference to the frequent irregularities that take place in connection with confidential reports, an officer points out that any commanding or other officer who fails to comply with the strict letter of the Queen's Regulations on this subject is guilty of a gross breach of discipline, and should be dealt with accordingly. This is, no doubt, perfectly true, and nothing could be more desirable than that such irregularities should be dealt with in the most drastic fashion possible. Unfortunately, some of these irregularities take place in the highest quarters. Cases have been mentioned in Truth before now where the War Office has taken a line upon a confidential report which is wholly at variance with the procedure laid down in the regulations. Quis custodiet ipsos custodes? Who is to order a court-martial upon the Headquarters Staff of the Army?

Here is a genuine grievance from an acting school master in the Army. The ordinary school hours are 9 a.m. to 6.30 p.m. The teachers are, however, often detained until 7 or 7.30 p.m. to coach candidates for first-class certificates. For this they get nominally sixpence a day extra-duty pay. A lance-sergeant, however, so employed is deprived of the pay of fourpence a day which he gets on appointment to that rank, the net result being that he only gets twopence a day for his extra hour's work. This is clearly wrong, and ought to be remedied.

The question was asked in Truth the other day why a special application to the Secretary of State for War should be necessary for the appointment of a deputy when a sergeant-major or orderly-room-sergeant is absent on duty, seeing that in the event of absence on leave a deputy can be appointed without any reference to headquarters. The raising of this question has moved sundry sergeant-majors to point out that where such a deputy is appointed he has to be paid by the sergeant-major himself, and that there is no other officer or soldier in the Service who is subject to the same rule. I am not quite sure about the last point, but it is certainly a shabby thing that if a warrant officer is away on leave for a single day in the year he should have to provide a substitute out of his own pocket, and the rule on this point might well be amended.

The War Office ought to watch very carefully the treatment of Reservists rejoining under the new regulations. I am giving in my Military Pillory some facts from Buttevant which show the necessity for this. It is a monstrous thing that men of eight or ten years' service Brandauer's Circular-Pointed Pens. Neither scratch nor spurt. Glide over the roughest paper with the ease of a soft lead pencil. Assorted sample box, 7 stamps, from the Works, Birmingham.

American Tooth Crown Company, 24, Old Bond-street, W., where the finest Experts in Dentistry from leading American Colleges are in attendance to save decayed teeth by skilful work. Consultation free. Book describing work post free.

should be kept for weeks doing four hours a day recruits' drill, and an hour's gymnasium; and such a procedure suggests that some one in authority does not altogether approve of the rejoining of Reservists, and is endeavouring to make things as unpleasant for them as possible:—

2nd Battalion Cheshire Regiment, Buttevant.—A number of Reservists who have rejoined this battalion under the new regulations have been occupied for weeks drilling with the last squad of recruits, and though they have frequently been promised that they would be dismissed in a day or two, the dismissal has not come. Several of them have, in consequence, got transferred elsewhere; but some remain, and were still drilling with the recruits up to a week or so ago.

2nd Battalion Somersetshire Light Infantry, Aldershot.—The following record of a man who has apparently only had twelve months' service is interesting. The man in question joined at the Depot in February, 1897. He was given the lance stripe before the end of the month, while drilling on the square as a recruit. He joined the battalion in August, and was again made lance-corporal. In October he was appointed paid lance-corporal, passing over ten lance-corporals senior to himself. On obtaining his drill certificate he was at once struck off duty, and appointed drill-instructor, having then nine months' service, and on March 22, 1898, he was appointed full corporal. There are about twenty-five lance-corporals in the battalion qualified for promotion, and senior to him. It is suggested that this man, who is married, and apparently fully up to the maximum age for enlistment, has had previous service. Even if that were so, should it be allowed as a reason for promoting him so rapidly?

3rd Company Western Division R.A., Bermuda.—This company went out from England to Bermuda in 1886. It was moved to Halifax in 1890. It returned from Halifax to Bermuda in 1894, and has been there ever since. It is understood that it is now in contemplation to move it back again shortly to Halifax. Is is not about time that the company got a turn at home, or, at any rate, on some other foreign station?

No. 10 Mountain Battery, R.A., Pietermaritzburg.—This battery relieved No. 4 Mountain Battery in 1893, and, at the same time, all men who had not completed five years' service in the colony were transferred from No. 4 to No. 10 Battery. Although this is nearly five years ago, there are still a number of these men in the Battery who have practically put in the whole of their Army service at this not over-desirable foreign station, and, so far as they can learn, there is no prospect whatever of their being relieved. It can hardly be supposed, even at the War Office, that men are likely to extend their Army service under such circumstances.

In a regiment quartered in Ireland a man happened the other day to make some mistake on parade in the presence of the Adjutant, who apostrophised him openly as a "—— fool." The man put forward a complaint on the subject to his company officer, who brought it before the C.O., but without result. A day or two later on parade the Adjutant singled out the "man who complained about being called a fool" and informed him that he desired to repeat the epithet, strengthening it at the same time with further expletives drawn from the vocabulary of the "lower orders." No one would suggest that soldiers must be addressed on parade in the same tone as ladies in a drawing-room; but that hardly makes it right or desirable that an officer should talk to his men on the barrack-square like a bargee slanging his adversary in a tap-room.

An officer writes:—

I think you are right in suggesting that guard duty is often overdone on board troopships. Very often, however, it is very much like the proverbial proceeding of taking a horse to the water. On my voyage with troops in the Assistance, the bugle daily summoned the watch and other duties to their post at regular intervals, but not a man turned up till we had nearly arrived at our destination, and sea-sickness had begun to work itself out. This applies to officers equally with men.

This is very much what might be imagined, and it seems to me a sufficient answer to the contention that a soldier may be expected to do as much guard and fatigue duty on board ship as he does on land.

This is the sort of polite note that a recruit in a certain Volunteer regiment gets from the Quartermaster when he is waiting for his uniform. When at drill or on parade Volunteers must, of course, expect to be addressed as unceremoniously as Tommy Atkins before the band begins to play. But "take it away at once," addressed to a man in a printed form at his private residence, certainly seems carrying barrack-square manners a little too far:—

Orderly Room, ——,
March 26, 1898.

Dear Sir,—Your uniform is now ready, and I request you will attend here at a time mentioned below for the purpose of trying it on, and fitting the belts, &c. Take it away at once.—Yours truly,

——— ———,
Quartermaster and Captain.

As Truth is so widely read in the Army, I publish the following letter for the enlightenment of any soldiers who may receive similar epistles. This particular document was addressed to the sergeant-major at a station in Scotland, who was fortunately sufficiently wide-awake to detect in it strong evidence that it was not the work of a discharged soldier. No. 77, Fetter-lane, the address from which it is written, is a barber's shop where letters are taken in. A man giving the name of John Walsh is still in the habit of calling there for letters, and any one who has been victimised by him ought therefore to be able to put the police on his track:—

77, Fetter-lane, London, E.C.
March 16, 1898.

Sir,—On leaving Egypt, a friend of yours gave me a box to bring home for you, and told me, when I got to Fort Brockhurst, I should receive a letter from you telling me how to forward the box to you.

I have been a week at Brockhurst (I was discharged yesterday), and not receiving a letter from you, I inform you of the fact.

The box contains different articles (a present) and is about 18 in. square and weighs about 10 lb.

Let me know as soon as you can how to send it, if by parcels post, please send stamps.—I remain, yours truly,

John Walsh.

The Avoca recently took out the 2nd Berkshire Regiment to relieve the 1st Middlesex in King Williams-town, Cape Colony. King Williams-town is a short distance by rail from East London. The Avoca, however, was ordered to disembark the Berkshire men at Algoa Bay, whence they were to be taken by train to Grahams-town, and thence to march a distance of seventy-six miles to King Williams-town. The 1st Middlesex were in the same way ordered to march the seventy-six miles to Grahams-town, and thence to go by train to Algoa Bay. When this arrangement was made known, the Harbour Board authorities at East London pointed out to the War Office that at that port there is a navigable river with 19 ft. 6 in. of water at low tide, whereas at Algoa Bay there is only an open roadstead, and the troops have to be embarked and disembarked in lighters. Nevertheless, the original arrangement was adhered to. It is no exaggeration to say that, in addition to the six days' march of the troops from King Williams-town to Grahams-town, the embarka-

H. L. Savory & Co.'s Cigarettes.—By Special Warrants of Appointments to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, H.R.H. the Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, H.S.H. the Duke of Teck, and the Houses of Lords and Commons. To be obtained of all the leading Houses in the trade.—Sole address, 59, Piccadilly, London, W. Specimen case of samples, containing all sizes, 2s. 6d., with price list.

tion and disembarkation at Algoa Bay will cost the country many hundreds of pounds as compared with what the expense would have been at East London. It would be interesting to know from what motive this unnecessary additional expenditure was incurred.

A Naval contributor writes from Portsmouth that "one of the latest Admiralty orders deals at considerable length with the way in which our Bluejackets are in future to lace up their trousers. Henceforth, it would appear, the old manner of lacing is to be reversed." The consideration of this fresh proof of the never-sleeping vigilance of our Admiralty has inspired my friend to write the following verses, which I gladly publish by way of reassuring the timorous in these anxious times:—

READY TO THE LAST EYELET-HOLE.

Peace, agitated citizen!
  Pray calm thy heaving breast!
Perturbed and anxious Briton, seek
  All fearlessly thy rest!
What though the outlook parlous be,
  You need not care a jot.
What though your foemen's fleets combine,
  You're ready for the lot.

See what it is, at times like these,
  When danger is at hand,
To have such cool, such knowing salts
  Your Navy to command!
Do they show any trace of fear
  Or failing? Not a bit!
Does Panic tinge their policy
  Or force their hands? Not it!

No, they the situation scan,
  And in a moment see
What 'tis our Fleet requires if 'tis
  Invincible to be.
If, in due course, Armadas new
  Are all to be dispersed,
The way Jack laces up his trews
  Forthwith must be reversed!

And so the fiat goeth forth,
  And Jack is told to drop
Down to the bottom eyelet-hole
  The bow now tied on top.
True, laced the other way, he won
  Trafalgar and the Nile;
No matter; now "My Lords" decree
  A wholly altered style!

Then let us, noting what they've done
  Anent Jack's trouser lace,
With placid and unflinching hearts
  Our country's future face.
Aye, let us "Rule Britannia!" shout,
  And thank the Fates that we Possess a Board thus keen to keep
  Our Empire of the Sea!

The manifold difficulties in the way of obtaining an eligible site for the Naval College at Dartmouth have been overcome, and the building will be commenced in a few weeks, the purchase of the land on the Mount Boone estate having been at last completed by the Admiralty. It is an altogether fatuous arrangement to locate this establishment at Dartmouth, but if the Admiralty authorities are firm in their resolution to favour this town for some mysterious reason, it may be hoped that the college will be completed as soon as possible, for the training-ship Britannia is in a miserably insanitary condition, and has been a perfect hot-bed of illness (notably measles and mumps) all through the winter.

The Board of Trade might usefully inquire why an exception to the rule requiring clerks under the Trinity House Commissioners to retire at the age of sixty-five is made in the case of the clerks in the Pilotage Office, who are allowed the privilege of remaining till any age. It is contended by the pilots that this arrangement injuriously affects the Pilots' Fund, out of which their small pensions are paid, inasmuch as it enables a clerk to draw a large salary for a very long time and to pile up a correspondingly large retiring allowance. Whatever force there may be in this objection the arrangement in question is a decided anomaly.

The course adopted by the Punjab Government in reference to a fatal mistake on the part of Dr. Dennys, a Civil surgeon of the Indian Medical Service at Delhi, has been severely criticised in India. In prescribing for Mr. L. F. Maclean, an officer of Government at Delhi, Dr. Dennys wrote "extract of nux vomica" instead of "tincture of nux vomica," and so brought about the death of the patient. The prescription showed that other minor slips of the pen had been made, but had been corrected, so that the omission to notice and rectify the most serious error of all was all the more inexplicable and reprehensible. There was an attempt to account for it by the suggestion that Dr. Dennys was in a very excited state at the time, owing to a difference between Mr. Maclean and himself respecting fees, but the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab has come to the conclusion that this suggestion was not borne out by the evidence. The mistake made by Dr. Dennys ought, it seems, to have been discovered by the native compounder at the dispensary, inasmuch as the dose of extract of nux vomica was written in minims, a measure that was inapplicable to this ingredient, and which the compounder changed to grains. His excuse was that he had been previously threatened by Dr. Dennys with severe punishment if he allowed any delay to occur in the preparation of a prescription. It was further ascertained that the hospital assistant had been guilty of a breach of the rules in allowing the compounder to dispense poisons without his personal supervision.

It is in regard to the differences in the punishment meted out to the three officers concerned in this painful tragedy that there has been so much discussion. The native compounder was dismissed and the hospital assistant reduced in grade for two years. Dr. Dennys, on the other hand, gets off with a transfer to a smaller station and a censure for his carelessness in writing the prescription and for his previous "ill-judged" and "indiscriminate" threat against the compounder. It will seem to most people that he has escaped very lightly indeed. A coroner's jury in England would hardly have taken so lenient a view of the carelessness which resulted in poor Mr. Maclean's death, while if Dr. Dennys had been an Army Medical Officer, he would assuredly have been tried by court-martial and probably forced to retire.

For Truth, and all other Newspapers, Magazines, and Periodicals, send your Subscriptions to Wm. Dawson & Sons, Ltd., Cannon House, Bream's-bldngs., London. (Estab. 1809.) Catalogue gratis.

It is now announced from India that the Zakka Khels have made their submission. If this is true, it probably marks the end of the Afridi rising, for all authorities with whom I have conversed agree that the Zakka Khels were the most turbulent of the tribesmen, and the most likely to hold out to the end. I confess, however, that I regard these announcements of the voluntary submission of the outstanding clans with some suspicion. Hostages have, I believe, been given in most cases for the future good behaviour of the tribes, but what this security would be worth, if the agreement was violated, is not clear. My impression is that the Afridis will observe their present promises just so long as it suits their purpose, and no longer. There will be no security from future annoyance on their part until we have gained their confidence, and convinced them of our intention to respect their territory, their religion, and their virtual independence.

Assuming that there is to be no more fighting, I hold more strongly than ever that there ought to be an inquiry into the management of the late campaign. The submission of the tribes will, no doubt, be used in official quarters as an argument that the ends in view have been accomplished, that the campaign has thus been a genuine success, and that criticism is thereby refuted. This is all bunkum. The campaign has revealed widespread incompetence among the staff officers employed, serious defects in organisation, and a general lack of preparedness to meet a serious emergency. Never, probably, in a campaign of similar duration have more serious blunders been committed, or more disasters of a preventable nature occurred. Common sense suggests that the reason for these failings should be thoroughly threshed out. If this is not done, the confidence which has hitherto been felt in Indian military organisation will remain seriously impaired.

It is hardly worth while now to go back to the incidents of the late campaign; but I continue to receive from India many interesting contributions to the long story of bungling and mismanagement. Here is one of the most remarkable of them:—

> When General Gaselee's Brigade took the Sanpagha Pass, General Westmacott's advanced and opened volley firing upon it. General Gaselee's Brigade lay down on the crest they had occupied to shelter themselves from the fire of their own countrymen, and, strange to relate, did not suffer one single casualty. This experience probably throws some light on the reports that have been circulated of Afridi "losses" under similar circumstances.

No doubt. It also throws light upon other matters of more importance. This story comes to me from an officer who certainly would not have repeated it unless he had good authority for believing it to be true. If such an incident did occur, no one can question that it ought to be thoroughly sifted, and the parties responsible for the blunder properly dealt with.

One of the supporters of the new Sedition Law in the Indian Legislative Council was Sir Griffith Evans, a non official member, whose record on this question is worth quoting as an instructive and amusing object-lesson in opportunism. In 1878, during the Administration of Lord Lytton, Sir Griffith was a member of the Council which passed the Vernacular Press Act. In 1882, when Lord Ripon was Viceroy, Sir Griffith was a member of the Council which repealed that Act. In 1898, under the Viceroyalty of Lord Elgin, he approves of yet another measure for the muzzling of the Press all round, Anglo-Indian as well as Native. The Vicar of Bray kept his living, and Sir Griffith Evans retains his seat on the Council, whatever may happen.

A story lately unfolded in the police-court at Singapore deserves publicity as a warning to any young women who may be tempted to accept engagements as barmaids in that part of the world. Two respectable girls had been brought over from Melbourne to act as barmaids in a house called the Stamford Hotel, which was represented to them as one of the leading hotels in Singapore. They found that it was a low drinking saloon, and that instead of serving behind the bar, their business was to sit and drink with customers and induce them to spend their money as freely as possible. These Australian girls declined to do anything of the kind, and the proprietor sued them for breach of contract, but the Court gave judgment against him on the ground that they had been engaged by misrepresentation. It would seem, however, that there are many cases in which the proprietors of similar so-called "hotels" have been more successful in ensnaring young women, and a shocking account is given of the lives led by these unfortunate decoy ducks. They have been procured by means of specious advertisements from India as well as from Australia and possibly other parts of the world, and, finding themselves in a strange land without friends, have easily fallen into the trap prepared for them. Cannot the authorities at Singapore do something to stop this iniquitous traffic?

In the last budget of hints to intending emigrants issued by the Emigrants' Information Office, the following appears among other useful matter:—

> In Western Australia an Act has recently been passed prohibiting the landing of the following persons (amongst others):—(1) Any one who cannot himself write out, in the characters of any language of Europe, a passage in English of fifty words taken by the appointed officer from a British author, and append his name thereto in his own language; (2) any one who is a pauper or likely to become a public charge; (3) any one who within three years has been convicted of a felony or an infamous crime. There continues to be a good demand for mechanics, miners, and other labourers.

The idea of a competitive examination for the admission of immigrants to a colony is novel, and suggests that education has reached a high standard in Western Australia. I fear, however, that the explanation is a different one, and that the first clause in the conditions is really designed to exclude Chinese, Hindoos, or other foreigners. The idea of excluding any one who within three years has been convicted of felony is excellent in theory, if a little difficult to carry out in practice, and it should do much to establish confidence in the Westralian gold-mining industry. Fancy a goldfield where nobody has been convicted of felony for the past three years!

If you want to entirely Furnish your House or select any article of Furniture or Carpet, &c., send for HEWETSONS' Illustrated Priced Catalogue.—HEWETSONS, Tottenham Court-road, London.

Latest offer of the "model employer." In the window of the Reigate post-office is a notice inviting applicants for temporary employment as postmen, intimating that "only respectable men whose character will bear the most rigid scrutiny" need apply, and explaining that the pay will be 16s. a week for eight hours' work a day. It is evident that in the Post Office no pecuniary value is attached to a good character, for this is considerably less than the wage received in the same district by plenty of labourers whose only credential is their muscle.

There is still much room for improvement in the condition and treatment of the horses employed by the Post Office mail contractors, and I am glad to see that their case was the subject of investigation before Mr. Haden Corser at Worship-street Police-court last week. The Post Office is apparently endeavouring to avail itself of the facilities offered by horseless vehicles. Quite recently a motor car has been put on to do the duty between Newbury and Reading, and has been favourably reported upon. But horses will always be required to do a certain amount of the work in London, and the least we should do is to see that they receive proper treatment.

Mr. Hanbury's speech on the telephone service must have caused a severe shock to those big-wigs at St. Martin's-le-Grand who have so zealously defended the interests of the monopolists. He condemned the service of the National Telephone Company as costly and inefficient, and he urged that an end must be put to the monopoly it has so misused—the only monopoly which is not, as he pointed out, under strict control and stringent regulations for the protection and benefit of the public. The Post Office policy of protecting the monopoly of the Company is therefore to be abandoned, and competition with it is to be allowed and encouraged, though the question whether municipalities shall enter into this competition has yet to be submitted to a Select Committee. It is scarcely open to doubt, I should think, that the answer will be in favour of municipal services, but in any event it is satisfactory to know that the National Telephone Company will no longer have things all its own way.

I am not always able to endorse the views of those who object to the Income-tax on principle; but there is undoubtedly a great deal of legitimate ground for finding fault with the way the tax is levied in practice. I heard the other day from a tradesman at Daventry, who had recently started in business, was making no profits, and returned his income accordingly; but the assessors, assuming that he was a liar, insisted on assessing him to the tune of £3 6s. 8d. He appealed. Several months elapsed, and he was then notified that he must attend on a certain Saturday at Northampton in support of his case. He did so, and the appeal has been allowed.

Now, for a tradesman to give up a day, and Saturday of all days, means a certain amount of pecuniary loss, and a journey from Daventry to Northampton costs a certain amount of money. If a man is put to this expense by the fault of the Income-tax authorities, who choose to impugn his statement of his income, he ought certainly, like any other litigant, to be reimbursed his expenditure when he has made out his case. Human nature being what it is, I do not suggest that every man's Income-tax return should be taken as accurate, even though he is subject to severe penalties for disguising the truth. But if the Income-tax authorities decline to accept a man's declaration, and the truth can be readily ascertained by inspecting his books, why on earth should not an Income-tax Commissioner visit his premises and there ascertain the facts?

The London County Council have just abolished a long-standing grievance. For the future all persons summoned to serve on coroners' juries will receive remuneration at the rate of two shillings a day, if called upon to go into the box. The fee, however, is not to be paid to substitutes, or to those summoned from the street in cases of emergency. The good results of this reform have been at once seen. In one case a juror sought exemption on the plea of a most important engagement. He was, accordingly, released from attendance; but upon being informed that he would have received the appointed fee for his services, he elected to abandon his important engagement, and sacrifice himself for the good of his country. In another instance fourteen "good men and true" scrambled for the twelve seats, instead of—as in former days—endeavouring to slink off in a body. So much may be accomplished at the modest expenditure of one florin.

The Corporation of Aldeburgh shows the proneness to procrastinate which seems to overcome most local bodies when sanitary improvements have to be undertaken. In this ancient borough things remain, I understand, very much as they were when an outcry was raised a few months ago, and though an analysis of the water has been obtained the authorities are strangely reluctant to make it known. They must be very obtuse if they do not realise that an unfavourable inference will be drawn from this silence. It would be well for them to bear in mind that another summer season is approaching, and that the failure to take any practical steps for putting their house in order will inevitably have a damaging effect on the prosperity of the town.

Duysen Pianos are the most superb of all modern Instruments. They stand absolutely unrivalled for beauty of tone, touch, & finish. A consummate success in small grands.—Lloyd's, 24, Mount-street, Grosvenor-square, W.

The Queen at Netley Hospital.—The four specially-constructed Invalid Couches recently presented by Her Majesty to the above Hospital were made by Mr. John Carter, of 6A, New Cavendish-street, Portland-place, W., whose world-wide reputation is unique. He is undoubtedly the premier Surgical Engineer, being invariably selected by all the Crowned Heads and Royalties of the World to supply whatever articles of Invalid Furniture may be required. All invalids requiring appliances should at once write for his profusely-illustrated price list, which will be sent post free.

The village of Ash, near Dover, has been the scene during the past two or three years of some interesting experiments in the disposal of sewage. A drainage scheme was adopted by the Eastrey Rural District Council, and the sewage poured into a little stream called the Durlock, which was already polluted by the sewage from a brewery. Some patent method of sewage purification was then adopted, but it proved a complete failure, and the brook remained an intolerable nuisance and a serious danger to all living in its neighbourhood. The Local Government Board were induced to send down an inspector, and he made certain recommendations, which, however, were ignored. Then a case of diphtheria occurred, and the so-called "sanitary authority" has now in operation yet another system of sewage treatment. But the state of the stream has not been improved in any way—in fact, the noxious stenches are as bad as ever, and nobody will be surprised if an epidemic of disease breaks out when the warm weather comes. In that event a heavy responsibility will rest upon the authorities, who have been warned time after time of the risks to which the place is being exposed through their peddling and muddling methods of dealing with the matter.

Last week the following advertisement appeared in the Times. I cannot help thinking that it has escaped the vigilant eyes of the advertisement managers of that journal. The institution to which the advertisement refers may be unexceptional of its class; but seeing that we have plenty of well-managed lunatic asylums in this country, and that it is before all things necessary that patients in lunatic asylums should be within reach of their friends, it is difficult to believe that English patients would be sent to a foreign asylum for any good purpose, especially with a life payment made in advance. A more objectionable arrangement it is difficult to conceive; indeed, I am curious to know whether the English lunacy laws permit a lunatic to be disposed of in this way:—

A WELL-KNOWN LUNATIC ASYLUM in Prussia RECEIVES PERSONS of either sex suffering from insanity, curable or incurable. Patients will also be received at only one payment for life. The institution has two physicians, two priests, and a number of deacons and deaconesses. Patients can be received in London. Apply to, &c.

A queer story is told in the Bristol Guardian respecting the recent appointment of a clerk to the Justices of the Peace at Manchester. About seventy applicants for the berth from all parts of the country—one being from Bristol—were, it seems, invited to appear before the Justices; but when they arrived they found that no secret was made of the fact that a local man was sure of the appointment. In the end, after all his rivals had been solemnly called before the Justices, this local applicant was duly elected; whereupon, according to the Bristol paper, he drew a manuscript from his pocket, and read the speech which he had prepared for the occasion! It would be interesting to hear whether this account of what happened is correct. If it is, the proceedings were discreditable in the extreme to the Manchester Justices.

Some curious views were expressed by certain Clifton doctors at an inquiry at Bristol last week respecting the possible effects of the proposed "dockisation" of the Avon upon the public health. The Avon, as my readers may remember, is at present polluted with the sewage of Bristol, as well as several smaller places, and every summer there are loud complaints respecting the vile and intolerable stenches from the river. A number of local medical men have testified that many illnesses are due to this cause, and the doctors examined last week were apparently called to combat this evidence. They were good enough to admit that an atmosphere devoid of smells was superior to one in which smells existed; but they denied that smells, "even though of a very definite nature as they sometimes were in Clifton," could be considered definitely prejudicial to health. Furthermore, these gentlemen would not say that any danger would arise from this sewage-contaminated river through its "dockisation" and the consequent stoppage of the ebb and flow of the tide.

One might almost imagine, from the statements of some of these medicos, that a foul-smelling river, filled with sewage, is a blessing to the population who have the good fortune to live on its banks. The population, however, will probably prefer the evidence of their own senses and experiences, to say nothing of the medical testimony on the other side, and the inquiry last week is hardly likely to quell the agitation for the purification of the Avon. In Clifton, at least, that process is required as a matter of business no less than as a matter of comfort or hygiene. Visitors have a natural prejudice against a health resort which, though it may be ever so healthy, is afflicted all through the hot weather with stenches of "a very definite nature."

On one of the suburban railways the second-class season-ticket holders are confronted with the difficulty that certain of the trains by which they are entitled to travel contain only first and third class carriages. These trains belong to the Midland Company, which has running powers over the line, and the passengers who have paid for second-class accommodation are expected to put up with the third, excess fare being demanded from all who are found in the first-class compartments. Those who resist this piece of extortion are called upon to furnish their names and addresses. By means of this system of intimidation the second-class ticket holders are driven into the overcrowded "thirds"; but it is noteworthy that though names and addresses are constantly taken, no summons ever follows, so that the legal position of the Company is possibly not so strong as its menaces would imply. However this may be, the only equitable and reasonable arrangement would be to allow second-class passengers the use of the first-class carriages in the trains which have no second-class.

FIRE PROTECTION ON COUNTRY HOUSES.—Merryweathers' system. Economy, convenience, efficiency. Illustrated particulars post free.—Write MERRYWEATHERS, 63, Long-acre, London.

HOTEL ALBEMARLE, Piccadilly, London. Private Suite, Bath, Electric Light, Lift. VERMERSCH, Proprietor. Paris: Imperial Hotel, Champs Elysées. Boulogne S/M: Imperial Pavilion Hotel.

The question was raised in Truth the other day whether, under English law, a man is free to marry his divorced wife's sister. Although I have been favoured with numerous opinions on the question, they do not contribute much towards the settlement of the point, for I find that about an equal number of writers take each side of the question. Those, however, who state that such marriages are clearly illegal seem to be the best authorities. Mr. T. Paynter Allen, secretary of the Marriage Law Reform Association, writes:—

> Permit me to confirm the opinion you have expressed in reply to a correspondent, that such marriages are wholly repugnant to English law. The English law as to prohibited marriages, in theory at all events, is based exclusively upon Leviticus, the eighteenth chapter and eighteenth verse of which—especially as rendered in the Revised Version—makes it absolutely clear, giving a reason, that, so long as the wife lives, the husband, separated or not, cannot marry her sister. In the eyes of all Jews—who, however, attach exceptional privileges to marriage with a deceased wife's sister—such a connection would constitute a particularly heinous offence.

Why English law should be based upon Leviticus I do not know. But so it is.

Here is a case of injustice for which the law apparently provides no remedy. Last August a respectable artisan named Chapman and his son, a youth of twenty, were summoned before the Oxted Bench for trespassing in search of game. The only witness for the prosecution was a labourer who was employed as a game-watcher, and who swore that he saw the two defendants out shooting in a certain field at five o'clock in the morning. The defendants both swore that they were in bed at the time, but though they both bore excellent characters, and were, to say the least, fully as much entitled to credence as the game-watcher, they were, nevertheless, convicted and fined. As soon as the case was reported, it was shown that the game-watcher had made a mistake, for the two persons whom he had really seen—one a tradesman and the other a farmer—came forward and admitted that they were the parties. A farm-bailiff who was working in a neighbouring field was also ready to corroborate their statement, and other evidence of the innocence of the Chapmans was forthcoming. The defendants applied to the Bench to re-hear the case, but the application was refused—indeed, the Bench have no power to reopen a case once disposed of—and as the fines were under £2 each there was no right of appeal. The Home Secretary has since been petitioned, but he also has declined to afford any redress.

The story conveys two lessons. One is the unwisdom of leaving the administration of the Game Laws in the hands of the Great Unpaid, who are almost always, consciously or unconsciously, biassed judges. These two defendants ought never to have been convicted on such flimsy evidence as that which was given by the solitary witness against them; and on any charge but one affecting the cult of the sacred birds they would probably have been given the benefit of the doubt, even by the Oxted J.P.'s. The other point is the necessity for the establishment of a Court of Criminal Appeal, so that any conviction proved to be unjust could be quashed. At present there are no means available for that purpose. Even if the magistrates are ready to acknowledge that a blunder has occurred, they cannot wipe out what they have done, and all the Home Secretary can do is to remit the penalty and grant a "free pardon." The fact that the penalty happened to be a light one does not make the injustice any the less monstrous.

There were some suggestive incidents at Kilmainham Sessions last week upon the occasion of an application for a so-called extension of a licence. It was pointed out by the Recorder that the application, though nominally for an extension to adjoining premises, was in reality one for a new licence which should properly come before the October Licensing Sessions. The Recorder's proposal that the matter ought to be adjourned to those sessions was met by a demand for a poll of the magistrates sitting with him, and the result was that a majority voted in favour of dealing with the case there and then. The applicant was called into the witness-box, and the Recorder at once inquired whether he had canvassed any of the magistrates. He admitted that he "might have spoken," first, to "one or two," next to "not more than three," and, finally, to "three or four"; but, on being further pressed, he refused, under the advice of his counsel, to answer further questions. The upshot of the discussion was that the Recorder announced that he should adjourn the case on his own responsibility, and that if the magistrates objected he should retire from the court. After what had happened none of them had the courage to object; and if those who had been "spoken to" have any sense of decency they will be absent from the Bench when the case is next considered.

Not being in the confidence of Mr. W. S. Gilbert, I cannot say whether he intends to take his case against Mr. Ledger before a second jury, but I trust that I may offer an opinion upon the dispute as it stands without exposing myself to any serious pains and penalties. It struck me that this action is one of Mr. Gilbert's characteristic jokes, carried out in the usual elaborate Gilbertian manner. Mr. Ledger suggested that Mr. Gilbert esteems himself too highly. Mr. Gilbert at once claimed from him heavy damages for libel, by way of showing that he sets no value at all on his own reputation. Mr. Ledger suggested that Mr. Gilbert was abnormally sensitive to criticism. Mr. Gilbert at once issued a writ to prove how little he cared for any adverse comment in the Press. Mr. Ledger suggested that everybody does not love Mr. Gilbert. Mr. Gilbert at once commenced an action, just to show what an amiable creature he is, and (I suppose) to establish himself in the affections of Mr. Ledger, if in nobody else's. All this is excellent fooling; and no doubt we shall hear next that the shorthand writer's notes have been sent to Sir Arthur Sullivan, who ought to find some most inspiring material in them.

Bellis's world-famed real Turtle Soup, more strengthening than any beef fluid. Glass flaçons 7/-, tins, 5/-.—Obtainable everywhere, or direct, post free. T. K. Bellis, 6, Jeffrey's-square, London.

Surplice Shirts for evening wear, with pique fronts, 9/6, 10/6 each, made to measure.—Sampson & Co., Shirt Tailors, 268, 270, Oxford-street, London, W. Price lists forwarded.

My Legal Pillory this week exhibits the customary object-lessons in Justices' justice. At Stratford, a drunken father, convicted of brutally ill-treating his children, is let off with a pecuniary penalty; but two men, guilty of a trumpery theft, are committed to gaol for two months each. The crime of playing pitch and toss in the street is visited at Retford with precisely the same penalty as that which is imposed at East Dereham for a serious and unprovoked assault. At Newport, the indulgent magistrates treat a grave outrage in a railway carriage as a mere common assault, and allow the culprit to escape with a fine; but at Winchester, six weeks' hard labour is unhesitatingly inflicted for an offence against the Game Laws; while at Exeter and at East Grinstead men are sent to prison for sleeping out, and being "without visible means of subsistence":—

Stratford Petty Sessions. Joseph Patrick Fannangher, charged with assaulting his daughter and his son. He went home the worse for drink and assaulted both his son and his daughter, and the latter was so terrified by his conduct that she got out of her bedroom window on to the roof of the house. The defendant had frequently beaten her in a brutal way. Fined 20s. and costs in each case.

East Dereham Police-court. Before Messrs. W. D. Bulwer, T. H. Hubbard, and A. G. Copeman. John Beckett, labourer, convicted of assaulting Henry Greenwood. Defendant knocked complainant down with a stick, rendering him insensible. Fined 10s. 6d.

Axbridge Police-court. George Allen, charged with cruelty by causing a mare to be worked whilst in an unfit condition. The animal was aged, in poor condition, and very lame, one foot being diseased. Defendant told an officer he knew the mare was crippled, but "he thought he would go on jogging along until he was stopped." Fined £1 and costs.

Sheffield City Police-court. Tom Smith, charged with being disorderly and refusing to quit a public-house, and with assaulting Edwin Pepper, the landlord. The defendant, after he had been ordered out of the house, made a sudden rush at the complainant, and dealt him a violent blow in the face, which burst his nose and cut his lip. Fined 5s. on the first charge and 30s. for the assault.

Newport County Police-court. Edward Birch, charged with unlawfully assaulting Maude Tucker in a railway-carriage. Owing to the conduct of the prisoner, who was under the influence of drink, the girl attempted to get out of the carriage; but a passenger in the next compartment, who had heard her screams, persuaded her to wait till the train stopped. The Bench dealt with the case as one of common assault. Fined £3.

Stratford Petty Sessions. Before Colonel Garrett and Mr. C. J. Musgrove. Ernest George Ireland and Henry Taylor, convicted of stealing a horse-collar. Two months each.

Uttoxeter Petty Sessions. Before Captain Dawson, Messrs. S. Blount, and S. B. Bamford. John Hodgkinson, charged under the Poaching Prevention Act with being in possession of six rabbits. Fined £1 10s. 7d.

Retford Borough Police-court. Before the Mayor (Mr. G. Marshall), Mr. George Cutts, and Mr. Bescoby. John Shaw, summoned for playing pitch and toss in the street. Fined 10s. 6d. or fourteen days.

Albrighton Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. G. B. Lloyd, T. Corbett, W. Jones, C. Walcot, J. Cock, and Major-General W. H. Herbert, Walter Clayton and George Beddows, charged with trespassing in pursuit of conies. Beddows fined £1, Clayton £2.

Exeter County Police-court. Before Admiral White, Sir R. Newman, Colonel Blake, Messrs. G. F. Studd, and J. Webber. Oliver Jennings, charged with sleeping out under a hedge. He pleaded guilty, and said he was doing no harm. The Bench retired, and on their return sentenced prisoner to three days' hard labour.

West Bromwich Police-court. Before Messrs. J. Scattergood and J. E. Wilson. Louisa Tonks, convicted of stealing a pair of boots from a shop. One month.

Sittingbourne Police-court. Charles Webb, a labourer, eighty years of age, charged with stealing growing turnips of the value of 6d. Fined 18s. 4d., and in default committed for seven days.

Dublin Northern Division Police-court. Before Mr. R. P. Carton. Thomas Farrell and his wife, charged with assaulting Catherine Green. The female defendant pulled complainant down by the hair of her head, and when she was on the ground both defendants kicked her. The man fined 10s.; his wife £1.

Barnsley Police-court. James Roberts, convicted of being drunk and assaulting a policeman. He struck the officer in the face, knocking him down, and kicked him several times in the chest. Fined 5s. for the first offence, and 20s. for the assault.

Abergavenny Police-court. Before Mr. Manley Ashwin and other magistrates. James Pritchard, convicted of assaulting Harriet Farr. Defendant threatened to "rip her up," and then struck her two violent blows on the face, knocking out three teeth. Fined £1.

Winchester County Police-court. Before Mr. W. B. Symonds, General W. C. Forrest, Captain C. G. Fryer, Colonel T. B. Hitchcock, and Mr. F. Morshead. John Winkworth, charged with poaching. The offence was committed in November, 1896. Six weeks.

East Grinstead Police-court. Before Mr. C. H. Everard. Walter Calligan, charged with sleeping out and being without visible means of subsistence. He had three halfpence in his possession. Seven days.

Newport Pagnell Divisional Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. W. J. Levi, J. R. Wilmer, T. Taylor, and Colonel Barney. James Orpin and Wm. Barrick, charged with trespassing in pursuit of game. Barrick fined £2. 0s. 6d., Orpin £2. 10s. 6d.

Our old friend, Mr. Robert Macmillan, self-styled "Reverend," made once again an unfavourable appearance in a court of justice last week, in the character of plaintiff in an action brought by a land agent, who had sold a house for him. By way of evading the agent's claim, Macmillan appears to have made various charges against the plaintiff, which he utterly failed to substantiate, and after hearing the plaintiff's evidence, the County Court Judge at Chertsey, before whom the case was tried, stated that he required no further evidence, adding that it was scandalous that the defendant should make such baseless charges against a respectable man for the mere purpose of gaining time. Mr. E. Bowen Rowlands, who was acting as plaintiff's counsel, then informed the Judge that the defendant, Macmillan, was a "notorious scoundrel," on which Macmillan asked for the protection of the Court against such observations. In reply the learned counsel begged the reverend gentleman to go into the box and submit himself to cross-examination, when he promised to satisfy the Judge that the expression was justified by the facts. Macmillan does not seem, however, to have accepted this invitation, and the case then ended with judgment for the plaintiff.

It will be remembered that when Mr. Macmillan brought an action for libel against me, he had perforce to submit himself to cross-examination, with the result that a jury estimated his injuries at one farthing sterling. He was certainly wise, under these circumstances, not to accept Mr. Bowen Rowland's invitation, and if he takes my advice he will steer clear of courts of justice in future. It is a strange thing that an individual in this position should still be able to obtain considerable sums of money by begging from door to door with a subscription list, on the mere strength of his own cock-and-bull tale of the noble philanthropic and religious work in which he is engaged.

A County Court Registrar offers a useful suggestion in connection with the case at Bath the other day, in which a victim of the usurer Gordon was ordered to pay off a debt of £39 10s. by instalments of sixpence a month. It is that in such cases care should be taken to provide in the order that execution shall not be issued for more than one instalment, without leave, as otherwise on the defendant making default in payment of one instalment, the plaintiff can issue execution for the whole balance due. This is done under Sec. 149 of the County Court Act, 1888, and Order 25, Rule 7; but the same section and rule empower the Court to limit the execution, and the order for that purpose may be made "at the time of making the original order, or at any subsequent time." It is very desirable that this should be borne in mind by Judges anxious to frustrate the knavish tricks of Shylock & Co.

---

Subscriptions greatly needed by The Royal Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.—6,929 convictions this year; 7,320 last year. Address complaints of cruelty, contributions, letters, &c., to Secretary, 105, Jermyn-st., London.

Among professional money-lenders none are more dangerous than the philanthropists who, often under some high-sounding and misleading title, offer to come to the assistance of tradesmen and others, when the appearance of their names in the Gazette indicates that they are in temporary difficulties. A defendant against whom a County Court judgment was recently registered at Carlisle, was at once favoured with circulars from two practitioners in this line whose names are new to me—"The Midland Mercantile Bureau, Limited," of Birmingham, and "The Tradesmen's Trust, Limited," of Leeds. The latter concern winds up its circular as follows:—

> We would warn tradespeople against the many parties who send out circulars making glowing offers with no intention of fulfilling same. They mostly extort fees, have no capital, and are best left alone.

Those are my sentiments exactly.

Our old friend Ernest Day, of the Old Kent-road, is trying a new trick, evidently borrowed from his great rival in the picture-dealing trade, Mr. Leigh Sampson. He writes one of his usual letters, offering a print of an old family portrait at exceptionally reduced terms, and obtains an order to forward the print on approval. Then there appears on the scene Mrs. Ernest Day. She writes as follows, on notepaper of the deepest mourning:—

> Sir,—I have to aeknowledge the receipt of your letter and to thank you very much for the same, and sincerely apologize for delay in answering before the reason being my husband haveing had a very severe attaek of Seiatica, which rendered him entirely unable to do enything until now, and through sheer neeessity we had to raise a temporary loan upon the portrait together with some other things and only to-day able to redeem the same, when I have had it very earefully paeked and forwarded on to you per Carter, Paterson, & Co., when I do hope and trust it will meet with your kind approval and, being in extremely straightened circumstances, may I ask you kindly to purchase the very pretty portrait, as I do most positively assure you the money is very greatly needed, but should you think the price I have asked 2 guineas a little too high I should be pleased to accept from you what you think it is worth, &c., &c.

The gentleman to whom this was written thought the portrait was worth nothing at all. He describes it as a small photograph in a large frame of a fairly common print, and he accordingly told Day to remove it, but said at the same time (evidently not having read his Truth carefully) that, if Day could give satisfactory references as to his circumstances, he might be disposed to assist him. The portrait was removed, but, needless to say, Day did not think it prudent to take any notice of the offer of assistance. The wife's letter, and the story of the portrait having been pledged to tide the Day family over a temporary difficulty, are, of course, introduced for the purpose of enhancing the value of the rubbish which Day offers for sale. Day apparently thinks that, if he sells a worthless print for a guinea or two by this trick, he guards himself against a prosecution for fraud. In this he is probably mistaken.

I find that Mr. Coleman, of 33, Old Queen-street, Westminster, one of the advertising home-employment gentry, has now fortified his circulars with an extract from Truth of November 25. In publishing the paragraph which he quotes, I endeavoured to word it so that he could not possibly make any use of it for his own advantage, and the warmest compliment that I paid him was that I could not say that the business is not honestly conducted. As, however, Mr. Coleman thinks this good enough to reproduce, and as, moreover, he has altered the wording of my paragraph in two places in order to make it read somewhat more favourably to himself, I may as well mention that since November my opinion of Mr. Coleman's business has undergone considerable modification, and that ladies were recently warned in Truth not to have any dealings with him at all. This advice I now repeat.

The person calling himself W. Moult, and posing as "manager" of "The Circular Addressing Company," is still carrying on his "home employment" trick. When last I referred to him his address was 58, Archer-street, N.W. Now his advertisements emanate from 27, Eldon-street, Finsbury, and replies to applicants for the "employment" are dated from 294, St. Paul's-road, Highbury, N. There is, however, no alteration in Moult's methods. He is still endeavouring to obtain small sums as deposits for a directory and instructions to equip the would-be employee for the work of addressing circulars. It is surely time that the police took Moult in hand, more especially since his dodge is practised upon those who are manifestly unable themselves to provide the means of bringing him to book. Meanwhile, I should like to bring home to a number of reputable newspapers the simple fact that by continuing to publish Moult's advertisements they make themselves abettors in a particularly mean form of trickery at the expense of the necessitous.

An old friend has just reappeared upon the scene in the person of Mr. John Paget, "Anglo-Indian Scholastic Agent." I am sorry to say that he reappears in his old character, which is that of an individual obtaining fees from school masters and mistresses on a more or less fictitious pretence that he has it in his power to obtain pupils for them. A full account of this worthy was given in Truth of May 2, 1895. The most notable points in his career are that he was at one time in a lunatic asylum, and at another time in a prison. He sojourned in prison six months in consequence of his conviction at Wakefield, in April, 1893, for obtaining money under false pretences. He is now established at 3, Myddelton-square, E.C., whence he issues circulars and prospectuses of his agency of precisely the same character already described in Truth on more than one occasion. In the latest case that has come under my notice he obtained from a schoolmistress in the North first a registration fee of 5s., secondly a sum of 25s., nominally for the printing of circulars which he proposed to distribute among his clients; and he subsequently endeavoured to obtain a further fee of £1 1s. for inspecting the lady's house, and 10s. 6d. for his railway fare. His correspondence in this case would be sufficient in itself to show him to be a person undeserving of credit, and engaged in an extremely shady business. It is evident that his last experience of the criminal law has not taught him the needful lesson, and it might possibly do him good to go to gaol for another six months.

Charitable ladies and others continue to make frequent inquiries of me respecting the circulars of Mr. John Martyn, of Albert-road, Dalston, N.E. This Martyn is a victim of paralysis, who sends out book-markers, which he professes to execute himself, accompanied by an appeal to purchase three of the articles at the price of 1s., which appeal he also professes to print himself. It has already been stated in Truth that Martyn's account of his own physical infirmities is apparently accurate. But it is also quite certain that he does a very large trade in his own peculiar line, and there is no evidence that he is in want —on the contrary, I should think he is probably earning a handsome competency. If people choose to send him help, or buy his book-markers under these circumstances, they are, of course, at liberty to do so; but they must excuse my saying that they are extremely foolish.

An evil-disposed cleric in the island of Jamaica has started a snowball for the purpose of raising funds for a new organ for his church. He asks every subscriber to contribute a shilling, and to duplicate the chain lette until the number fifty has been arrived at. He, therefore, calmly proposes to collect £112,590,100,000,000. Even if organs are exceptionally dear in Jamaica, this should suffice to provide a very fine instrument. The snowball having now got under way, I fear that it would be hopeless to attempt to stop it so far as Jamaica is concerned, but should the letter make its appearance in this country, I trust its course will be promptly arrested. It seems about time that the promotion of, or participation in, a snowball collection was made a felony.

In Truth of the 10th ultimo an article was published on newspaper competitions, in which reference was made to an "Inventions Competition" recently run in sundry provincial papers. On March 31, three weeks after the appearance of the article, I received a letter from Messrs. Rayner & Co., 37, Chancery-lane, a firm of patent agents, who, it appears, conducted the competition in question. Messrs. Rayner & Co. write at some length to traverse certain portions of the article. It so happens that I was contemplating dealing further in the next issue of Truth with this particular competition, and as Messrs. Rayner & Co. have already taken three weeks to reply to my original remarks, they will not, I think, be seriously prejudiced if I hold over their letter until that article appears.

There was a peculiar fitness in the announcement of Arthur Orton's death in the newspapers upon All Fools'-day. The most remarkable point in this distinguished man's career was the faith which he inspired in innumerable fools, and the refusal of these fools to be disillusioned, not merely by any ordinary process of reasoning, but even by the confession of the impostor himself. Their faith, too, took the most practical shape, for immense sums were subscribed for the vindication of his supposed "rights;" and though much of it doubtless came from mere speculators, who cared little about the merits of the case, the greater part was furnished by fanatical believers in "the unfortunate nobleman." The history of his great imposture shows how narrow is the gulf which divides this age of education and enlightenment from the ignorant and credulous ages which it looks back upon contemptuously. R.I.P.

Let not ambition mock the "useful toil" and "destiny obscure" of Wm. Rees, a native of Llandovery, who died last week at the age of one hundred and four. His obituary is as worthy of consideration as many that are published. It is recorded that until within ten days of his death he was able to follow his life-long occupation of pig-killing. He was the recognised sty-butcher in a district where every family keeps a pig, and it was his boast that he had killed over 20,000 of these animals. It is also recorded that he was taken by the press-gang for the Battle of Waterloo, but was immediately liberated on account of his diminutive stature—a circumstance which has inspired the following

EPITAPH.

Too small for the Army, where glory is earned,
To the killing of pigs he his energies turned.
In a hundred long years ere he gave up the ghost
It is plain, from the record, he slaughtered a host.

Now, if these fat pigs had been men and not swine,
His deed had been splendid, heroic, divine.
How the world, when it learned of his fame, would have raved
Of the glory he'd won and the danger he'd braved!

How each patriot son and each patriot daughter
Would have gloated like ghouls o'er the details of slaughter,
While the stone in the Abbey had blazoned the story
Of prowess and valour, his deeds, and his glory!

For since those great days when old Cain killed his brother,
Mankind's greatest joy has been killing each other.
But I venture to think that a pig-killing life
Is nobler than one spent in murderous strife.

'Tis true that no widows or orphans he made
While he steadily worked at his pig-killing trade.
'Tis true that no fifes and no trumpets rang high
As he marched with his poleaxe and knife to the sty.

Yet still if we search, we shall certainly find
That the killing of pigs was of use to mankind.
In a battle your foes are but killed when they're beaten,
But with pigs, when they're killed, in the next place they're eaten.

So, more useful than Wolseley or Roberts I hold
Is the man who's now died at a hundred years old.
Then why, fellow-countrymen, why not combine
A statue to raise to this killer of swine?

There is an article in this month's Blackwood which gives a cheerful description of the delta of the Niger and of life there. As this is the way by which we have to go to reach the "Empire of Sokoto," which is the most recent addition to our ever-expanding Empire, the following extracts may, perhaps, prove interesting to those who are inclined to betake themselves to that region:—

South and east from Sekki Lagoon, in the Lagos frontier, to the mouth of the Opobo river, there stretches a reeking quagmire some 300 miles in length, where mangroves grow up out of festering ooze and yeasty slime, and through this desolation of rottenness the muddy waters of the Niger pour by many mouths into the sea. . . . . For some four months each year, though the duration of the seasons varies, forest and swamp are alternately swept by tropical deluge and rolled in clouds of steam. Then when the time of the rains is passed the delta lies swelling in fervent heat, until each foul lagoon bubbles like a caldron, and exhalations from the fermenting swamp bring sickness or death to many an unfortunate white man who breathes them.

Such is the delta of the Niger as a whole, and all the way from Gambia to Congo the climate of the West African coast is much the same. . . . The three leading imports of the Niger delta are salt; gin, which costs 2½d. per quart wholesale, and drives the white man who ventures to imbibe more than a modicum of it raving mad; and Manchester cotton, a "piece" of which is worth 2d. We were as usual received by the sickly officials. All were hollow-cheeked, yellow, and haggard, for all had suffered from fever, and one of them could hardly keep his teeth from chattering. Every canoe-load of salt that reaches the interior costs, it is said, the life of a slave. In even the newest settlements there are far more crosses in the cemetery than living white men in the factories. All things considered, it is not strange that the Niger trader at times breaks down mentally, or falls into the lowest drifts of chronic alcoholism.

A Liverpool merchant sends me an interesting letter on the situation in Sierra Leone which he has received from a correspondent at Freetown. Last year the Governor introduced a measure by which the natives of the hinterland were to pay a hut tax of 5s. for two-roomed huts, and 10s. for those having more than two rooms. The outcome of the attempts to enforce this taxation is thus described:—

The Ronietta district, from which we derived a good deal of produce, is disturbed. The Karene district, from which comes all our rice and other food stuffs, has been completely destroyed as regards trade and it is not likely that things will be restored to the state in which they were before for the next year or two. About two hundred troops and over seven hundred labourers have been poured into this district, towns belonging to our own Chiefs have been burnt, the Chiefs have been imprisoned, the people have all forsaken their towns, and provisions here to-day are at famine prices. It is almost impossible to obtain firewood, and rice is selling at about 12s. per bushel, when it used to be between 6s. and 7s.—in fact owing to the want of trade, some of the merchants and traders here close their stores at two, instead of four. It is difficult to understand why the Governor should have pursued this policy, and so far as we are informed, most of the huts on which he intends to collect the debts have been burnt down, if not by the people themselves, by the soldiers., and consequently the natives have betaken themselves to the bush. The prospect of deriving a large revenue from the Protectorate has therefore vanished, and the little that may be obtained for other portions will undoubtedly be absorbed by the cost of the military expedition.

There are now five chiefs in prison, and the country is in a state of unrest. There is no trade, merchants are all complaining, and the community of Freetown are almost in a state of insurrection because they have no food. The situation is still more serious, as this is the time that the natives commence to plant their farms, but the presence of soldiers in their country prevents their doing so. It, therefore, means that if this continues we shall have no trade this year, and very probably none next.

The policy which has produced this disastrous state of things was carried out in the face of the strenuous opposition of the most experienced colonists. Public opinion in Sierra Leone was against the hut tax, on the ground that it would be oppressive to the natives of the interior, and the Chamber of Commerce and other bodies advised the Governor not to proceed with the measure. His Excellency, however, preferred to go his own way, and the consequence of his persistence is a crisis unprecedented in the history of the colony.

Mr. Hodgson, Secretary of the Gold Coast, has been appointed Governor, in the place of the late Sir William Maxwell. The post is worth £4,000 a year, with residence but the climate is so bad that the post is far from an enviable one, and it is not surprising that Sir William MacGregor, Administrator of British Guiana, declined the office, although his present place is worth only £1,500 a year. Mr. Hodgson has been ten years on the Gold Coast, and he is probably acclimatised by this time. He was previously Postmaster-General in British Guiana for six years.

The suggestion that the salaries of the Governors in the West Indies might be very well reduced is improved upon by an old Colonist, who argues that several of those berths should be abolished altogether. His idea is that in these days of the telegraph and constant communication between the islands by steamers, three Governors—namely, one in Jamaica, one in Barbados, and one in Demerara—would suffice in place of the half-dozen or so who are at present drawing from £2,000 to £6,000 a year, each in more or less superfluous and ornamental billets. The extinction of the Governorships would involve the extinction of a host of hangers-on to the Governors, and the net result would be a saving of many thousands a year. But retrenchment in the expenses of the government of these Colonies is not likely to be attempted so long as the British taxpayer submits to be bled for the benefit of the Islands at the behest of Mr. Chamberlain.

Like the people of Egypt, the people of Cyprus appear to have good cause for regarding the British occupation of their country as a somewhat doubtful blessing. So far as taxation is concerned, the Cypriotes assert that they are worse off under our rule than under the rule of the Turks. New taxes have been imposed, and others which used only to be nominal have been rendered effective, with the result that the British Government obtains upwards of £60,000 a year more than the Porte collected. From 1878-9 to 1894-5 the amount paid in taxes—including, of course, the Turkish tribute of £56,897—averaged £172,829 per annum, or nearly one-fourth of the gross production of the island; and it is contended that of this revenue only about £15,000 per annum has been expended upon what may be called the immediate necessities of the country, such as public works, education, and hospitals. Beneficial as our occupation of the island may have been in some respects, it is hardly surprising that the inhabitants of Cyprus consider they are paying too dearly for the privilege of having their affairs administered by the British Government.

Seeing how viciously Jingo journalists are attacking and abusing Lord Salisbury for his pusillanimity—as they consider it—in dealing with big questions and Great Powers, I wonder what these fire-eating scribes will have to say to his handling of a case against the Hawaiian Government. As far back as September, 1895, I called attention to the failure of the Foreign Office to obtain redress from the Republic of Hawaii for the gross and undoubted wrongs which had been illegally inflicted on the Messrs. Ashford and other British subjects during the so-called revolution of the preceding January. Some time afterwards Lord Salisbury demanded "adequate compensation" for the "arbitrary and oppressive" treatment of these persons, who, it was pointed out, had been arrested and imprisoned and finally exiled from Hawaii without any just reason, none of them having been guilty of participation in seditious or treasonable acts.

In the case of one of the aggrieved individuals, Mr. C. E. Dunwell, who was treated with exceptional cruelty in the effort to extort from him evidence prejudicial to another prisoner, the Hawaiian Government tardily consented to pay the sum of £650 as compensation. But in no other case has compensation been paid, and after a correspondence extending over more than two years, the Hawaiian Government last December finally refused to comply with the claims put forward by Lord Salisbury. The claims were presented forcibly enough on paper, but the authorities at Honolulu appear to have thought they could safely set the British Government at defiance, and up to the present they have been justified in this opinion. It remains to be seen whether any further action will be taken; but the injured parties are beginning to fear that, strong as their case is, Lord Salisbury is disposed to abandon it. Lord Salisbury has not at the present moment a warmer admirer than myself. It grieves me, therefore, to have to say in this instance that he has been lacking in stiffness.

Shade of Bill Sikes! Surprised indeed must the spook of that owner of a sporting dog have been at the announcement of Mr. Long last Friday that sporting dogs, from the animal that forms one of a pack of hounds to the rat-catcher's terrier, are taken such care of by their owners that it is not necessary to include them in a muzzling order. Still more surprised must have been the spook of Bill Sikes's dog.

Mr. Long exempts sporting dogs from the muzzling order, and refuses to exempt sheep dogs. No human being endowed with a vestige of intelligence can doubt that the distinction is made because our Esaus are more fully represented on the Tory side of the House of Commons than our Jacobs. Indeed, carried away by his feelings, he boldly asserted that he was not afraid of the argument that it was desirable to give an exemption in favour of British sport, and he was quite prepared to "defend that line of action." The "line of action" is this: It is necessary to muzzle all dogs in a county if there are cases of rabies. But fox-hunting, covert-shooting, and rat-catching are such ennobling amusements, that dogs needed for these purposes should be exempted from the order, and thus the order itself be reduced to an absurdity. Such an exemption applied to sheep dogs would, however, be quite out of the question. Not only, thererefore, does the Tory Party give doles to landlords from the public Exchequer, but the dogs of this favoured class are to be allowed to propagate hydrophobia.

Cornwall possesses a fine specimen of the most exuberant type of Jingo in the person of Mr. E. Beauchamp-Beauchamp, who disported himself the other day at a meeting of the Cornish members of the National Union of Conservative Associations. This valiant swashbuckler seriously proposed that the Navy ought to be made equal to meeting "all the world if necessary," and that "as other nations were taking parts of China, the best move England could make was to annex Egypt, and make vessels carrying at any cheaper rate than England could carry, pay a tax for going through the Suez Canal." Here you have the Jingo at his best. Because other nations are acquiring territory in China, which is undoubtedly of the greatest commercial value, we should seize Egypt, which is of no value to anybody; and in order to acquire this worthless possession we should throw down the gauntlet to the whole universe! The strangest part of this raving is that it followed immediately upon the unanimous carrying of a vote of confidence in the foreign policy of Lord Salisbury, which has been distinguished, as all the world, including a large section of Jingoism, knows, by the mildest and most unaggressive spirit. Had Mr. Gladstone been responsible for the foreign policy of the United Kingdom during the last two years, fire-eaters of the Beauchamp-Beauchamp type would now have been howling for his impeachment. Indeed, I question whether we should not have heard proposals for his execution upon Tower Hill.

I hear that it is very probable that Lord Salisbury's medical advisers will insist upon his limiting his official duties to the Premiership. In this case, it is said that Mr. Balfour will be Foreign Secretary. The difficulty, however, lies in the Leadership of the House of Commons. The great majority of the Tories decline to entertain the idea of Mr. Chamberlain being the Leader. They thoroughly distrust him. Between recognising his ability in debate and making him their Leader, they rightly perceive that there is a difference. But there is a notion amongst them that Mr. Chamberlain may not perhaps entirely agree with this view of his fitness to be their Leader. It is, therefore, suggested that Mr. Balfour, if he becomes Foreign Secretary, shall continue to be the Leader of the House during the present Session, and that before the commencement of the next Session, after explaining that the work at the Foreign Office will prevent him from leading, he shall resign the Leadership to Sir Michael Hicks-Beach. As for Lord Lansdowne, there seems to be a general consensus of opinion that he would not do as Foreign Minister, whilst the idea of placing Lord Cromer at the head of the Foreign Office has never been seriously entertained.

Assuming that Lord Salisbury does find himself obliged to give up the Foreign Office, I should have thought that the best man for the post was Mr. Curzon. He certainly is as clever as any other of the occupants of the Government Bench, and as Foreign Secretary he would have the advantage over them of experience and knowledge. Mr. Balfour, as Leader of the House, could not be replaced with advantage. He is personally popular on both sides, and nothing helps forward business so much as this sort of popularity. But whether he would make a good Foreign Secretary is what no one can tell until he has been tried. Sir Michael Hicks-Beach is the best financier on his Bench, and he is a strong man. But I have heard that he is a little short in his temper, and, if so, this must militate against his success as Leader of the House. The imperturbable temper of Mr. Disraeli was his chief qualification for the post.

Mortlock's (Oxford-st.), Estd. A.D. 1746.—The collection of China and Glass now on view in their Galleries fully maintains the high reputation and pre-eminence enjoyed by "Mortlock's" for the last century and a half, and well repays a visit of inspection.

The Revenue above 106 millions! And we are asked to rejoice at the fact as the evidence of our prosperity. As well might the shorn lamb, shivering in the March wind, be asked to rejoice at the amount of wool taken from him as a proof that he is warm. About three millions of this huge sum ought by law to have been devoted to the repayment of the National Debt. It has been grabbed by the Chancellor of the Exchequer and spent. By law also, we have to devote two millions per annum to paying off the National Debt. But nothing is sacred to a Tory. It is therefore proposed by the St. James's Gazette that we should drop this annual payment. "What an eye-opener," observes my contemporary, "that would be for the foreigner. It would show him the strength of Great Britain just as conclusively as the building of battleships." Why? On this point I should much like information, for if this curious theory be true, greatly should I rejoice. Looking at the matter from the point of view of an economist, it clearly would be an advantage to make our fleet consist of unpaid debts instead of costly marine monsters of voracious appetite.

Economy is as much out of date as stage coaches. "The halfpenny be demned," said Mr. Mantalini. We improve on Dickens, and say "The millions be demned." Mr. Mantalini's contempt of coppers brought him to turning a mangle, and our contempt of millions will bring us to something as unpleasant if we persist in it. An economist is as rare nowadays as a dodo. Having been bred up in the school of public economy, I find myself one of the last of my kind. To meet with others I should have to betake myself to the Elysian Fields. It used to be the aim of Chancellors of the Exchequer to keep down the Budget. Now a great expenditure is deemed the proof that we have a great Chancellor of the Exchequer. Parliament gushes in admiration over the spendthrift. I already hear the cheers that will greet Sir Michael Hicks-Beach when he boasts to the guardians of the public purse, that he has expended above 106 millions last year, and hopes to spend more this year. As for taking off taxes when there is a surplus, any one who ventured to suggest this would be cursed as a "Little Englander." The true patriot—the Big Englander—must have everything big. So strong is this craze within him that he is made happy by having big taxes. What an ass of asses! But I am forgetting the fable, and must apologise to those sensible quadrupeds. The ass of the fable preferred a light load to a heavy one.

All colonies have a right to become independent of the mother country if they so please; but never had any colony a better ground for adopting this course than Cuba. The attempt of Spain to maintain her sway in that island has been characterised by hideous atrocities, and the civil war has been encouraged by the persons sent from Spain to end it, in order that they may make money. Cuba is almost ruined; its people are starving. The end of the war is as far off, so far as Spain is concerned, as it ever was. Under these circumstances, the determination of the United States to secure to Cuba her independence is worthy of all praise.

The Spaniards are a strange nation. Individually, they are men of exceptionally high honour. But they have been so misgoverned, that no public man loses favour if he robs the Government. Cuba is an annual drain on Spain, but it has been a mine of gold for Spanish officials.

SCRUTATOR.

SHOULD RHODES BE REINSTATED?

On Friday last Sir Robert Reid asked Mr. Chamberlain whether he would take steps to prevent the South Africa Chartered Company from filling up vacancies on its Board with gentlemen who had been found guilty of complicity in the Jameson Raid. Mr. Chamberlain replied that a trading Company should be allowed to select its own Directors. This must confirm the suspicion that the Committee of Investigation did not last year get to the bottom of everything connected with that Raid. The Colonial Secretary is by no means a fool, and he must be aware that the election of Mr. Rhodes and any of his co-conspirators as Directors of the Chartered Company would be a disgrace that would reflect on the entire country.

Having, as one of the Committee, condemned Mr. Rhodes for having acted in a dishonourable and illegal fashion, Mr. Chamberlain, a few days later, stated in the House of Commons that nothing that Mr. Rhodes had done reflected on his personal honour. He had violated his oath as a Privy Councillor; he had tricked the Governor of the Cape Colony, whose servant he was; he had conspired against a friendly country, with which, as Cape Premier, he was professing to be on friendly terms; he had deceived his own Board of Directors; and he had in consequence of these misdeeds caused the death of some and the ruin of many. But although all this was admitted, it would seem that there was nothing in such a record to reflect on his personal honour.

Though Mr. Rhodes was forced to resign his post as a Director, Mr. Chamberlain now sees no reason why he should not be re-elected by the shareholders of his Company. But what is the Company? It is one existing under a Royal Charter, and consequently free from all the checks imposed by the law regulating Companies incorporated under the Limited Liability Acts. From the fact of its having been granted a Charter, the Government is responsible for all that is done by it. Although the Charter is to be modified so as to enable the Government to hinder raids of the Jameson type in future, the Company is still to retain the right to administer a territory larger than France and Spain. To talk of this as an ordinary trading Company is absurd. The invitation of Mr. Chamberlain to the Company to re-elect Mr. Rhodes as a Director will justify Mr. Kruger in his attitude of distrust of our good faith; it will intensify the feud between those of English and of Dutch extraction in the Cape Colony; it will lead all foreign nations to regard us as the most contemptible crew of hypocrites that ever walked the globe; and it will be a proof that we have so degenerated under the baneful influence of Jingoism that we have ceased to perceive any distinction between right and wrong, honesty and dishonesty, honour and dishonour.

From the shareholders' standpoint, I can understand their desire to have as directors Mr. Rhodes and Mr. Beit. The Company is at the end of its resources; these gentlemen have made a good deal of money out of it, and the shareholders may reasonably hope that they will disgorge some of their gains if on the Board, and thus keep things afloat for two or three years, during which period each shareholder will have a chance of getting rid of his shares. But this can only avert the evil day of reckoning for a brief period. The Company has a charter which secures to it certain financial advantages in Rhodesia, in consideration of which it has to pay all cost of administering the country. This is practically a rent. If the rent is not paid, the lease lapses. We, therefore, find ourselves in this position: the Company, having had a financial career by means of which its promoters have made large sums out of the investing public, will, after a more or less lengthy period, disappear, and we shall have to administer the country at a cost of some £100,000 per annum, which must be provided by the British taxpayer. It is a case of heads the Company wins, tails the taxpayer pays. The sooner we face our loss in regard to the South Africa Company the better. It is not worth our while to stave off payment for a little while by a course of action fraught with national dishonour, and likely to embroil us with the entire Dutch element at the Cape.

A Chartered Company in Africa means this: we want to avert direct responsibility for much that is discreditable, and we fancy that we can do this by creating a sort of middleman. As a nation we lay down the broad principle that where the British flag flies no person may be forced to labour against his will for the benefit of another. But in the interior of Africa the natives will not work unless they are forced, whilst money cannot be made unless they do work. This is the case in Rhodesia. The report of Sir Richard Martin shows that there has been a system of forced labour there. Since that report was issued Mr. Rhodes has publicly stated that the country cannot thrive—by which he means that he and his speculative friends cannot thrive—unless "Exeter Hall fads" in respect to the treatment of natives are ignored. Yet in Mr. Chamberlain's new scheme of a partnership in the government of Rhodesia between the Colonial Office and the Company, there are no guarantees that the natives will be protected against forced labour. In the last century we always protested against any national participation in the slave trade; but we allowed individual Englishmen to engage in it. Then came Wilberforce and other philanthropists. They so worked upon public opinion that they put an end to the slave trade. As the law now stands, any English subject who owns a slave, whether the slave be owned in or out of our jurisdiction, is liable to be prosecuted, and severely punished. But this has been met by English speculators in Africa establishing a system of forced labour which, except in name, is the same as slavery. Instead, therefore, of exporting Africans as slaves to America, we permit Africans to be made slaves by Englishmen in Africa. And when a leading spirit in an African Chartered Company openly enunciates a policy of slavery, far from protesting, we allow him, without let or hindrance, to carry into effect this policy. Those who hold by the views of Wilberforce as to the right of Africans to be free are jeered at as Exeter Hall faddists. To such a pass have the Anglo-African financier-politicians brought the England of the Anti-Slavery movement!

FAITH-HEALING AND FEE-GRABBING.

